They have won: one shilling increase now, and the other shilling increase to take effect on June 2. They have also the prospect of the formation of a special commission to deal with the question of decasualization, said commission to consist of representatives of employers and dockers, in equal proportions, with a chairman appointed by the ministry of transport.

Needed It Now.

Thus, is will be seen: they asked for two shillings, and they get one now, giving the bosses the use of the other until June. Also, it is just now, during the miserable and damp British winter, that the money is most urgently needed by the workers, their wives and families, for warm clothing and for fuel.

And, as to decasualization, that question of crying importance to the longshoremen, it now seems a long way off. How long will the commission sit and deliberate, while the dockers crowd at the dock gates, waiting for the slave-drivers to come and pick out this man and that, sending the unneeded men home disconsolate?

The settlement was decided after a delegate conference was held at London. The terms were put up to the delegates, who then returned to their various ports and presented the terms to the men at mass meetings. All ports, with the exception of two, voted to accept the terms. It must be remembered, however, that the national leaders urged the delegates to appeal to the mass meetings to accept the terms. So they did not return to place the matter impartially before the rank and file, but as special pleaders.

However, despite the fact that all demands were not immediately conceded, this may be reckoned as a victory. And it is the first victory of any section of British labor for a long, hard time. It should instill the rest of the organized labor movement with new courage and aggressiveness. Now is the time to solidify and extend the left-wing minority movement within the longshoremen's organization, so far as to be ready to press the matter of decasualization.

Our Labor Government.

It is quite certain that the speedy settlement of the dockers' strike was partly due to tremendous private pressure exerted by the government on the dockers' leaders. During the strike, it was stated in the press that, in order to ensure the transportation of goods, the government was "making the necessary preparations." This can be understood in no other way than that they were preparing to adopt the strike-breaking methods rendered familiar by Lloyd George. And the British Fascisti were also organizing their special emergency corps of transport scabs. Thus, it might have been—had the strike gone on—that we should have had the admirable and edifying spectacle of seeing Mr. MacDonald co-operating with the "loyal" technical corps.

Some excitement in labor ranks has been caused by the government's announcement of its plans to construct five new naval cruisers. These are to be criusers of the "County" type, especially adapted to long cruises. In other words, they are to be the messengers of British Imperialism, in the far seas. They are to displace 9,800 tons. This is a beautiful evasion of the terms of the Washington disarmament conference decisions which forbade an increase in cruisers of 10,000 tons!

Pacifists In Warrior Role.

Not all the members of the Labor Party could swallow this scheme, and a rift is visible between the labor politicians who stand more to the right, and those who have a certain proletarian bias. But it is especially painful to watch the contortions of the I. L. P. Pacifists, the gentlemen who have poured voluminous vituperation upon the Communists because they believed that, under certain circumstances, when the situation becomes revolutionary, the workers will have to employ methods of struggle such as the master class will not hesitate to employ against the workers. The Communists were terrible people, said these peace-loving gentlemen, because they actually approved of, and applauded, the Russian Red Army. And now they find themselves in the highly uncomfortable position of having to approve the war-like plans of their own lily-white pacifist leader, MacDonald! It is a somewhat nauseating spectacle.

Undoubtedly, however, this cruiser project will provoke resentment and protest among the more proletarian elements of the labor party. In fact, this has already become apparent, and protests are coming in from many sections. In my next letter, I shall be better enabled to give an estimate of the extent of the dissatisfaction among the rank and file of the Labor Party.

Why Not Merchant Ships.

MacDonald's plea, of course, was that the building of the cruisers would provide employment for the ship-building workers. This is true; but it would have been just as easy for a government, which was really proletarian, to build up-to-date merchant vessels, and to organize a government shipping service, in the direction of which the organized workers would also have a part. There are hundreds of ships in the present merchant service which are old, inefficient and dangerous. These could have been replaced. But, really, Mr. MacDonald probably thought we should need the new cruisers for India, the population of which land refuses to remain quiet even under the beneficient rule of a labor government.

India and the Labor Government.

And this brings me to the speech of Lord Olivier, the Secretary of State for India. Sidney Olivier is a civil servant of many years' standing, and had attained high rank in the government service. He was one of the original members of the Fabian Society, the secretarial chair of which he once occupied. He has been governor of Jamaica. He has been elevated to the peerage by the labor government.

Lord Olivier's speech was of such a character that even the fickle, vacillating and rather old-maidish writer of the "Daily Herald" editorials was compelled to protest. Not that Olivier should have made any special concessions, said the "Daily Herald" leader-writer, but his tone might have been kindlier. "No one expected or wanted him to make any drastic change," says the writer of the editorial. This is perhaps true of some people, but he sems to forget the nearly four hundred milions of the population of India, who would very much have liked to have heard Olivier announce something quite drastic.

Indians' Illusions Shattered.

It is pathetic. To think of the millions of Indians who have trustfully awaited the assumption of power by a labor government, hoping that some real measures would then be taken towards self-determination. And now their illusions are being shattered with a vengeance. This is perhaps just as well. They will realize that only their own strength, their own power of organization and effort, can help them at least until a really proletarian policy is forced upon the government by the British workers.

Olivier, in his speech, absolutely rejected the request of many Indian bodies for a round-table conference of all parties to discuss the drawing-up of a new constitution for India. He made exactly the same statements as have Liberal and Tory Indian secretaries before him: that the Government of India Act had not yet been fully tested, that time was needed to see how it worked (it has been in operation three years, that we must have patience (a massacre of peaceful Sikhs has just taken place in Jaito, followed by wholesale imprisonments), and that the policy of the Swaraj Party was "mistaken, ill-informed and unjustified." It was a typical speech of an imperialistic bureaucrat. It was the answer to the suffering and exploited masses of India, the crushing of their hopes, the denial of their faith, and the official hall-mark placed upon their crucifixion.

And, in the meantime, while the Labor government pursues its more or less even way, industrial unrest grows and murmurs. In the port of Southampton, there is a strike of 7,000 ship-building workers, who demand seventeen shillings and sixpence a week increase. The employers in the cotton trade are considering a lock-out, because of a strike of mill-workers at Thornham Mills, Royton. This would involve about 150,000 workers. Mass meetings of the London street car men have decided to strike unless the employers grant their demands for an increase in wages. The engineers (metal workers) are also getting restive, and meetings are being held, thruout the country, to discuss the presentation of demands.

And, in the meantime, a new energy seems to have appeared among the workers. The left-wing movement within the trade unions is at last beginning to take shape. Especially among the miners, is the influence of the Red International of Labor Unions gaining. I hope to deal fully with this interesting development in my next letter.

The Role of McAdoo - - - - -

By JAY LOVESTONE

No one can yet tell how many political futures will crash and how many mighty careers will tumble as a result of the Teapot disclosures.

But if nothing else is achieved by the investigation in its coming labors, it has already caused irreparable loss to one of the most harmful forces in American working class political life. Aside from shedding welcome light on the true nature and role of our government, the oil revelations have dealt a mortal blow to that last gasp of American liberalism, to that half-hearted, weak gesture of the last episode in our liberalism as exemplified by the first Wilson administration.

The exit of Mr. McAdoo from the arena of national politics is significant not so much because one of the strongest figures has been removed from the scene of struggle but because that most poisonous toxin of sham liberalism, as personified by McAdoo, has been fatally impaired as a decisive force for misleading the workers.

McAdoo Served Oil and Steel.

It is not the exit of Mr. McAdoo as an individual that history is concerned with, but the fact that his being unmasked as an agent of the biggest business interests is, to a tremendous extent, precipitating the collapse of liberalism in our political conflicts.

Whoever falls into oil today, falls into bad odor. Anyone who pours oil on his political waters is bound to raise a devastating storm for himself. It is not difficult to understand the hasty retreat that the McAdoo forces are now beating.

Steel is supposed to be king today. It is often said that this is the steel age and our culture is a steel culture. McAdoo, the liberal pretender, has been found to serve the steel interests.

Finance capital, thru its merger, with industrial capital, is the czar of our capitalist system of production and exchange. As Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. McAdoo turned over the Federal Reserve Board, which is the heart of our circulatory system of commodity exchange today, to such powerful banking and manufacturing groups of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; J. & W. Seligman and Co., and the International Harvester Trust.

To the political innocents at home and abroad it might appear paradoxical that the oil, steel, and banking interests should put their trust in a liberal phrase-monger like McAdoo. We find it easy to explain this seeming contradiction. In the final stage of capitalism, the stage of imperialism, the role of liberalism and civil peace, the role of class co-operationists and industrial democracy schemers, in the class struggles, is to serve as the handmaid of the uppermost crust of the financial and industrial class in its perpetuation of the vilest outrages against the masses. Thus it was that many liberal apologists of individual enterprise and cabinet social-democrats become the wildest Chauvinists and militarists during the war.

Under capitalist-imperialism the class conflicts between the employers and the workers invariably draw in the state—the government in all its numerous ramifications. The state, posing as an arbiter, pretending to act in the interest of all society and above any of the contending classes, serves as a political, social and economic strike-breaking agency.

Particularly in such conditions it is necessary to hide the class character of the state. Consequently, it is obvious that liberals of the McAdoo and Wilson stripe and social-patriots of the Ebert kidney become the best statesmen and saviors of capitalist world imperialism. Hence it is perfectly easy to understand how it comes about that oil, steel, and financial capital should have chosen Mr. McAdoo, the idol of one of the skilled, upper layers of our working class, the railway men, to do their bidding against the whole mass of expropriated workers and farmers.

In the role of rendering the most invaluable service to the imperialists —that is, in the role of blinding the workers to the character of the government—no one could have served the exploiting class better than, or even as well as did Mr. McAdoo, the Crown Prince of the regime of the liberal Wilson.

And nothing could have dramatized more vividly and brought into bolder relief the exit of McAdoo and the crippling of McAdooism in the immediate political struggles of the workers than his exposure as the loyal servant of that most unholy trinity of the capitalist dictatorship—oil, steel, and finance capital.

"The Life of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

* * * *

How John Brown Educated Himself.

THERE are other matters treated in this long and charming letter, written by an outlaw 57 years old, to a boy of twelve. One detail that is important is the analysis of his own character. John Brown says his father early made a sort of foreman in his tanning establishment, and that tho he got on in the most friendly way with everyone, "the habit so early formed of being obeyed rendered him in after life too much disposed to speak in an imperious or dictating way." John Brown was ever humble, and severely chastised his own faults, but this habit of being a leader served him in good stead, and made him the born captain of forlorn hopes he later became.

Another detail that interests us is his account of his early reading. Working class Americans, and they are the majority of the nation, do not go to the high schools and universities. Neither did John Brown. But they can read history, as he did at ten years, and they can study and make themselves proficient in some field, as he made a surveyor of himself by home study. He also read passionately, he says, the lives of great, good and wise men; their sayings and writings; the school of biography that seems to have nurtured so many great men. John Brown never went to school after his childhood; but he became an expert surveyor, he learned the fine points of cattle breeding and tanning, he was a students of astronomy, he knew the Bible almost by heart, he studied military tactics later in life, he was familiar with the lives and times of most of the great leaders of mankind, and best of all, he knew how to stir men to great deeds, and lead them in the battle.

Great men do not need to own a college diploma; they teach themselves, they are taught by life.

How meaningless college degrees would sound if attached after the names of Brutus, Pericles, Socrates, Caius Gracchus, Buddha, Jesus, Wat Tyler, Jefferson, Danton, William Lloyd Garrison!

As for instance: Jesus Christ, D. D.; Robert Burns, M. A.; Victor Hugo, B. S.; John Brown, Ph. D.! How superfluous the titles of man's universities, when Life has crowned the student with real and greener laurels! Yes, there are many things not taught in the colleges!

STRIKE MAY STOP NEW YORK'S KEPT PRESS

NEWS STRIKE IS VOTED BY N. Y. TYPOS

"Big Six" Asks Strike Sanction In Rousing Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Mar. 25.—The oldest and largest typographical union in the world threw down the gauntlet to the most powerful combination of publishers on the face of the earth in a special meeting held here in the auditorium of the Stuyvesant High School, when the membership overwhelmingly voted by secret ballot to request strike sanction of the International Typographical Union.

Every Daily to Shut Down.

The membership already has the assurance of Charles P. Howard, President of the International Union, that the executive council will back the membership of New York to the limit.

This will be the most complete strike in the daily newspaper field that has ever been conducted in the United States. Every daily newspaper in the city of New York will be shut down while the struggle proceeds. The composing rooms in all daily papers are one hundred per cent organized and those affected are the advertising compositors, make-up men, copy cutters, linotype operators, proof readers and mailers.

Negotations Fail.

Negotations between "Big Six" and the publishers have been going on since December 2, when the union at a special meeting, also held in Stuyvesant High School, instructed the scale committee to demand the establishment of the six-hour day in all newspaper offices in the jurisdiction. Thus the working hours per week would be reduced from 48 day work and 45 night work to a flat 36-hour week—or six hour day with four shifts per day, instead of three as at present. At the same time a demand was made for an increase in wages to $66.00 per week for day work (an increase of $11.00) and $72.00 per week for night work (an increase of $14.00).

The counter-proposal of the publishers was a reduction in wages of from 2 to 6 cents per hour and a change in shop conditions that would devitalize the union and make the compositors abject slaves of every whim of the publishers as regards working hours and speed of work.

Employers Giving Way.

A deadlock was soon reached by the local scale committee and President Charles P. Howard was called in. He succeeded in breaking the stubborn resistance of the employers and got an offer of a three dollar per week raise in wages, all other conditions remaining the same. This not being a proposition Mr. Howard felt he should recommend to the union, a special meeting was called for today and three propositions voted upon. They were:

1—To accept the proposal of the employers for a $3.00 raise.

2—To submit the controversy to arbitration.

3—To ask strike sanction of the

Anna Louise Strong Writes for Daily Worker Magazine

HERE is a welcome announcement for the readers of the Saturday Magazine Section of the DAILY WORKER. We have secured Anna Louise Strong, better known to our readers as "Anise," to do magazine features for the DAILY WORKER. She has been in the United States now for a few weeks, but is returning to Europe, where she will study conditions in many countries. She goes first to Great Britain, then to Germany, and later to Soviet Russia. We are sure that these articles would prove interesting to thousands of workers who are not now reading the DAILY WORKER. Our present readers should, therefore, do all in their power to find these non-readers and get them on our subscription list. See the trial "Sub Offer" on another page.

KLAN KONVENTION DEBATE IS SORDID BARING OF GREED

Moron Membership Are Easy Marks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MUNCIE, Ind., March 25.—Declarations that millions of dollars have been made by individuals at the expense of klansmen and klanswomen, that spies have been employed by the parent organization to spy on the klans thruout the country and that one-man rule had become so despotic that the true purpose of the klan had long been making money, have worked delegates and visitors to the Independent Klan of America convention here into such a fever heat that there seems no doubt of a final break with the Ku Klux Klan of Atlanta.

$4 Per Nightie.

From the platform, the direct charge was made by Samuel Bemenderfer in his convention keynote speech, that F. C. Stevens of Indianapolis, klan organizer in ten states, had made enormous profits thru selling klansmen robes at a profit of $4 to himself on each robe and thru his share received from each membership fee.

It was also charged by the speaker that the Rev. Daisy Barr, Friends minister of Newcastle, Ind., had cleared one million dollars for herself in the last year thru selling robes to the women's auxiliary, making a similar profit.

Spying On Themselves.

The speaker declared that Court Asher, a Muncie police character and supposed to be antagonistic to the klan, had been employed for months by the Atlanta headquarters as a spy in Muncie and thruout Indiana, receiving a salary of $100 a week for his work.

The constitution for the new organization was completed in secret session here last night and was introduced on the convention floor this morning. It is expected to be adopted before evening and the prediction is being freely made here that the convention now in session will either make or break the original Ku Klux Klan of the south.

King of Greece Now Member of Unemployed Camp

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, March 25.—The national assembly today voted to dethrone the dynasty and proclaim a republic. The motion was carried by a unanimous vote and is effective at once.

Because of the possibility of a rupture in diplomatic relations with foreign countries whose representatives are accredited to the "regent of Greece," the government has decided to maintain Admiral Condoutiotis in the regency for the present.

The cabinet during the day is expected to grant general amnesty to imprisoned and persecuted politicians and pardons to members of the military convicted for implication in the last counter-revolution.

The government will expropriate as soon as possible all immovable property to the Glucksburg dynasty.

Anderson, Head Dry Zealot, Gets Term In Sing Sing Prison

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 25.—William H. Anderson, once the nemesis of the liquor trade and other lawbreakers, will join the "pick and shovel" gang at Sing Sing prison today.

The former state chief of the Anti-Saloon League, will now stand stripe to stripe for a few months beside the bootlegger, grafting politicians, and "prescription peddlers" whom he so relentlessly pursued.

Anderson has been degraded to the status of a common criminal by the supreme court decision yesterday denying him his application for a certificate of reasonable doubt in relation to his trial.

To Hang Boy of 17.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., March 25.—Absolute proof has now been furnished by birth certificate that William Hard, sentenced to hang May 23 for murder, is only 17, having been born Nov. 25, 1906. He was not yet 16 when the murder with which he is charged was committed. It is against the state law to hang a boy under 18. The court refused to admit the boy's baptismal certificate as evidence of his age during the trial.

OIL IS THE ISSUE IN SO. DAKOTA PRIMARY BATTLE

Teapot Scandal Echoes Heard

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SIOUX FALLS, So. Dak., March 25.—Meager returns were coming in tonight in the state's presidential primary.

The voters expressed presidential choice in the Republican and Democratic parties, and the Farmer-Labor Party may have Robert M. LaFollette written in as choice of the new Third Party yet to be formed.

Nominees for U. S. senator, governor and other state offices also are to be named by the three parties.

The struggle between President Coolidge and Hiram Johnson for the Republican nomination for president, and the election of delegates to the national convention and presidential electors is the outstanding contest of the primary.

Senate Fight.

Of equal importance to South Dakotans is the fight between "gasoline governor" W. H. McMaster and the veteran Thomas Sterling for the nomination for U. S. senator in the Republican party.

Robert M. LaFollette also figures in the Republican primary, many believe. Many voters are expected to pass up the candidates appearing on the ballot and write in the name of the Wisconsin senator for president.

Oil figured two ways in today's primary. Governor McMaster, whose fight on Standard Oil last summer forced gasoline prices down 12 cents thruout the middle west, made the charge that George J. Danforth, manager of the campaign for Senator Sterling, was employed by the Standard Oil Co., in an attempt to "break" McMaster.

Oil Scandal Issue.

Both McMaster and Senator Hiram Johnson, who have been supporting each other in the primary race, have laid great stress on the Teapot Dome and other scandals in Washington. President Coolidge was the choice of the Republican state convention last December before the deluge of oil investigations broke loose.

President Coolidge and Senator Sterling, considered as running mates, are expected to poll a heavy vote in the cities. Governor McMaster and Senator Hiram Johnson will draw most of their support from the country.

LaFollette has no opposition for the Farmer-Labor nomination, and it is believed many who otherwise would vote the Farmer-Labor ticket will step over into the Republican primary to cast their votes for LaFollette.

William Gibbs McAdoo is unopposed for the presidential indorsement of the Democratic primary, but there are bitter contests for state office nominations.

NELSON DOES NOT KNOW IF HE WILL ACT

"Might Embarrass Mayor," Says Labor Alderman

Alderman Oscar Nelson, of the 40th Ward, did not know yesterday if he would discuss the strike of the garment workers at the meeting of the city council today. That is what he told the DAILY WORKER.

Nelson, besides being an alderman, is lawyer for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, handling the cases of strikers arrested by the city police.

He will defend more than two hundred cases of arrested strikers tomorrow before Judge Walker in the jury branch of the municipal court.

Labor Committeeman.

In addition to being the lawyer for the union, Nelson is a vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor and a member of the committee of 15 and the committee on injunctions of the Federation. He was also a member of the Citizens committee which disbanded Monday. In the past, organized labor has looked to him to represent their interests in the council.

Strikers Demand Nelson Act.

Half-drunken policemen have been slugging the strikers and arresting them wholesale for walking on the streets. The strikers have been demanding that Alderman Nelson, labor representative, raise a protest in the city council and call for an official investigation into such outrageous and illegal actions by paid city employes against workers on strike.

Recently Nelson presented the case for the organized firemen of the city who were seeking a raise in pay. But he has kept silent in the council while paid city employes were trying to break the strike of the sweatshop workers.

"Does Not Know."

Nelson was in the office of the Chicago Federation of Labor when he was reached by the DAILY WORKER.

"Will you discuss the strike of the garment workers at the meeting of the council tomorrow?" he was asked.

"I don't know. I don't know what will come up there," he replied.

"Will you tell the members of the council about the Citizens committee report?

"Might Embarrass Mayor."

"I don't know. The report was made to the mayor. He may report to the council on it himself. If I say anything it might embarrass the mayor in carrying out the recommendations of the committee," Nelson said.

If the opportunity presents itself and Nelson can speak on the strike without offending any of his fellow politicians he may or he may not say a few well-chosen words is in effect what he said to the DAILY WORKER.

Look to Labor Alderman.

Since the Committee of 15 and the committee on injunctions has delayed acion on "Dennie's" injunction and mass picketing the strikers are looking to Nelson to bring the case of the strikers to the attention of the city fathers.

They hope he will report to the city council on the citizens committee for the settlement of the strike which disbanded Monday and tell the councilmen why the bosses were able to refuse to arbitrate. The strikers say the bosses who have refused to arbitrate were able to do it only because they had the police force fighting for them.

Bosses Depend On Police.

If the police force was not constantly trying to break the picket line by mass arrests and beating up strikers, the strikers say the bosses would feel less secure in their position. Feeling that in all practical ways the city administration is behind them the bosses refuse to deal with the union.

If the city politicians were really impartial the strikers say the bosses would not be so stubborn.

Oscar Nelson's position in the city council gives the strikers a spokes-

On To The City Hall!

"On to the City Hall!" is the latest slogan of the brave garment strikers, now nearing the end of the fourth week of their heroic struggle.

They are going to attend the meeting of the city council this afternoon to see whether Alderman Oscar Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, will raise his voice in the city council against the brutal use of the police against them.

The slogan of "On to the City Hall!" was heard everywhere among the strikers yesterday, at their mass meeting and on the picket lines. It is expected that the Council Chambers on the second floor of the City Hall will be jammed, as in the days of the victorious struggles of the street carmen and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, when action was forced from the city aldermen.

HOW DID BOON COMPANION OF DAUGHERTY DIE?

Ex-Wife Believes Death Not Self-Inflicted

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Was Jess Smith, inseparable companion of Attorney General Daugherty, a suicide, or was he murdered, in Daugherty's apartment in the Wardman Park hotel a year ago?

That was the issue inferentially raised in the Wheeler investigation of Daugherty's record when Roxie Stinson, former wife of Smith, came back to the witness stand to tell that she was framed by friends of the attorney general when they feared that she would talk too much about Daugherty.

Quarrels With Daugherty.

On the witness stand she declared that Jess was in deadly fear of an expose of affairs in Daugherty's apartment, and also that he was in extreme fear of physical danger to himself and to her for some time before his death. She testified that he had always been afraid of firearms, and had forbidden her to possess a revolver, yet on the Friday before his death in Washington, he had bought a revolver after a quarrel with Daugherty at the "shack" where they were staying near Washington Court House, Ohio.

Senator Wheeler, by a series of questions, drew from the witness the statement that she observed no powder marks around the bullet wound in his temple when she saw his body prior to the funeral; that Smith's doctor had flatly denied the statement brought to her by Mal Daugherty, brother of the attorney general, that Smith's wound due to an operation for appendicitis a year before was found to be fully open after his death. In her own statement of her defiance of both Daughertys she said: "Harry Daugherty is not going to strongarm me and I am not going to have a convenient bullet thru my head."

Can It Be Murder?

Daugherty spent the night at the White House prior to the death of Smith which occurred early in the morning. No inquest was held, altho bruises appeared on the body and there have been stories that the apartment was in disorder.

Thus far the word "murder" has not been suggested in the senate hearings, but the implication of Roxie Stinson's testimony was that she feared his death was not self-inflicted.

Gehart Larson, a farmer, living near Morris, Ill., today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy before the clerk of the United States District Court.

The petition was filed thru Larson's attorney, C. E. Reardon of Morris. Liabilities were listed as $2,598.54 and assets as $400. The principal creditor is Oscar Collins, a farmer, living near Saratoga, who holds a $1,300 note.

MORE OF FALL DOUGH STILL IS MYSTERY

Baffled Probers Are After His Son-In-Law

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 25.—Senator Thomas Walsh, Montana, today introduced a resolution in the senate asking the house of representatives to begin impeachment proceedings against C. C. Chase, collector of customs at El Paso, Texas, and son-in-law of Albert B. Fall.

Chase yesterday refused to testify before the oil investigating committee on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

The Walsh resolution charged that Chase had entered into a conspiracy with Albert B. Fall to mislead the committee as to the origin of the $100,000 loan which enabled the former secretary of the interior to purchase the Harris ranch in New Mexico.

It further charged that Chase had endeavored to get Price McKinney of Cleveland to testify that he had loaned Fall the money.

Walsh asked that "the resolution be transmitted to the house together with a copy of testimony in the case in order that the house might inaugurate such proceedings against Chase as may be appropriate.

The senate oil committee today endeavored to trail to its source a mysterious $32,000 with which Albert B. Fall purchased ranch properties in New Mexico after the Teapot Dome lease was negotiated.

The committee examined M. D. Thatcher, president of the First National Bank of Pueblo, Colo., and trustee of the Thatcher estate, with whom Fall had financial dealings.

Thatcher said Fall had from time to time borrowed $102,200 from his concerns but could not account for the $32,000 with which Fall testified he had purchased properties after he invested the $100.000 he obtained from Doheny in another property.

"The testimony of Thatcher proves that Fall got $32.000 from some source not yet revealed to the committee," Senator Walsh, Montana, declared following Thatcher's testimony.

Banker Is Witness.

Mahlan D. Thatcher, president of the First National Bank of Pueblo, Colo., in which Fall handled his New Mexico ranch accounts, was the first witness before the committee today.

Thatcher denied that his bank had made a loan to Fall in either 1921 or 1922. Fall told the committee he had arranged for a $100,000 credit with Thatcher in 1922.

"We made a loan of $15.000 to Fall in 1916 which was renewed from time to time," Thatcher said.

"When was it paid off?" Walsh asked.

This was a month after Fall granted the Teapot Dome lease to Harry Sinclair.

Walsh then read a letter which Fall sent the committee some time ago, stating that the Tres Ritaos Land and Cattle company, of which Fall is president, had a big credit running up to $200,000 with the Thatcher estate.

"In small notes from time to time between January 1921 and July 1923."

SOLONS' IRE AROUSED BY CROOK'S DEFY

Grand Jury to Decide On Fate of Oil King

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25.—A formal contempt citation against Harry F. Sinclair was sent to U. S. District Attorney Peyton Gordon here today by Senator Moses, New Hampshire, acting president of the senate.

This action was taken pursuant to order of the senate yesterday holding Sinclair in contempt for refusing to answer questions put to him by the senate committee investigating the naval oil reserve scandals.

Gordon will immediately present the case to the grand jury here, asking an indictment.

The Senate's citation reads:

"To the Honorable District Attorney of the District of Columbia:

"Take Notice:—That one Harry F. Sinclair, appearing pursuant to its subpoena before the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys of the Senate on 22nd day of March, 1924, refused to answer questions before the said committee under Senate Resolution 147 and that his refusal to answer and his failure to testify and the facts in relation thereto have been reported to the Senate all of which will more fully appear by the report of the said committee made to the Senate the 24th day of March, 1924, a copy of which is hereto attached."

Congress' Power Is Issue.

The whole question of Congress' power to investigate goes to the courts today when a federal grand jury here will be asked to indict Harry F. Sinclair for contempt of the Senate.

Before this question has been settled, a court fight extending to the highest tribunal in the land, the United States Supreme Court, will be waged. Both the government and Sinclair are determined to establish their contentions. The Senate intends to settle its right to force Sinclair or any other citizen to answer questions and produce records before investigating committees properly authorized.

Sinclair, taking the position that the Senate Oil Committee was violating his constitutional guarantees in trying to make him testify, will battle to the finish, it was indicated today, to defeat the Senate probers.

Indictment Is First Step.

The first step in the court fight will be the return of an indictment for contempt against Sinclair—probably on Monday.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief Senate prosecutor, has drawn up a tentative form of the indictment which he desires to have the federal grand jury return.

Walsh has a conference with Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, special government counsel arranged for today so that the matter may be placed before the grand jury at once.

Roberts and Pomerene also will begin work today on criminal cases against others who mixed up in the oil scandal for presentation to another grand jury early next month.

Indictments against Sinclair, E. L. Doheny and former Secretary of the Interior Fall probably on a charge of "conspiracy to defraud the government," are in prospect.

Legal authorities believe it would be extremely hard to make out a strong "bribery" case in view of the evidence. While the conspiracy is a lesser charge, it would be more easily established in view of the facts, it is thought.

HINT OF MURDER IN DAUGHERTY PROBE IS HEARD IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The mystery surrounding the manner of death of Jesse Smith in Attorney-General Daugherty's apartment last May was never properly cleared up, Representative Oliver, New York, declared in the House today.

"His brains were blown out in the Attorney-General's apartment either by his hand or the hand of another," said Oliver.

"No autopsy was performed; no inquest was held. He was hurried to his grave.

"Today Jesse Smith stands revealed as a collector of graft from whisky deals and involved in a fight film conspiracy and other piracies. He died when the trial of a great bootleg ring in New York was called.

"And he willed his money, derived from graft, to the Attorney-General of the United States," Oliver concluded.

RAID DEFENDANTS IN WILLIAMSON SENT TO PRISON

Promised Immunity by Klan; Doublecrossed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DANVILLE, Ill., March 25—Several cases growing out of the dry raids in Williamson county last year were disposed of in the United States district court here today. Jail sentences were given in two cases, fines in one. Glenn Young was a witness for the state.

Klan Promised Immunity.

Lawrence T. Allen, special government prosecutor, informed the Federal court here that he would ask jail sentences for all of the 41 Herrin defendants who telegraphed a promise to plead guilty here on April 14. The men were arrested following the liquor raids of two months ago.

Representatives of the defendants stated here that the offer to plead guilty was made on promise of immunity. The overtures, the representatives charge, were made by Williamson county klansmen headed by a Marion klan attorney.

Anti-Klansman Out On Bail.

MARION, Ill., March 25.—Carl and Earl Shelton, brothers, indicted by the Herrin special grand jury for the murder of Caesar Cagle, Herrin constable, in the Ku Klux Klan and anti-klan clash over booze enforcement that started a booze war and military occupation of Williamson county, are free today on $10,000 bonds each.

They had been held secretly in the county jail here for nearly two weeks, after surrendering to sheriff George Galligan immediately following their indictment.

The sheriff kept the information of the apprehension of the two away from the new set of "law enforcement deputies" who took over field work of the sheriff in the county following widespread opposition from klan circles.

N. M. He said the aggregate loaned to Fall in 1922 was $15,000. The balance of the total advances were made in 1923, he said, adding that his total advances to Fall's company were $102,200.

"But it has been testified here that Fall purchased additional property for $32,000 in 1923, after he bought the Harris ranch with the $100,000 he got from Doheny" Walsh said. "Do you know where Fall got that $32,000?"

"No sir, I do not."

Daugherty, Smith Stock Gamble.

Thatcher was then excused.

Anderson H. Tackett, accountant for the federal trade commission, gave the committee a detailed account of the stock dealings of Jess Smith, intimate friend of Attorney General Daugherty.

Tackett said his examination of the books of Hibbs and Company, Washington brokers, indicated that Daugherty and Smith speculated stocks, under the name of "W. W. Sapid." The account was closed out June 1, 1923, Tackett said.

Because of the frequent purchase and sale of other stocks in the Smith account, Tackett said, it was impossible to compute whether Smith's transactions, excluding the three accounts specifically mentioned were at a profit or loss.

The committee adjourned after hearing Tackett until Thursday. Tomorrow the committee will devote its attention to bills relating to public lands. On Thursday officials of the Empire Trust Company of New York and Al Jennings, reformed bandit, of Oklahoma, will testify.

Heflin Is Wroth.

A threat by Senator Heflin, Alabama, to carry the investigation of alleged Texas land frauds to the floor of the senate temporarily halted the senate postoffice committee's probe today.

Heflin, under whose resolution the inquiry is being conducted, vehemently objected to the interruption of the presentation of evidence by James R. Page, counsel for "land victims" by George Hill, Houston, Texas, counsel for R. B. Creager.

Hill interrupted Page's cross examination of Chief Postal Inspector Rush D. Simmons to ask several questions and despite vigorous objections by Heflin, Chairman Moses permitted Hill to proceed.

Hill asked Simmons if he knew that Page was "a fugitive from justice in Texas and left there upon the return of eight indictments and the filing of disbarment proceedings against him."

"Yes. I had a general knowledge of that," Simmons replied.

"This investigation is not going to be killed," Heflin declared. "Should everything that Hill has asked be true it is no defense against the allegations in the complaint petitions filed with the postoffice deparment."

NELSON DOES NOT YET KNOW IF HE WILL ACT TODAY

Labor Head Fears to Embarrass Mayor

man there, the strikers say. They hope he will speak in an effective way on their behalf.

Council Meets Today.

Today at 2 p. m. the city council holds its weekly meeting. There can be no possible reason for Nelson's not speaking effectively for the strikers there.

To the anxious hopes of the strikers Nelson replies that he may or he may not speak in their behalf at the meeting of the council.

Picket In Rain.

Yesterday morning in a dreary and uncomfortable drizzle, a hundred girls kept on the picket line. The cops did not make so many arrests as usual. Drivers of the patrol wagons objected to driving on the wet streets. But the streets were not too wet for the pickets.

Students from the University of Chicago, who are members of the Liberal Club, came to the picket line. They were all surprised to see so many strikers. One girl student said to a striker, "We thought that we would be the only persons on the picket line this morning."

Arrests In Morning.

Those arrested on the first and last trip of the patrol during the morning before the cops decided to call it a morning's work were: May Mostt, Sophie Mandelson, Ada Abrams, Eleanor Smahl, Maria Desidero and Alma Jones.

Ada Abrams was arrested because several scabs on their way to work stopped to beat her up. After beating her the scabs called the cop who had been considerate enough to walk around a corner while they assaulted Miss Abrams and he placed her under arrest. When the wagon was called to take her to the police station the coppers decided they might as well make the trip count for something and so arrested the others.

More Injunction Arrests.

Three more workers were arrested on attachments for contempt of "Dennie's" writ. They were: Oscar Simon, Kara Seiger and William Wellworth. The judge set their cases to be heard yesterday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

When the strikers who were arrested Monday were arraigned in S. Clark police court yesterday they all demanded jury trials. They were: Sam Seidel, Lillian Libbin, Lena Morvitz, Dora Ruben, Sarah Orlove, Emma Goldberg, Bessie Isenberg, Tessie Rhode, Ida Gaffin and Della Muddleman.

PICKET DESPITE INJUNCTON; SAYS STRIKE SPEAKER

O'Flaherty Flays Dever As Capitalist Tool.

Denouncing the use of the injunction by capitalist courts in labor disputes, Thomas J. O'Flaherty, associate editor of the DAILY WORKER, addressing a meeting of striking dress makers at 180 West Washington street yesterday, declared that strikes are won or lost on the picket lines.

"It is true that injunctions cannot made dresses," he declared, "but scabs can, and if you cannot keep these scabs away from the struck shops you cannot win. You must stay on the picket line, injunction or no injunction, until you have won your fight."

Mass Picketing Wins.

Comrade O'Flaherty told how mass picketing worked in the city of Lawrence, Massachusetts, where the workers in thousands marched to the gates of the woolen mills at 7 o'clock in the morning and during the hours when workers usually go to the shops the numbers so impressed the bosses that they dared not put any sluggers into operation.

"If the workers of Chicago used their heads during the last municipal election and put forward a mayoralty candidate on a working class ticket who would represent their interests instead of the interests of the bosses, the clubs of the Chicago police would not now be descending on your heads," said the speaker.

He said Robert E. Crowe and Mayor Dever were just tools of the capitalists of Chicago and that the workers were really to blame for their being in office.

Action in Council.

O'Flaherty called attention to the fact that the city council was meeting today and that an official of organized labor was sitting on the council—referring to Oscar Nelson. He demanded that protest be made at the council by labor's representative against the tactics of the city police.

The strikers who attended the meeting were very enthusiastic and in spite of the rain, responded to the call to go on the picket lines with cheers.

Watch British Start.

SEATTLE, Wash, March 25.—America's "round the world" army flyers watched with interest today reports of the start of the British flight.

The Poor Fish Says:—I hear the Pope joined the Third International. We have too much red here already. Look at the trouble they are making down in Washington. Now, His Holiness is sending us two more red hats!

DOZEN STRIKERS BEFORE SULLIVAN, TWO CONVICTED

Crowe's Detective Lies More Than Boss.

Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's attempt to stop picketing thru the use of the injunction led to twelve more arraignments before him yesterday.

All of the 12 strikers were charged with picketing in spite of his sacred writ and therefore being in contempt of court.

"Dennie" gave a decision against Margaret Welsh and Emma Deering, but reserved sentence until today. No decision was made in the case of ten others who will come up again today. They are: Marion Brodek, Charles F. Muller, Louis Sokoloff, Anna Feldman, Valentine Piesecki, Yattie Rossman, Silvia Factor, Ida Selkoff and Minnie Sugarman.

Swears Boss In Himself.

The injunction judge's eagerness to railroad the strikers was shown when he insisted on swearing in witnesses himself. When Nat Rieback of the Rieback firm at 225 S. Market street came up to testify against Margaret Welsh and Emma Deering, Sullivan took the task of swearing them in out of the hands of the court clerk and did it himself.

Rieback and his confidential clerk, Fred Justine, admitted under Attorney Peter Sissman's cross-examination that they had not seen either of them near their factory since they had been served with injunction notices. Both of them are constantly on the lookout, too.

Fink Schroeder Lies.

Detective Schroeder, of State's Attorney Crowe's office, then volunteered to testify against the girls. As proof that he had seen them since the injunction writ he produced his note book. The evidence, when Sissman made him show it, was nothing more than a pencilled notation, with the girl's names after the pencilled date "March 12."

Schroeder, by the way, had a hand in the beating up of Sophie Altschuler.

Freda Reicher, Ida Abrams and Rose Boldag were arrested on the picket line late in the day by the police. They were taken to the S. Clark street station, bailed out and will appear in court this morning.

'Minute Men' Worry About Pacifist Speech That Allison Made

Brent Dow Allison's speech against capitalist wars to Northwestern University students has set the "Minute Men of the Constitution" by the ears.

These panicky gentlemen will meet in the Hotel La Salle today for the express purpose of talking about Allison's case and to planning what can be done to win back respect for the American eagle.

Sunday Lieut. Corlis Griffis will tell Northwestern students at the Patten gymnasium on the campus what they ought to do. Griffis, himself, has proved to be a very successful fighter, falling down in his plot to kidnap Bergdoll and ending up in a German jail.

London Bus Men Expect Raise.

LONDON, Mar. 25.—London bus men are expecting an early settlement of their strike with an increase of eight shillings a week. Prime Minister MacDonald is supporting a bill for concentrating bus and tram traffic under an advisory committee set up by the minister of transport.

Keep Railroad From Russia.

PEKING, Mar. 25.—French pressure is causing China to turn down an earlier agreement that the Chinese Eastern Railway, which connects with Vladivostok and Dairen be turned over to Russian control. This railroad, representing a value up to $300,000,000, was built originally with the aid of Russian money.

BURNS MUST GO!

North Side Branch Y. W. L.

Sydney Borgeson's lecture, which was to have been given at a regular meeting of the North Side Branch of the Young Workers League, had been postponed and will now be delivered this evening, March 26, at the same place, Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted street, city.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Watch Oscar Today!

Oscar Nelson is an alderman.
Oscar Nelson is an official of labor.
Oscar Nelson is a labor lawyer.

This should have put Oscar Nelson on the firing line in the City Council for the striking members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

* * * *

But four weeks of the strike have passed.

Oscar Nelson has not spoken a single word for the garment strikers on the floor of the city council.

He has not denounced the brutality of the police.

He has not exposed the use of private thugs.

He has not brought what pressure he could to bear upon the rapacity of the garment bosses, who refuse to deal with the strikers.

* * * *

Oscar Nelson has an opportunity to break this blackening record of silence at the meeting of the city council this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the council chambers at the City Hall.

Yesterday he told the DAILY WORKER he did not know what he would do. He had not yet decided to raise his voice for the strikers on the floor of the city council, to demand an investigation of police brutality, to demand that ways and means be found to force the garment bosses into a settlement of the strike.

* * * *

Hundreds of striking garment workers ought to jam the galleries of the City Council chambers this afternoon at two o'clock to watch Oscar Nelson in action.

They ought to be there to watch Oscar Nelson, the alderman, the labor official, the labor lawyer.

Oscar Nelson can do much, if he will, to aid the garment strikers.

He can do much in the City Council this afternoon.
BUT WILL HE DO IT?
WATCH HIM, WORKERS OF CHICAGO!

VANDERLIP SAYS HE WILL "CLEAN UP" WASHINGTON

Aged Banker Sore on Grafters

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Frank A. Vanderlip has opened here a "laundry" with which he is going to help "dry clean the government."

"Some of my friends have suggested that I have gone crazy," said Vanderlip when he was asked to dispel a certain air of mystery with which his operations since coming to Washington recently have been cloaked. "Well, I'll tell you what I'm doing and you can judge whether I'm crazy or not."

First, Vanderlip insisted, any account of his activities here must make it plain that he is, for the time being, under the direction of Senator Wheeler, the aggressive "prosecutor" of the Senate committee investigating Attorney General Daugherty.

"Wheeler and I are working in close co-operation," said Vanderlip.

The Citizens Federal Research Bureau, which he has just opened here—is a cheerless office only half furnished as yet.

"I invented this research bureau," said Vanderlip, "to get to the American people the facts about conditions in the government.

"My idea was to get the facts together and send them to 1,000 newspapers. Out of the 1,000 somebody, somewhere along the line, would be sure to crack the story and then the rest of them would have to follow it.

New Possibilities.

"But the Wheeler investigation gave me another channel.

"The bureau here is being incorporated as a permanent agency. When I started it I planned to have 25 of the most distinguished men in the country associated with me. But I abandoned that idea for you can't get 25 such men without finding some sore toes. So I am going to have 25 hard-boiled, cold-nosed young men instead—men with no pasts. I'm not going to have a 'No thorofare' sign hung on any path I want to follow."

"What gave you this dry cleaning idea—what made you think the government needed dry cleaning?" Vanderlip was asked.

"In the McKinley administration," he said, "I was assistant secretary of the treasury. I got to know things about Washington.

"Then I went to the National City Bank. That organization, as a big holder of government bonds, keeps in touch with Washington. I built up a secret service of my own here and it has been functioning for 20 years. I know my Washington.

Got His Goat.

"When this personal machinery of investigation and information brought me reports of what was going on here, I paid little attention to it for a long time. Like a good many citizens, I regard it indifferently. But suddenly I saw the whole thing in its appalling ugliness.

"A friend asked me to make a speech. I spoke on courage in leadership.

"I was at once the target of a bitter tirade. After I was commended, and, in addition, I became a veritable reservoir into which information poured from every source. I have taken pains to check this up and such of it as is straight goes to Wheeler.

"There's the story. There's no mystery. I'm after clean government. Seems to me one way to get that is to inform the public. That's my game."

WORKERS OF ODESSA, BLACK SEA PORT, SEND CALL FOR DAILY WORKER

A call for the DAILY WORKER has just come from Odessa, leading port on the Black Sea.

The call comes from J. Statzemco, secretary for the Industrial Workers of the World at Butte, Montana, in 1921 in a letter to the National Office of the Workers Party in which he sends his regards to W. F. Dunne and T. J. O'Flaherty of the DAILY WORKER staff. He asks that the paper be sent to the workers reading room in Odessa.

ARBITRATION OF STRIKE URGED ON GARMENT BOSSES

78 Have Signed Already, Pleaded Citizens

Before disbanding, the Citizens' Committee, which has been seeking to negotiate a settlement of the garment strike, made public its correspondence with the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers.

The committee's letter, which states that already 78 firms employing 1,200 workers have signed agreements, reads as follows:

Ask Bosses to Arbitrate.

"As you may know, a committee made up of citizens vitally interested in the well-being of both employers and workers has been appointed to inquire into the causes of the strike in the dressmaking industry of Chicago and to assist in every way possible in bringing about a fair settlement.

The information which the committee has obtained thus far, indicates that a majority of the workers in the industry are members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; that seventy-eight firms employing twelve hundred workers have signed agreements with the above named union. During the life of these agreements any differences that may arise will be submitted to arbitration.

"Are you willing to agree to arbitrate the demands of the workers before a joint committee of Chicago citizens appointed by the parties at interest and headed by a chairman appointed in the same manner?

"Please be good enough to send your reply so that it will reach the committee not later than Friday afternoon, March 21, 1924."

The bosses acknowledged the letter but refused to arbitrate. So the committee has given up trying to persuade them and the fight is on by organized labor to force them.

Prevent Meeting When Cal Is Called Benedict Arnold

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OAKLAND, Calif., March 25.—The meeting here under auspices of the Workers Party to express the opinion of the workers about the Teapot Dome exposures was stopped by police intimidation.

In advertising the meeting President Coolidge was compared with Benedict Arnold. On account of this police threatened the hall owner with prosecution and as a result the hall was closed against those who arranged the meeting.

MINERS' DISTRICT CONVENTION ON IN SMOKY CITY

Fakers Ready to Spill The Red Paint

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 25.—About 250 delegates, representing approximately 38,000 miners assembled here today in the district No. 5 convention. Altho little was done in the opening session, it is expected that lively debate will be the order.

Progressives Go to Bat.

This was promised when Jimmy Oates arose immediately after the preliminaries and demanded that a report of the credentials committee be submitted before any business was transacted. Oates declared that he was opposed to any aye or nay vote deciding things, until the convention was organized and it was fully determined who was entitled to cast such votes.

Oates also opposed the selection of John Tuck on the rules and order committee, declaring that the local Tuck is representing, is of the non-existant variety. However, the protests were ordered made in the proper place and a bitter battle is expected when the protests reach the convention floor.

David Hicky, president of the Pittsburgh Central Labor Union, opened the convention. He then introduced to the convention the Rev. J. J. Hughes of Hills Station, Pa., who invoked the convention with prayer. Father Hughes played a very prominent part in the strike of 1922 and when the Pittsburgh Coal company began its eviction of the miners from their homes at that place, he opened up his church in which to store their furniture.

Green to Sling Red Paint.

At noon adjournment nothing but a partial reading of the report of the executive board had been heard, in addition to the protests of Jimmy Oates.

It was announced that International Secretary Green would address the convention at the afternoon session.

Green, it was stated, is on his way to New York to attend a meeting of the Mitchell Memorial Committee, and this was his only chance to address the convention. The progressives are expecting a flow of Red Paint.

Boo, Hiss Green.

Referring to the "Old Testament" to discover the word "Ass", Billy Green, International Secretary-Treasurer, in addressing the convention of District 5, United Mine Workers of America, today used the name of the occupant of the stable at Bethlehem, and applied it to the delegates who booed and hissed him when he was invited to the platform to address the convention.

Referring to the Progressives as, "Advocates of a new, strange and untried philosophy", Green declared that they should get a hall of their own and expound their ideas there and not come into conventions of the miners to spread such poison and attempt to destroy the United Mine Workers of America.

He further stated that the progressives were like the Presbyterians who were fomenting trouble in the Methodist and Baptist churches by endeavoring to get those of these faiths to desert their own and to accept that advocated by them. Declaring that, "Instead of going out to the sinners of the world to seek new recruits, they were more contented in the work of corrupting the Saints".

"Why don't you go into the fields of West Virginia and Western Kentucky," he yelled, "and if you can establish your ideas and philosophies there, then we will be ready to accept your plan."

Pleading for harmony in words and driving it away in action, Green made a poor showing among those who have some understanding of the Labor movement.

Murray Vents His Spleen.

Vice-President Phil Murray followed with a speech of like tone and was so vicious in his remarks that a delegate who admitted that he was a friend of both Murray and Green protested against his tactics. Of course they refrained from mentioning the things that organizers of the district and international union are spreading in every district where the Union has jurisdiction. Outside of the speeches there was little done. The report of the Executive Board was read and referred to a committee for action, after which it will be discussed by the delegates.

OTHER POLICE THUGS BAD AS OFFICER 3401

All Girls' Assailants Should Be Fired

Mayor William E. Dever's promise to the "Committee of 15," to see that Officer 3401 was put off the force, does not satisfy members of the strike committee.

They point out that if Officer 3401's assault on Olga Levin is an offense worthy of dismissal that the still more violent assault on Sophie Altschuler in front of 237 S. Market street by Officer O'Rorke (3181), March 14, should lead to similar action.

Dever's Excuse Doesn't Go.

Mayor Dever's excuse to the subcommittee, consisting of Anton Johannsen, John Fitzpatrick and Victor Olander, which presented the garment workers' union written report, was that the other assaults listed there occurred before their first visit to him and before he had promised to take up the matter of police brutality—whereas the assault on Miss Levin took place later.

Strikers are indignant at this crude attempt to side-step the issue. Regardless of when the assaults by uniformed police occurred the mayor must do what he can to rectify them now. But the facts are that the mayor is grossly incorrect as to time.

Beaten Seven Days After Promise.

Johannsen, Olander and Fitzpatrick made their first visit of complaint to the mayor March 7, on a Friday morning. Sophie Altschuler was not beaten up until the following Friday, March 14, seven days after the mayor promised to make his police behave.

The cruelty of the crime was intensified at the S. Clark St. station, according to the text of the document which the committee presented the mayor and a copy of which is in possession of the DAILY WORKER. In the police station the matron refused to get a doctor for the injured girl tho she had been unconscious for a time after the attack. This, in spite of the fact that there is a doctor on the fourth floor of this building.

She was kept in the police station for several hours, without medical attendance, before she was finally booked at six o'clock. Five hours after she was assaulted Dr. Maltman, a private physician, examined her at the hotel and found her wrists still "badly swollen."

Made Mouth Bleed.

On the same day Fannie Yannes, 2229 Iowa street, was struck so violently in the mouth by Officer William Hankin in front of 228 Market street that her teeth were loosened and her mouth bled.

The beating of Ethel Spink by officers 5159 and 3609 on March 18 and the arrest of a DAILY WORKER reporter who got the policemen's number is further cited by the report which the committee handed the mayor and which was prepared by the garment workers' union. The date again refutes the mayor's statement that these other assaults occurred before the first visit of the committee.

The same day officers Collins and Schroeder, who assisted in the arrest of Sophie Altschuler, several days earlier, arrested Gussie Cohen, 1413 N. Larkin street and amused themselves by taking her hands and hitting her in the face with them.

Union Has the Proof.

All these cases are authenticated by numerous witnesses. Of the latter the garment workers' union makes the statement, which is approved by vice-president Meyer Perlstein, that:

> "Freda Reicher, a striker in whose intelligence and honesty we have the utmost faith, saw this attack and is willing to appear before your committee and tell it."

Other instances are given and the union is ready to furnish the committee of 15 that they might present them daily to the mayor.

Birth Control Clinics Urged.

BERKELEY, Cal., March 25.—"Free birth control clinics and municipally supported health clinics are the only solution of the problems presented by a too large birth rate in families economically unable to give children the proper care," said Dr. William E. Newman, a Long Beach physician, addressing the Berkeley civic forum. "The proper facts of birth control must be presented, at least pending the improvement of economic conditions," he stated.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

South Denies Negro Rights But Gives Him Bread; North Gives Him Rights But Little to Eat

It is from the selfish manipulation of the large employers of labor, and not from organized labor, that the Negro in industry finds his chief embarrassment. There is a common bond between the 98 per cent of the Negro adults who work and the 92 per cent of the whites who work.

All wage earners are oppressed. In that sense every race is an oppressed race, and good feeling, therefore, almost always exists between the Negro and white laborers.

"There is a mistaken notion current among those who have had few dealings with working people that race prejudice plays an important part in the relations between white and colored workers," Mary McDowell puts it.

The antagonism that has sometimes arisen is due to the fact that Negroes have so often been imported as strike-breakers, usually with little knowledge of the conditions to which they came or the significance of the strike. This feeling has nothing in common with race prejudice. The trade unions are increasing in hospitality toward colored workers and the Negroes themselves are now awakening to the need of putting an end to their use as strike-breakers. The labor union leaders of the stockyards have taken a determined stand against race prejudice."

Negroes and Whites Combine.

We are further told by the Department of Labor, that "Union workers in the stockyards charge that the packers have used Negro leaders to prevent unionizing of the Negroes. The Negroes of Chicago have become almost as putty in the hands of the employers and politicians." This statement means that the recent competition, between the Southern and White employers—the one trying to induce the Negro migrant back to the South by offering him fair treatment, the other trying to keep him here by playing up Southern lynchings—is not a change of heart on the part of the employers toward the black race. The employers controlling the Negro's job, and hence his way of living, regards the Negro, not as a problem, but as a supply of cheap labor with which to keep wages down.

Between Two Fires.

James Weldon Johnson, of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, tells us that the Negro is badly off, whether in the North or the South. "Heretofore the Negro has had two choices," Mr. Johnson says. "That of living in the South where most of his manhood and civil rights were denied him, but where economically his condition was secure; or that of living in the North where his rights were guaranteed him, but where his economic condition was always precarious. In this attitude towards the Negro the North has been almost as cruel as the South; for altho the South denied him life it offered him bread; while the North offered him life, but refused that whereby he might live."

It is always to the interests of the powerful employers to divide the workers up into opposing factions. If groups of workers can be prevailed on to fight each other, they will not have the energy to fight the employers for better working conditions and higher wages. Hence instead of telling the truth in the daily papers which they control, the bosses make it appear that the white workers object to admitting Negroes to their unions. They try to play upon race prejudice to divide the workers so that they will not combine to better their economic conditions.

Job Competition Harmful.

Sometimes, altho rarely, it happens that a white unionist is taken in by this attempt of the bosses to split the workers up, and it is this exceptional person who advocates barring the Negroes from his union, thereby unwittingly helping his employer to keep wages down. It is then up to the Negro to show his white brother that competition between classes or groups of workers for the same jobs keeps down the standard of the workers' living. Organization of all groups of workers in the same unions gives them the power to raise the workers' standard of living. The bosses know that organization is power. That is why they combine into trusts and monopolies, and Chambers of Commerce—to keep down wages and increase the price of the goods which they sell and which the workers largely buy.

They Stood Together.

On the whole, the workers have learned this lesson. "The relation between the White and Negro workers in Chicago is good," we are told by the Interchurch World Movement. "During the riots of July, 1919, separate white and Negro workers in the same unions stood manfully together in condemning the outrage. Negroes are organized for the most part in the packing industry. In 1919 Negroes were found in 37 of the 39 various locals of the stockyards labor council."

Another example of the solidarity of the workers of all races is observed in the present garment workers strike in this city. Every morning, Negro as well as white girls can be seen on the picket lines along Market street. The workers have learned the lesson that it is not only disloyal and unprincipled, but is against their own interests to act as strikebreakers, no matter what their race. In a union of the workers there is strength for the workers.

Whole Family Works.

It is especially necessary for the Negroes to organize in their unions. The Department of Labor recently wrote: "The total average income of the white family is $300 larger than that of the Negro family. The Negro husband's income is not adequate for the family and the wife and children are called upon to assist. In addition, lodgers are taken in. The results are often serious. The wife's strength and attention are divided, children are exploited, the family circle is invaded. In the United States 43.7 per cent of the Negro mothers are at work, while only 8.9 per cent of the white mothers are at work. Twenty-five per cent—one in every four—of the Negro children are at work while 18.6 per cent of the white children are working."

In spite of this added labor of the entire Negro family, the income of the Negro family is $300 less than the white family income. In the light of these facts, is it any wonder that the living standards of the Negro families are often lower than that of white families?

New Leaders Needed.

The old type of leaders of the Negro Race instead of facing these figures, talked of "good feeling" between the races. They tried to teach the Negroes that by learning a trade, even tho a humble one, they would demonstrate their value and the white employers would have to raise their standard. This type of leader was generally not a worker at all, but a professional man or wealthy banker who was out of touch with the workers' problems.

It is time recogniton was given the new type of Race leader: the scientific thinker who shows the workers that their standards will not be raised by the bosses until the workers organize themselves and force higher standards. The workers and their employers have nothing in common.

Real Estate and the Colored Tenant

"THE negro real estate dealer frequently offers to the owner of an apartment house which is no longer renting advantageously to white tenants cash payment for a year's lease on the property, thus guaranteeing the owner against loss, and then he fills the building with colored tenants. It is said, however, that the agent does not put out the white tenants unless he can get 10 per cent more from the colored people. By this method the Negroes now occupy many large apartment buildings, but the negro real estate agents obtain the reputation of exploiting their own race."—From Investigation of Juvenile Protective Association.

Socialist President Guzzles Food While Cooks Picket Hotel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, March 25.—Ebert, the Social-Democratic president of Germany calmly dined on food cooked by strikebreakers at Hotel Adlon, one of the most sumptuous Berlin hotels, while pickets representing twenty-five cooks paraded in front of the Adlon Hotel with placards telling about the strike. When the regular kitchen force had gone out on strike the management of the hotel engaged strikebreakers. The pickets were on duty to deter the scabs from working and they displayed their posters in an effort to deter people from going in to dine. But the Social-Democratic president of Germany disregarded the striking workers and their placards and went in for his sumptuous meal cooked by scabs. As the Social-Democratic Party of Germany has lost most of the workers who were members of it, it would seem that, in desperation, this Social-Democratic Party is turning to scabs for sympathy and support.

One Good Reason Why The Chicago Tribune Dislikes Mexico

BOSTON, March 25.—The copper trust can't get away with the deportations and violence in Mexico that it used at Bisbee, Ariz.

The Phelps-Dodge corporation, which engineered the reign of terror in Bisbee in 1917, also owns copper mines in Mexico. The company declared a lockout at its Mexican plant but the mine did not shut down as it would have in the United States. It kept on running with the old employes, but under the direction of the state. Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, then a state governor, took over the operations. The company sued for damages but calmed down when Calles produced the Mexican constitutional provision which forbids a lockout until the arbitration and conciliation boards have been tried. Every locked out employe is entitled to three months' wages if the employer violates this provision.

BURNS MUST GO!

ACQUIT KEENEY OF MURDER FOR ARMED MARCH

W. Va. Jury Acts Quickly in Miners' Behalf

FAYETTEVILLE, W. Va., March 25.—It took the jury only a few minutes to determine that Frank Keeney, president District No. 17, United Mine Workers of America, was "not guilty" of participating in the armed march of miners in West Virginia in the summer of 1921. The uprising was provoked after many union coal miners had been murdered by the private army of thugs that is maintained in this state by the coal operators to prevent unionization of their mines.

Indicted For Armed March.

Keeney, as well as other district officials and many other union miners and their sympathizers, were indicted in connection with the trouble and have been defending themselves in the courts ever since. The armed march trials began at Charlestown in April, 1922, a few days after the national coal strike was called. Wm. Blizzard, a sub-district president, was freed from a murder charge at that time but other miners were convicted. J. E. Wilburn, a union coal digger preacher, and his son, who were convicted and sentenced to jail at Charlestown, have since turned state's evidence—on the promise of freedom—and testified against Keeney at this trial. The defense exposed thir perjuries.

Operators Financed Prosecution.

When the jury's clear verdict was read in court a storm of applause broke forth. The prosecution was directed and financed by the coal operators altho the crime was supposed to have been committed against the state. The state's attorney did not take part in the trial, his place being aken by lawyers for the operators. The Keeney verdict is a big victory for the miners, especially since the operators had engineered the courts successfully to hold the trial in Logan county, the hotbed of gunmen and non-union control.

Plenty of Fun and Darned Good Donkey In Sancho Panza Play

The well-known tired American business man need have no fear of straining his puny bump of philosophy when he goes to see the new fantastic comedy, "Sanch Pancho," presented at the Powers Theater. The play furnishes good entertainment with a dash of home-made wisdom here and there that takes very well with the audience.

Into the court room of a king whose throne is toppling under the threats of a tax-burdened people, walks the simple-hearted peasant, Sancho Panza, with his faithful little donkey Dapple. He asks for food, and the good old king gives him not only food but an island to govern, thus fulfilling the promise of his master, Don Quixote.

Slept With One Eye Open.

Sancho finds himself surrounded by traitors, with only one loyal man supporting him. His peasant common sense warns him not to trust his flatterers—so much so that when he wants to go to sleep he says to his faithful friend, "Watch my throne—I'm going for a pillow." Sancho believes that the only way to govern peasants wisely is by going to them and talking things over.

The new governor goes down to the market place among the people who are seething with discontent and administers justice after the fashion of King Solomon, winning the distrustful people over completely. The king who gave him the island is in the crowd disguised as a poor stranger, observes ~~Sancho~~, and approves of him. The incidental romance between the king's daughter and the handsome Gregory is consummated by the simple wisdom of the new governor who deems it better for the young lady to be at home with her husband than abroad with her lover.

Has Musses With Him.

There is an uprising of the traitors in which Sancho is temporarily put down, the king and the loyal Gregory are put in chains; but Sancho calls upon his adoring people and the plot is foiled.

Sancho gives up his position, despite the protests of the king and the people, realizing that it takes a hard, cruel man to govern—and Sancho, being a peasant himself belongs with the peasants, and not over them. "I came with empty hands, and I go away with empty hands—so you see I'm not a real governor." Nor a real cabinet member, said we, thinking of a certain Teapot.

Sancho Makes a Hit.

The line in the play that struck an answering chord in the writer occurred when some one spoke to Sancho about governing his people with laws, and he replied, "What has justice got to do with law?" Bravo, Sancho Panza.

The acting is well done—many in the audience expressed the thought that the donkey is the best actor in the cast. Otis Skinner makes a delightful Sancho Panza, and his support is good.

If you're tired, want a few good laughs, and don't want to tax your mental capacities, go to see this play.—IDA DAILES.

OUT WITH DAUGHERTY!

We Have the Tribune Thinking It Over

JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON, editor of the Chicago Tribune, says he is considering whether he will reply to the charges growing out of the recent transfer of the Tribune's school land lease to the Union Trust Company.

Margaret Haley, speaking for the Chicago school teachers, says that the smell arising from the Tribune school land lease is just as bad as the stench that comes from the dealings of Sinclair and Doheny in naval oil leases.

We had a reporter for the DAILY WORKER camping for two days on the trail of the editor of the Tribune. His secretary declared "he was one of the busiest men in town" and hard to get. Our reporter finally landed him over the telephone.

"I don't think it is necessary to reply to these charges," said Patterson, known around the Tribune Building, in Tribune Square, as "Captain." "I don't believe we will take any notice of these charges."

It was pointed out to Mr. Patterson that the DAILY WORKER would continue its fight, that it would bring the facts about the Tribune's steal into the daylight. The suave indifference of the Tribune editor began to melt. Patterson would not admit that he had read the charges in the DAILY WORKER. He said he would get a copy, however, THAT HE WOULD THINK IT OVER, but that if he had anything to say, he would not say it thru the DAILY WORKER, but thru his own paper.

Just now the Tribune is carrying on a hysterical campaign against what it calls "Pacifism." It is carrying this on under the cloak of "pay-triotism," wrapping itself in the folds of the American flag. This is a good maneuver, for the Tribune. If the Tribune can work up a "pay-triotic" hysteria, it can draw the attention of some more Dubbs away from its own crimes, and perhaps get a few more votes for one of its owners, United States Senator Medill McCormick, who is now up for re-election.

It was easy work for the Tribune to cover up its crimes before the DAILY WORKER arrived on the scene. But, as we stated yesterday, the day of Tribune indifference to public protest is over. The cheap jingoism of this kept sheet of the big interests will not be able to profit longer at the expense of Chicago's school children, without the workers of the city learning about it.

The facts are coming to light in Washington about the naval oil leases. The Tribune and U. S. Senator McCormick will be compelled to tell how much they profited by the recent transfer of the school land lease at one of the busiest corners in the city's business district, Dearborn and Madison Streets, to the Union Trust Company.

WE DO NOT BELIEVE THAT THE TRIBUNE CAN STEAL FROM THE SCHOOL CHILDREN OF CHICAGO AND GET AWAY WITH IT.

N. Y. Printers Vote to Strike

International Union on the original demands.

The first two propositions were voted down overwhelmingly and the proposition to ask strike sanction was carried by a majority of 10 to 1.

A strike vote will probably be taken Sunday. This will mean immediate stoppage, and no papers will appear Monday morning.

Under Militant Leadership.

Ever since the beginning of the negotation with the publishers it has been increasingly apparent that "Big Six" is swinging to the left under militant leadership. In dealing with the newspaper publishers the old administration of the International Typographical Union, under the leadership of the infamous "Wahneta" aggregation of reactionaries, headed by the odious James M. Lynch, labor fakir and Tammany Hall political outcast, kept the members of the union in a state of complete subjection to the whims of the publishers. The chief boast of this administration was that it was always on good terms with the publishers. This machine was shattered in the elections of 1922 when the progressive administration under the late John McParland came to power. A militant attitude was adopted toward the newspaper owners and the underpaid printers succeeded in winning raises in wages and reductions in hours in many of the principal jurisdictions of the union. But in every controversy the spokesmen of the reactionary machine are always found fighting on the side of the publishers and bewailing the good old days when the union had no dispute with them.

At a number of meetings in the early period of the controversy these advocates of peace and harmony in the industry tried to throw a scare into the members, but in December H. M. Wicks, who as a delegate representing Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 led a fight that silenced the "white hope" of the reactionaries, Jim Lynch, at the Atlantic City Convention in 1922, opened up a broadside on the apostles of submissiveness and defeated them decisively, arousing a wave of enthusiasm such as has not been witnessed since the famous forty-four hour strike in the job printing industry here. The floor leadership has definitely passed to the hands of the progressives and the officials of "Big Six" are elated at the enthusiasm displayed by the membership under the stimulus of such leadership.

Publishers Panic Stricken.

The Newspaper Publishers Association are panic stricken at the threat of a strike as they know they can never operate their plants without the assistance of the membership of "Big Six." They have frantically tried to aid and abet Jim Lynch and his treacherous crew of labor-fakirs, anti-red "Militia of Christers," etc., in their campaign to again gain control of the International Typographical Union, but the election for International officers is not until next May and should they win (which they cannot do) they could not take office and sell out the membership until next November. In the meantime the New York strike will have become a brilliant page of labor history.

Workers Daily Paper.

Realizing the importance of a workers press arrangements have been made to launch a daily labor paper that will present the strikers side of the story and also furnish important news of the day so that the public will not be deprived of newspapers all together.

Thus the New York printers will show that they can not only print papers, but edit them even better than the hirelings of capitalism that furnish the daily soporific for the readers of this city.

With this weapon of struggle and a militant and determined union leadership the titanic struggle between these colossal forces of capital and labor will culminate in a brilliant victory for the workers in the newspaper composing rooms of this city.

N. Y. FARM-LABOR DELEGATES FOR JUNE 17 MEET

Big State Convention Is Coming in May

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 25.—With ringing applause the delegates to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party convention—200 strong—endorsed the convention of workers and farmers to be held in St. Paul, June 17 and pledged themselves to obtain a large delegation from the New York movement.

Another resolution instructed the incoming executive committee to issue a call and organize a state convention to be held in May. This May convention will come at the climax of an organization campaign among the workers and farmers of New York state.

Want Unity Conference.

The American Labor Party was urged to join in a unity conference with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and all possible steps will be taken to that end.

Other resolutions endorsing the DAILY WORKER, the recognition of Soviet Russia and scoring the monumental stealing of the nation's resources exposed in the Teapot Dome scandal were passed with enthusiasm by the assembled representatives of labor unions and fraternal organizations.

Scores Yellow Disrupters.

Joseph Manley, National Secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, made a full report of the St. Paul convention recently closed at which the foundation for a mass political movement of America's producers was laid. Manley mercilessly assailed Lefkowitz and Nathan Fine, who have proved such disruptive forces in the independent political movement of New York, and who protested to St. Paul in the name of the Farmer-Labor movement. He aroused a laugh when he referred to:

"Lefkowitz, the modern Don Quixote," exclaimed Manley, "and Fine, lately of Hoxie at University of Chicago, now trying to qualify as horny handed sons of toil and heretic hunters."

O'Neil and the Reds.

As for James O'Neil, the arch foe of Farmer-Labor unity, Manley declared in making his report:

"I don't know who this person O'Neil is, I am not sure if he is a member of the Department of Justice or the socialist party. Judging by his letters of protest against the reds written to St. Paul he is qualifying for a job soon to be vacated by Burns."

More Danes Can Come.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Denmark is the only country still entitled to send 1000 emigrants to the United States before July 1. France's quota is down to 888, Norway's to 953, Esthonia's to 741, and Sweden's to 425. Russia and Armenia can send 58, Iceland 53, Jugoslavia 36, and Austria 22.

Moscow To Greenland.

LENINGRAD, March 25—Negotiations are under way between the Russian Academy of Science and the Danish scientific institutions regarding the organization of a joint scientific expedition to South Greenland.

"May First" Special To Knock Dome Off Teapot

THE "Teapot Special" edition of THE DAILY WORKER is the talk of the country. The workers everywhere are writing in telling us what they think about it. Some call it the "Oil Pot" issue but no matter how they put they all agree it was excellent.

One reader writes us as follows:

> Cincinnati, Ohio, March 20, 1924.
> Dear Comrades: I am reading the "Oil Pot" issue. It is great. I am out of a job near three months but still I send you $1.00 for fifty extra copies of the Oil Pot. That is all I can spare.—A Worker.

The enthusiasm of our readers resulted in tens of thousands of orders for the "Teapot Special". Our May Day issue will be even better. May 1st is the day of the International working class, the day on which they meet and celebrate the victories they have won and take lessons from their defeats.

In every country in the world, where a revolutionary workingclass organization exists, that day will be celebrated, in mass meetings and demonstrations.

Millions of copies of revolutionary publications will be in circulation. The best writers in the world workingclass movement wil write their best for that occasion.

The special May First issue of THE DAILY WORKER will have articles from the foremost figures in the ranks of the world revolutionary movement—from the great leaders of the Russian revolution and from those who in other countries yet under capitalist domination are leading the workers to final victory.

The time to start sending in orders for the May Day issue is right now. We expect to treble the run of the "Teapot Special". Branches, locals should get busy at once. Here is the order blank.

Here Comes 'The May Day Special'

THE DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Send me..............copies of "The May Day Special" Edition of the DAILY WORKER, to be dated Saturday, April 26, 1924, at the rate of five cents per copy; $1.75 for 50; $3.50 per 100. I want to help the workers and farmers learn the real meaning of the world struggle of Labor on its International Holiday.

COURT BACKS UP SPIES HOUNDING GIRL STUDENTS

Michigan Normal Deans Are Vicious Stools

By SHERMAN BOWMAN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

LANSING, Mich., March 25.—Within a few hours after the close of the Chicago convention of the women deans of schools, who are organizers and directors of campus espionage, the Michigan Supreme Court, in an opinion in an appealed case involving a girl college student, gave the state's ultimate legal support to the highly organized spy system at the Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti. At Ypsilanti the college registrar, C. P. Steimle, a man next in administrative authority to the president, Charles F. McKenny, goes on nocturnal spying expeditions to near-by towns, watching dance hall doors from behind trees. And the girl college student, involved in the Supreme Court opinion, was expelled from the Ypsilanti institution by reason of the lascivious curiosity of the husband of the landlady of her rooming house. When the girl was absent from the house attending classes, this husband crept into her room, found a package of cigarets in the drawer of a bureau where she kept her underwear and found two cigaret stubs by groveling at the bottom of her waste basket.

Spy System At Work.

He completed his mission by telling Bessie Leach Priddy, the dean of women at the college. No notification of the resultant dismissal of the girl was made until she had gone home at vacation time, leaving her trunks behind. Then the dean wrote her father a letter. The father drove the girl from home, forcing her to take refuge with her sister, a stenographer. She said, thru her tears, that she had used the cigarets to char the edges of posters for her walls. An inspection of her room bore this out. Her scholarship was fair; she had not failed in any courses; other charges against her concerned harmless frivolity only and would not have been brought against her had it not been for the "overt" act which gave the insatiable muck-rakers their opportunity. Her name is Alice Tanton, of Detroit. Even the dean was forced to admit she believed Miss Tanton had probably not puffed at a cigaret more than three or four times in her life.

But she was not re-instated, and the Supreme Court has upheld the college heads. Seventeen other girl students were told not to return at the end of that term and the one preceding. Some of the others were taken back, however, because their parents went to the girls' defense in the office of the president. Even they, however, will continue thru school on probation, which amounts to blacklisting. Public school superintendents at the end of the year, on going to Ypsilanti to interview prospective teachers, will be shown the probation record and will shake their heads. The school superintendents know that back home they must justify themselves before a school board composed of representatives of the moneyed interests and the Christian group which thrives on persecution.

And at the very time the sessions of the Chicago convention were being held, there was being demonstrated at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, the manner in which, in A. D. 1924, a young idealist working as an instructor, even in mathematics, may crucify himself on the cruel spikes of the iron cross of the old order.

Students Organize Protest.

When it became known on the campus that Sallade, who is about 30 years old, had been notified by the head of the department not to return next year, hundreds of students for two hours packed a mass meeting in his defense, urging his retention.

"He gives us something besides mathematics!" was the phrase delivered time after time from the rostrum by the student speakers who rose to defend him. And every time the phrase brought cheers.

It appears that what Sallade gave the students besides mathematics was a certain idealism which, without approximating Communism, implied somehow there was a vacuum inside the shell of the institution. And the thing which made the matter more than ever delicate for the Old Guard was that Sallade gave mathematics also. He would take up about half a class period with mathematics. But his students learned mathematics. As one said, "The guys'll work like hell for him."

The break between the university heads and Sallade came when the head of his department began cutting Sallade's divisions in half. And the break was inevitable because Sallade, after only two years on the campus, had begun "turning them away." Students waited in line on enrollment day to get into his courses. He was an instructor in mathematics in the engineering department.

Misinterpreted by Vacuum Minds.

One of the unfortunate parts of the affair was that the campaign to oust Sallade had something of the nature of persecution. It must have been a little insidious. Sallade is sensitive. And he has a wife and child and needed a job. The result was a breakdown for him. And before he took to his bed with a nervous collapse he entered the lecture rooms of two professors and said things in a way that his enemies, bent on destroying him, could exploit against him, maliciously. He not only called on the students in the two lecture rooms to rise and leave, thus to show their "manhood" but he challenged the two professors to go into the street and fight. Perhaps, after all, there was nothing 'so unfortunate about that particular part. Professors might as well be challenged to fight as anyone. But it was reported that Sallade's manner in both of the lecture rooms showed his nervous condition, in a somewhat pitiable light. Witnesses, however, may have been erroneously impressed.

The mass meeting and other acts of criticism against the heads of Sallade's department and against the regents resulted in a little leniency. Instead of being told not to return, Sallade was finally told simply to take a year's leave of absence. One of the swords held over the heads of instructors is that they are hired only for a year and are re-hired yearly as long as they march in step. So that it would be incorrect to say Sallade was or will be discharged.

He is still in bed, stricken with the paralysis of disillusionment. And at present he has nowhere to go.

Youth Sacrificed to Fossilized Ego.

A representative of the university faculty said at the student mass meeting, in virtually the only speech against Sallade's retention, that to retain him would break the heart of one of the grand old men of the campus and would cruelly hurt his pride in one of the few last years of his services. He referred to Sallade's superior, Alexander Zievet, who had bitterly complained that Sallade interfered with "academic routine." The youth had thus to be sacrificed to the greedy ego of a shrill old man.

Finally, showing the economic factor in these situations, the rooming houses at the Michigan State Normal College are subject to the dean's approval. A student who will not live in an approved house will not be given a diploma and therefore will not get a job as a teacher. Landladies who will not take what amount to orders from the dean cannot be on the approved list, cannot get roomers and cannot earn their living. By this plan the landladies become spies on the girls, spying and reporting their findings secretly to the dean being their most effective way of showing they are behaving in a matronly way toward their charges. Incidentally, landladies are now organized in a "matrons association" at Ypsilanti. Mrs. Priddy has genius for organization. And the "house president," elected from among their number by the girls in every rooming house, becomes, in a similar way, assistant secret agent. The house president is allowed to understand she will get a better job when she graduates if she shows the dean she is capable of assuming "responsibility." A large proportion of the stduents are from homes where money is not plentiful and every expedient is a temptation if it will reduce the hardship in the struggle for existence, which women teachers face equally with the men.

The Michigan State Normal College is the largest and oldest teachers' college in the state and one of the very few largest in the country, perhaps second only to Columbia Teachers College. Students there are thus encouraged to accept spying as a higher privilege.

Slimy Scandals Fabricated by Dean.

It was brought out, in the case of the girl whom the Supreme Court held was justly forbidden re-entry, that the dean had secretly called the girl's intimate friends to her office to frighten them or flatter them into betraying her. And the Supreme Court dealt with especial severity with this victim of the system because she took the advice of the liberal lawyer who pleaded for her in the courts and gave reporters a full account of the procedure against her. Sympathetic stories were printed daily for a week in Detroit newspapers. That fact, and the fact that the dean of women resigned at the end of the year and went, perhaps wiser, to another state, were two delevopments of value. But it was a sin even more unforgiveable than having cigaret stubs in her waste basket when the girl herself struck back and "told" a little on her own account. The crushing of this girl, the driving her out of her elected profession forever, with a certainty, a legality and a finality so terrifying to her, showed the students, just as in Sallade's case, that organization must be fought with organization.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

* * * *

The Moulding of John Brown.

AND so by his own pen, we have had illuminated for us the life of John Brown up to his twenttieth year. We see him, a big, strong boy, fond of hard work, capable in all he put his hand to, a young man bred in the hard college of life in an early pioneer settlement. He was fond of reading good books and improving his mind; he was rather shy, and yet filled with an extraordinary self-confidence, which made him a born leader, one who could show the way to men older than himself, and commana them, and himself in the straight line of duty.

The subsequent life of John Brown cannot be understood unless one knows all the environmental forces and the heredity that went to mold him. John Brown, a Puritan in the austerity of his manner of living, the narrow yet burning reality of his vision, and the hardships he later underwent, came of a family of American pioneers. To John Brown life from the outset meant incessant strife, first against unconquered nature, then in the struggle for a living, and finally in that effort to be a Samson to the pro-slavery Philistines in which his existence culminated.

At twenty John Brown married Dianthe Lusk, a plain but quiet and amiable girl, as deeply religious os her young husband, and as ready as he to assume all the serious burdens of life.

He was working in his father's tanning - establishment at this time, at Hudson, Ohio. But in May, 1825, JoJhn Brown moved his family to Richmond, near Meadville, Pensylvania, the first of his many moves for he was imbued with a deep restlessness, the hunger of the pioneer for virgin lands and new enterprises.

Here, with his characteristic energy, he cleared twenty-five acres of timber land, built a fine tannery, sunk vats, and nn a few months had leather tanning in all of them. Like his father, Owen Brown, John was of a marked ethical and social nature. He proved of great value to the new settlement at Richmond by his devotion to the cause of religion and civil order. He surveyed new roads, was instrumental in building school houses, procuring preachers, "and encouraging anything that would have a moral tendency." It became almost a proverb in Richmond, so an early neighbor records, to say of a progressive man that he was "as enterprising and honest as John Brown, and as useful to the county."

In Richmond the family dwelt for ten years. John Brown raised corn, did his tanning, brought the first blooded stock into the county, and became the first postmaster. Here, also, at Richmond, the first great grief came into John Brown's life, to school him in that stoicism that later made him the hero of a great cause. A four year old son died in 1831, and the next year his wife, Dianthe, died after having lived and worked beside him like a good, faithful woman for twelve years, giving birth to seven children in that time, five of whom grew to vigorous manhood and womanhood.

* * * *

NEARLY a year later John Brown married for a second time to Mary Anne Day, daughter of a blacksmith. She was then a large, silent girl of sixteen, who had come to John Brown's home with an older sister to care for his children after his wife's death. He quickly grew fond of the young pioneer girl; one day he gave her a letter offering marriage. She was so overcome that she dared not read it. Next morning she found courage to do so, and when she went down to the spring for water for the house, he followed her and she gave him her answer there.

Mary Brown was the best wife a John Brown could have found. She had great physical, ruggedness, and she bore for her husband thirteen children, seven of whom died in childhood, and two of whom were killed in early manhood at Harper's Ferry. She did her full share of the arduous labor of a large pioneer household, and she endured hardships like a Spartan mother. She was strong; and she had a noble and unflinching character. It was only a heroic woman such as this who could have been the wife of a hero; who could have given husband and sons cheerfully to the cause of abolition, and been so silent and brave even after their death.

John Brown worked hard; he had no vices, he was honest and painstaking, but somehow success in business always eluded him. This was another of the griefs of his life. He blamed himself for his failures, but it was really not his fault. It requires a real worship of money to make one a business success, and John Brown never took money as seriously as it demands of its lovers. After ten years in Pennsylvania, of much hard work with little results, he moved to Franklin Mills, in Ohio, where he entered the tanning business with Zenas Kent, a well-to-do business man of that town. Here he also became involved in a land development scheme that was ruined by a large corporation's maneuvers. He was so deeply involved in this and other ventures that in the bad times of 1837 he failed. In 1842 he was again compelled to go thru bankruptcy proceedings.

In after years John Brown explained these failures to the oldest son as the result of the false doctrine of doing business on credit.

"Instead of being thoroly imbued with the doctrine of pay as you go," he wrote, "I started out in life with the idea that nothing could be done without capital, and that a poor man must use his credit and borrow; and this pernicious doctrine has been the rock on which I, as well as many others, have split. The practical effect of this false doctrine has been to keep me like a toad running under a harrow most of my business life. Running into debt includes so much evil that I hope all my children will shun it as they would a pestilence."

John Brown never gave up in despair anything he had attempted; his business failures bruised him sorely, but he arose each time like a rugged wrestler and began a new endeavor. In 1839, at one of his darkest periods, he began a sheep growing and wool marketing venture in which he engaged for many years, going into partnership with Simon Perkins, a wealthy merchant of Akron, Ohio. This partnership was the longest and final one of Brown's business career.

So that is how one must think of Brown, too; not only as the consecrated, almost inhuman battler and martyr, but also as the sane, plodding, patient farmer, tanner, surveyor, real estate speculator, and practical shepherd. He was a tall, spare, silent man, terribly pious, terribly honest, a good neighbor and community leader, and the father of a large family of sons and daughters—a patriach out of the Bible, tending his flocks and gathering about him a tribe of young and stalwart sons.

He was a typical pioneer American of those rough days in the settling of the middle west. He had no time for frivolity, tho there was a grim humor in the man; he brought his children up strictly, yet was a justice that made them all love, revere and respect him until the end; and he had his share of those private sorrows that crush so many men; his first beloved wife had died, with an infant son; he had failed in business; and he had lost by death no less than nine children, three of whom perished in one month in those hard surroundings, and one of whom, a little daughter, was accidently scalded to death by an elder sister. These deaths hurt John Brown cruelly, for tho stern and stoic, he was a fiercely tender father; all his affections were fierce, tho inexpressible and deep, as a lion's.

"I seem to be struck almost dumb by the dreadful news," he wrote his family, when he heard of this accident. "One more dear little feeble child I am to meet no more till the dead, small and great, shall stand before God. I trust that none of you will feel disposed to cast an unreasonable blame on my dear Ruth on account of the dreadful trial we are called to suffer. This is a bitter cup indeed; but blessed be God; a brighter day shall dawn; and let us not sorrow as they who have no hope."

The Browns made at least ten moves in the years from 1830 to 1845, and John Brown had engaged in no less than seven different occupations. But always, under the business man and farmer, there had been the solemn philosopher brooding on God and the mystery and terror of life; and always, under the sober father and citizen ,there had been planning and brooding and suffering keenly the tender humanitarian, the Christ-like martyr, the relentless fighter who would finally pay with his life to strike a blow at slavery, "that sum of all villianies."

In this patriarchal farmer of the middle west, Freedom was forging and sharpening a terrible weapon that was some day to be turned against Tyranny. Quietly, in peaceful surroundings the work was being done; no one knew the fire in this man, least of all himself.

Harlem Organizes Branch of Women's Workingclass Council

NEW YORK, March 25.—A Harlem Council of the United Council of Workingclass Women has been organized. The women of this new Council are best characterized as young live wires. A secretary and organizer were selected and work undertaken with enthusiastic unanimity to visit the women in the neighborhood, distribute the recent leaflet issued by the central body and draw as many new members to the organization as this live body of women can reach thru personal contact. Two delegates were elected to the United Council.

Within the next two weeks the following sections will have each a local council: Harlem, Upper Bronx, Lower Bronx, Coney Island, Brownsville, and Down Town. Early in April a drive is planned for the American workingclass women of the West Side. A committee to do this work has already been appointed.

Spaniard's Labor Cartoons Bring Death Sentence

(By The Federated Press)

BARCELONA, Spain., March 25.—Juan B. Archer, known as Shum, has been condemned to death because of pro-labor cartoons. Shum's talent is like that of Art Young or Robert Minor or Fred Ellis of America. When the army generals seized power in Spain, they arrested Shum, who is 21. He was then a sick man, having been wounded in an explosion. But the authorities nursed him back to health to submit him a third degree which was so revolting that Shum's resistance was broken and he confessed everything they asked him without knowing what he was saying. As a result the death sentence was imposed. The Spanish workers are making an international appeal to save his life.

New York Workers Want Volunteers For Big Bazaar

NEW YORK, March 25.—Everyone can take part in the Pageant which will be given as part of the program of the Third Annual International Bazaar, April 10 to 13 at the Central Opera House.

To show the struggle of the workers in France, Russia and to show that this struggle is common to all workers of the world—is the theme of our Pageant. The struggle leading to victory will be portrayed in pantomime, dance and song. We have selections of the most beautiful revolutionary songs of France and Russia. This can be worked out as a wonderful spectacle, if enough spirited comrades will take part.

No matter what language you speak you will be able to participate as the pageant is mainly pantomime and you can sing the songs in your own language. We need fifty more men and women. You need not be an actor, singer or dancer to join the pageant, but if you are one, so much the better. We have already secured those who can dance and sing all what we need most is the crowd to show mass action.

Workers Starve in W. Virginia; Relief Needed Immediately

The DAILY WORKER has received a harrowing report of the misery in the mine fields near Ohley, W. Va., from the miners' relief committee of Local Union No. 1425, U. M. W. of A.

The workers there have been on strike for practically two years against an attempt of their employers to depress their wages still further. Some of the miners have been out of work for a year and a half. The company is fighting to restore the open shop system.

An injunction has been obtained against the miners and this injunction is backed up by police and constabulary. Miners have been put out of their company owned homes and are living in tents.

Suffering of the workers is extreme. Help is needed immediately. Children are underfed and their growth is affected.,

All persons who can aid these workers are urged to send in their contributions to J. C. Bell, chairman of the miners' relief committee, Local Union No. 1425, Ohley, W. Va.

New Russian Film Will Be Shown In New York City

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Moscow Art Theatre famous film which had a sensational run in Europe entitled "Polikushka," after the story of serfdom by Leo Tolstoi, will be shown Friday evening at 7:30, March 28, at the Labor Temple, Second Ave. and 14th St. The film was made in Russia during the first year of the famine, and the artists had to endure such hardships that they not only played the part, but lived it as well.

Ivan Moskvin, the charter member of the Moscow Art Theatre, plays the part of the serf, Polikushka. His artistry is unsurpassed, and creates a new standard for acting on the silver screen.

A new film called "Russia-Germany," showing political scenes in Germany as well as the conditions of the German workers and in contrast, the conditions of the Russian workers, will be given at this performance.

The combination of films, both educational and artistic, will make a very entertaining performance.

Russian Unions Get Wage Raise Just by Asking

(By The Federated Press)

MOSCOW, March 25.—When the All-Russian Congress of Trade Unions decided that because of the rise in the cost of living, wages of workers had to be increased, no strike was necessary to put this resolution into effect. The Russian government listens as closely to the instructions of organized labor as the American government does to Wall Street.

In many of the institutions the wage increase was calculated in time for February payments, and was retroactive to Jan. 1. With Russia's stable currency, issued now in 1, 3 and 5-ruble banknotes, and with its silver kopeks, a rise in wages cannot be offset by a rapidly failing currency.

"Anarchy," Shouts Business Man at Thot of 6-Hour Day

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—A recent questionnaire by a reporter on the six-hour working day brought some musty ideas out for an airing. "It would leave too much time for idle hands," says one man. "The workers are contented and satisfied under the present arrangement." A business man exploded: "The six-hour day is a madman's dream and should not be considered by anyone possessing the slightest degree of intelligence. Business would be crippled, industry paralyzed, and all economic institutions so destroyed that the country would be plunged into anarchy and revolution."

Right Wing German Socialists Alarmed At Left Tendency

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press

BERLIN, March 25.—That fat's in the fire in the Socialist party of Germany. There is open threat of a split. In three recent elections, Thuringia, Mecklenburg and Hamburg, the Socialists lost heavily, likewise in the muncipal elections in a number of cities of Saxony.

The old guard, represented by men like Fritz Ebert, Gustav Noske, Phillip Scheidemann and Otto Wels, insist that the party was wrong in yielding to the radicals. They especially condemn the policy of trying to establish a working alliance with the Communists.

The left wing points out that the old guard in the reichstag lost the confidence of the workers when it entered the great coalition with the Peoples party, of which Hugo Stinnes is a member; and when it gave its sanction to the emergency legislation under which the military dictatorship was established.

The national party convention meets in April.

URGE WORKERS ARM AND SEIZE POWER IN MEXICO

Communists' Manifesto Demands Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, March 24.—The Communist Party of Mexico tells the workers and peasants of that country in a manifesto that counter-revolutionary movements such as those of de la Huerta are a continual danger until the workers and peasants themselves are organized into an army and a workers and peasants' government is instituted.

The present government is afraid of the workers and trusts rather to reactionaries who betray it, as was shown in the de la Herta fascisti movement. The manifesto follows:

Manifesto of the Communist Party of Mexico to the Workers and Peasants:

THE reactionary rebellion of Sanchez, Estrada, and De la Huerta is near to its end. The government, aided by the peasants, the workers, and the major part of the army, has won. During the danger, the Communist Party aided the government with all its forces. We did this not because we considered the government perfect but because we understood that the reaction was infinitely worse. Now that the imminent danger of the reaction has disappeared, we wish to call the attention of the peasants and workers to the serious errors made by the Government, which made possible the rebellion.

There is only one way to prevent a counter-revolution. This one way is the formation of a peasants and workers government. Peasant and worker not only in the legislatures but also in the tribunals; not only in its tribunals but also in its national Executive and in the Executives of all the states; not only in its executives but also and above all, in the real force of the government: THE ARMY.

Follow Russian Example.

When the workers and peasants of Russia conquered in their revolution against the Bourgeoisie in 1917, they created tribunals not of lawyers and advocates, but of workers and peasants. The law of the new tribunals said: "Any man that works can serve as judge, except advocates, lawyers, former judges and students of law." And the tribunals of Workers' and Peasants' Russia have never blocked the agrarian demands of the peasants. Today not one land-owner is left in Russia. That is what you call an agrarian revolution!

When the workers of Russia—our sister country—took power, they disarmed all troops in sympathy with the bourgeoisie or the landed interests; they dismissed all reactionary generals; they armed all the revolutionary peasants and workers; put a Communist Trotzky at the head of the army; they made generals of the workers themselves and formed the famous Red Guard. This Red Guard has been able, during six years, not only to prevent any counter-revolution, but also to defeat the intervention of France, England, Poland, Japan, the United States and twelve other countries, defending itself against the whole united Capitalist World.

Reactionary Generals.

Our Government has left an entire division in the command of Guadalupe Sanchez, and what is worse, knowing all the time the reactionary sympathies of Sanchez, commended to him the criminal task of disarming the most revolutionary peasants of Vera Cruz. This is a fact known by every one, to which may be added the tragic death of Felipe Carrillo in Yucatan, whose traitorous military elements would have been reduced to impotence, by the workers of the Peninsula if they had been permitted to bear arms.

Our Government has left an entire division in the hands of Enrique Estrada. President Obregon knew that Estrada was a reactionary in things agrarian, because the president himself says: "I offered Estrada the post of Minister of Agriculture, but the declarations he made were so reactionary and so opposed to the agrarian aims of the Revolution that I had to withdraw the offer." Nevertheless he left Estrada in command of an entire division, as if the army did not mean anything to a revolutionary government.

Must Have Workers Army.

The Russian Revolution armed its workers and peasants. Our revolution was unable to furnish the workers and peasants with arms when they asked for them. The Government has not known how, or has been unable to destroy the professional army and to create a proletarian army.

And why so many errors in matters so simple? Because of bad faith? We do not believe it. Only the Mexican Government is not yet a government of workers and peasants. In general it is a government, benevolent towards the workers and peasants, but a government of workers and peasants—that not yet. And that is the next task of the Revolution. That is the program of the Communist Party. A WORKERS AND PEASANTS GOVERNMENT: that should be the slogan of the revolutionary proletariat.

Only a government without a single reactionary judge can put an end to legal chicanery, which blocks the distribution of land to those who work the land. Only a government without a single reactionary governor, without a single reactionary municipal president, without a single reactionary chief of police, can put an end to the intervention of the authorities against the workers and peasants. ONLY AN ARMY WITHOUT A SINGLE ELEMENT WHICH IS NOT PEASANT OR WORKER, CAN PREVENT ANOTHER REBELLION AND ASSURE THE PAST AND FUTURE CONQUESTS OF THE REVOLUTION.

For Workers and Peasants.

The Communist Party invites the peasants and workers who wish to make of Mexico a government exclusively worker and peasant, to enter its ranks. The Communist Party invites the Agrarian and the Labor Parties to form a united front to establish a peasants and workers government.

WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF THE WORLD, UNITE! FORWARD TO THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO! FORWARD TO THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS GOVERNMENT OF THE ENTIRE WORLD!

The Communist Party of Mexico.

Lock Out Poultry Dressers.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—Union poultry dressers, 150 in number, employed in wholesale establishments here and in Oakland and Petaluma, are locked out by their employers. The lockout took place when the men asked for 5 cents instead of 4½ cents apiece and for an eight-hour day instead of the present nine and one-half. The firms immediately on receiving the demands killed all stock on hand, cleaned up and discharged the dressers outright. The union has called on poultry dressers in retail establishments to strike in sympathy.

Miners Local Gives Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund a Big Boost

The response to the call of the Workers Party for a campaign fund to be used in the fight for organization of a mass Farmer-Labor Party thru the June 17th Convention at St. Paul is increasing in volume—from day to day.

The biggest boost given the fund comes from Local Union No. 5302 of the United Mine Workers of America in a remittance of $44.85 collected among the members of that organization.

This amount was collected by G. M. Shulth and John Telawske by circulating the subscription list among the members of the organization mentioned. Dollars, half dollars and quarters subscribed by these miners, who realize the importance of the struggle for a mass political party which will fight the battles of industrial workers and farmers, brought up the total to close to $50.00. Circulate Subscription Lists.

There are tens of thousands of workers who will welcome the opportunity to make a contribution to the campaign fund for a mass Farmer-Labor Party. The money which is given to this fund means aid in making the campaign to awaken the masses of workers and farmers reach tens of thousands who are not yet supporters of the farmer-labor party movement and the organization of new groups in support of the movement.

The work done by Comrades Shulth and John Telawske should serve as an example for every worker or farmer who has received a subscription list. Talk to your shopmates, neighbor and brother trade unionists about the June 17th Convention and the need of a party to fight the battles of workers and farmers in the coming campaign. Secure their contributions to the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund of the Workers Party.

Help us build a mighty movement of workers and farmers to challenge the continued rule of the capitalists.

Fate of 11 Girls Is Subject of Probe By Woman Doctor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 25.—The fate of eleven girls, missing within the past two years from the Letchwork Village Home, may be entrusted for investigation to a special prosecutor, if Governor Smith grants a request of Dr. Anna W. Hochfelder, who has evolved a startling murder theory.

Dr. Hochfelder, assistant corporation counsel, insists that the bones of a skeleton found in a cave on Cheesecock Mountain are those of Lillian White, former inmate of the institution.

No Scuttling of Oil Probe!

The Struggle for the Party

Report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organisation.

• • • •

I. Our Discussion and Its History.

AT THE plenary session of the Central Committee of our Party, held in October of this year after the return of a large number of comrades after leave of absence, one of the questions raised was that of the workers' democracy, and the Political Bureau was commissioned to take a number of measures towards infusing fresh life into the inner life of the Party, etc.

At this plenary session I had to make a speech in which I stated all the views contained in my article of November 7, which gave the external impetus to this storm in a teacup. It need scarcely be said that it was quite accidentally that this article came to be the central point of the contest. If the article had never been written, we should none the less have had our present debates, for the questions raised in the article were taken from life, and it was not possible to escape them.

The plenary session of the Central Committee passed a resolution approving the initiative taken by the Political Bureau and the Central Committee, and the commissioning it to realize this initiative for the extension of the workers' democracy. A resolution was then passed, the result of continuous preparatory work, and published on December 7, about a month after the publication of my article, and was unanimously acepted by the Political Bureau of the Party, and by the presidium of the Central Control Commission.

II. Why Raise Question Again?

At the present time the main question being raised by the opposition is: Why has the question of the workers' democracy been brought up precisely now, in December? And search is made for the possible causes which may have induced the Central Committee of the Party to bring up this question. There are quite a number of stories in circulation among the members of the opposition. I was told, for instance, that Comrade Nevsky, one of our old workers but one who has long since lost his sense of direction and commited one mistake after another, now joining the workers' opposition, now other anti-Party groups, has arrived in Leningrad. With reference to his arrival a report was spread abroad that the decision of the Central Committee—a "manifesto of December 7"—had been come to under some pressure or other, that the Central Committee had done this in order to soft-soap the Party, etc. And this is by no means the worst anecdote. There are people in the Party who crack even more despicable jokes at the expense of their Party.

This the main question is: Why has this question been brought up just now? These same questions were discussed at the Tenth Party Congress, and that was only in 1921. Why do we renew the same discussion in the year 1923? Comrades, when replying to this question at one of the municipal meetings at Moscow, I stated that Comrade Lenin himself had already given the best answer to the question.

Answered by Tenth Congress.

At the Tenth Congress of our Party, he replied to this question, so to speak in advance. The Tenth Party Congress was occupied with the settlement of three great questions: First, the question of the new economic policy; secondly, with the question of the workers' democracy, and thirdly, with the formation of fractional groups.

The question of the new economic policy I set entirely aside, for it belongs to an entirely different category: it is a great question, one upon which we shall probably debate again, but is not at the moment on the agenda.

But the questions of the workers' democracy and of the formation of groups within the Party are closely interwoven with one another. At the Tenth Party Congress, Comrade Eucharin was our general speaker on the subject of the workers' democracy, whilst the speaker on the subject of Party fractions was Comrade Lenin. These two addresses were closely connected with one another.

Both speakers spoke on behalf of the Central Committee of the Party, and represented its views. Thus, after the resolution on the workers' democracy had been passed, Comrade Lenin spoke as follows in his last speech against the formation of groups within the Party (I quote from protocols of the Tenth Congress, and recommend all comrades having an interest in these discussions to accord careful study to the more important speeches held at the Tenth Congress): "We require one or two years for recuperation, certainly no fewer. Viewed from the standpoint of history, this is an insignificant term, but for our present conditions it is a considerable period."

Lenin's Answer.

And then further, with italics accentuating the words upon which Comrade Lenin desired to lay special emphasis: "One of two years in which we can recover from the famine, one or two years of regular supplies of fuel, so that the factories can work, and we shall receive a hundred times more support from the working class, and much more talent will arise from our midst. Nobody doubts this, and nobody can doubt it.

"At the present time we are not receiving such assistance, and this is not our fault. We are doing everything which can be done for this purpose. No one can maintain that the government, the trade unions, the Central Committee of the Party, have let the slightest opportunity slip by unutilized in this respect; but we know that desperate distress prevails and that hunger and misery reign, and we know that indifference arises everywhere out of this.

"We shall not shrink from calling the evil by its right name. It is this which is hindering the uplift of the activity of the masses."

(To Be Continued Thursday.)

They Demand "Free" Georgia, But Not India or Ireland

At the moment that all the capitalist powers and even Fascist Italy are recognizing Soviet Russia de jure, the Executive of the Second International in Luxemburg passed a few decisions which openly display the ambition to be even more anti-Bolshevist than Mussolini. At the moment when the international capitalist class is attempting to utilize the recognition of Soviet Russia for all sorts of demands upon the workers and peasants the Second International deems it its duty to begin "energetic action" in favor of the enemies of the Soviet government, in favor of the Mensheviki and Social Revolutionaries.

The Second International demands an amnesty for the political prisoners in Russia. It demands that the Russian workers, while facing their worst opponents, shall give up their arms, precisely at the moment when Soviet Russia needs the support of all the workers of the world so as to set at naught the extortive demands of the capitalist class. The Second International demands that the governments which recognize Soviet Russia shall likewise see to it that "this act shall not hinder the continuation of negotiations, for the withdrawal of the military occupation of Georgia."

This means that while the capitalist classes of all countries have got to the point where they are recognizing the Soviet Russia the Second International would like to arrange a little intervention against Soviet Russia. The question arises whether the government of MacDonald which had pledged itself before the English working class to unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia will fall in with these shameful campaigns of the allies of MacDonald and his government.

Chicago Labor Leaders and Injunctions

The strike of the Ladies' Garment Workers continues with police and employers' thugs arresting and beating up the strikers—both male and female. The injunction is enforced and the bosses are jubilant.

The "Committee of 15," appointed by the Chicago Federation of Labor, has done nothing up to date except to emphasize to the strikers the difficulty of combatting injunction processes. John Fitzpatrick, at a recent meeting of the committee, displayed none of the fighting spirit he has commonly been supposed to possess, but merely dilated on the possibilities of the militia being brought in if the fight against the injunction developed real militancy.

Such may be the tactics of resolute leadership, but in our opinion they represent a spirit of defeatism wholly out of keeping with the necessities of the situation. There is a way to defeat the injunction issued against the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and it consists of massing the entire available force of the Chicago labor movement behind the strike, mass picketing participated in by officials of unions as well as the rank and file, compelling the boss-controlled judges and police to jail, not only unknown strikers, but well-known and influential members of the Chicago labor movement. In this way the strike injunction could and would be made an issue in every local union, and the injunction itself shown as a menace to all Chicago labor and not merely to the Garment Workers.

The "Committee of 15" has made no showing at all. It is significant in this connection that the official organ of the Chicago Federation of Labor, in its last issue, devotes a lot of space to the activities of the Church Federation "Committee of 50," but has nothing to report for the official committee of organized labor.

The American Federation of Labor and the units that compose it have always loudly proclaimed their uncompromising enmity towards injunction processes and when an officialdom like that of the Chicago Federation of Labor which has acquired a reputation for militancy in excess of that possessed by the parent body, lies down in the struggle against one of the most vicious injunctions ever issued here, it is apparent that the local labor movement, having made a considerable step to the right in its fight against the Communists, is prepared to surrender all its class character and become just another Gompers' legislative body with no heart and but little guts.

If labor leaders, so-called, will not fight injunctions, or even go to unusual lengths to rally the membership for a fight against injunctions, there is nothing for which they will fight—except their meal tickets.

A Day of Preparedness

This year, May Day takes on special significance for the working masses of our country. The celebration of this holiday of the international workingclass should reflect this added import.

May Day, this year, should be a signal for nation-wide preparedness by the city workers and exploited farmers to assume full political power, complete governmental control. The workers can well afford to take a leaf out of the book of their employers. Our bosses, seldom, if ever, get into a fight without adequate preparation. Experience has taught them that preparedness for wars, strikes, and other tests of class strength is the best guarantee for success in the struggle. The same holds true for the oppressed masses occupying the opposite line of trenches in the class war.

No one can seriously argue that now is not the time to prepare for a finish fight with the employing class. As a matter of fact the political and economic situations have taken such turns that the city and rural masses cannot avoid a fight without being doomed to abject slave conditions. The farmers are stripped to their bones. Their conditions are going from bad to worse, and from worse to worst. The workers are confronted with renewed schemes for "economic readjustment" which, in the language of the pay envelope, means slashed wages. Politically, the capitalists have dropped all their sham pretenses. The bosses are now openly employing the governmental machinery to crush the working masses fighting for the most elementary civil rights and the barest economic needs. The exploiters are now running wild in their plunder of the natural resources of the country thru their iron control of the government apparatus.

Under these conditions it is next to impossible for the working masses to avoid a fight to the finish. Preparedness must be the cry of the workers and farmers today. The first step in preparing the workingclass for this decisive conflict is the building up of a powerful Communist Party that will lead the workers and poor farmers into battle and will wage the struggle of the oppressed without hesitancy and with courage. May Day should therefore be a signal for a huge drive to join and build a mighty Communist Workers Party in America.

Disturbed Washington

Reports from Washington are to the effect that President Coolidge is "greatly disturbed by the testimony of the past week" relative to the corruption revealed in the attorney general's office and other official places.

We are intrigued by the phrase "greatly disturbed." It would be just about as correct to say that a householder was "greatly disturbed" by the impact of a burglar's blackjack and the analogy is not so far-fetched as might appear on the surface. The only difference is that President Coolidge was and is one of the burglarious crew who, since falling out among themselves, have been cracking each other's craniums to the amusement of the onlookers.

Attorney General Daugherty has dared the president to fire him and he has not been fired despite the accumulating proof that he has been levying tribute on every form of vice from bootlegging to white slavery in the interim between periods when he has been securing injunctions against unions.

It is not the attorney general or the president as individuals in which this paper is interested, however. What concerns us and every member of the workingclass in the United States is the obvious fact that discredited and disgraced, proved to have violated a thousand tenets of bourgeois morality, the Coolidges and Daughertys continue still to represent the government of this country and the edicts of the class they represent are still enforced by their agents.

Today they are hated even by the deluded millions who voted for the Harding-Coolidge slate; the issues on which they contested the election are as dead as the head of the ticket and yet we are told constantly that the American form of government is a representative one.

Just as a warning to those workers who may have been led to overestimate the sincerity of the democratic opponents of the Coolidge regime by reason of the phillippics delivered daily in the senate let us say that should the workers and farmers, tomorrow, act for a fundamental change in industry and government, both prosecutors and defendants would leap to the defense of American capitalism; petty thieveries and moral turpitude of the present incumbents would be forgotten in the holy war against a revolting workingclass.

Tariff and Wheat

The high tariff is one of the panaceas frequently offered the poor farmers to save them from bankruptcy and stave off their complete financial ruin.

Recently President Coolidge used the power which the last Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act gave him to regulate tariff schedules. The Chief Executive raised the tariff on wheat. This was an out and out attempt to stem the tides of protest that are sweeping the wheat belt against the do-nothing policy of the government in the present agricultural crisis.

Of course, the poor farming masses cannot be misled by such maneuvers. In South Dakota, Governor McMaster, who is playing to win the republican nomination for the senatorship against the present incumbent, the reactionary Sterling, knows this very well. McMaster is running on a program definitely committed to repealing the capitalist tariff act, the Fordney-McCumber Law.

But it was left to the market conditions to knock the very bottom out of this Coolidge farm-relief fake. No sooner had the raise on the tariff rates of wheat been announced, than the market began to react unfavorably. The break on wheat was so sharp, that a new low on the crop for May was reached. The price on wheat at the Chicago Board of Trade, the center of the grain gamblers' activities, is now within one quarter of one cent of the lowest figures of the season.

This is the sort of help that the bankrupt farmers can expect from the government controlled by the big employers of labor. The tariff is simply another method employed by the government to help the big grain distributors and manufacturers. It levies a tax on the farmers and workers in a most burdensome and subtle form. Herein lies its danger. The present tariff law, written by the agents of Wall Street and put into effect by their ruling clique in Washington, must be wiped off the statute books at all costs. Coolidge must be deprived of his autocratic power to raise tariff rates under the guise of helping the workers and farmers whom he is hurting.

Roxie Stinson will not be the one to say there is nothing in a name after her experience with the gentleman who engaged a reservation for her in a Cleveland hotel, under an assumed name, and then attempted to compromise her, in order to choke off her coming expose of Daugherty. His name was Fink.

J. P. Morgan bought up France for $100,000,000 by biding his time. Now, the United States government that threw four billion dollars into the French maw is doing a little worrying. Morgan says it's all right. The money will stay in the family.

The Pacifist as Imperialist

Editor's Note.—Here is another article on the big developments in Great Britain. It is by J. T. Murphy, prominent Communist and trade unionist, whose enlightening writings are already familiar to a large number of our readers. There will be other articles in the near future on other phases of the developing struggle in Great Britain.

• • • •

By J. T. MURPHY.

THE whole labor movement of Britain was shocked on Friday morning, Feb. 22, 1924, when it read of the labor government's action with regard to cruiser building. Even the dock strike and the rent restriction bill were overshadowed by the amazing scenes of Thursday night. The pacifist premier had become the champion of the conservative party's program of cruiser building. The first big storm within the ranks of the parliamentary labor party since taking office broke even into the debates in the House of Commons. Without discussing the matter with the labor members or even the new liason committee between the labor party and the government, the latter declared to the house their preparedness to proceed with the building of five new cruisers immediately the tenders had been given and the House had voted on the matter.

Cabinet Divided.

When this was announced even the cabinet was divided and the government benches were sounding varying notes in the debate. W. H. Hudson, the under secretary of the chancellor of the exchequer, was prepared to second a motion against the government moved by Pringle of the liberal party. The ranks of the labor party itself were in turmoil. "What did this means? What the devil was MacDonald thinking about? We have preached disarmament for years and we have fought for our own distinctive policy for the treatment of unemployment. The government has thrown down the very foundations of our international policy and it has stamped upon our unemployment program. It will pay a heavy price for this surrender to the admiralty." Such were the outbursts of the labor men.

The Times was more jubilant concerning the decision. It said, "It goes far enough to establish that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and his colleagues know how to appreciate the indispensable necessity of maintaining our first line of defense at an efficient standard. They have shown a real largeness of view in rising above deep rooted prejudices of many of their adherents about "unproductive expenditure" upon armaments, and a degree of moral courage, not common in any party, in acting upon their knowledge of what the interest of the state demand against the known wishes of a large section of their supporters."

The voting was also interesting. The motion against the government revealed a swing of the pendulum. Instead of a labor government by kind permission of the liberal party it was now a labor government by gracious permission of the Tory party. The motion was defeated by 372 votes to 73. Only one of the later was a labor vote, the rest were liberals. Two labor men, Maxton and Nichols, refused to vote. Altho Hudson had spoken against the government he voted with it after MacDonald had had conversation with him. Hudson served two years or more in jail as a conscientious objector but now MacDonald explained that he was not increasing armaments but only proposing replacements so he succumbed and voted with the government.

"Wishbone" Policy.

It was interesting indeed to see how MacDonald squared his circle. He first made his point against Pringle, the mover of the motion against the government and said "that not a keel would be laid without the consent of the House. Replacements were not increases of armaments. It was the duty of the Government to replace wastage and no foreign government could complain about that. Besides when the government came into office it found itself face to face with the fact that on March 22, 2,250 men would have to be discharged from the dock yards if no further construction was put in hand. Could we harden our hearts against building those ships and allow those men with their wives and families dependent on them to be turned into the streets?"

A conservative government wanted replacements because of the development in other countries. A Labor Government wants replacements to ease the unemployment situation. The net result appears to be the same whatever the argument used. The cruisers will be built. And replacements are always improvements and that means the effective armament value is increased. But of course we must not forget Mr. MacDonald says that all changes must be by common consent and whilst we can moralize about the wickedness of it all we must carry on in the good old way. So the pacifist does the same as the imperialist. Mr. MacDonald does as Mr. Baldwin. One sings bass, the other tenor, but they are both in the same chorus, developing the imperial forces.

Mr. Hudson put the question "Has the honorable member taken into account that when these cruisers are laid down, if they are, it will lead to the laying down of further cruisers in foreign countries, leading to a possible catastrophe which will create bigger unemployment than ever?"

Replacements The Wail.

Mr. Ammon replied on behalf of the admiralty that "these are replacements."

So the existing fleets and armaments we can take it are not a standing menace.

The whole business is one big bluff on the part of MacDonald and his colleagues and the rank and file of the Labor Party know it. MacDonald proposes to investigate the whole question of armaments and immediately he does so he will find abundant evidence to justify a continuation of the policy already indicated in his concession to the demands of the Admiralty. He will tell us that the British navy is being rapidly outdistanced by other powers exactly as his Air department has justified its building program by a comparison with the French air equipment; and exactly as the Conservative government did before him. He will tell us that naval construction in this country came practically to a standstill after the armistice; that since then Berlin has only completed such ships of the war program as were too far completed to be scrapped; that the only new vessels laid down since November, 1918 are two battleships, one cruiser-mine layer and one submarine. While dating from the end of the war the United States has built two battleships, 10 light cruisers, 73 destroyers, 27 submarines and two aircraft carriers; Japan within the same period has built or ordered for the Japanese navy 20 light cruisers, 70 destroyers and at least 50 submarines and two aircraft carriers; and France since the war has laid down or voted 9 light cruisers, 57 destroyers and 51 submarines. The Liberal press already provides this argument.

Policy of Yellow and White.

The sum and substance of the situation is, that MacDonald carries his pacifism in the same pocket as Lloyd George carried his, and uses pacifist and socialist phrases in exactly the same manner, for exactly the same ends, for nationalism and imperialism. He conceded to the pressure of the Admiralty when he appointed the old conservative Lord Chelmsford to the Admiralty, he submits to the Admiralty and its navalism when its programs are put up, and hides his concessions under the cover of alleviating unemployment and the unpreparedness of other countries to come to an agreement on disarmament. All of which of course is good liberalism, but poor pacifism, much less good working class policy. Having said A in the alphabet of imperialism he is having to say B and C very quickly.

The rank and file of the Labor Party are perceiving this and it was only strict loyalty to the party discipline that got the major portion of the votes on Thursday night. They can see that so far as the workers are concerned the same officer class is in control, the same class is in power, they are doing what even the Tories want them to do, and they are wondering where they are getting to.

It is too early to see how the storm in the Party is going to develop, there is so much that is instinctive class revolt without political clarity amongst the "left" forces that there will probably be a series of crises before a new leadership is definitely established. Wheatley was certainly the man who could have led them, but his membership of the cabinet rules him out for the present. Now there is established a Party leadership in the House as distinct from the government. On this committee are Smillies, Lansbury, Wallhead, all of whom are certainly anti-militarist and repeatedly thrown into class war situations but are so influenced by the personality of MacDonald and the idea of Party unity that they cannot be relied upon in a critical situation to throw MacDonald overboard. Maxton and Johnson are not big enough to take the lead whilst Neil MacLean has so compromised himself with MacDonald on the question of his non appearance in the cabinet that he cannot do anything. Wheatley is gaining ground considerably against MacDonald. On every question where the Labor Government is compromisng itself MacDonald is held to blame. On practically every question where there is anything being gained in the way of concessions Wheatley is getting considerable of the credit. That is the most that can be said concerning the leading personalities in the parliamentary situation at the moment.

Workers Criticism Growing.

Outside the parliament amongst the workers, the voice of criticism of the Labor Government is gathering in strength every day. The tendency at first manifest even in the Communist Party to wait and see and deal gently with the innovation is rapidly vanishing. The publication of the manifesto of the Communist International on Communist policy towards the Labor Government has come as a healthy tonic to the revolutionary movement thruout the country. Its publication this week coincides with the press announcement that naval ratings be used as blacklegs in the dockers' strike, of the Labor Party storm on cruiser building, and the wrangling tactics of the new ministry of labor. This week has not been a healthy week for the Labor Government so far as the working class is concerned, but it has certainly been a great week for driving home the revolutionary message amongst the workers.

AMONG THE MAGAZINES

THE IRISH PEOPLE.

The March issue of The Irish People has not a green cover in honor of the patron saint of the Irish bourgeois nationalists. Neither is it black. It is red. So much for the cover.

Looking on the inside the first thing to strike your eye is the Papal Bull granted by Pope Adrian IV to King Henry II "his dearest brother in Christ," giving that worthy power to conquer Ireland in the name of the Lord, the spoils to be divided between the Pope and the King. The Lord got nothing for the use of his name but whatever glory there was in it.

The situation in Ireland is covered by the editor in snappy editorial paragraphs. There are excellent articles by Michael T. Berry, Donough O'Dwyer, Daniel Horsely, J. P. McCarthy and Thomas Horgan. The magazine is attractive typographically; is well edited and the material is interesting and educational. Our Irish comrades are to be congratulated on keeping the Irish People afloat it being the only Communist publication now in existence making a special appeal to Irish workers. Its circulation is increasing rapidly in Ireland, since the Workers Republic, the Communist paper, suspended publication.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John Quinn, head of the American Legion, have joined in an attack on immigrant workmen, claiming that the influx of foreign workers would sully the pure waters of Americanism and make of this republic a replica of the corrupt nations of Europe. "There are none so blind as those that will not see." We doubt if Mr. Gompers is prevented from seeing the waters of his so-called Whitechapel London Americanism getting polluted by the crude scandals of Teapot Dome, the Veteran's Bureau, Bureau of Internal Revenue, The Department of Justice, the Prohibition Enforcement Department of the Treasury and the general corruption that prevails in Washington at this moment, admitted by even such an imperialist paper as the Chicago Tribune as being without equal in the annals of American history. Gompers sees this poisoning taking place but being one of the corrupters he is in no hurry to draw attention to it.

It is not surprising that Gompers should form a united front with the head of the American Legion against the foreign workers. Both are leading flunkeys of the capitalist class. The foreign workers have had plenty of evidence to prove to them that the countries they left behind were owned by their rulers and that they had but to do or die. And they find exactly the same conditions existing in this so-called land of the free. The American worker is being educated, in spite of Gompers, the American Legion, the Ku Klux Klan and other agencies of that kind. The Teapot Dome scandal is opening their eyes. Gompers and Quinn are silent about the Teapot Dome. Sinclair and Doheny, notorious strike breakers, can rob, bribe, perjure and even kill without arousing the wrath of the Americanized, London Jew, Gompers, but let a radical be arrested by criminal attorney general Daugherty and the notorious labor faker will be immediately before the public with a statement calculated to assist the labor hating Daugherty in securing a conviction. He has taken no such attitude in the Teapot Dome scandal. The reason is that he is a kept labor leader.

The Citizen, a so-called organ of organized labor in Los Angeles, Calif., greets the arrest of several members of the Trade Union Educational League in that city as another expose of the Communist activity in the unions. The sheet calls for a thoro housecleaning in the unions, that is getting rid of the radicals. The arrests were made by police and stool pigeons from detective agencies. But the labor fakers are not concerned about who arrests the Communists. They are always glad when it happens. Most of the so-called "organs of organized labor" are the private property of a few grafting labor skates who hold up business men for advertising and in return act the role of finks against those members of the unions who favor progressive policies.

Another black Marcus Garvey in the person of Rev. Paul Russel, D.D. has burst into the limelight and before his flame flickers out we venture to predict that he will attract considerable attention. He organized a colored Ku Klux Klan, called the Knights of the Loyal Legion of Lincoln and this organization held its first open ceremony in Youngstown, Ohio. A gigantic "L" was burned instead of the fiery cross used by their white brothers. The Reverend Russel declared that he did not believe in social equality, denounced the Catholic church and said that "the negro will develop by co-operating with his white Protestant brothers." The Rev. Russel declares himself supreme ruler and founder of the black Kluxers.

A sixteen-foot snake now the property of the New York zoo is a sociable fellow. He takes milk baths, rides in motors, sleeps in a regular bed and does other things that hundreds of workers in the slums of New York city would like to be in a position to do.

Charles Evans Hughes is not saying very much these days about Soviet plots against the security of American institutions. Perhaps he is too busy covering his tracks, fearing one of the many investigating administration crimes might get the goods on him. While he was denouncing the Soviet government for alleged interference with the affairs of the United States government, an American warship entered the harbor of Kaluczimo, Kamchatka without the permission of Soviet authorities. That was in September, 1923. Again in January 15 of this year an American destroyer entered the port of Batum, Black Sea, without any permit.

• • •

M. Litvinoff, acting people's commissar of foreign affairs, addressed a note to Secretary of State Hughes protesting against such violation of the regulations for the entering of warships into foreign ports and expressing the hope that the government of the United States which is preaching the necessity for the general observance of international law should itself set such a poor example.

BRITISH COAL MINERS TO STRIKE

MINE STRIKE LOOMING BIG IN BRITAIN

Another Gaint Struggle Is Facing MacDonald's Rule

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 26.—Following announcement of a deadlock in negotiations between miners' officials and mine owners, the British cabinet met at 10 Downing Street today to consider an impending crisis in that industry, the third the government will have been called upon to face in its brief tenure of office.

At the same time, a national miners' delegate conference, representing 800,000 workers, met.

Agreement Expires April 17.

The existing wage scale in the mining industry expires April 17 and conferences have been under way for some time, seeking to adjust differences regarding a new scale. The board of trade announced officially early today that these have broken down completely. The employers suggest a court of inquiry, which the miners rejected unqualifiedly.

Promise Minimum Wage Bill.

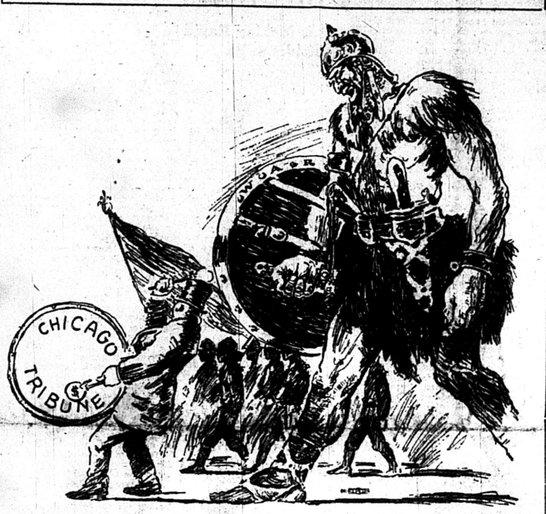
It was forecast that today's delegate conference would recommend a nation-wide ballot of miners to ascertain whether the workers are willing to strike to force acceptance of their terms.

The minister of mines will take a hand in the controversy tomorrow. If this intervention fails there is said to be no alternative save introduction in Commons of a minimum wage bill for the industry, as promised by the government.

If the House should defeat this bill, it would mean a debacle for Premier MacDonald's government.

"Labor" Alderman Is Silent in City Council as Police Arrest Forty-Five More Strike Pickets

IT YELLS FOR WAR



But It Is Silent About the School Land Lease Steal.

NELSON FAILS STRIKERS AT CITY COUNCIL

But Girls Flock To Picket Line In Greater Numbers

Alderman Oscar Nelson, vice president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and paid attorney for the garment strikers, flatly refused to raise his voice at the city council meeting yesterday afternoon against the police slugging and wholesale arrests which are going on in violation of the law.

The labor alderman's desertion of labor came on the 29th and most critical day of the strike. Another case of police slugging had just occurred and three dozen arrests had been made of girl pickets and social workers who had come on the picket line in greater numbers than ever.

Girl Strikers Demanded Action.

When the city council opened at two o'clock the galleries were filled with girl strikers who were taking two hours off from the battle front on S. Market street for the purpose of hearing Alderman Nelson raise his voice in their behalf.

The girls waited for more than an hour in vain. Their paid attorney's voice was lifted loudly for a special Friday meeting of the council to consider the $46,000,000 budget proposal of the city of the council but he was dumb on the issue of police slugging.

Nelson Turned Girls Down.

So the girls sent Nelson a note stating that they were "waiting for some action from you. Can you help?"

Cries "Foster" To Hide Issue.

Out came Nelson. Using the same tactics he used at the Chicago Federation of Labor when John W. Johnston urged mass picketing by the Federation, Nelson launched another attack on "Fosterism."

"There is a movement going on to split the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union," he began. "It is being led by William Z. Foster and the DAILY WORKER. I'm not acting under instructions from the DAILY WORKER. If the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union asks me to introduce a bill on the floor I will do it. All the protests against police action are being given to the mayor. There is no need to bring the matter on the floor of the council."

Council Acted In Other Strikes.

Before Nelson could be asked what "Fosterism" had to do with the demand that a labor alderman protest against flagrant police violence he had turned away. In the 1915 strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, city aldermen raised such an issue on the floor of the council and the police were forced to back up under their fire.

Fear DAILY WORKER Exposes.

News that the DAILY WORKER intended to tell what was going on in the Chicago City Council had evidently gotten about there. When the DAILY WORKER reporter went about to the side entrance that leads towards the press seats he was stopped by council attaches.

"The DAILY WORKER!", they exclaimed: "they won't let you in."

Another newspaperman took up the cudgels for the reporter after seeing his reporter's pass which is signed by the Chief of Police and properly accredits him to get news in city departments.

He summoned the Sergeant of the Guard, a tall young man wearing horn rimmed spectacles. But the sergeant seemed to have his orders.

"We won't let you fellows in", he cried pompously.

The reporter again produced his

Arrest 45 While Oscar Was Mum In City Council

While Alderman Oscar Nelson was refusing to raise his voice in the city council against police brutality, the city police were making a new record for arrests of peaceful pickets.

Forty-five strikers and two social workers were thrown into patrol wagons in the course of police raids on the picket lines in which considerable violence was used.

WHAT WILL CHICAGO LABOR DO ABOUT IT?

DAUGHERTY IS NEAR OUSTER BY COOLIDGE

Crooked Attorney General Is Called to White House

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 26. —Smarting under the campaign waged thruout the country, demanding the removal of the criminal attorney general, Harry M. Daugherty, President Coolidge again today called the chief cabinet white elephant into his office and implored him to quit while the quitting was good.

The DAILY WORKER in its Monday edition pointed out that tremendous pressure would be brought to bear on the president during the week to force his hand with regard to the attorney general.

See Washington as Cesspool.

It is no secret that the prominent leaders of both democrat and republican parties fear the revolutionary significance of the Teapot Dome scandal, and the still worse revelations that have come out of the Daugherty investigation.

The workers and farmers now look upon Washington as a cesspool of corruption and on the capitalist government as whited sepulchre of vice.

They would fain stop the investigations, but the pressure from the masses is too great and we have today the spectacle of a great publisher, "Eddie" McLean, himself, up to his neck in the graft upbraiding the republican side of the house for not calling a halt on the entire business.

The wise heads among the republicans believe that the removal of Daugherty might whet the appetite of the democrats for campaign material and the investigations might be called off.

So they are making another determined effort to force Coolidge to kick the attorney general out. The president is afraid of Daugherty's political power within the party. There was an agreement between the attorney general and the president to give Coolidge the Ohio delegation in return for his friendship during his hour of trial. But now the other side—the Borah, Lodge and Reed republicans—fear there will be no republican party to go to the elections with unless the Ohio grafter is fired. The pressure on Coolidge has increased. Thus today's meeting in the White House and the conversation with Senator Lodge.

"Hell Will Break Loose."

After the conference Daugherty told the reporters that only routine matters were discussed. But it leaked out that Coolidge again implored the attorney general to do a good job for the republican party

Lowenthal "Slugger" Beats Girl And Runs Away; Warrant Coming

"Slugger" Frank Fuller, employed by Lowenthal, at 221 So. Market Street, will have the pleasure of accepting a warrant this morning, served at the request of Jennie Lieberman, whom he attacked yesterday. Miss Lieberman had just been arrested and was being held in the entrance to the Lowenthal building.

"Hired by My Boss."

"Who are you to talk to me?" Miss Lieberman demanded. "Talk to the policemen. You're hired by my boss."

"Can you read English?" Slugger Fuller persisted.

"I'm not to tell you if I can or not."

"Just look at the heading of this," the slugger insisted, thrusting the paper into her face.

Miss Lieberman looked at the ceiling.

At this Slugger Fuller grabbed her dress at the neck with one hand and hit her chest violently with the other fist clutching the paper. He scuttled upstairs immediately after his attack upon the girl.

Policeman Saw Assault.

None of the six policemen standing in the hallway protested the brutal assault made by Slugger Fuller. Instead they laughed at seeing a defenceless girl beaten. Her scratched face and bruised crimson chest didn't phase their stolidity.

But the police sergeant on duty in that block realized that the attack was illegal and left the girl he was questioning to go up for the slugger's name. He brought it back to Jennie Lieberman and told her to swear out a warrant for the arrest of the brutal Frank Fuller.

Sara Novik, who was arrested with Miss Lieberman, became hysterical when Jennie was beaten. She had been arrested just as she was passing the Lowenthal establishment, altho she was engaged in peaceful conversation with a reporter for the DAILY WORKER at the time.

M. POINCARE, WALL STREET HOPE, QUITS

French Premier Is Asked To Form New Ministry

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, March 26.—Raymond Poincare, the $100,000,000 white hope of J. Pierpont Morgan, was defeated in the chamber of deputies on a vote of confidence in his minister of finance.

The long threatened defeat came on the eve of the report of "Hell and Maria" General Dawes, of the reparations committee.

Poincare is one of Europe's leading militarists and a bitter foe of the Russian Soviet Republic. He took a prominent part in the intrigues that led up to the European war and paid a visit to Leningrad, then St. Petersburg, right on the eve of the great struggle.

Last Word Against Germany.

Following the war he urged a relentless policy toward Germany and on assuming the premiership in 1922 began urging that the vanquished enemy be compelled to pay to the last mark. In 1923 he sent his troops into the Ruhr thus creating a situation around which world politics raged ever since.

When the vote that brought down the ministry was taken and the re-

Police Chief Gets Fired For Arresting Coca Cola Queen; Should Stick to Nabbing Strikers

ATLANTA, Ga., March 26.—James L. Beavers, police chief of Atlanta, stood suspended today pending hearing on charges growing out of the arrest of Mrs. Asa G. Candler, wife of the millionaire coca-cola manufacturer.

Mrs. Candler was arrested in a raid on an apartment in which she and two prominent business men were found. She was released at a preliminary hearing.

Accusations brought against Beavers before the police commission included that he "arrested a wife under such circumstances as will lead to divorce proceedings."

LONDON TUBE WORKERS PLAN STRIKE FRIDAY

Traffic Bill Introduced In Commons

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 26.—Unless London's tram and bus strike is settled by Friday mid-night, subway workers will walk out as well, it was officially announced today. This would leave the city without transportation, except for taxicabs and a few "pirate busses."

The Locomotive Men's Union announced that all its members employed on underground systems have been ordered to quit work Friday night.

Meanwhile conferences, in which the government has taken part, have proved fruitless. The government has introduced a traffic bill in Commons, which it hopes may lead to a settlement.

Score of Orientals Believed Dead in Los Angeles Fire

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 26. —With one body recovered, police and firemen were today searching the ruins of a Chinatown rooming house destroyed by an early morning fire, for the cremated remains of at least a score of other orientals believed lost in the blaze.

Thirty-five Chinese were sleeping on the lower floor of the rooming house and fifteen on the upper, according to police figures. Only eight so far are known to have escaped.

The fire started shortly after midnight, presumably of incendiary origin.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Sob for Cattle; Forget Humans.

NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—Dr. E. Pegram Flowers, secretary, Louisiana live stock board, announces that 50,000 head of cattle died during the past year as a result of exposure and underfeeding. Capitalist newspapers have taken up the story and given much space to it. Not a word has been said about widows and children who are undernourished, underpaid and dying from consumption, the result of insanitary factories and low pay.

KLUXERS THINK QUITTING MASK RADICAL MOVE

Also Plan to Admit Foreign-Born

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MUNCIE, Ind., March 26.—Admission of foreign-born protestants who have been Americanized and abolition of the mask are radical changes from the old Ku Klux regime embodied in the constitution for the Independent Klan of America, now in session here for the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization.

After an all night session the constitution and by-laws committee reported this morning that it was ready to go before the convention this afternoon to ask adoption of the constitution.

Only legally appointed delegates will be admitted to this meeting but as several of these are openly favoring amalgamation with the "Knights of the Flaming Sword," headed by Col. William Simmons, banished founder of the Klan, a heated battle is anticipated and it is admitted there is a possibility of this faction blocking the organization plans.

The convention will close with the election of officers this evening unless plans to block adoption of the constitution fail.

Teapot Meeting in N. H.

CONCORD, N. H., March 26.—The significance of Teapot Dome was explained to the workers of this city when William Simons, of Boston, spoke here in Concord Hall recently. The crowd was not very large but they were interested.

FRENCH PREMIER RESIGNS AFTER ADVERSE VOTE

sults announced the ministers were in a state of consternation and cries of "resign" came from the radical benches. The radicals were overjoyed at the result, Poincare being one of the most hated premiers among the workers that ever held office in France.

The government's pension bill was presented in the chamber by Count de Lasteyrie, who made it a question of confidence in the government.

By a narrow margin, seven votes, the deputies defeated the measure. The vote was 271 to 264.

Poincare immediately met with his ministers and after some discussion of reforming the cabinet, went to the Elysee and presented the resignation of the entire cabinet to the president.

Like Thunderbolt From Calm Sky.

Defeat of the government by the Chamber came like a thunderbolt from a calm sky. Count De Lasteyrie, in demanding that the Chamber amend the text of the pensions bill somewhat differently from the way it had been voted in the senate, claimed the existing text meant too great expenditure.

The finance minister put his motion as a question of confidence. Amid great excitement the vote was taken.

Pandemonium In Chamber.

Poincare was before the foreign affairs commission in the Chamber building, entirely ignorant that his government had fallen. Count De Lasteyrie got word to him in the midst of a speech.

"Gentlemen, I am sorry I must leave," Poincare told the commission and as a number of excited deputies crowded around the door and pleaded with him not to resign, he forced his way thru them and rushed over to the Quai D'Orsay.

Shortly thereafter those ministers who had not been able to reach the Quai D'Orsay in time, came to the president's palace.

As soon as all had arrived, Poincare presented the cabinet's resignation.

President Millerand asked him and his ministers to remain in office despite the adverse vote, but they refused to do so.

Political observers blame Count De Lasteyrie for the crisis. They say he made a grave tactical error in putting the question to the Chamber in the form in which he did.

Millerand Is Dissatisfied.

President Millerand was extremely dissatisfied with Poincare's insistence upon resigning. After reluctantly accepting the resignation, he ordered the entire cabinet to appear in the Chamber this afternoon. He requested the presidents of the senate and the Chamber of Deputies to be there and said he would explain his attitude.

As he climbed into his automobile upon leaving the Elysee, Poincare was asked:

"Are you resigning definitely even if President Millerand charges you with re-forming the cabinet"

The imperialist statesman waved a hand evasively and declined to reply.

It was thought likely that Millerand might persuade Poincare to resume office in view of the imminence of the elections, to be held in May and the foreign situation, especially with the experts' reports due shortly.

Late this afternoon, Mr. Petert, president of the Chamber of Deputies, indicated that President Millerand would call upon Poincare to form a new cabinet and return to his post as premier.

May Form New Cabinet.

Late this afternoon Poincare returned to the Elysee for a further conference with Millerand, leading to reports that he would reconsider his determination to quit unconditionally and accept an invitation to re-form his cabinet.

Attorney General Angry When Five Close Friends Cleared $33,000,000 on Sinclair Deal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Five friends of Attorney General Daugherty and Jess Smith "cleaned up $33,000,000" in a Sinclair oil deal, Mrs. Roxie Stinson told the Senate Daugherty Committee today that Jess Smith had told her.

Daugherty and Smith were not in the "deal" and "they were sore about it," Mrs. Stinson said Smith told her.

After openly accusing Daugherty of "moral responsibility" for Smith's death in Daugherty's apartment here last May, tho she said she believed Smith was a suicide, Mrs. Stinson launched into a story of Smith's financial affairs telling of the $33,000,000 "deal."

She said she asked Smith one day if he had profited in a certain deal. "Jess said that five men in the past few days had made $33,000,000," she testified. "I asked him if he and Harry were in on it. He said 'No, that's what we're sore about and they were our friends too.'"

"What kind of a deal was it?" asked Senator Brookhart.

"A Sinclair oil deal," Mrs. Stinson replied.

Ashurst asked Mrs. Stinson to give more details regarding the $33,000,000 deal.

"Jess Smith and I were at home in my apartment," she said. "He mentioned losing money on the stock market. I asked him why he didn't stop it. He said he would and he did the following January. He said 'Just think five fellows made $33,000,000 in just a few days on the stock market.' I asked him if Daugherty and he were in on it. He said 'No, and they were good friends of ours, too.'"

"Did he mention the names?"

"I rather imagine he did."

"Well, tell us the details," Ashurst insisted.

"I don't like to and I have a good reason for it, too."

"What I would like to know," Brookhart broke in, "is whether E. B. McLean was one of them?"

Mrs. Stinson did not answer.

Brookhart announced that the matter would be taken under consideration in executive session and it would then be decided whether she would be required to answer.

Mrs. Stinson said that she had told no one on the committee.

When Roxie Stinson took the stand today she charged Harry M. Daugherty with moral responsibility for the death of her former husband, Jesse Smith. She declared Jesse Smith's will was written in his own handwriting on Wardman Park Hotel stationery. The will was not probated in Ohio, therefore it was held invalid by the Daugherty boys who seem to have gobbled up everything Smith left behind him except his former wife. She is the adder in their path.

Rumors are afloat today that this is Daugherty's last week in Washington as head of the Department of Justice. Coolidge is forced to act and it is stated on reliable authority that he will give the Ohio grafter the gate.

SINCLAIR HAILED TO COURT AS EX-ROBBER COMES TO TESTIFY

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The Sinclair contempt case will be placed before the Federal Grand Jury here tomorrow with a request for an indictment, U. S. District Attorney Peyton Gordon announced today.

Al Jennings, former train robber, arrived here today much chastened in spirit and in a mood to take off his hat to the modern experts in separating people from their belongings. "Yes, I was a bandit, but I never was secretary of the interior," he declared.

The nomination of Samuel Knight, of San Francisco, as special government counsel to prosecute claims for Section 16 and 36 in naval oil reserve Number 1 was rejected by the senate oil committee today by at vote of 8 to 2.

American oil men are annually "plundering the treasury" of millions of dollars by escaping thru loopholes in the tax laws, said Senator King, of Utah. He is one of a committee investigating the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Senator Walsh, Montana, attacked the president for not demanding the resignation of C. C. Chase, collector of customs, when his impeachment was asked for by the senate yesterday. Coolidge is playing the role of a stubborn mule.

Illinois Miners Biggest Objectors To New Wage Scale

INDIANAPOLIS, March 26.—By a vote of 164,858 to 26,253, members of the United Mine Workers of America have approved the new wage contract negotiated at Jacksonville, Florida, in February.

In every district of the organization there was a big majority in favor of the contract. The greatest opposition was in the Illinois district, where the vote stood 43,180 for and 13,030 against.

The vote for district eleven, Indiana, was 15,268 for and 854 against.

COURT CONSPIRES TO HAVE UNION'S LAWYER BARRED

'Conspiracy' Cry Raised Against I. L. G. W. U.

Nettled by the determination the garment strikers are showing in fighting their battle against the bosses Dudley Taylor, attorney for the dress manufacturers announced yesterday that he intended to prove the existence of a "general conspiracy" on the part of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and their representatives to violate the injunction.

Taylor made his announcement in the court of "Dennie" Sullivan, the willing tool of open shop employers during the afternoon while the cases of ten strikers, charged with "contempt" under injunction proceedings were being heard.

"Return to Picket Line."

Detective Patrick Collins, of State's Attorney Crowe's staff had just taken the stand and testified that he had personally made 70 arrests of pickets and that the pickets invariably returned to the picket line as soon as they were released.

Lee Heller, a manufacturer, had also appeared with loud complaints about an alleged assault upon him by three strikers at his home at 2813 W. 18th Place, but he admitted to Attorney Peter Sissman, while Judge Sullivan scowled, that he could not identify any of the strikers and that he had not been hurt.

Defense Attorney On Stand.

Here Taylor stopped the proceedings and announced that he wanted Defense Attorney Sissman put on the witness stand.

Replying that such a proceeding was most unusual Sissman took the stand.

The employers' attorney then demanded, as tho he were accusing him of a crime; whether Sissman represented the union and the injunction defendants.

Sissman frankly said he represented Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the I. L. G. W. U.

Then Taylor asked him where he got the money to pay the fines of the girls who had been sentenced by Judge Sullivan.

Frame-Up Plan Seen.

It was now apparent that the employers' attorney was seeking to frame an injunction charge against the defense counsel—a most unprecedented proceeding.

Taylor himself removed all doubt of this by declaring that he intended to prove a "general conspiracy."

There was a pause. Sissman replied that he would refuse an answer unless the court insisted.

Sullivan Seconds Taylor.

There was a pause. Court attaches afterwards told the DAILY WORKER reporter they had never known a judge to put a defense attorney in an injunction proceeding into a position that might disqualify him from representing his clients and giving them the legal defense the constitution safeguards.

But Judge Sullivan insisted that he answer.

Sissman then replied that he had received the money from a man whose name he refused to give.

Defense Attorney Sees Trap.

The defense attorney, seeing the trap, determined to stand on his rights and refused to play into the hands of the employers' representative who had declared he intended to prove the existence of a "general conspiracy."

Judge Sullivan, whose plans had been partly blocked, said that he would strike out this testimony if defendants to be put on the stand were not shown to be connected with any conspiracy.

Taylor's point was that Sissman's connection with the union—which he, Taylor, insisted was violating the injunction, was sufficient to have him barred. But Sissman will continue to appear.

Put Out Students.

Sullivan, irritated at the effective replies of the strikers, took his revenge by having two University of Chicago students who smiled at one of his sallies, put out of the court.

All injunction cases were put off for another day, after preliminary hearing, "Dennie" having an appointment. The other strikers appearing yesterday on contempt proceedings were: Morris Cravis, Minnie Sidell, Rose Lewis, Eugene Schlater, Esther Monart, John Gotleib, Fannie Roslen, Anna Feldman and Mary Gureitz.

Margaret Wells and Emma Deering were not convicted before Sullivan the day before as the paper had said. Their cases were continued.

LEWIS TOOL AT PITTSBURGH MEET PULLS HIS STUFF

Maurer Calls for Third Party Movement

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 26.—The Progressives at the convention of District 5, United Mine Workers of America, made a bitter fight against the report of the credentials committee, when it was submitted to them here. In spite of this, the men whose seats were contested were allowed to vote on the committee's report.

They come from local unions that have long since gone out of existence, from locals that have never functioned and from local unions of the type described by J. A. Hamilton, on page 5, of the DAILY WORKER, March 18th issue, to such an extent missively docile to "ozone" control, or else accept the responsibility that rents on their shoulders and take the control of the union in their own hands.

Fagan Good Henchman.

President Fagan, presiding over his convention, is doing his best to emulate his master, international president, John L. Lewis, and the manner in which he jammed over the credentials committee report, aided, of course, by his army of "Blue Sky" delegates, was a disgrace to the miners' organization.

The Progressives, however, are not going to stop at this. They are going to expose the machine and its tricks. They are filing protests against the seating of every delegate from the questionable locals and intend to fight it out before any business is transacted.

Speakers occupied the rest of the morning session, among whom were the miners' attorney in the Cliftonville, West Va., riot cases, and James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor. The Progressives have called a protest mass meeting for tonight. "Jim" Maurer declared that, "NOW is the time to launch a Third Party" to the delegates assembled in the convention.

Amusement Parks—Some Issue!

Lee Hall, cog of the machine and president of District 6, Ohio, pleaded with the delegates to take part in the old party primaries to bring the necessary relief.

Amusement was given consideration when a representative of an amusement park company was allowed to describe the facilities of his fun plant. While he was talking a delegate interrupted to inform the convention that, his local had sent him to the convention to work for conditions and not to hear about amusement parks.

With the "Blue Sky" delegates and visiting speakers or spell-binders the machine is for having its own way. Lies galore are being told, but the ones against whom they are told are not permitted to answer.

The outstanding feature of today's sessions was the insistance of Delegate Pat H. Toohey to have an explanation made of the revocation of the charter of the local union at Arden Mines.

This local, the one from which Tom Myerscough was expelled, had its charter taken away because of its refusal to return to work after striking against a violation of contract. President Fagan took occasion to make false charges against Myerscough and stated that Myerscough was in the gallery. The charge was that the secretary of the Progressive International Committee, of the United Mine Workers of America, made a motion to work the Arden mine nine hours a day.

Lewis Hasn't Confidence In Patton.

This was denied by delegates and a request was made that Myerscough be permitted to explain the situation, but no consideration was given to the request by International Board Member O'Leary, who is acting as chairman of the convention. Vice-President Patton, of District 5, is in the convention but it appears that the machine does not place confidence in his ability to "run the works."

Spent Over Million In Strike.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 26.—District No. 2, United Mine Workers, spent $1,186,915.17 for relief and other purposes during the long drawn out coal strike that began in April 1922, the report of Secretary Richard Gilbert to the Altoona convention shows. While other districts in the country settled the national strike in the summer of 1922 the Somerset coal region of Pennsylvania was not included and the strike dragged on for 18 months.

The convention settled the bitter dispute between President John Brophy of the district and T. D. Stiles, editor, Penn-Central News, by voting to turn the property over to the stockholders. The paper officially dies April 15. Publication had been held up by an injunction obtained by Brophy. It was charged that it had become an organ hostile to the district officials and favorable to the international officials. Since peace has been made between the two groups the convention voted to have nothing more to do with "official organs."

Champ Clark's Daughter Loses.

NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—Mrs. James M. Thomson, daughter of the late Champ Clark, lost in her first attempt to obtain a seat in congress.

BURNS MUST GO!

Missouri Labor Head Applies the Boot to Sam Gompers' Politics

(By The Federated Press)

ST. LOUIS, March 26.—"The greatest victory even won by organized labor of Missouri was the defeat of the proposed amendments to the state constitution," said R. T. Wood, president, Missouri State Federation of Labor, addressing the Central Trades and Labor union.

Heavy votes were cast in the rural communities against the amendments on which organized labor made its fight. "That proves," Wood said, "that workers in the city and the workers on the farm are learning to act together politically. The Farmer-Labor forces of this country will go down the line with independent candidates of their own. A political unit of the city and farm producers of this nation will sound the death knell of Teapot Dome scandals at Washington."

BIG WASHINGTON, PA., CONVENTION OF F. F.-L. P. SOON

Party Is Making Rapid Strides in Pa.

By SAM T. BAKER.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANONSBURG, Pa., March 26.—The Washington County Federated Farmer-Labor Party, which is declared to be one of the best counties to be organized by the party, has issued a call for the county convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, to meet in this city April 27, at 1 p. m. The Washington county organization, which has fourteen local unions affiliated, with a membership of two thousand, will not only celebrate the rapid strides which have already been made, but will lay plans which are expected to further bring about a great reformation in the political policies of this section of the state.

Members of the two old parties have been making vain and desperate efforts to discredit the work of the party in this county, and they have been backed in their policies of obstruction by some of the leading conservative officials of the international unions.

Over two hundred delegates are expected at the coming convention which will launch a campaign for new affiliations in the unions and Farmers' Grange and will place a ticket in the field for the coming county political campaign.

Coolidge Again Asks Daugherty To Quit His Job

and quit. Daugherty's reply was, "I care as much or as little for the party as you people care for me. I'll be damned if I go until I am good and ready and if I am forced out, hell will break loose."

This ended the Coolidge effort for the time being, but astute Massachusetts political leaders have not yet given up hope. They believe a certain figure can be named that would make Daugherty see a resignation blank in a more tractable spirit. They feel he has his price, but the trouble is to pass the cash in secret. This place is rotten with spies. They all spy on each other and now Frank V. Vanderlip has a horde of them nosing into every nook and cranny.

Little's Hanging—"Patriotic" Stunt.

It is known, for instance, that Senator Wheeler has a barrel of evidence on William J. Burns, Daugherty's chief fink. So enraged are the cornered republican leaders that they are striking desperately in all directions and unloading the scourings of the Burn's office on the public in an effort to divert attention. The Republican National Committee sent out a story attacking Wheeler and his associates in Montana, and gloating over the hanging of the worker, Frank Little, by "patriotic citizens."

These desperate stunts are laughed at here. The witnesses against Daugherty are attacked as "convicts crooks, forgers, bribe-takers and other criminals." Daugherty, it seems, is everything mentioned above except a convict, and if there is any sense of decency in the capitalist parties, he will soon be behind the bars where he put hundreds of workers.

With Mop and Shovel.

NEW YORK, March 26.—William H. Anderson, "Number 75,745," with a mop and a coal shovel, began his work today as a Sing Sing prisoner. The prison garb of gray had replaced his "fighting frock coat," when the former chief of the State Anti-Saloon League pitched into his menial labors. It is possible if the convicted forger is a good prisoner that he may receive his release as a Christmas Eve gift.

Coolidge Losing in S. D.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., March 26.—Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, will defeat President Coolidge in the South Dakota primaries by between 3,000 and 4,000 votes, it was indicated today as Johnson took the lead in the late count.

Missouri Labor Meets.

ST. LOUIS, March 26.—The annual convention, Missouri State Federation of Labor, will convene at Moberly May 27.

JOHN L. LEWIS MAY RUN WITH "CAL" COOLIDGE

Would Be Good Mate For Big Strikebreaker

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 26.—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, has been suggested as a running mate to Coolidge on the standpat Republican ticket this year, in order that there may be no class issue drawn between the Democrats and Republicans. George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, has for the past month been securing endorsements for the Democratic vice presidential nomination from central labor bodies thruout the country. Lewis's friends suggest that his record of support of Harding in the 1920 campaign is just as prominent as was Berry's record in support of Cox. There is not a tinge of "red" about either man.

Berry, Gompers Man.

The candidacy of labor men for second place on the capitalist party tickets this year is traced by some of the political experts to a desire to prove that labor gets a square deal from the old party machines on the one hand, and that labor can get quicker results within the old parties than from a third party on the other hand. The candidacy of George L. Berry, represents the hope of Samuel Gompers and his associates in the majority controlling the American Federation of Labor to make the labor movement as prominent on the Democratic side of the 1924 campaign as in the campaign of 1916. The Federation officials believe that if Berry could be nominated he would be elected and that labor legislation of the type approved by the American Federation of Labor officials would be effectively promoted in the next Congress.

Both Ignore Injunction.

It is equally clear in the opinion of Lewis's backers that if Lewis were nominated and elected as vice president, the G. O. P. would become interested in labor legislation and would outdo the Democrats in sympathy with the man in overalls. The Berry candidacy ignores the injunction record of A. Mitchell Palmer and the Lewis candidacy snaps an indifferent finger at the injunction record of Harry M. Daugherty.

Some enthusiasts have proposed that William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, shall be nominated for vice president on the ticket with La-Follette. Johnston is ineligible since he was born in Nova Scotia, but another trade unionist may easily be found to accept the honor when the new party or new ticket is announced at Cleveland in July.

Catering to Progressives.

National politics have been so profoundly affected by the oil investigation and the Daugherty scandal that the nomination of trade unionists for the vice presidency this year may not be found unnecessary. Already the old party bosses are seeking to avoid a terrific battle in the Democratic convention at New York, by asking for the counsel of radical Democrats. The Iroquois Club of Chicago, for example, has invited Senator Wheeler to be its guest of honor at its annual dinner, and it is reported here that Tammany Hall is likewise sounding out the "red" Democrats with a view to having one or more of them make speeches in New York within the next few weeks. The idea seems to be that the Democratic bosses have begun to fear the La-Follette movement more than they fear Coolidge, and they want to offer concessions to the radical Democratic spokesmen in order to prevent a great section of their party from marching over into the La-Follette camp. It is a safe guess that the government ownership and democratic management of railways will be one of the tests of faith offered to the Bourbon leaders by the men whom they are seeking to hold in line.

Coolidge Will Be Third.

Collapse of the Johnson boom has merely deepened the pessimism of the near-Progressives in the Republican majority in Congress. They are convinced that Coolidge will be lucky if he runs better than third, next November.

Anticipating that the panic-stricken Republicans in the Senate would not oppose the move to indict Harry Sinclair for refusal to testify before the oil scandal committee, McLean's Washington Post on March 24, published an editorial bitterly denouncing the party leadership.

"What is the matter with the Republican leaders?" it asks, "Can it be true that they are trembling for fear that further revelations will confirm the truth of what now seem to be infamous calumnies? Or are they craven weaklings who are afraid to stand up for truth and right, because of the selfish desire to keep their own individual names out of the current scandals? Scoundrels or morals cowards—it is a hard alternative, and the people shrink from imposing judgment. But the people will not wait forever. Republicans by the millions, whose pride in their party is part of their life, are not disposed to tolerate the cowardice of their leaders in Congress when abominable allegations are nade attacking the integrity of their party. Is the Republican party dead?"

pass and courteously asked him to recognize it.

"No", said the sergeant: "We only pass daily papers."

When told the DAILY WORKER was a daily he shifted and said they only made room for "regular" papers.

Told that the DAILY WORKER was perfectly regular in its appearance on the news stands the sergeant, with his back to the wall, snarled that the DAILY WORKER just couldn't get in, that was all there was about it.

Bar Labor Reporters, He says.

"Then you discriminate against labor papers", the reporter asked.

"Yes, if you will have it that way," answered the sergeant, "we do."

Time was flying, so the reporter instead of parleying further, went into the galleries. The matter will be taken up with Mayor Dever.

WILL WIN BY FIGHTING.

While Alderman Nelson was surrendering to reactionary politicians at the city council hundreds of strikers were listening to an inspiring message from Leo Krazucki, organizer for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at the I. L. G. W. U. strike hall at 180 W. Washington street.

Demanding defiance of Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's injunction the speaker held up the example of Eugene V. Debs who defied the capitalist court's injunction in the great Pullman strike of 1894.

Defy Injunction, Like Debs.

The garment strikers must not fear to follow the same tactics as Eugene V. Debs, he urged, while the strikers cheered.

Hailing the courage of Sophie Altschuler who had been beaten unconscious by police while in the performance of her union duty, Krzzycki said that both the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the International Ladies' Garment Workers have had many bitter strikes and in every big strike there has been a Sophie Altschuler.

"Some pickets went on the picket line never to return," he said, "but they kept the fight going for unionism."

Cheer Attacks on Court.

Strikers applauded again and again every defiance of the courts and police whom the employers are using to try to crush their fight for better living conditions.

The cheers reached their highest pitch when Krzzycki referred to the march on city hall which girl garment workers were making that afternoon to see whether the politicians were going to protest police brutality or not. He continued by saying that it was not enough just to march to the city hall but that the workers must prepare to march to Springfield and to Washington and to take the reins of government over for the benefit of their class.

On to the Picket Line!

"Every soldier on the job on the picket line," he cried.

"You can get nothing without fighting: that is the only way the workers won in Russia."

Back again on the picket line the girls went that afternoon. Picketing showed more pep during the day than it has since early in the strike. The strikers know that scabs must be kept away in spite of police, and the numerous arrests made yesterday did not dampen their ardor.

Writing Is Disorderly Conduct.

Writing in a note book in the strike district along So. Market street is disorderly conduct according to the police who arrested Helen Tippy and Thomas Holland, both residents of Hull House, who were on So. Market street yesterday, to observe the progress of the strike and the activities of the police.

Miss Tippy and Holland were walking in So. Market street and they saw a slugger assault Jennie Lieberman. They took out of their pockets, pencil and paper, and began to make notes. A couple of dicks placed them under arrest. The bulls are not taking any chances on people taking their numbers in order to report their activities to the mayor.

Jennie Leiberman was put in the same patrol with Miss Tippy and Holland and when she arrived at the first district police station discovered that she was charged with assault for getting beaten up.

The police arrested Mary Armato, Lena Sciatino, Pauline Zork, Eva Baskin, Sarah Novick, and Lillian Libbin at the same time, because they had a patrol wagon there and they wanted to make the one trip count for something. They were all with the exception of Jennie Lieberman charged with disorderly conduct.

The strikers who were arrested Tuesday and arraigned in So. Clark St. police court yesterday all demanded jury trials.

Another Taken for Contempt.

One more striker was arrested on an attachment for contempt of court yesterday. She was Alma Jones, the first colored striker to be arrested for contempt. She was taken from the So. Clark St. police court when she left after appearing on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Her case was set to be heard next Tuesday when after her preliminary hearing, she was released on her own bonds.

Judge Sullivan began hearing other contempt cases immediately after Miss Jones' preliminary hearing and did not say when he would hear argument on the cases of the persons tried Tuesday or when he would pass sentence.

Union Trust Fears to Get The Tribune Into Trouble

BIG BANK IS SILENT ABOUT SHADY DEAL

Attitude Hints Something Wrong In School Lease Transfer

The Union Trust Company does not want to get the Chicago Tribune into trouble by telling the truth about the transfer of the Tribune school land lease to the big Dearborn Street bank.

This confession was made to the DAILY WORKER by Vice-President R. F. Chapin. It is a flat admission from one of the highest officials that there is something shady about the Tribune's handling of its school land lease.

The President Is Out.

The Union Trust Company is at present housed in the Tribune Building at Dearborn and W. Madison streets. Last December the Tribune transferred its school lease on this site to the Union Trust Company, since it was moving to its own north side building.

The DAILY WORKER reporter asked to see the bank's president in an effort to learn what te Union Trust Company had paid the Tribune for the valuable school lease. The money consideration involved in the deal has been kept a secret. Since the bank's president was out of town for a week, The DAILY WORKER reporter was referred to Vice President Chapin.

"Have you heard of the charges made against The Tribune and the Union Trust Company in keeping secret the transfer of The Tribune's school lease?" Mr. Chapin was asked.

"Yes, I heard all about it," said the bank's vice president, very good natured.

"The DAILY WORKER wants to get the facts about this deal," he was told.

Trouble Looms On Horizon.

"Yes, I have heard something about that, too," he said, indicating that he had read The DAILY WORKER.

The question was then put direct to Vice President Chapin "How much did the Union Trust Company pay The Tribune for this school land lease?"

Vice President Chapin immediately countered with "So you want to use me to get The Tribune into trouble?"

"Would your truthful statement about this deal get the Tribune into trouble?" was asked.

It was here that Vice President Chapin immediately got interested in other subjects. He did not want to talk school leases any more except to charge that Miss Margaret Haley, of the Chicago teachers, had been talking about the plundering of school land leases for a long time, especially about the scandal surrounding the Tribune's 99-year lease, but that all this was ancient history.

Passes Buck to Tribune.

"If the Tribune wanted to reply to these charges it would no doubt have done so a long time ago," said Vice President Chapin.

"But why doesn't The Tribune reply to these charges, if it is innocent of any wrongdoing, at least in an effort to clear itself?" and then the previous question was again hurled at Mr. Chapin, "How much did the Union Trust Company pay the Tribune for this lease?"

"I am not in a positon to give you this information," was Vice President Chapin's final defense. "You had better see Mr. Holden, my superior, and if he is willing to give you this information, it is entirely up to him."

Patterson Still "Thinking."

In the meantime Joseph Medill Patterson, editor of the Tribune, is evidently thinking this matter over, as he told The DAILY WORKER he would do. No statement has as yet appeared in the self-styled "World's Greatest Newspaper." Silence still shrouds its palace on the "Gold Coast." In the meantime the school children are still attending classes in firetraps and "tin can" portables, jammed 50 and 55 into small rooms with a single teacher.

Negro Working Women's Homes Being Destroyed By Congested Conditions; Tenants Must Act

The housing situation is peculiarly a woman's problem. The women of Chicago, in the face of increasing rents this spring, have been forced by the thousands to divide their interests between their family life and their efforts in factories as bread winners.

A woman needs a home more than a man, for life is a dreary prospect to a woman who has no comfortable home.

It is especially true of Negro women that their families have all but been destroyed in the past few years by the difficulty of meeting the recent housing crisis. The presence of the colored woman in industry is a recent phenomena.

Ten Dollars a Week.

In order to meet the growing problem of woman in industry representatives of seven women's organizations in New York City, where conditions are said to be better than in Chicago, carried on a thoro study of the Negro women in industry. Employers of 2,185 Negro women, in all the trades which she has entered, were interviewed. It was found that over half this number were receiving $10 per week or less. The wages of many were as low as five dollars per week.

"Negro women in the needle trades," we read in the investigators report. "Were found in nearly every case, to be receiving from two to five dollars less than their white sisters in the same trade.

At Work Before Sixteen.

"Over half the Negro women were at work before they were 16 years old, and a large number began between the ages of 16 and 21. All but one-fourth of them had changed their occupation during the year."

"The reason for change in occupation given by Negro teachers are interesting, for they afford a hint of the spiritual strain and drain endured by most women of that Race. One woman when asked if she preferred sewing to teaching, said she left the South to escape the unbearable treatment accorded her there. Another woman who was found dusting furniture in a department store, for eight dollars a week, had been principal of a school of 300 pupils for eight years."

Unsanitary Factories.

"In most of the factories visited," the report states, "Provisions for the comfort of Negro employes consisted in the minimum number of toilets and smallest dressing room facilities allowed by the labor laws. Toilets were generally in an unhealthy and unclean condition. Several factories had been reported to the State Labor Department as violating sanitary provisions of the labor laws."

The report concludes, "They (Negro women) did the most uninteresting work, the most menial work, and by far the most underpaid work. The American people will have to go very far in its treatment of the Negro woman to square itself with that democratic ideal of which it made so much during the war."

Out of 100 poor Negro families investigated, the Juvenile Protective Association of Chicago found that 86 Negro mothers out of the 100 go out to work. "The Negro women of Chicago constitute 42.5 per cent of the bread winners of their Race," we learn. "This is more than double the proportion of white women employed, and only 0.04 of the working white women are married."

Colored Girls Insulted.

"Colored young women who are manicurists and hair dressers find it continually assumed that they will be willing to go to hotels under compromising conditions, and when a decent girl refuses to go, she is told that it is all that she can expect. There is no doubt that colored girls are much more open to insult than white girls in similar circumstances. It is extremely difficult for Negro girls to maintain their standards of self respect."

Add to these miserable conditions in the factories where most Negro mothers work, the fact that they come home at night to overcrowded homes which they have no time to clean, with a large percentage of their children also working, and generally a few lodgers around the premises, and it is easily seen what an unhappy life the Negro women are forced to lead.

Let us hope that the Negro Tenants' League, which is holding a meeting in Oddfellow's Hall, South State Street, next Monday night, takes a determined stand for the abolition of segregation and for a reduction of rents, if for no other reason, than to restore to the Negro family some of the home life to which it is entitled.

NEGROES LIVING IN FIRETRAPS HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Vile Housing Conditions Forced on Race

If the wind had been blowing from the South a few days ago, Chicago, due to its long continued neglect of the condition of its houses, would have witnessed last week, one of the worst tragedies in the history of the city. A large four-story furniture factory, on the corner of Newberry avenue and Maxwell street, 1300 south, was completely gutted by a dangerous fire. The sparks spread to a few frame shacks, in the back of the plant, across the alley, occupied by Negroes, and only heroic work on the part of the firemen stamped them out.

Rubbish and Rats.

The alley back of the plant was, and still is, filled with rubbish of all sorts. Huge heaps of ashes, rotten boards, big bundles of newspapers, are mingled together with the copious mud and sprinkled with dead and living rats. The DAILY WORKER saw one big, live rat, who looked so scabby and forlorn, that he moved all beholders with genuine pity. Even rats suffer in such mean surroundings.

This narrow alley, from Maxwell street to Roosevelt road, is amost impassible. Much of the rubbish in it is inflammable. The houses on both sides are wooden frame houses of two and three stories. Almost without exception, they are surrounded by remains of wooden fences, boardwalks, and porches, which are heaped over the premises in such a way as to invite disaster to the neighborhood, which almost overtook it a few days ago.

A Hopeless Firetrap.

The furniture factory had two rickety fireplaces, both facing the back alley, which one fireman said, "Were not enough on so large a building. If employes were trapped in the part of the building facing Newberry avenue, they would have burned to death. There was no way of escape in this portion of the building."

"If the wind had been blowing from the south," according to this fireman, "at least the whole, long block of old, wooden houses as far north as Roosevelt road would have been swept away by the flames, and many would have been killed."

An examination of the neighborhood shows that rubbish, ashes, newspapers, and garbage are not properly disposed of; the buildings are in a state of decay and delapidation; streets are dirty and uncleaned; and boards which were formerly part of the porches or boardwalks lie around between the houses; all these conditions greatly increase danger of loss of life and homes by fire.

$750,000 Bank Thief Enjoys Liberty as Attorneys Argue

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mar. 26.—A. O. Meininger, cashier of the looted Night and Day Bank, charged with embezzling $750,000 of the bank's funds, convicted on one indictment and sentenced to five years in prison, cannot be tried on any of the remaining 47 indictments against him until the state supreme court has passed upon his appeal from the sentence, according to a decision just handed down by the supreme court. This may take years.

The looted bank closed Jan. 6, 1922, financially ruining a large number of working people, savings depositors in the institution. The local Socialist party, and several labor bodies were among the losers when the bank closed its doors. None of the indicted officials have yet been locked up. H. H. Hoehnschild, president of the bank, had 16 indictments quashed on legal technicalities.

Legal minds see many loopholes in the law thru which Meininger might escape punishment entirely, in the event the supreme court reverses the lower court verdict. In any event, the case is expected to enjoy several years of peaceful slumber on the appeal.

Unfortunate depositors in the bank have received payments of 50 per cent on their losses. More stringent state banking laws are being urged as a result of the fiasco of the Night and Day bank.

ALBERTA COAL DIGGERS WILL STRIKE APRIL 1

Bosses Refuse Pact on Jacksonville Basis

By JOHN GIFFORD
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DRUMKELLER, Alberta, Mar. 26.—As a result of a deadlock in negotiations with the operators, ten thousand miners of district 18, U. M. W. A., comprising Alberta and British Columbia, will come out on strike on April 1. Negotiations have been going on since the beginning of March, between the miners and operators, (and both sides standing firm for their demands), has resulted in the joint conference of miners and operators being adjourned sine die.

Jacksonville Terms.

The miners ask an agreement on the same basis as the Jacksonville agreement, that is a three years agreement on the old scale of wages, and the adjustment of a few inequalities in working conditions. The operators have absolutely refused to accept the demands of the miners, and claim they will not sign an agreement without a reduction in wages, and only then a one year agreement. There is an agitation on in Western Canada by the operators in the daily capitalist press for the Ontario market, the press saying that if the miners take a reduction in wages the operators will capture the Ontario market, thereby giving the miners steady work.

Coolie Wages—Company Standard.

Their chief argument is that they can't compete with the non-union fields who are operating at a lower cost of production. This argument of the operators, has been exploded time and again by the miners, and the dominion and provincial government statistics which show that the non-union fields have worked even less days than the union fields. The whole trend of the operators argument shows that they are out to bust the union, and initiate the open shop, altho the press would make it appear that the sole interest of the operators is to protect the dear public from the high price of coal, and if the miners would only take a reasonable reduction the dear public would get cheaper coal, the miners more steady work at the rate of a Chinese coolie, and the operators more profits.

The miners are wise to this talk of the operators, and know that if they concede anything to the boss, that is the day when they spell ruin and more misery for themselves and their families. The bosses are determined to initiate a reduction and the consequent open shop, and the press is playing its part in advocating a reduction and the misrepresentation of the miners' side of the issue. As a result of the solid front of the miners, the bosses thru the press, have intimated that if the miners do not accept a cut in wages, they will ship in scabs to the mines.

Who Is This "Public?"

The daily press is very indignant at the unreasonableness of the miners in standing out for higher wages than any other trade, and not helping the country and the operators especially, to get back to normalcy The miners, however, know that it is not the public, the visionary public anyway, that the press is uneasy about, but the profits of their masters, and therefore they are not biting. If the miners entertain a reduction, and even obtain the Ontario market, it will mean that they are the means of undercutting of the wages of their fellow workers in the United States, and rather than do so the miners of district 18, will stay on strike until the last loave is eaten up, and the operators adopt a more sensible course. The miners of district 18, are assured of support from the International union in the event of a strike, but apart from that, if the support is not forthcoming, the slogan of the miners is forward to emancipation, and no step backward.

Henry Ford Dubbed Wolf in Sheep's Clothing by Reader

Olympia, Wash., March 17, 1924.

To the DAILY WORKER: With reference to your file of Feb. 28th; your article by Upton Sinclair entitled, "Employers Dictate to Teachers Thru N. E. A., etc.," and your editorial comment in conjunction.

I beg to call your attention to the Dearborn Independent (Ford publication) of March 15th. Please note the accusation made against President Charl Williams, et al; in the article entitled "Are Women's Clubs 'Used' by Bolshevists?"

Just where does the Ford retinue stand in the matter of influence in educational politics? It would appear that if the worthy wolf in Sheep's clothing has any real political power in that direction it might be used to advantage in freeing the N. E. A. of one of its undesirables. Certainly President Charl Williams of the N. E. A. holds no high place in the esteem of the man who wrote that article.

I did not know whether you would pick up this rather interesting bit of co-relative information or not so just thought I would call attention to it.

Read the Dearborn Independent and weep or laugh just as it strikes you. I generally laugh.—Vernon L. O'Reilly.

Workers Party in Milwaukee Enters Election Campaign

MILWAUKEE, March 26.—The Workers Party organization in this city, while criticizing Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, candidate for re-election, because of the inadequacy of his program; nevertheless supports him and the entire socialist ticket in the election against David S. Rose who has the endorsement of big business and the open shop elements of Milwaukee.

Under the slogans, "More Power to the Workers" and "Down with the Bosses' Candidates," the Workers Party is arranging a series of mass meetings during the campaign to bring its program to the attention of the workers.

In a campaign statement the Workers Party points out that tho the socialist party of Milwaukee boasts of the increase in value of property during its regime, rents have also gone up, hitting the workers very hard. Building trades workers in Milwaukee are the lowest paid in the United States and that practically all the large establishments in the city are operating on the open shop basis. The socialist party is trying to please all classes, which is impossible.

While supporting the socialist party ticket the Workers Party demands that the socialist party join actively in the movement for a nation-wide class farmer-labor party.

Rock Dusting of Mines Would Prevent Many Explosions

Explosions of coal dust such as have caused a toll of hundreds of lives in American mines within the past few months can be greatly minimized by proper rock dusting methods, states the Department of the Interior, which recently commissioned George S. Rica, chief mining engineer of the bureau of mines, to make a study of the use of these methods to prevent the propagation of coal dust explosions in European mines.

The rock dust is spread upon the floor, roof and sides of passageways or placed upon specially constructed barriers, and when stirred up by the concussion of a local explosion, forms a screen which prevents the flame of the explosion from propagating beyond the immediate area of origin.

Stone dusting as a means of limiting coal dust explosions is made compulsory, by governmental regulation, in Great Britain except in anthracite mines and in bituminous mines that are naturally wet thruout.

In France, the scene in 1906 of the greatest of all coal mine explosions, the Courrieres disaster, which killed 1,100 men, the practice of rock dusting prevails in certain districts, and French officials are urging a wider use of rock dusting in the more dangerous mines.

Teachers' Union In Bulgaria Has 8,000 Members

(By The Federated Press)

SOFIA, Bulgaria, March 26.—Over 8,000 of the 12,000 teachers of Bulgaria are organized in the Union of Teachers, which is affiliated with the General Federation of Trade Unions. The railwaymen's union has increased its membership from 1,400 to about 8,000, and the Union of Postal Telegraph and Telephone Employes has won 1,400 new members. The Co-operative Federation includes 69 affiliated societies, with membership of 42,968, an increase of 1,700 over last year.

Etiquette And Reaction.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 26.—California, home of criminal syndicalism, is more concerned with etiquette than justice. State Librarian Milton Ferguson announces that books on etiquette exceed all other non-fiction works in popularity in the state library, and are also best sellers in the bookstores.

JOBLESS RELIEF IN A. C. W. DEALT WITH BY T. U. E. L.

National Needle Trades Section Statement

The National Committee of the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League has issued the following statement setting forth the position of that organization on the unemployment relief program in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The Needle Trades section of the League brands as false certain rumors circulated by its enemies concerning its activities in connection with the plan for the relief of unemployed members of the Amalgamated and gives a detailed exposition of its attitude towards this and similar projects.

The League Statement.

Rumors are current in the New York organization of the Amalgamated that the T. U. E. L. is responsible for the fact that the contemplated plan for unemployment relief in the Amalgamated did not materialize. These rumors are to the effect that the decision for a five per cent assessment on the workers' wages for an unemployment fund was not carried thru because of the opposition of the League. The Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. deems it necessary to clarify its position on the question and to characterize as false all such rumors.

Unfounded Accusation.

How unfounded the accusation against the League is can be definitely proved by the fact, well-known among the workers in the industry, that the plan for such an assessment was originally proposed and accepted at a well-attended meeting of the Amalgamated League before a similar plan was adopted by the Joint Board of the union. When Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated later came to the Joint Board with a similar proposition, it was heartily supported by all League members at that meeting.

Real Reason.

The real reason why the plan has not as yet been put into effect must be sought elsewhere. In the New York section of the Amalgamated there has recently developed a deep distrust on the part of the membership towards the leaders of the Joint Board. This alone was the cause for the strong sentiment which developed against contributing to the fund. The opinion prevailed amongst the members that the fund will be used not alone to aid the unemployed but also for other purposes. This, in our opinion, is the only reason why the decision has not yet been carried out.

Examine Facts.

If we are to establish responsibility for the failure of this plan, we must examine the facts which caused the growth of mistrust among the membership. The League surely cannot be accused for the existing conditions, as the basis for this mistrust was not laid by the League but came as a result of the tactics pursued by the leaders of the organization.

In all the recent activities of the Amalgamated it has been quite evident that they have not reckoned with the membership. Certain individuals who consider themselves the Lord's anointed maintain that they alone are fit to lead and control the organization. The false basis of their tactics lies in this—that in their activities they place all their confidence not in the collective strength of the entire membership but in that of a few chosen individuals. The workers in the shops are seriously concerned with the conditions in the union are denied every opportunity to participate in the activities or control of the union. Such an attitude cannot create a healthy basis for union activity, but can only result in sowing the seeds of distrust which lead to complete demoralization.

League Favors Jobless Relief.

Unemployment relief is one of the most important features in the program advocated by the League. It is quite true that from our point of view the five per cent assessment does not solve the unemployment situation. We contend that in every industry unemployment funds should not be established out of the meagre earnings of the workers, but rather out of the profits of the employers.

The Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. comes to the workers of our industry with the following program of unemployment relief which if put into effect, will greatly solve unemployment in our industry.

The League's Program.

1. We propose that the unions in the needle trades should carry on a fight to have all the workers assured of the necessities of life at the expense of the wealth which they create in the industry.
2. Unemployment relief at the expense of the employers and controlled by the union.
3. Guarantee of forty-two weeks employment for every worker in the industry.
4. Shorter work-day so as to distribute the work among the greater number of workers.
5. Equal division of work in every shop, instead of reorganizations, which create a great army of jobless workers.
6. An intensive organization campaign on the part of the union to wipe out the sweat-shop system which to a very large extent is responsible for the unemployment of union workers.
7. We propose that the unions in the Needle Trades use their organized power on the political field to compel the government to subsidize the unemployed.

Until this program is put into effect we propose the following measures as a means of securing immediate relief for the unemployed workers in our industry.

1. A five per cent assessment on the wages of those employed to assist the unemployed.
2. This fund to be collected by the Joint Board and administered jointly, with a special unemployment relief committee consisting of representatives from every local union elected by the membership for that purpose.

Women's Peace Body Urge Solons to Put Bell on Martial Cat

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (Chicago Branch) at a recent meeting adopted a resolution declaring that the consummation and maintenance of world peace is the most important problem of the present time, that it is contrary to the spirit of America to sanction anything evil (see how we treat liquor, immorality, et al.) that most means hitherto proposed for the maintenance of world peace have fallen short of these American principles of treating evil things roughly, therefore, our worthy pacifists resolve that war must be outlawed and that no presidential party refusing to do this should be supported by peace loving citizens.

Citizens in sympathy with this resolution are requested by the W. I. L. to send letters to Calvin Coolidge and other White House white hopes urging them to make war on war. We fear the silent man is now too busy trying to get rid of Harry Daugherty to bother about such a trifling thing as war.

The local headquarters of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is Room 1010, Fine Arts Building.

Red Legions to March On May Day

"May Day Daily Worker" To Create Great Surprise

TO SAY that the May Day Special number of THE DAILY WORKER will be the greatest edition ever issued by the best daily in America is to make a great claim. Yet surprises are already in store thru which that claim is already justified. Readers of THE DAILY WORKER may already have heard some whispers of the great May Day Parade in which every militant worker in America will participate. The secret has been shared in full however, only with DAILY WORKER subscribers, who no doubt have passed it on to their closest friends and comrades.

A NATIONAL MAY DAY PARADE THIS MAY DAY! A May Day Parade from coast to coast!!! A solid column flung across the country of militant workers showing their colors and their power!

You are doubtful? Such a thing has never before been done or even tried, you say? But this year it will be tried and will be done! A NATIONAL MAY DAY RALLIED AROUND THE DAILY WORKER! Ask any DAILY WORKER subscriber, he knows.

Just what has this to do with The May Day Special? The subscribers know that too and are willing to inform the curious. But take it from us that no worker can afford to miss THE DAILY WORKER May Day Special and no militant can afford to be without a big bundle of them.

Take another tip from us. Send in your order for your bundle now. The Teapot Special is all gone and we have additional orders for several thousand copies that cannot be filled. Those who waited too long have had to do without. Send in your order for your bundle now and make sure of having your supply.

STUDENTS OUT FOR LABOR'S OWN POLITICAL PARTY

Send Out Call for Organized Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HANOVER, N. H., March 26.—In an open letter to college students, the Dartmouth Club for Independent Political Action calls on the students thruout the country to co-operate with the progressive elements in the American Labor movement who are striving to organize a political party of workers and exploited farmers entirely independent of the parties of capitalism.

Pointing to the Teapot Dome scandal as an object lesson in political corruption which smears both Democrats and Republicans, the letter stresses the futility of expecting the representatives of organized greed to pass legislation of benefit to the workers.

Has Regular Officials.

The officers of the club are: Roland A. Gibson, president; James S. Wheaton, secretary-treasurer; Richard W. Morin, Norris B. Chipman and Jacob L. Afros, members of the executive committee.

The letter is in part as follows:

The oil scandal has revealed to all intelligent American citizens the real state of political government in this country. The senatorial investigation has brought to the surface all the sordid details of the political corruption that involves the leading politicians of both the Republican and Democratic parties, and clearly shows that under our present party system the candidates of both parties, no matter how "good" they may be when elected, are controlled after election by big business. This makes impossible the passage of any legislation which will effect fundamental economic and political reforms, and constitutes a challenge to all the progressive forces of the country to repudiate the old parties and unite to form a party which shall truly represent the majority of the people of the country.

To American college students this challenge should come with special force in view of the example of the British Labor Party, which has attained its present position of leadership largely because forty odd years ago a group of intellectuals in England, revolting from the existing system of society, allied themselves with the working class in its struggle for freedom.

For Independent Labor Party.

The Dartmouth Club for Independent Political Action has been organized in response to the challenge of the present political situation in America, and it welcomes your co-operation between labor and learning for the organization of an American Labor Party modelled along the lines of the British Labor Party.

To realize this object college students can co-operate with progressive and labor leaders in their community to carry on the movement for the formation of a party which will unite on a program of fundamental economic and political reform, including the nationalization and democratic management of public utilities and natural resources, taxation of excess profits and inheritances, government aid to farmers, opposition to war and imperialism, abolition of government injunctions in labor disputes, guarantee of civil liberties, and other measures which will pave the way for a government based on true political and industrial equality, social justice and world peace.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Every Party Branch Must Do Its Part

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party.

THE PARTY cannot fulfill its tasks if only a part of our organizations participate in the work we undertake. If only a fourth or a third of our organization shows a fighting spirit, a willingness to perform the work which is assigned, we may get good results as fast as those branches are concerned, but for the party as a whole the campaign will be a failure.

This is said for the benefit of those Party Branches which are lagging behind in supporting the campaign for the Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund.

Many branches are doing excellent work in raising their quota of this fund. For instance, during the last few days the following branches reported:

Endicott Ukranian Branch	$ 5.00
Library South Slavic Branch	21.00
New York West Side Italian Branch	10.00
N. S. Pittsburg South Slavic Branch	10.00
N. S. Pittsburg Lithuanian Branch	11.00
Binghamton Ukranian Branch	5.00
Edgewater Russian Branch	5.00
Chicago Czecho-Slovak Women's Branch	5.00
Leadville Finnish Branch	5.90
Boston English Branch	5.00
Michigamme Finnish Branch	13.00
Wilmington English Branch	7.00

The comrades of these branches are taking their work in the party seriously. They realize that when the Central Executive Committee issues a call for funds for party work of such importance as the Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund it is their duty to do their utmost to produce results.

The task set before each branch is not great. Branches with up to 25 members are asked to raise only $10.00 thru sale to the members of the Mass, Class Farmer-Labor Party Labels. Branches with over 25 members are asked to raise $25.00.

That is within the reach of every party branch. If the party is to make a real campaign in support of the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention it must raise at least $15,000 in the present campaign for money.

Comrades! The present Farmer-Labor situation is decisive for work which we have carried on for nearly two years. Shall we fail now? Or shall we reap the results of our persistent struggle?

The answer depends upon the response the Central Executive Committee receives to the Farmer-Labor Campaign Funds. Without this fund the party cannot carry on the campaign which it must in order to come out victorious.

We are in one of the decisive struggles of our work. No Party Branch can hang on. Every party member is urged to bring the matter up at his next branch meeting and if the branch has not sent in its quota have it collected and sent at once.

Amalgamated Shoe Workers of New York Launch Drive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 26.—The Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America started a big membership drive Monday, March 24, which will continue for four weeks. Five campaign captains have been elected in each local and each captain has ten active members as aides.

During this campaign the initiation fee has been reduced to one dollar and the reinstatement fee of suspended members has been reduced to two dollars. This will give every shoe worker in greater New York an opportunity to become a member of this union and it is the duty of every member to bring in as many as possible. Keen competition between the different locals for the getting of members has already begun.

A bulletin will be issued each week showing the standing of all locals during the drive.

If you are a shoe worker and not a member of this union get in touch at once with the local you should join. The locals meet on the following nights at Amalgamated headquarters, 158 Waverly Ave., cor. Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn: Monday, Lasters, Local 40; Tuesday, Fitters, Local 17; Thursday, Cleaners, Packers and Goodyear Stitchers, Local 13; Friday, Cutters, Local 10; first and third Tuesday, Stitch Down and Sandal Workers, Local 2. Meets at 210 E. 104th St., New York City.

Senate Votes to Let Congressmen Take Office When Elected

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 26.—Lame duck government, insofar as congress is concerned, is likely to get a serious setback. Senator Norris' resolution proposing to amend the constitution to permit newly elected congresses to take office the first Monday in January has passed the senate with only seven dissenting votes. A majority in the house is assured if the measure can be brought to a roll call and there appears no doubt that a majority of the states will ratify the resolution.

The favorable vote in the senate is due in part to the effect on the public mind of the lame duck scandal in the last house when defeated members controlled and distorted the whole legislative program. Chairman Campbell of the rules committee, who had been overwhelmingly defeated in the primary, pocketed a large number of important bills and defied the progressives in the house to challenge his control of the situation.

Quaker City Labor Forward Plans for German Workers' Aid

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 26.—Fifty delegates representing many thousands of workers in Philadelphia were present at the last conference for German workers relief held at the Bannater Mannerchor Hall.

William Weinstone, representing the International Workers Aid, addressed the conference on the situation in Germany and the work being done by the International Workers Aid. He pointed out that the condition of the German workers becomes ever worse; millions of workers are affected by hunger and that the International Workers Aid is the only proletarian organization that is feeding the German workers.

It is world-wide in organization, having representatives on its international and national committees of all labor organizations, irrespective of political representation. He specially emphasized that any workers' group is welcome to participate in the work of proletarian solidarity.

The conference reorganized the executive committee so as to give representation to every organization. A committee of twenty-five was formed. The conference is making arrangements for the bazaar which is to be held in May, and all signs point to a very successful affair.

Many delegates spoke on the work of the International Workers Aid, pointing out that we must redouble our efforts and thousands of dollars be raised in Philadelphia.

Labor Legislation Is Treated Roughly By N. Y. Politicians

(By The Federated Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., Mar. 26.—With the state legislature approaching adjournment, only the bill favoring a legal 48-hour week obtained a fair hearing and retains a fair chance of passage among labor measures. This bill, applying only to women workers, also foresees a minimum wage and, if accepted, must pass over two other proposals one permiting privileged industries to disregard the 48-hour law, the other allowing employers to institute the nine-hour day five days a week, with part time on the sixth working day. Slight concessions are promised to the trade unions on the workmen's compensation issue, but the advocacy of a state monopoly of accident insurance is foredoomed to defeat, thanks to the influence of the profit-taking insurance companies.

Little hope is held out for another measure, limiting the use of police or constabulary against strikers to emergencies designated by town councils or similar municipal bodies.

COMING ITALIAN ELECTION ONLY MUSSOLINI FAKE

Wants Constitutional Figleaf for Dictatorship

By GIOVANNI GIGLI
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME.—(By Mail.)—Italy is on the eve of a general election. Polling will take place on April 6, and the new "Camera dei Deputati" will be convoked for the State Opening on the 24th of May, that is, on the Aniversary Day of Italy's participation in the World War. This latter circumstance is not the result of a mere coincidence, as it would seem. On the contrary, the date has been chosen by Mussolini himself, out of its symbolic significance to the war mentality of Fascismo.

From the same motive, Mussolini has formed his list of candidates almost exclusively of ex-service men who have distinguished themselves in the war. So that, as a result of the new electoral law which enables the fascist government to gain two-thirds of the seats in the future chamber of deputies, provided they can only poll 25 per cent of the votes, I think I can safely anticipate that the new "Camera dei Deputati" will include the greatest number of fascist and nationalist hot heads living under the sun. In such conditions, the struggle for the opposition parties will be extremely difficult and entirely useless, and surely they would have withdrawn from the ground already had the Communist party not refused to follow their lead for a general abstention.

A Mussolini Fake.

Not only are the opposition parties, by cause of the new electoral law, in a position which hinders them beforehand from competing for the future parliamentary majority, but, in all probability, the fascist violence will make it impossible for them even to fight for the minority. The forthcoming Italian election must, therefore, be looked upon as an attempt by the fascist dictatorship to give people unacquainted with the history of the past fourteen months of Italian life the impression that everything here is right at present from a constitutional standpoint. But, alas, how far is this from being the truth.

Coincident with the official opening of the electoral campaign comes today from the Reggio Emilia province the report that a candidate on the socialist card list, Signor Piccinini, a compositor, was assassinated by fascist gunmen yesterday, in circumstances which offer a striking evidence of actual conditions in Italian domestic life.

Fascisti Murder Worker.

At dead of night, a small gang of fascisti, four in number, fell upon the house where Signor Picinini and his wife and two children lived, presenting themselves under a friendly guise and asking for admittance on the ground that they had come with some urgent comunications to make on behalf of a common friend, in this, the ruffians, naming a socialist leader well known in the district, and exhibiting identity cards from which it would appear that they were members of a socialist club. "Give me time to put my clothes on and I'll be with you in a few minutes," came the poor man's voice from within, thru the door.

His wife, however, who suspected danger, begged him to stay and not to follow the strangers in the street as she did not believe them sincere, but the poor man tried to lessen his wife's pains by pointing out that if the strangers really intended to do him harm he could not prevent their offenses by his remaining indoors. So he resolved to go. The poor lady is reported to have concluded her tragic account by adding that when she had followed her husband in the street and had seen him go round the corner, apparently engaged in a friendly talk with the four strangers, she went back to her children upstairs and tried to get them to bed again as the poor little souls had, too, been roused from sleep, and looked now much frightened. "The poor kids inquired about their father," stated the widow, "and I told them their father had gone out with some friends, and would soon be back with some nice present for them.

Body of Worker Found.

"But the little souls were soon tired of waiting and in half an hour were in a sound sleep again."

"The morrow after some passersby discovered the body of a man lying by the country road in a pool of blood. Later an officer of justice and two carabinieri were on the scene and, on examining the dead man's body, found that the unfortunate fellow had been shot dead with four revolver bullets in the head and also bore signs that before being murdered he had been knocked in the head and face with a heavy stick by his assassins. It was also discovered at Reggio Emilia not less was Signor Piccinini, the worker candidate on the socialist card list of Reggio Emilia, whom the four ruffians had fetched in his house the night before.

Beaten For Truth.

Of course, this is only one among the numberless acts of terror for which the fascisti are every day making themselves responsible thruout this country. On the very same day that this ferocious murder was discovered at Reggio Emilia not less than five other criminal acts were perpetrated by the fascisti of the same town. A journalist who was found responsible for having sent to his Rome newspaper a faithful account of the terroristic electoral activities by the fascisti in his district was summoned by the fascisti to their quarters and received a sever flogging.

In another locality, a notary, for having complied with a demand to attest the signature of an opposition candidate, was also flogged and banished from his town. According to the new fascist jurisprudence, people responsible for such crimes as I have mentioned do not receive any punishment, and it is a generally established rule in the fascist press to openly justify such crimes on the ground that they are done for "patriotic purposes." Fifty per cent of the crimes are perpetrated with the direct participation of the fascist militia, so it can be easily realized why in ninety cases out of a hundred people responsible for such crimes can elude the sanctions of justice. And this is the real explanation for the fact that people here very seldom react against their fascist offenders who, as a consequence, become every day more and more aggressive and criminal. The Italian people have entirely lost their liberty, and I do not see any sign that the end of their slavery is getting near.

Being the continuation of the report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organization.

* * * *

COMRADES, it seems to me that these words contain the solution of the riddle offered by the whole situation. At the Tenth Party Congress we passed an excellent resolution on the workers' democracy, and passed it almost unanimously. And upon this the leader and master of the Party stepped forward and said: Let us not forget that we need about two years to set the works and factories going again to any extent, and that then we shall receive a hundred times more support from the workers, then the workers will cease to be indifferent, and new conditions will form in the Party.

Sole Marxian Reply.

Comrades, to me this appears to be the sole correct, the sole dignified, and the sole Marxian reply to the question upon which we are engaged—why we have raised the question of the workers' democracy at precisely the present juncture.

There are some among us who have lost their faith in the revolution and in their own Party, and who have become a prey to ideas inducing them to suspect some piece of diplomacy behind every decision of the Central Committee of their own Party, instead of seeking the reason for this or that decision of the Party, as a Marxist should, in the objective conditions, in the economic situation, and in the position of the whole working class.

The Party is nothing more nor less than a part of the working class. All events happening in the working class are mirrored in one way or another in our Party. The debates within the Party reflect in 99 out of 100 cases, important events occurring among the working class. This applies equally to our present debate.

And Comrade Lenin did not make any mistake as to the time required for the development. He said that one or two years would pass. Just slightly over two years have passed since that time.

During this period the situation has changed among the working class. Whole strata of non-partisan workers have developed culturally, and our Party has grown as well (here it is not a question of quantity—our working class has not increased much numerically—but of quality). In the year 1921 there were only old men and women left in the factories, there was scarcely any life in the enterprises, the workers were in a state of indifference, they participated but little in Party, Soviet, and trade union life. Let us take the Obuchov undertaking for instance.

True Proletarian Trend.

Two years ago the majority of the workers here were old men, grumblers, who were occupied solely with the manufacture of lighters to be sold in illicit trade. Today the Obuchov workman is a very different man. For a year he has been working at making tractors, he has completely changed as a man and as a workman. That workman who pilfered metal, manufactured lighters, and sold them secretly, was no proletarian in the true sense of the word.

It is true that he was very poor, as poor as a church mouse, often enough he had not even his daily bread; but he had not the proletarian psychology either. It was another matter when he began to work on tractors, and when he began to feel that agriculture, that the welfare of his country, required his work. He is now another man; an impulse towards activity is awakening within him. He now takes quite another interest in the affairs of the trade union, the Soviet, and the Party.

We may observe the same picture of convalescence in other parts of the country as well. Indifference is vanishing, or beginning to vanish.

This trend of feeling among the masses is having its effect on our Party masses and leaders, and on the whole of our Party life.

This is the reason why a quite different situation, and quite different conditions, have come to pass, just as foreseen by Comrade Lenin. The working class has begun to thaw, so to speak; rank and file are growing and gaining firm foothold: This is the solution of the riddle, the answer to the question as to why the Central Committee of our Party in September of this year began to think that the time had come to raise the question of the workers' democracy again. In many respects the conditions are favorable, and the question may well be raised.

At times we are obliged to occupy ourselves with diplomacy, as for instance when we have to do with Lord Curzon, when we have matters to settle with reference to international politics.

But when we are speaking with our own Party, which has trained us and placed us in responsible positions, and in whose midst we have been reared—then we have nothing to do with diplomacy, then we speak as it is proper for revolutionists to speak, we say what we have to say as Bolsheviki—we say what we think. Should we be in error, the Party may point this out to us.

"We Need Workers' Democracy."

Thus the first complaint which we have to raise against our opponents is that they fail to examine into the developments going on in the working class, as Marxists should, in order to find in these developments the explanation which they seek, and the inspiration for their policy; instead of doing this, they degrade themselves and our whole Party by probing the hearts of the Central Committee, and trying to discover some despicable diplomacy here.

At the Tenth Party Conferences, the most important questions were dealt with by Comrades Lenin and Bucharin, men possessing the full confidence of the Party; and they said precisely the same as we are saying now.

We need the workers' democracy as much as we need the air, without which we cannot breathe, for without it, it is not possible to create a real proletarian environment for the growth of a proletarian party. And at the time of the Tenth Congress we stated that the realization of this democracy required certain developments in the working class itself.

Why Question Was Raised.

We said: one or two years will pass before we can reckon upon the needed support from the workers.

It is naturally possible to reproach us with: But you missed the right moment all the same; the question should have been raised in April or August, not in September.

We are, however, of the opinion that we did not miss the right moment, that we took timely action, and were the first to raise the question. The first article supplied on this subject—perhaps a very bad article as asserted by many but I do not think it was so very bad—was written, as you know, by me. The whole Party reacted on the article, so that we assume that the moment chosen was not so very unsuitable. There was, of course, no disagreement as to why the question had been raised in September and not in August, the discussion on quite another matter—about which I shall speak further on.

WILL YOU HELP?

Aid Is Needed For Family of Jacob Dolla---4 Years In Jail For Fighting Gary

The DAILY WORKER publishes the following letter from Jacob Dolla without his knowledge or consent, but with the hope that the response to the appeal contained therein will be so generous that its action will be justified.

Jacob Dolla was framed up and railroaded to jail by steel trust detectives because of his activities in the great strike of 1919. Promises to pardon or parole him have been made time after time by the authorities of Pennsylvania after all doubt as to his innocence of the charges on which he was convicted has been removed, but Jacob Dolla still remains in prison while criminals and degenerates of the lowest character have been released.

Must Care for Families.

The DAILY WORKER believes that the least that can be done for working class fighters like Jacob Dolla is to see that their families do not suffer physical want while the vengeance of the employers is being satisfied and it therefore urges its readers to respond to this appeal and to send their contributions for Jacob Dollas' family to the office of this paper, 1640 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill., or to Earl Browder secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, 1009 N. State St. Chicago.

Here is the letter sent to Tom Tippet by Jacob Dolla. Read it carefully and then send in your contribution:

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 4, 1924

Dear Brother Tippett:

I just heard from my wife yesterday, saying she was sick for a few days again. Now she is all right, but our little daughter is sick now and my wife fears she must be operated on. My wife is highly alarmed, saying she has no funds, and she fears if she appeals to put the child under a charity operation, they may take the children from her.

My persecuters hound her as well as they do and did me, because the agents of the steel corporation when I was arrested and after I was sentenced and since then asked her to divorce me, saying they will help her get the divorce and it won't cost her a cent, but she refused to do so.

My wife knows our persecutors control the town and have everything their own way. I myself don't know what to do. I am helpless and innocent here in prison serving for labor's cause because I am a militant worker. For this crime I was railroaded to prison. If I could save my sickly wife and two little children with a drop of water from starvation and ruination, I am not able to do so, as much as I would love to, and willing to rush in in the eleventh hour of grave need to rescue them from complete ruination, but my persecutors won't let me.

My faithful wife is struggling to make ends meet since I was jailed —Oct. 5, 1919—much over four years, and never before was she in graver need than now. Altho she was many times in danger she never asked for help and wrote me not to ask for any help, saying they are satisfied with one warm meal a day as long as I am in prison.

For myself I do not care what comes or goes any more, as I know I am in the clutches of the bloodthirsty steel kings and they will not break their bloody teeth until they have sucked life and blood out of me, but I do worry about my wife and children, as I don't like to see them persecuted because I am their father and husband.

When I was arrested my persecutors told me if God and all the angels came down from heaven it will not help me. I considered them mad because they praised themselves above God's power, but I found they were right on that point.

Brother Tippett, this appeal is not for me but for my wife and children, and I hope you carry this appeal to the hearts of every brother, sister, and comrade.

Brother James H. Maurer and Clinton S. Golden of Pennsylvania are doing their very best; they are fighting a brave battle to secure justice and my freedom so I can go home and support my family. Last Christmas, Brother Golden sent $50 to my family. My wife wrote me that this $50 just came in time; she needed coal and paid the store bill and bought shoes and clothes for our children, saying the children had to go to school in summer clothes.

I hope you will bring this letter to the attention of the workers and T. U. E. L., Chicago Federation of Labor, and others.

In all the world there is not anybody who is in graver need of help than my family at the present time. I don't make any appeal to Brothers Golden and Maurer as I feel they are both doing more than enough. I wish you would tell Comrade Moritz J. Loeb, that I am receiving The DAILY WORKER O. K. It is a great paper and a real fighting weapon for us workers. I don't know who paid the subscription for me, but I am thankful to the comrade who did.

With best wishes and kindest regards, believe me, I am fraternally yours for the solidarity of the farmers and workers everywhere.—JACOB DOLLA, Box A12891, North Side Station, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Children-Parent Organization Puts "Bunco" On Program.

"Bunco" is not necessarily the "bunk." Especially, when it is run for the benefit of a growing working-class children's organization. This was the general opinion of the parents at the Central Committee of the United Workers Sunday Schools at their last session.

Some of the parent-delegates pointed out that in order to build up an effective children's organization, to combat the nationalist and religious dope peddled under the guise of education in Chicago's public schools, money is necessary.

But, that is not the only reason for making this announcement. The children-parents' organization caters to your egoistic as well as your altruistic nature. Do you want to say: "I've had a fine, grand, glorious time," then just come to the bunco party and dance given by the United Workers Sunday Schools of Chicago on Sunday, March 30, at Prudential Hall, North avenue and Halsted street, at 3 p. m. Besides bunco and dancing, refreshments will be served. Tickets are 50 cents payable at the door.

"Perfect" Cook in Germany Gets Bare $7.50 Per Week

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, March 26.—If you are a perfect cook in Germany, the highest wage you may expect is 30 marks per month—about $7.50. If you are a male married servant or butler, you may expect 40 marks or less than $10 per month besides keep.

Girls under 16 experienced as maids must be content with $3.25 per month and keep. A girl who is maid and cook combined can claim $5 per month; a housekeeper who cooks may get $8.50. The schedule for a nurse girl varies from $4.75 to $6.25 a month.

RENEGADE LABOR LEADER HUGHES VISITS AMERICA

This Australian Faker A Rotten Egg

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 26.—William Morris Hughes, Australian renegade labor leader and rabid wartime conscriptionist, has arrived on this continent, for a lecture tour thru the United States in which he will speak of the necessity of converting the Pacific ocean into an armed sea for the protection of the allied sugar and other financial intrests. Hughes pretends that this profiteering dodge is in the interest of the white race against the yellow.

"Sound" Views On Labor.

In announcing Hughes' arrival here, the lecture folder describes this palavering decoy-duck of the bosses, as a labor leader who holds "sound" views on labor. "From the beginning of his career," the announcement prattles, "he has taken a firm stand against radicalism, and in recent years he has displayed undaunted courage in combating the acceptance of bolshevism, syndicalism and other extreme ideas."

Hughes is one of the most outstanding examples of a man's complete betrayal of trust. Beginning life in Australia as an itinerant tinker and umbrella mender, he joined the labor movement and subsequently was elected to union offices. Later he became a member of the New South Wales state parliament and later still a member of the Federal Austrialian parliament.

Betrayed Labor Interests.

In 1915 he was elected prime minister and as head of the Labor party he betrayed its historic ideals by attempting to deliver Australia's manhood into the hands of Great Britain's war junkers. Gathering about him a coterie of other renegades and combining this aggregation with the minority capitalistic party, he proposed a vicious measure of conscription. Lacking the courage to bring in the measure by government proclamation, he granted a referendum on the question, and proceeded to subsidize and intimidate those who dared offer opposition. The referendum having been defeated, he announced that he would never again bring up the question of conscription. Less than 14 months afterwards he brought forward the same proposals for the conscription of Australia's man power, despite his pledge to the contrary.

Fed At Profiteer Trough.

During the war, Hughes as premier of Australia virtually turned over the country to the war profiteers and for his servitude to them was presented with a cash fund of £25,000 (nearly $125,000). This sum was donated anonymously and his acceptance of it was a contributing factor to his defeat within his own party as leader and prime minister.

Hindoos on Trial For Attempting To Free Country

CAWNPORE, India, March 26.—Yesterday a trial was begun against eight Hindoos who were charged with having made an attempt to establish a Communist organization in all of India. Four of the accused were not present.

Material was presented which purported to prove that in 1921 the Hindoo revolutionaries met in Moscow and agreed on a program for Bolshevist propaganda in India.

The accusation was that the Hindoo Communists on trial had utilized workers and farmers' organizations for the purpose of attempting to bring about the separation of India from England and for establishing the complete control of the Indian National Congress.

"To Be or Not To Be" Is Big Question that Faces Greek Monarch

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUCHAREST, March 26.—King George of Greece announced today he will refuse to abdicate the Greek throne until a national plebiscite confirms the action of the assembly at Athens in dethroning the dynasty and declaring a republic.

The Greek constitutionalist committee issued a proclamation today against dethronement of the dynasty, alleging that a "republican militaristic minority" was responsible for the assembly's action. It urges the Greek people to make any sacrifice to support their constitutional rights.

Preparations are under way to hold a national plebiscite.

I. W. W. Sailor Tells What He Saw In Russia Where Seamen Enjoy the Best Conditions In Europe

By M. FILL.

When I saw Bill Haywood on one of my visits to Moscow, he told me, "The one thing which stands out as the most glaring fault of the Industrial Workers of the World of today is that it does not seem able to understand the Workers' Soviet Republic—it does not understand Russia."

Later, when I decided to come back to the States, thinking that other I. W. W. sailors would be sure to respond to the call put out last year for a united front of all transport workers in the joint Committee of Action set up by the Transport Workers affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions in co-operation with those affiliated to the Amsterdam International, I thought that I would be able also to explain Russia to the I. W. W. membership as an ordinary worker like myself saw it, but I was not given the opportunity.

I'm going to get a job on a boat that will take me back to Russia. But before going I want to tell the members of the I. W. W. the simple story of what I, as an ordinary worker, saw when I went to Russia, and how things there compared with conditions I found elsewhere.

The United States government had turned over to the "ARCOS" or All Russian Co-operative Societies, the ship "Tobolsk," which sailed in February 1923 with a crew of which I was a member. When we reached Blythe, England, the London representative of Arcos put the ship up for repairs while the crew was sent on to Petrograd.

Treated to the Best.

The Russian conductor on the train from Riga to Leningrad told us he was instructed by telegram to tell the "crew committee" to phone Zinoviev's secretary when we arrived at Leningrad. We did, and a bunch of automobiles were sent for us in which we sailors, firemen, oilers and so on were driven to what used to be the chief hang-out for rich foreigners, the Hotel International. For us rough working stiffs of the "Tobolsk" crew, the elegant dining room and tables looked very unusual, but the workers are given the best there is in Russia, and hungry as we were we forty-five men enjoyed the supper of steaks, chops and other things to order on a menu like a fine hotel in the States, printed in English and Russian.

It was in the middle of March, an anniversary of the French Commune, and singing crowds filled the streets that night, while Russian gypsies were dancing in the hotel hall-room until 3 a. m., at an entertainment the crew arrived early enough to attend.

Ex-I. W. W. Secretary In Charge.

A few days later I got a job on the "Trans-Baltic," fixing her up for a trip to Odessa, but after the ice broke up I shipped on another, "The Red Profintern." On it and other boats I made a few trips to London and several to Hamburg. Between voyages I made three trips, with free fare, to Moscow, where I met a number of old I. W. W.'s. In Petrograd, Lipshitz, once I. W. W. secretary at Detroit, is secretary of the Petrograd government stores, both wholesale and retail.

By agreement made collectively between the Russian Union and the government, sailors' pay is made in English money as soon as their ship passes Kronstad outward bound. In German waters, where the German sailors get only 60 gold marks, or about $12, Russian sailors are paid five pound ten shillings a month, in English waters they are paid six pound ten shillings and in western waters, ten pounds a month. What time I was out of work in Petrograd, the Union supported me from a fund raised by deductions of from two to five per cent (never over five) from the wages of those employed. The unemployed get from the Union a daily ration of one good warm meal, an additional pound of bread, a comfortable place to live, free theatre tickets by turn and money for subsistence equal to about one pound English money per month.

Seamen's Committees.

On the Russian ships all the old conditons so infamous in the old days of brutality are gone. The captain is a navigator, and there his authority stops. He has nothing to say about the crew, its behavior, organization, hours, food wages or anything else. The collective agreement of the Union with the government covers all that by fixing the general conditions, like wages and hours, and the crew governs itself by an elected committee of five. This Committee sees to supplying quarters and food and regulating the shifts. When a ship reaches a foreign port the crew are paid up and given two weeks advance! Think of that being done on any other boats! The quarters are clean and fitted out with bedding such as no other sailors have. It is taken from houses of the rich of old Russia. In addition every ship has a piano and a large library for the use of the crew. Imagine that on the boats you sail on, you I. W. W. sailors!

Four-Hour Shifts.

Shifts on deck work four hours on and eight hours off, below deck being harder work, three on and nine off. All around, conditions are so much better on Russian boats that hundreds of sailors from Germany and England are continually trying to get into Petrograd and get on a Russian boat. Russia thinks lots of her sailors because they have always been revolutionary. But all workers are given the best that Russia can get. Soviet Russia takes from speculators and gives to the workers. The speculators and Nep-men are social outcasts.

Business Men In Bad.

When a fellow becomes a "business man" in Russia he loses his right to vote and about every other right as well, along with the respect of the people. Everything costs him ten times more than a worker has to pay, until quite often, his real net profit is less than a worker's wage.

For electric light I paid ten kopecks gold, but a speculator paid two rubles. For a room I paid thirty-five kopecks (while working), a speculator paid four rubles, and no better room than mine. The speculator or business man under Nep lives in constant terror, with some reason. His prices are set by the government. If, in order to make something to cover the high rates he is charged for everything, he should overcharge, he may be arrested and exiled and his goods confiscated. They are so deathly afraid of being reported by a member of the Communist Party that they will hardly talk to anyone they do not know. They must keep their mouths shut about politics, about the workers' government, and that is no joke! One "wrong move" and they are arrested.

"Political Prisoners."

In Russia I saw both speculators and priests being taken thru the streets to trial. As soon as they are pinched, speculators often begin to claim that they are "socialists." That's the kind of "political prisoners" American workers are asked to worry about.

It may be well to note, that Emma Goldman, who could not hoodwink the Russian workers, is living in luxury and idleness at the Hotel Plaza at Charlottenburg, the millionaire suburb of Berlin. With an I. W. W. who went to Leavenworth in 1918, I met Emma at Hamburg. My companion, requiring change, turned to Emma Goldman, who astonished us both by searching thru a great roll of English five pound notes for something smaller. Later, he visited her Berlin apartment, where they were waited upon by serving maids with fine foods, champagne and cognac. At the same time, the German workers were starving and begging by tens of thousands around her, and Communists were being pointed out on the streets by Social Democrats for arrest and often secret execution, Emma Goldman was living luxuriously, calmly and safely in the same suburb where Karl Liebknecht was murdered. Her neighbors and companions are German exploiters and the White Guard generals and "nobility" of Czarist Russia. It is fit company for those who lie about the revolutionary workers and peasants.

DAUGHERTY FILM GRAFTING SEEN IN CALIFORNIA

Quimby Fixed Dempsey Picture Deal There

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 26.—Echoes of the thunder storm breaking around official heads in Washington are reverberating in San Francisco. Indictments returned by the Los Angeles federal grand jury in connection with the showing of Dempsey Firpo fight films in California, have revealed that Frank C. Quimby, who first exposed the Dempsey-Carpentier film graft to the committee investigating Secretary Daugherty, also had charge of arranging matters in San Francisco for the Demsey-Firpo films.

"Everything Fixed," They Heard.

Quimby masqueraded under the name of Walter Jackson. Among the local men indicted are W. O. Edmunds, who released the films here, and Maurice Blache, who produced them. Both state they were assured by Quimby (alias Jackson), that "everything was all right with the officials" and that "it was all fixed with the government." Later Blache, who had threatened to make trouble by protesting against producing the film, was given the double cross—payment being stopped on his check for the work.

Fined Only $100.

Perry Oliver, Los Angeles, also indicted, assisted in distributing the film here, and was fined $100 by Judge William Hunt on the plea that he was a war veteran, was ignorant of the law and was merely taking the films thru California to Australia. The usual fine for this offense is ten times $100. The most prominent name under indictment so far is Alexander Pantages, vaudeville magnate. His local manager, J. J. Kluxton, is also named, the Dempsey-Firpo films having been shown at the Pantages theater here.

Attorneys for the indicted men say the trial will lead straight to Washington and will be definitely connected with the charges against Daugherty.

California Building Trades Urge Suits Against Monopolies

SACRAMENTO, Calif., March 26.—The state Building Trades Council of California, in convention here, threatens action against shipping and lumber firms on charges of violating the interstate commerce and anti-trust laws. It is charged that lumbermen and ship owners have discriminated against boats carrying union crews, in an attempt to destroy the Seamen's Union. Complaint has been made to the department of justice.

Other matters taken up by the convention include child labor, state water and power act, labor banks and oriental immigration. President Frank C. MacDonald, in his opening address, touched on the war problem, and stated that "the same conditions which were responsible for the wars of the past still exist, and unless these conditions are remedied future wars are inevitable."

The council's big victory of the year was a judgment against the San Francisco Industrial Association's "American plan" and the practical end of the open shop war in the building trades of that city.

The last labor convention held in Sacramento, the state strategy meeting of the I. W. W., was raided by the police and 23 delegates arrested. The convention of the Building Trades Council was undisturbed by the authorities.

Probe Wallace Crookedness.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Investigation of expenditures in the department of agriculture is about to start in the house. This is the first step to review publicly Secretary Wallace's violation of the packing house control law and the placing of numerous pro-packer employes on the staff of the packers and stockyards act administration.

The Legion Up In Arms

The self-appointed defenders of the country from the American Legion are in a fit of rage over the speech delivered by a young pacifist, Brent Dow Allinson, at the Northwestern University. The fumes emanating from the rage that has overwhelmed these flag-wrapped patriots are poisoning the atmosphere far and wide.

This is not the place for an examination of the fallacies of pacifism, theoretically or otherwise. What is of importance here is that the reactionary capitalist spokesmen and their lackeys have taken up the cudgels for their capitalist masters and have forthwith made a class issue out of it. The Tribune is shrieking vengeance. The Herald and Examiner is swearing volleys at the Communists. The Young Workers League and its publications come in for a special lacing at the hands of this most saffron sheet of capitalist newspaperdom. The Legionaires are threatening to call in the notorious red-baiter Comerford. The black Crowe, state's attorney, is on his hind legs sparring for trouble. Why the rage?

The American Legion officialdom is playing the game of the capitalist exploiters who are responsible for having misled this country into the last imperialist war. These sycophantic lickspittles of the bosses, who are attempting to build another huge strike-breaking apparatus to supplement and strengthen the already existing powerful state strike-breaking apparatus, the government, are in panic because the youth of the country, particularly the working-class youth who do the fighting in wars, are becoming aware of the fraud and delusion of patriotism as preached and practiced by the employing class of this country. The attempt to let loose a wave of flag-loving hysteria and to flood the district with spread-eagle orators are the first answer of these defenders of the enemies of the workingmen and farmers.

These same self-chosen saviors of the country are the ones who always try to wrap themselves in, or hide behind, the stars and stripes in order to smash strikes more effectively, in order to break up the organizations of the poor workers and farmers more easily. Just now they are attempting to utilize their attack on Allinson and pacifism as an entering wedge for a far more deadly onslaught—an attack on workingclass opposition to militarism. Consequently, all men and women who have to work for a living, whether on the farm or in the factory, will not be led astray by this smoke screen which is merely dangerous camouflage for a general attempt to uproot all workingclass resistance to capitalist militarism.

The New Year and Now

In view of the continued disclosures revealing to an open-mouthed nation the exceedingly spotted record of Attorney-General Daugherty and the prevailing opinion in well-informed circles that morally he is somewhat below the level of the white-slavers he has had pardoned for a consideration while class-war prisoners rotted in their cells, it is interesting to read again the new year's statement issued by this red-baiting upholder of the ethical standards of the republic. We reproduce this document for the amusement of our readers, but urge those with weak stomachs to have a large-mouthed receptacle handy while perusing this masterpiece of hypocrisy:

> "It is my opinion that a good New Year's resolution for every American citizen to make and keep is that he will respect and obey the written laws of his country in their letter and spirit, and that he will keep constantly in mind that the law and the constitution are the guarantees of his own peace and happiness, as well as the peace and happiness of his neighbors and the nation. With all our people living in the realization of these truths there is little room for the pessimist in America.
> "While our republic is blessed with high ideals and marked material progress, it is always becoming that every individual contribute to the fullness of his ability in the attainment of a still higher standard of social, political and economical morality. Progress is an elemental factor in the lives of nations and men, which even time can not check. But the kind of progress we should aspire to is that progress which will establish still more firmly the foundations of law, liberty and justice."

To any reader who can name the contribution made by the author of the above to a "higher standard of social, political and economic morality" we will present a drop of genuine Teapot Dome oil.

The American workers and farmers have been fed for years on this and similar brands of hokum; morality, religion, the sanctity of the home and mother love have been the catch-phrases of every oleaginous tool of the exploiting class, but we predict that from now on the market price of such platform phrases is going to drop to zero.

[illegible] and cynical laughter is heard [illegible]

was accustomed hitherto to listen gratefully to the purveyors of superheated atmosphere and in some districts where the going has been unusually tough word comes that a bounty has been placed on the heads of capitalist party politicians.

All of which is encouraging to everyone except the capitalist class and their army of thugs, grafters, mental prostitutes—the horde of camp-followers of capitalism whom the real rulers retain to do the dirty work of fooling and oppressing the masses.

Welcome Evidence

Two facts just disclosed in the Teapot investigation overshadow nearly all of the revelations brought out by the Walsh committee to this day. When Hays, former chairman of the national committee of the republican party, admitted under pressure that Sinclair had donated $75,000 to cover the deficit incurred by the 1920 Harding campaign, and when Sinclair himself confessed to giving another sum of $25,000 to the party which handed him over the Teapot lease, we were introduced to a basic fact explaining the wherefore and the why of the whole mess.

This evidence, tho less sensational than some of the other facts adduced to date, is far more fundamental and is most welcome. The financial facts thus established should make every workingman and poor farmer think. It is evident that such level-headed business men as Sinclair would not invest $100,000 in a business proposition which wasn't sound. The republican party has proved to be a mighty sound source of profit to the capitalists. The Harding-Coolidge administration will go down in history as an example of the most brazen form of capitalist control of government in the United States, in all its vilest and most corrupt forms.

Just now it seems as if the democratic party, competing for the favors of the big interests, will soon be chosen as a better field of investment in the capitalist game of control of government against the workingclass. Some of the employers, like Sinclair, had been financing the two parties for some time. The late Franklin Lane, who was a consummate oil politician, once well said: "The donkey and the elephant feed from the same crib."

By this time it is plain to every worker and farmer that the democratic and republican parties, owned and controlled by big business interests, can only serve the exploiters against the working masses. In practice Gompers' policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies" has been translated into "reward your friends and hang yourselves." The Teapot exposure has thrown the last shovelful of earth over the carcass of this dangerous illusion spread amongst the working people of this country by the enemies of the workingclass masquerading as its saviors.

Class Justice

Sinclair, the hero of the oil holdup, has defied the United States Senate Committee in refusing to answer questions put to him on the witness stand regarding his financing of the republican party. Mr. Sinclair did not even hide behind a plea of incrimination and degradation in accordance with the constitutional provisions. Sinclair just politely told the Walsh committee that the oil matter was no longer any of its business. The oil magnate had with him at his side the well-known corporation attorney Martin W. Littleton, of New York.

The Senate has done nothing effective to make Mr. Sinclair toe the mark. If the law would be applied as it is on the statute books, Mr. Sinclair would be behind the bars today, in a plain, ordinary, common jail. But Mr. Sinclair is touring the country in limousines scot free. Why is this special treatment being accorded to Sinclair?

Why is it that a workingman or poor farmer is immediately thrown into jail when he utters even the mildest words regarding some bought-and-paid-for aristocrat of the robe? There is no doubt that if the recalcitrant witness before the committee were a workingman, he would now be rotting in some filthy federal cell for his challenging the dignity of the United States. Yet, some flannel-mouthed defenders of our present system of government would have the working and farming masses believe that we do not have a capitalist class system of justice in this country.

As matters stand now, Mr. Sinclair can monkey around with and hide behind the intricate technicalities of the legal system for at least a year. The final arbiter will be the Supreme Court, the nest of the blackest of our black reactionaries. In the meanwhile the Senate Committee will have to bite its thumbs; the country will be kept in ignorance of how the republican party was financed in its last national campaign; government by oil will remain supreme; and Mr. Sinclair will have the laugh on the whole outfit that is pretending to hunt his head.

We submit, this is the rankest form of justice handed to the workers and farmers of this country. Yes, we can always count on the courts to run to the rescue of the exploiters when their class interests are in danger.

The Windy City is threatened with another heavy storm this week, weather forecasters predict. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is reported on his way here to fight the injunction menace. Sam is the champion windbag of America.

J. Horace Harding has Frank A. Vanderlip canned from the Continental Can Company for caustic comment on dead namesake.

Significance of June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention - - By C. E. RUTHEN

THE June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention in the Twin Cities (St. Paul or Minneapolis), Minnesota, will be an event of historic importance in the development of the movement for class political action against the capitalist system.

The five years since the end of the war have been a period of development of the Farmer-Labor movement. Under the spur of economic forces which made the farmers and workers more intensively conscious of their exploitation and oppression by the capitalist class many sporadic efforts to organize for independent political action have developed. On June 17th the isolated organizations scattered thruout the country will combine for joint action. The June 17th Convention will be the culmination of the movement which has been developing during the past five years.

Why June 17th Holds Great Promises

Doubters may well ask why the June 17th Convention promises so much when other national conventions called for the same purposes have failed in creating a permanent, mass political organization of farmers and workers.

The old Farmer-Labor party tried in 1920 to create a national organization of farmers and workers, only to see the organization disintegrate, so that today practically nothing remains. The July 3rd Convention last year created the Federated Farmer-Labor party, which, while it has been a powerful organizing force in the Farmer-Labor movement, was not, however, able to organize itself as a nation-wide party.

In view of these experiences, why may we expect different results from the June 17th Convention? What right have we to believe that the June 17th Convention will create a powerful national organization of farmers and workers?

There are a number of reasons:

First, the Farmer-labor movement is more developed. The economic experiences from which it springs have created a wider basis than existed in 1920. Both the farmers and workers have learned new lessons about what the enthronement of a privileged class and governmental power in the hands of that class means to them. Economic forces have pushed forward the movement, it is riper, more prepared for definite organization.

Second, the Twin City Convention is called by already existing organized Farmer-Labor parties. It has as its basis practically all that there is of an organized expression of the movement for farmer-labor political action. The six state Farmer-Labor parties, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana and Washington, give the national organization a foundation such as has not existed before. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party convention had very few organized farmer-labor groups. It was a gathering of representatives of local trade unions more than anything else, and these had to be organized locally after the convention in order to create a party. The existing of six state parties, to which another eight or ten will probably be added before the national convention, gives a solid organization basis for the national party.

Third, this is a presidential year. Political interest runs high. There will be immediate work to be done after the June 17th Convention. To enter into the national campaign means creating election machinery everywhere. There is an incentive to action which did not exist after the Federated Farmer-Labor Party convention. The presidential campaign will create the opportunity to more easily build a permanent organization than would otherwise exist.

Class Party or Third Party.

The fact that the June 17th Convention is being held separate and apart from the July 4th Convention of the Conference for Progressive Political action is a fact of great importance. Strong efforts were made to join the two conventions, by forcing the farmer-labor group to give up its separate convention.

The failure of this attempt to prevent the holding of the Farmer-Labor convention shows that there is already some consciousness of the difference between the Third Party movement and the Farmer-Labor movement in the ranks of the latter.

Before the July 4th Convention of the C. P. P. A. was called the Farmer-Labor convention promised to have a strong admixture of the petty bourgeoisie. In fact, it was a question whether that class would not dominate the convention and take the leadership. The calling of the July 4th C. P. P. A. convention has served the purpose of eliminating a large part of the Third Party group from the June 17th Convention. It is the representatives of the exploited farmers and industrial workers who are coming to the Twin Cities, June 17th. The March 10th Conference already showed this process of elimination. It was the groups who were for a class Farmer-Labor Party who were represented in that conference and the Third Party elements were absent.

This cleansing process makes the opportunity which the June 17th Convention presents greater than it otherwise would have been. With a strong admixture of Third Partyites in the convention it would have been necessary to separately organize the petty bourgeoisie elements from winning the leadership over them. As the June 17th Convention now promises to be, there will be represented the exploited farmers and industrial workers who are ready to organize a class party with a class program and a class leadership to fight against the rule of the capitalists and for a workers and farmers' government.

Fight Against the C. P. P. A.

The immediate work before the farmer-labor group is a strong offensive against the C. P. P. A. The Cleveland Convention can have all the Third Party elements. It can have the representatives of the well-to-do farmers, the small business men and the broken-down old party politicians who are looking for new fields in which to conquer. It can even have the labor aristocrats, the ten thousand a year labor leaders, who are petty bourgeoisie in al ways of living and thinking.

But the C. P. P. A. Clevela ference must not have a sin ploited farmer or industrial without a fight. The exploited and industrial workers belong June 17th Convention.

From now on there will be a gle between the two conventio the support of the masses ploited farmers and industrial ers. While the C. P. P. A, has the rank and file from its conv by refusing to grant represe to local trade unions, it will still hold the leadership over But its past history is against has met three times and thre betrayed the workers and f who are for independent politi tion. Who knows that it w again play the game of old politics and again betray these ers and farmers?

The June 17th Convention h advantage in the struggle wit C. P. P. A. It has a clear cu gram. There is no vacillatio hesitation connected with it. 17th is a convention pledged dependent political action. Th organization and enthusiasm the June 17th Convention. T an active driving force in the ated Farmer-Labor Party a Workers Party. With all the behind the June 17th Con thrown into the fight it will fight for a class Farmer-Labo against the C. P. P. A.

For the members of our Pa see clearly what the June 1 the July 4th Convention st the fact that there is a July vention competing for the su the exploited farmers and i workers should serve as a s to more intensive work. I task to organize the class Labor Party. In the June vention there is the greates tunity yet presented to achi end, and to help the Americ ers and farmers make their fi stride forward to the Work Farmers' government.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

• • • •

The Growth of An Abolitionist.

FOR tho John Brown had always been an abolitionist, tho he had learned from his father, and from his own experiences to hate slavery and its manifold brutalities, it was not until his thirty-fifth year that John Brown showed any more active hatred of it than did hundreds of Ohio farmers around him. Like them, he aided when he could, in the work of the Underground Railroad. Thousands of free Negroes and white abolitionists were engaged in this work of passing fugitive slaves from the South up over the Canadian line, where they were being restored to manhood under the flag of monarchism.

But John Brown, in 1834, began thinking that education of the Negroes might be an important way toward the solution of their problems. He formed plans of starting a school for them. He and his family at this time, tho his wool business was going comfortably, lived in extreme frugality, for they had agreed to save all they could toward the establishment of some such school. For years John Brown dreamed of such ventures as these; and he read all the journals of the small abolitionist groups, and met many of the leaders. He always spoke against slavery in churches or political meetings where he happened to be; and he made friends with many Negroes, and showed a deep interest in all their problems. But not yet had he formed any of those belligerent plans that later were his whole life. He still believed that abolition might be effected by education and peaceful agitation.

Slavery Causing War.

Events were piling up too rapidly against such a view, however. The South grew more aggressive every day. The slave system seemed to carrying everything before it. It had broken the agreement of 1820 by extending slavery above the Mason and Dixon line into Missouri. It had forced the war against Mexico, and had carved out huge new tracts for slavery. It dominated the government of the United States. All of the Presidents were pro-slavery, or they could not hope for office. Congress was pro-slavery, and the Senate, too.

And it was not only in the South that the life of an abolitionist was worth little more than a pinch of snuff. The slavery venom had crept into the North, for powerful economic reasons. The Northern merchants and manufacturers made their profits by selling machinery, and the goods made by machinery, to the agricultural, cotton-raising South. And the South threatened to secede from the union, or at the least, to force a low tariff on imports, and buy its goods in Europe, if the abolitionists were not curbed.

Master Class Triumphant.

There were not many of these abolitionists; but they were outspoken, intense, and made themselves [illegible] They [illegible] age. They were persecuted, tarred and feathered, and in many cases lynched by the Northern mobs.

Then the Southern slave system seemed to have reached a triumphant climax in two events: the first, the passing of the Fugitive Slave Law, in 1851, and the other, the battle over the admission of Kansas as free soil or slave territory.

The fugitive slave law incensed John Brown to fury, as it did every other abolitionist. In was a federal law forced by the South which forced the state officials of every Northern state, however much they might hate slavery, to join in the hunt for runaway slaves and their helpers.

A United States sloop was sent to bring back a slave who had fled to Boston. The abolitionists tried to rescue him, but were foiled, with two men killed. Scenes such as these marked, everywhere in the North, the enforcement of the law. Abolitionists were arrested in communities where everyone of their neighbors were also anti-slavery. Slaves, who had been freemen for years and years in the North, were captured and dragged back to bondage by government officials.

"No Unionism With Slaveholders!"

The abolitionists became more fiery in their desperation. Many of them, like Garrison, began preaching that the North set up a government of its own: "No Union With Slaveholders!" was the slogan.

And the Kansas affair heaped coal on this fire. Under the Missouri compromise, both North and South had agreed to restrict slavery within the states already burdened with it; they had agreed also, that the citizens of a new territory could decide whether or not they wanted slavery or freedom, and would vote their choice when the territory was admitted to the union. In other words, both sides would keep their hands off new territory; and the federal government would not interfere.

Kansas was such a territory; it was being rapidly settled, and in a few years was to come up for admission as a state.

And what was happening was that the South was flooding this territory with spurious settlers; idle, whiskey-drinking ruffians armed with shot guns and revolvers, who were intimidating the Northern settlers who had come, and were stealing the elections from them, by force of arms.

The South was openly breaking its agreement with the North; it was openly declaring its intent to make Kansas another addition to the slave states.

Civil War in Kansas.

To the abolitionists in the North this seemed like the last straw. The South was at its flood tide of domination; it controlled everything in the American union; and now it was moving forward to make its domination permanent by any means; even by the means of murder and intimidation.

Reports of assassinations, whippings, and the burning down of Northern settlers' cabins came every week from Kansas. The abolitionists began raising emigrant companies of Northerners who would go to Kansas to vote for freedom, even tho the South sent its cannon against them.

The Brown family had by now moved to North Elba, New York, a little Adirondack colony of fugitive Negroes who had settled on the lands owned by Gerrit Smith, a wealthy and sincere abolitionist. John Brown had been of much practical service to the Negroes there; but he and his sons, like every other foe of slavery, were deeply shaken by the events in Kansas.

It seemed horrible to everyone, that after twenty years of bitter agitation, slavery was not waning, but was stronger than ever—indeed, was threatening to swallow up even the North.

Strong men were needed in Kansas; and so John Brown's sons went there. They were men of peace; they went there as bona fide settlers, to take up claims, and to cast their vote, when the time came, for freedom. But in two months they were writing letters to North Elba asking their father to send them all the rifles he could collect.

"Send Us Arms."

"We have seen some of the curses of slavery, and they are many," wrote one of the sons in his very first letter home. "The boys have all their feelings worked up, and are ready to fight. Send us arms; we need them more than we do bread."

John Brown collected the arms; and what was more, he delivered them with his own hands. He wound up his business affairs, left his strong, patient wife in charge of the North Elba farm, and went to join his sons in Kansas. The curtain was now rising on the first act of the universal drama called John Brown. The man of God, the tender friend of little slave children, and old, tortured slave mammies, the man of the plough and the counter, the patriarch and citizen was at last ready to become Captain John Brown of Osawotamie; John Brown, the outlaw, the warrior, the soldier of freedom.

At the mere mention of his name border ruffians and swashbuckling adherents of slavery were soon to tremble and even fly, as tho a devil were behind. And he was bowed with cares and rapidly turning gray; and he had never handled fire arms; and he was at the age when other men begin to talk of retiring from business and life, when they long for peace and reflection, in some quiet country scene, away from the world and its problems.

He was fifty-five years old.

40 STRIKERS FACING PICKET CHARGE, FREE

Mass Arrests At Lowenthal Plant Prove Dud

More than forty garment strikers, charged with disorderly conduct, were discharged when they appeared before Judge Samuel H. Trude yesterday in the S. Clark Street police court.

The strikers all decided to stand trial at once knowing the police did not have a case against them. They had been arrested Wednesday evening when C. H. Lowenthal, 224 So. Market St., asked the police to clear the sidewalks of all pickets.

As soon as one group was arrested another group appeared and they were arrested until the police decided that the strikers were numerous enough to keep them working all night.

Keep the Line Full.

Yesterday morning the police officers who had arrested the strikers expressed their opinion that it would not be possible to arrest the picket line of the strikers because they seemed to be able to fill the line with new pickets as soon as one group was arrested.

The coppers who had just the night before manhandled girls while arresting them tried to be pleasant and smiling friends. The girls treated them with the utmost contempt.

That old wheeze of the cops, "we are only carrying out orders" was sprung on the girls a dozen times. The girls disdained answering the coppers.

The Court Routine.

As each case was called the judge asked if any one was appearing against her. "What did this girl do?" Judge Trude would ask.

"She was walking up and down. Picketing," a cop would say.

"Discharged," snapped the judge. "Call the next case."

Some times the cops would vary the process by charging that the girl had called "Scab".

When the judge asked if it was true and the girls denied it they were discharged.

Court Gets Impatient.

Finally Judge Trude grew impatient and told the police not to bring girls into court if they did not have any evidence against them.

Four of the girls who were brought in asked for jury trials. They were all charged with assault. They were: Jennie Lieberman, Anna Rubin, Lena Standish and Anna Brosdick.

Warrant for Slugger.

Judge Trude issued a warrant for the arrest of Samuel H. Fuller, the private slugger for C. H. Lowenthal, charging him with an assault on Jennie Lieberman the day before. But immediately after this she was seized by two deputy sheriffs and hurled off to Judge Sullivan's court to show why she should not be punished for contempt of court for picketing in spite of Dennie's order not to picket.

Jennie was assaulted by Tuller when he tried to give her a copy of the injunction. She refused to take it and Fuller grabbed the injunction in his fist and hit her a terrific blow

PERLSTEIN HAS PLANS FOR 'LABOR' ALDERMAN IN THE CITY COUNCIL

Meyer Perlstein said yesterday that he is considering asking Alderman Oscar Nelson and the other members of organized labor in the city council to take the case of the strikers up with that body soon. He did not say what plans he had in view.

"Wait, we are considering that matter. At the proper time we will make our plans public," he said.

His answers to questions indicated that he was well aware that much could be done for the strikers' cause by Nelson and others in sympathy with the strikers in the city council.

'DENNIE' INSULTS PETER SISSMAN, STRIKE LAWYER

Bosses' Judge Acts Like Spoilt Baby.

Disgracing the courtroom yesterday afternoon, Judge Sullivan indulged in a tirade of abuse against Defense Attorney Peter Sissman.

"Dennie's" frothing occurred when Sissman presented $500 in Liberty bonds each for the release of Jennie Lieberman and Lena Morvitz who had just been brought in by deputy sheriffs on attachments in contempt of court proceedings. Sullivan first began snarling that the papers accompanying the bonds were not properly drawn and that the girls could not be released. Sissman and Associate Counsel William Cunnea insisted that the bonds were all right.

"Let Them Stay In Jail."

Sullivan then exclaimed that it was a matter of indifference to him whether the girls spent the night in the cell or were released on bonds.

Then the judge began abusing Sissman, saying that when the court had ruled in an earlier case that the girls could not be released on their own recognizance that he had acted like a baby and had not gone on with the case.

Sissman's refusal to recognize the court's ruling by acting in the former case had been for the sake of protecting the record so that an appeal could be taken to a higher court later. Had he accepted Sullivan's ruling he would have been handicapped afterwards in appealing unjust convicitions.

Sullivan after more abuse said that he didn't want Sissman to appear in the case if he did not behave to suit him ("Dennie".)

"Dennie" Still Not Interested.

Continuing to assert that he had no interest in whether the girls stayed in jail or not he was interrupted by Defense Counsel Cunnea who said that it was a matter of interest to him and that he insisted the girls be released.

At this moment Freda Reicher was brought in on another attachment case and the judge showed his anger at having to do some more work that afternoon.

However, after more yapping by His Honor the girls were released.

More cases are coming up today.

WON'T LET ROXIE GIVE NAMES OF FIVE MEN IN $33,000,000 DEAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The Senate Daugherty Committee today refused to let Roxie Stinson name the five men she said yesterday made $33,000,000 in a Sinclair oil deal.

Daugherty's counsel intimated that "The Name of a President of the United States was among them" and in a hot clash with Senator Wheeler, demanded the right to go into the matter.

Wheeler was adamant and tho it at one stage looked as tho he and Former Senator Chamberlain might come to blows, Daugherty's lawyers were not permitted to open the question which the committee itself had decided not to go into because Daugherty was not involved.

Her cross examination was relatively brief and unimportant and her story was not shaken by Paul Howland's questioning.

The committee, before putting her on the stand, asked President Coolidge to order Daugherty to turn over files relating to gun-running to Mexico during the Cantu revolution in 1921, which Daugherty is withholding on the ground of public policy and after Miss. Stinson finished, questioned a Department of Justice file clerk to learn why he had not furnished daily reports as directed by the committee, on data required in the inquiry.

Daugherty, meanwhile, cancelled a proposed trip to Florida and gave out word that he would have an "interesting" statement during the afternoon.

Malleable Iron Combine Indicted Under Trust Law

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio., March 27.—Indictments against 42 large malleable iron manufacturing corporations and certain of their officers, charging violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in restraint of competition and establishment of a monopoly, was returned by a federal grand jury here this afternoon.

Thru the American Malleable Castings Association, the 47 firms, the indictment charged, were enabled to carry out the "unlawful purposes of the combination." Price fixing, elimination of competition and division of customers were charged in the action.

The 47 concerns control 75 per cent of all the malleable iron castings of the country, it was alleged.

MORGAN REFUSED RESIGNATION OF FRENCH PREMIER

Poincare to Form New Cabinet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, March 27.—J. P. Morgan, from his yacht on the Mediterannean Sea turned down his thumbs on the resignation of Raymond Poincare and demanded that his favorite French lackey get back on the job in double quick time else the French would be given a first class exhibition in watching how fast a franc would sink. Poincare obeyed his master.

This was the interpretation placed on the sudden change of attitude on the part of Poincare whose "irrevocable resignation was withdrawn shortly after Morgan's radio message reached Paris.

France is tightly in the grip of the Morgan bankers group and the big industrialists, and a small matter like an unfavorable vote will not be allowed to spoil their business. Formerly French governments took a defeat seriously but it is no secret that the big industrialist only tolerate the parliament impatiently, and for two cents they would establish a dictatorship with Poincare as Mussolini and rid themselves of the nuisance of flirting with parliamentary majorities.

Poincare consulted with men who will be ministers in his reconstructed government and visited Millerand late this afternoon, informing the president that he would resume the office of premier.

Poincare, after resigning yesterday, following his government's defeat in the chamber on a vote on pensions, found president Millerand strongly opposed to his resignation. The premier agreed to consider retaining office and re-forming his cabinet.

France Still Holds.

The franc continued strong despite the government crisis, opening at 18.44 to the dollar.

Poincare's resignation resulted from defeat of a government measure in the chamber of deputies by a margin of seven votes. The premier was not present, but Count de Lesteyrie, finance minister, made his motion regarding widows pensions a question of confidence and was defeated, 271 to 264, more than 200 deputies voting by proxy.

It is expected that Count de Lesteyrie will be among the missing when the new cabinet is announced.

MacDONALD'S GOVERNMENT FACES CRISIS

Privy Council Called To Deal With Strikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 27.—The MacDonald government faces today the most serious crisis which has confronted it since it took office and which is reflected in the calling of the privy council to consider passing a national emergency act virtually declaring a state of siege thruout Great Britain.

The strike of tramway workers and bus drivers and the entry of the subway employes into the struggle is only partially responsible for government concern. The miners' strike looms in the near future and the shipyard employers have answered the demands of the workers with a threat of a lockout.

Say D. O. R. A. Decided On.

Some newspapers here contend that the MacDonald government has already decided to invoke the emergency powers act of 1920 and that the privy council meeting is merely for obtaining the formal consent of the king. King George is at Knowsley for the Grand National steeplechase and the privy council will meet there to save him the inconvenience of coming to London.

The emergency powers act is practically the same as the infamous defense of the realm act called DORA for short and which aroused the bitter opposition of the British workers. It allows the government to mobilize the army and navy personnel for the purpose of carrying on public services, to commandeer men and materials and exercise complete control over the lives of the people.

The last time the act was used was in the coal strike of 1920.

Unionists Opposed.

That any attempt to utilize the emergency act in the present situation will bring unalterable opposition to the MacDonald government from all sections of the trade union movement is conceded even by government supporters.

The second reading of the London traffic bill, which has divided the government forces, comes up in the house of commons today. Many liberals have refused their support of this measure as have almost all of the trade union element of the laborites, and the government is depending, strangely enough, upon tory votes to save the measure. Even some of the tories are doubtful concerning the drastic provisions of the measure.

PENROSE GOT QUARTER MILLION; DAUGHERTY, HAYS GO FOR $25,000

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 27.—Many new dashes of color were given the story about the big money deal at the republican convention in 1920, when it is claimed $1,000,000 was passed out to secure the presidential nomination for Warren G. Harding.

This new color was given the hearings before the senate oil committee by Al Jennings, who became famous years ago as train robber, but since turned evangelist and politician.

Al Jennings said that part of the $1,000,000 was spent as follows:

To the late United States Senator Boise Penrose, of Pennsylvania, $250,000.

To Will H. Hays, former postmaster general, $25,000.

To Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general, $25,000.

To "Manning of Ohio," $25,000.

While the republican boss and senator of Pennsylvania therefore sold at a quarter million, the postmaster general and the attorney came cheap at $25,000.

Will Not Form Third Party, Say Aids

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27.—Senator LaFollette's program for an independent campaign —completely apart from any party whatsoever—is matured and has been put under way on a national scale. Organization has now progressed in some states as far as township and city precincts.

This information, coming from a source close to the Wisconsin senator, bears out earlier forecasts of LaFollette's intended course.

In addition to these, they claim that the disturbed conditions of this unparalleled political year, they have a chance to edge in on Illinois, Ohio and even Pennsylvania.

Already, the LaFollette workers have envisioned enough support for him to prevent any one else obtaining the required majority in the electoral college. That would throw the election into the house, where the vote is by states and a majority is required. The situation there is very close and the group of states where LaFollette is strongest would hold the balance of power.

Should the house fail to elect and the matter go to the senate where the vote is by individual senators, LaFollette again would stand in the way of election of any one not agreeable to him.

Coolidge Nursing Courage to Tell Bold Political Brigand, Daugherty That He Must Quit the Cabinet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Harry Daugherty is expected to quit his office within twenty-four hours, it was learned today on reliable authority. As the DAILY WORKER correspondent was informed yesterday, the Daugherty case is keeping "Cautious Cal" awake nights and prominent republicans—not from Ohio—are not giving the president a chance to forget the attorney general.

Outside of William Randolph Hearst and Arthur Brisbane, practically every other prominent person in the country, not directly affiliated with the criminal ring of which Daugherty was the master mind, believes now that the attorney general will not even have an empty oil barrel to walk away in, if he stays much longer in the Capitol.

New revelations are gushing up daily, drenching the whole republican party with a substance that no politician would care to apply a match to when the election storm is raging next fall. After Daugherty the next to hit the toboggan will be William J. Burns, his criminal associate.

WICHITA, Kan., March 27.—Clifford C. Histed of Kansas City today purchased the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railroad for $3,000,000 at an auction ordered by Federal Court to pay indebtedness.

DAUGHERTY IS BRANDED AS A CRIMINAL AID

Unmask Family As A Nest Of Crooks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27.—Indictment of Mal Daugherty, brother of the attorney general, for contempt because of failure to produce records before the Daugherty investigating committee was sought in a motion today by Senator Wheeler, chief prosecutor.

President Coolidge today was requested formally to force Attorney General Daugherty to turn over to the senate committee investigating Daugherty the Department of Justice files on Mexican gun-running in 1921.

This action was unanimously voted today in an executive session.

A flat refusal by Daugherty to furnish the documents on the ground that it was "inimical to the public interest," caused the committee to "go over his head" to the president.

Found Gun Piker's Method.

Al Jennings, ex-bandit and politician, charged before the senate oil committee that the late Jake Hamon put up $1,000,000 to elect President Harding in exchange for the secretaryship of the interior.

Jennings also charged that $250,000 was paid to the late Bois Penrose, Republican senator from Pennsylvania, in the same "deal."

Involved with Hamon, Jennings said he believed, were certain big oil men from Oklahoma, including Harry F. Sinclair.

Jennings said he got his information from Hamon himself. He and Hamon were intimate friends.

Hamon told him long before the convention that Harding was to be nominated and that he (Hamon) "would be the biggest man in the United states."

The deal was finally concluded in a hotel room in Chicago the night before Harding was nominated, Jennings said. He mentioned the name of Attorney General Daugherty as one of those present. Daugherty was pre-convention campaign manager for Harding.

Hamon Presidential Timber.

Telling of events just prior to the Harding nomination, Jennings said:

"In Hamon's room at the hotel, I lodged with him and we talked all night. He said he wanted me to come back and run for governor. He said

HOUSE SPLITS WITH SENATE ON CASE OF FALL'S SON-IN-LAW

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Formal notification from the House to the Senate to "mind its own business" was in prospect today as the split between the two bodies widened over the suggested impeachment of C. C. Chase, A. B. Fall's son-in-law.

House leaders have already reached an informal decision not to press the impeachment, suggested by a unanimous vote of the Senate. The House judiciary committee did not even dignify the Senate resolution with consideration when it met yesterday.

The Chase impeachment suggestion has brought to a head a spirit of hostility between the two houses which grows out of the fact the House fears the Senate is going to cause a summer session of Congress.

The House is well along with its business and could easily adjourn in June, but the Senate has scarcely begun.

Regarding the Senate's suggestion for Chase's impeachment, House sentiment seems to be that it would be a waste of time and money to impeach a minor official. Chase's resignation as collector of customs at El Paso has been accepted by the Treasury, following notification by Secretary Mellon that this would not hamper impeachment proceedings.

JOHN L. LEWIS O. K.'S ANDERSON, INJUNCTION JUDGE

Tells Coolidge Author Of 1919 Writ Suits Him

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 27.—The fact that John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers, has sold out body and soul to capitalist politicians was shown today when he told President Coolidge that he would make no objection to the appointment of Judge A. B. Anderson, of Indianapolis, to succeed Judge Francis E. Baker as judge of the United States Circuit Court.

Judge Anderson was the author of one of the most vicious injunctions in the history of American labor. His injunction, issued in the fall of 1919 against the United Mine Workers' Union, restrained the international union and its branches from using their funds to aid the great coal strike that was then going on and from abetting the struggle in any way.

"Cannot Fight Government."

Local miners' unions ignored the infamous writ and continued their fight until the operators were finally forced to yield them an average increase of 27 per cent over their former wages. John L. Lewis and his international officials, however, accepted the injunction and laid down to the courts and the employers.

"We cannot fight the government," announced Lewis. Even Samuel Gompers afterwards expressed amazement at Lewis' cowardice in this crisis.

Seeks Vice Presidency.

Lewis' surrender to the Coolidge politicians as regards the appointment of this labor hating judge is interpreted as part of his plan to capture the vice-presidential nomination, as running mate with Coolidge in the fall elections.

Chicago Plumbers Win $1.25 an Hour And 44-Hour Week

A two-year agreement at $1.25 an hour has been signed with employers by Chicago units of the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada.

The $1.25 rate is below the wages paid in a number of other middle western cities. It works out to $10 per eight-hour day. St. Louis plumbers are getting $14 a day and East St. Louis plumbers $13 per eight-hour day, according to Chicago officials of Local 130.

Senator LaFollette Ill With Pneumonia; Condition Satisfactory

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27.—Senator LaFollette, progressive leader, has developed pneumonia, it was announced here today.

A statement by LaFollette's doctors follows:

"Senator LaFollette has developed pneumonia. His present condition is satisfactory. (Signed) Dr. C. C Marbury, Dr. T. S. Lee, Dr. B. M. Randolph."

Harry Gannes Speaks To Maplewood Young Workers on Scouts

Harry Gannes, well-known newspaper reporter spoke last night at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., on "Who Owns the Boy Scouts and the Y. M. C. A.?" The meeting was held under the auspices of the Maplewood Branch of the Young Workers League.

Must Kneel To Orthodoxy.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Put under ban by Bishop Manning, because of barefoot dances performed in defiance of his order, wardens and vestrymen of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie must decide whether they prefer independence of ritual to episcopal visitations administrations.

Still Looking for Bergdoll.

BERLIN, Mar. 27.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, who may—or may not—be returning to the United States, was not among the passengers on the boat train that left to make connections with the steamer Deutschland today. He could, of course, board the vessel at Cuxhaven.

Japs Drown in German Steamer.

DUNGENESS, England, March 27.—Twenty-three Japanese sailors are believed to have been drowned when the German steamer Heimdal struck and sank the Japanese cargo boat Tokufuku Maru in dense fog off the Kanish headland at midnight. Sixteen of the Tokufuku Maru's crew were saved.

Railroads Have Dough.

ST. LOUIS, March 27.—Ten million dollars worth of equipment, including 25 locomotives, 50 steel passenger cars and 4,250 freight cars, have just been purchased by the Southern Railway for delivery in the next few months, it was announced here.

ALDERMAN OSCAR NELSON, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, did not raise his voice for the striking garment workers in the city council on Wednesday afternoon.

Alderman Nelson said that the DAILY WORKER could not make him speak. He declared he was not taking his orders from the DAILY WORKER.

Alderman Nelson said he would get his orders from Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in charge of the strike.

• • • •

It is said there are three kinds of servants.

The efficient servant knows what to do and does it.

One not so efficient has to get his orders and then does it.

The third kind not only waits for his orders but has to be watched while he is carrying them out, otherwise he would fail to do what he has been told to do.

• • • •

Oscar Nelson is some kind of a servant of the working class. Otherwise he has no business in the labor movement.

We believe that the workers are finding out just how Oscar Nelson is, or is not, serving the workers in this strike.

If Oscar Nelson were a good servant of the workers, in this case the striking ladies' garment workers, he would, as alderman, not have waited for any kind of orders. He would have gotten busy, instinctively, the first day the strike started. But Oscar Nelson did not do that. So he is not the first kind of servant.

• • • •

If Oscar Nelson were the second kind of servant of the working class, he would have gotten busy in the city council at the first suggestion, no matter what the source from which it came. But he is even a bad second kind of servant. He not only is balky at the DAILY WORKER'S suggestion. He even resents them.

Oscar Nelson thus shows himself the third, or worst kind of servant, the workers could have in the city council. He must be kicked into doing anything, and he must be watched while he is doing it.

• • • •

Oscar Nelson, as attorney, is employed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. He is under the direction of Meyer Perlstein, in charge of the strike. Perlstein is his boss. Perlstein can make him get on the job for the strikers in the city council. At least Alderman Nelson says he will take Perlstein's orders.

• • • •

Perlstein's duty is clear.

Let him give Oscar Nelson orders to put up a fight for the strikers in the city council.

Let Perlstein get around to the city council and see that Oscar Nelson carries out the orders given him.

Striking Miners of West Virginia Need Clothing and Food

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARREN, Ohio, March 27.—The city central committee of the Workers Party had a letter from the United Mine Workers of West Virginia appealing for shoes, clothing and canned goods. They have been on strike there for some time, so that help would be welcome there as soon as possible.

I hope every one answers this appeal, and gives what they can, when you all know what it means to them. The different branches of the Workers Party here will try and do their best in this case, and I hope everyone will try and help them to succeed in their efforts.

Most of you know what it means to stand in a strike and fight for your rights, altho great poverty threatens you. And what it means to receive help when all hope is almost gone. This little help will give these comrades more fighting ability to continue their fight to a victorious end. So once more—do your bit to help these comrades to win this fight.

Pope Crowns Two of His Trusted Agents With Red Headgear

ROME, March 27.—Amid all the gorgeous splendor and pageantry of Roman Catholicism, Cardinals Hayes and Mundelein today received from Pope Pius XI the red hats that signify their elevation to the rank of princes of the church.

St. Peter's, where the ceremony was performed, was jammed with a tremendous throng, including hundreds of Americans privileged to watch their countrymen, who started together as poor boys on the lower east side of New York, receive the highest honors within the power of the pontiff to bestow.

Cardinal Mundelein received his red hat at 10:42 a. m., Cardinal Hayes his at 10:45.

Don't Believe Huerta Is Back.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—Officials of the Obregon government here today placed little credence in the widely circulated report that Adolfo De LaHuerta, revolutionary chieftain, landed here last night after fleeing from Mexico. The report was circulated following the docking of the Mexican steamer San Francisco.

New Yorkers In Hike.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Harlem English branch of the Young Workers League is holding a hike to Palisades Park this Sunday morning. Comrades should assemble at 9 a. m. at Fort Lee Ferry: In the evening a social will be held at our headquarters, 2042 5th avenue (Finnish Co-operative Hall), corner 126th street. A good time is promised all.

HIRAM NOSES CALVIN OUT IN S. D. PRIMARIES

Teapot Cabinet Head Claims Victory.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SIOUX FALLS, Mar. 27.—Hiram Johnson is forging ahead of Coolidge in the primary contest for the republican state delegation to the national convention in Cleveland. The last returns from 1,469 out of the 1,825 state precincts show Johnson to be leading Coolidge by the narrow margin of 298 votes; 36,585 for the Californian senator against 36,287 for the president.

Hostile to Coolidge.

The Johnson supporters are claiming the victory because their white hope has come from behind and nosed out Coolidge. The returns now coming in are distinctly hostile to Coolidge. These precincts cover the furthest rural counties of the states where the farmers are disgusted with the government and seeking to give vent to their dissatisfaction in every way possible.

Already the Coolidge supporters are preparing excuses to explain away the impending likely defeat. Bascom Slemp, the president's political wire puller, now his private secretary, and other active Coolidge workers have already announced that the South Dakota results will not matter either way as the Coolidge nomination at the republican convention is only a matter of formality. They are boasting of the fact that the reactionary clique dominating the republican party has to date succeeded in lining up for the Teapot "principal," the chief executive of the country, more than enough delegates to secure his nomination on the first ballot.

Restoring Johnson's Shine.

The Johnson supporters are jubilant over the chances of success they have here. They are especially anxious to restore the losses suffered by Johnson in North Dakota. The defeat in North Dakota has done irreparable harm to the Johnson boom. These managers of the fake progressive from California are looking forward anxiously to a victory in South Dakota to restore some of the shine on the boom of their candidate.

Observers here feel convinced that no matter who wins the republican nomination, it will not be much of a victory for either. The great mass of farmers and workers are utterly dissatisfied and thru with the republican party.

40 STRIKERS FACING PICKET CHARGE, FREED

Arrests at Lowenthal's Prove Boomerang

on the chest knocking her down. Then he had her arrested for assault.

Helen Tippy and Thomas Holland, who witnessed the assault, both residents of Hull House, were among those discharged by Judge Trude yesterday.

Keep the Courts Busy.

The entire morning session of Judge Sullivan's court was taken up with hearing the testimony of Nat Stein and Abraham Heller, dress manufacturers. Eleven respondents were on trial and Nat Stein said that he saw all of them on the picket line since they were in court the last time.

He said that he had not known them before the strike but got to know them from seeing them on the picket line. He said that he himself did not go in the street but stood in the doorway of his factory at 328 S. Market street and from there saw them.

Stein Gets Rattled.

Under cross examination by Peter Sissman, attorney for the unionists on trial, Stein grew rather rattled. He was not so sure that he saw all the respondents on the picket line. Then he admitted he didn't know which ones he had seen and which ones he had not seen.

He was insistent that he had not left his doorway to watch the pickets. Then he said that he had seen some of the strikers on trial at Jackson and Market streets which is a little way from his factory.

"But that was all right," said Stein, "I was there passing on my way to the factory."

Poor Stein did not seem to realize that Dennie's injunction was not for the purpose of preventing bosses from walking the streets. Dudley Taylor had neglected to tell Stein that the writ only tried to keep workers off the streets.

Not So Sure After All.

Heller testified to the same effect. Yes, Heller had seen all the respondents on the picket line. Yes, every day of the strike. That is every day but Sunday.

Yes, he saw them there yesterday. He was sure about that till he was told that the strikers on trial had been in court the day before till 4:30 in the afternoon.

Then Heller was not so sure about what he had seen. He said it might have been the day before. But the strikers were in court all day Tuesday. Well, well, he must be mistaken but he had seen all of them on S. Market street at various times. Often, sure!

After a morning spent in hearing such testimony Sullivan adjourned court.

Dudley Taylor's efforts to connect the strikers on trial with picketing in the strike district came as a surprise to everybody in court after his furious attempts to build up a conspiracy charge against all strikers the day before.

Many persons thought that he let the conspiracy angle drop in order that the defense might not get a chance to put him on the stand and ask him a few pressing questions about the bosses and their conspiracy to get all the workers in the garment industry who are on strike into jail.

May Put Dudley on Stand.

If Taylor attempts at any future time to try to make a conspiracy case out of the contempt trials it is expected that the defense will have him take the stand and try to get from him what he knows. They expect that he will fight every attempt to get at his knowledge because he knows much more than he is willing to tell.

Everybody knows that if a conspiracy exists among the bosses little Dudley is the brains and backbone of it.

Now Use Conspiracy Charge.

Dudley Taylor, attorney for labor-hating employers generally, and for the open shop garment bosses in particular, today showed that he and his paymasters are using the same tactics against the garment strikers as were used recently against the members of the upholsterers' union.

Arrested about 1:00 a. m. yesterday morning, William Katzin, Harry Rosen and Oscar Simon—striking garment workers—are to be arraigned in the Dexter avenue police court and charged with "conspiracy to violate an injunction"—the injunction in question being the one issued against the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, its officers and members.

The three strikers were taken to the office of State's Attorney Crowe, questioned, and sent back to jail. When the attorney for the union appeared with a request for a writ of habeas corpus the state's attorney sent notice over that conspiracy charge had been filed.

Labor Charges Conspiracy.

The arrest of the three strikers and the appearance of a conspiracy charge in the war against the Ladies' Garment Workers Union followed the statement made yesterday by Dudley Taylor that "a widespread conspiracy existed to violate the injunction."

"There is a conspiracy," say union officials, "but it is a conspiracy on the part of the state's attorney, the garment bosses and their legal aids to railroad strikers to jail as the upholsterers were railroaded."

THE POWER COLUMN

FIGURES SPEAK

READING, PA., leads in the drive for 10,000 new subscribers by June 15th having reached 27% of the quota assigned to it. Warren, Ohio, follows close behind with 24%. Brooklyn with a quota of 200 follows having reached 21.5% of its quota and Patterson, N. J. follows with 20%.

Cities with larger quotas show a much smaller percentage, due to the fact, no doubt that they have not yet been able to muster up all their forces for the drive.

However, many of the larger cities must immediately put more force behind the campaigns in their territories if they hope to reach the quotas assigned to them, and we are sure that no city will feel justified to fall below the quota assigned to it.

With the DAILY WORKER firmly established in its own home and with three months of successful existence, under energetic and intelligent guidance of the city or branch agents, there should be no difficulty for any city in which we have a DAILY WORKER connection to reach the quota assigned to it and with a little extra effort to go far beyond the quota.

The DAILY WORKER is here to stay. It has become known to the workers of America. It has already taken part in major struggles of the workers of America as in the United Mine Workers' Convention and now the great International Ladies' Garment Workers' strikes in Chicago and other needle trades centers. It has boldly and unflinchingly told all there is to be told about the great Teapot Dome exposure. It is the only real workingclass newspaper in America.

You know what the DAILY WORKER means to you.

You know what possibilities it offers to our movement. And now it is up to you, up to every reader of the DAILY WORKER, every branch and every city agent, every militant worker, to enlist their fellow workers and shopmates into the strong army of DAILY WORKER readers. With the special offer of two months for a dollar to new subscribers, no one, who calls himself a militant, can fail to secure several new readers.

To the DAILY WORKER city agents, we say: Look over the Honor Roll. Look at the percentage of quota reached by your city, and if it is not in proportion to your forces, set about immediately to remedy any defects or laxity which may exist in your organization. See that the branches in your city have elected their agents. Be always on the lookout for new ways of carrying on the work, of making the work more interesting and productive.

Exert all your efforts to get the 10,000 new subscribers by June 15th.

DAUGHERTY GETS BRANDED AS AN AID TO CRIMINALS

Unmask His Family as Nest of Crooks

he would get behind me and I would be elected. We took a few drinks of four roses. I asked him what was behind his mind. He said 'I'm going to be the biggest man in the United States.' He said something about $100,000 for a campaign for me. He mentioned Harry Sinclair and some other oil men."

"What else did he say?"

"He said he had already been East and talked with Boise Penrose and that he could name the next president of the United States.

"He said Harding would be the nominee of the convention. 'Money talks and I'm going to put up the money,' he said."

Jennings charged that Will Hays and Attorney General Daugherty each got $25,000 in the "deal."

No Collateral Needed.

Reversing its announced program, the committee today called Leroy W. Baldwin, president of the Empire Trust Company of New York, as the first witness.

Baldwin brought records of transactions between the Republican National Committee and his bank. He said the bank made a loan on Sept. 9, 1920, of $100,000. On Jan. 9, 1921, $5,000 was paid. In April $10,000 was paid. On December 8, 1923, the bank was paid $85,000. On April 5, 1923, the bank again loaned $166,620.85. That loan was paid off December 14, 1923.

"What collateral was there for this loan?" Walsh asked.

"We never had any collateral for any of these loans. Some government bonds were, I believe, delivered in the first instance, altho it was not used entirely as collateral. They had a par value of $75,000."

"From what source did the bonds come?"

"I think they came from Mr. Hays."

"Did you know about any payment of $75,000 by Harry F. Sinclair?"

"No."

Baldwin was then excused.

Al Jennings was called to the stand.

Jennings said he lived in Venice, Cal. He lived in Oklahoma 20 years and was an intimate friend, he said, of Jake Hamon. He attended the Republican National Convention in Chicago in 1920 with Hamon.

The rattle of movie cameras startled Jennings and he turned to the press table and remarked:

"I'd rather face a batter of sheriffs."

Names Pirate Crew.

Continuing his story, Jennings said:

"Hamon told me Harding would be nominated the next day and it would cost him a million dollars. He said Penrose was to get $250,000.

"It had been agreed that day," Hamon told me, by Will Hays, Harry Daugherty and somebody else that Hamon was to be secretary of the interior."

"Has the information Hamon gave you come true?" Spencer asked.

"Pretty well."

"Did Hamon tell you what he was going to do as secretary?"

"Yes, he said he was going to get all the oil lands the democrats had left."

"Who did Hamon give money to in connection with the convention?"

"He said he gave $25,000 to Daugherty, $25,000 to Will Hays, $250,000 to Penrose and $25,000 to a man named Manning—or something like that—form Ohio.

"Hamon believed that money would buy everything. It seems to have been pretty well founded in some instances.

"Hamon Lacked Ideals."

"I liked Jake Hamon in spite of his lack of ideals. He was the only lawyer in Lawton, Okla., who extended a helping hand to me when I came out of prison.

"Jake expected to be president of the United States some day."

"On what ticket did you plan to run for governor?" Senator Bursum, New Mexico, asked:

"Democratic."

"Why did Hamon want you to run on the Democratic ticket?"

"That didn't make much difference in Oklahoma."

What did Hamon want you to run for governor for?" Bursum asked.

"He wanted me to disrupt the Democratic party so he could carry the state for Harding. Well, I didn't go into the deal. Harding did carry the state. Hamon said that cost him a half a million dollars."

"Wasn't Hamon for Wood?"

"No. He never liked Wood."

Jennings was then excused.

Senator Spencer announced this afternoon that he had issued subpoenaes for Wilbur Marsh, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, George White, Ohio, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, John Walsh, brother of Senator Walsh, and E. L. Doheny, oil man who admitted he loaned Fall $100,000.

Fear Yugo-Slavs.

ATHENS, March 27.—Despite the denials from Belgrade, reports persist that 50,000 Yugo-Slav troops, including cavalry and artillery, are concentrated in the Kenal district for the purpose of occupying Greek Macedonia in case Greece becomes a republic.

Powerful Union Trust Co. Passes Buck to Tribune

TRIBUNE MUM ON SCHOOL LEASE STEAL

Union Trust Partner In Big Land Scandal

High officials of the Union Trust Company, that prides itself on being one of the "three oldest" banking institutions in Chicago, have decided to pass the buck on the school land lease scandal to the Tribune.

They haven't got a word to say to the DAILY !WORKER since Vice President and Secretary R. F. Chapin declared that to talk might get the Tribune into trouble.

Mr. Chapin told the DAILY WORKER, after being cornered on his statement that to talk might make "trouble for the Tribune," that all further information must come from his superior, Vice-President C. R. Holden.

Passing the Buck.

Vice-President Holden was reached by the DAILY WORKER, but he declared that he had heard nothing about the charges made that the Tribune was keeping secret the amount involved in the transfer of its school land lease to the Union Trust Co. He had not read the charges that had appeared in the DAILY WORKER. He referred the DAILY WORKER to President H. A. Wheeler.

Vice-President Holden, however, before cutting off his interview with the DAILY WORKER, offered the information that anyone lies who says that the Union Trust Company paid the Tribunb an unusual sum for the old Tribune Building at Dearborn and W. Madison Sts., and for the lease on the school land on which the building stands. He thought the sum paid was low, but he would not say how much was paid. He passed the buck to President Wheeler.

The president of this exclusive Chicago financial institution, that prides itself on being located in "the very heart of Chicago's business center," received the DAILY WORKER with overcoming politeness.

President Wheeler confessed he had not heard about the mass meeting at the Auditorium Theatre where a motion had been made demanding that the Tribune and the Union Trust Company make public the amount involved in the transfer of the school children's land. He had not seen the DAILY WORKER, but he would be glad to read what it had to say.

"I am not in a position to talk about this deal," he said. "It is for the seller (The Tribune) to say what the property was sold for. These facts are all on record and open to the public."

Sum Kept Secret, Says Haley.

Miss Margaret Haley, speaking for Chicago's school teachers, declaring that the amount involved in the transfer is being kept a secret, that it has not appeared in the records.

When this was pointed out to him he would only say that, "It is a matter entirely for the Tribune, not for us."

"If the facts in this deal are open to the public why doesn't the Tribune publish them in answer to the charges made by the DAILY WORKER, and by Miss Haley?" President Wheeler was asked. "Would you urge the Tribune to publish these facts? Don't you think the workers of Chicago are entitled to this information?"

"Of course, they are," said President Wheeler. "But it is for the seller to give these facts. And if you want to tell them you can get the facts from the county records," he concluded, again dodging the fact that had been pointed out to him that this intersting feature had been eliminated from the records before filing.

President Wheeler added that he was not responsible to the people of Chicago, he was only responsible to the bank of which he was the head.

The Tribune Building, according to the literature issued by the bank, is now the Union Trust Building, and the scandal surrounding the Tribune school land lease steal is something that the officials of the bank would like to be considered "Ancient History."

In the meantime Joseph Medill Patterson, editor of the Tribune, is still thinking the matter over, "Shall he make public the details of the deal between the Tribune and the Union Trust Company?"

That is where the case rests as this issue of the DAILY WORKER goes to press. Both the Tribune and the Union Trust Company are rich and powerful. Part of that wealth is the result of the fact that they have been able to plunder school lands set aside for the benefit of the school children of Chicago.

House Children In Firetraps.

In the meantime the school children are still being housed in firetraps and "tin can" portables, jammed 50 and 55 into small rooms with a single teacher. Why this is so is something the workers of Chicago are going to find out. And the DAILY WORKER is going to help them find out.

Detroit Workers Party Members to Discuss Big Issues

DETROIT, Mich., March 27.—The General Membership Meeting of the Workers Party of Detroit, which will be held Monday evening, March 31, in the House of the Masses, 2101 Gratiot avenue, comes at an opportune moment. The Central Executive Committee, at its March meeting, adopted a memorandum on the "Labor and the Third Party" Policy of the Workers Party, which is being submitted to the E. C. C. I. The memorandum deals exhaustively with the St. Paul June 17th Convention and the Cleveland July 4th C. P. P. A. Conference. It is now being published in the Party Press, and our membership must familiarize themselves with the document so as to discuss it intelligently at the March 31st meeting. The following agenda will be reported upon:

(1) Our "Labor and Third Party" Policy.

(2) The Present Status of Our Industrial Policy.

(3) The DAILY WORKER.

(4) "Protection of Foreign-Born" Councils.

(5) Co-ordination of Party Activities.

This meeting occurs on the 5th Monday of the month, which will eliminate any conflicting meetings. Our entire membership is expected to be present.

Mexican Rulers Against Textile Workers in Crisis

MEXICO CITY, March 27.—For many weeks the members of the Confederacion General de Trabajadores (Anarcho-syndicalist) in the textile industry have been threatening to take possession of the textile factories. The textile employers in many sections of the country are running their factories only three days a week. The resultant lower than-starvation-wage has caused a great deal of discontent. The workers are proposing one of two remedies—either that the employer raise their wages for a three day week, or that they give them work for a six day week.

The workers threaten that if no definite conclusions have been arrived at in a few days that they will take over the factories. The Government threatens direct action of the military against such direct action of the workers. This reply has greatly encouraged the bosses, and they are in no hurry to settle. In spite of the boast of the Mexican "yellow" labor leaders at their last convention that the Obregon government has never used force against the workers, we know that it is ready to do so now to protect the property of the employers, and that it also used force against the so-called "reds" in last year's car strike.

Sleuths on Bergdoll Trail Like Hounds Sniffing the Air

BERLIN, March 27.—The mystery of the whereabouts of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, notorious American draft evader, deepened today when officers of the steamer Deutschland in Hamburg swore that nobody named Bergdoll had booked reservations on the ship, scheduled to depart from Cuxhaven at noon Thursday for America.

There seemed to be a concerted movement by friends and relatives of the slacker to conceal his movements. Every effort was made in Eberbach, where Bergdoll has been staying, to mislead correspondents attempting to verify a report that the draft evader is starting back to the United States to face charges against him.

Bergdoll, it was said, has no American passport but may have obtained a German document under an assumed name.

Coal Bosses and North Virginia Miners Have Wage Conference

BALTIMORE, Md., March 27.—The third chapter of the wage and working conditions parley of representatives of the North West Virginia Coal Operators Association and the United Mine Workers of America began here today.

The conference opened with an executive meeting of all representatives at which the wage question was discussed. Because of slight differences, it was decided to send the matter back to sub-committees from both organizations to iron out the difficulties. George Brackett, secretary of the Operator's Association, said working conditions acceptable to both sides, have been adopted.

The miners asked that the present wage scale, which has been in effect since April 1, 1923, be continued for three years, starting April 1.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 27.—The jury for the trial of Governor McCray was completed shortly before noon Wednesday.

Governor McCray is on trial on an indictment charging him with embezzlement and larceny of $155,000 of the funds of the state board of agriculture.

ST. PAUL WILL HAVE JUNE 17 CONVENTION

Call Sent Out for Big Gathering

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 27.—The call for a national Farmer-Labor convention on June 17, was issued here over the signatures of several powerful national and state farmer and labor organizations. The conventions will be held in the City of St. Paul.

The decision to hold the convention on June 17 was reached here recently after a series of conferences took place between different farmer-labor and progressive groups.

Those Signing Call.

Those signing the call are the Farmer-Labor Federation of Minnesota, William Mahoney, president, and Dr. W. A. Schaper, Henry G. Teigan and R. D. Cramer; the Progressive party of Nebraska, thru J. L. Beebe and W. H. Green; the Farmer-labor party of Washington, John C. Kennedy, secretary; the Farmer-Labor party of North Dakota, R. H. Walker, chairman and H. R. Martinson, secretary; Buffalo Labor party, Buffalo, James Campbell, secretary; Western Progressive Farmers William Bouck, of the state of Washington, chairman; Federated Farmer-Labor party, Joseph Manley, secretary; the Farmer-Labor party of South Dakota, formerly the Non-partisan league party, Tom Ayres, chairman, and Miss Alice Lorraine Daly; Farmer-Labor party of Montana, Charles E. Taylor and P. Budden.

The committee on arrangements for the convention, named at a conference in St. Paul several weeks ago, decided on St. Paul, rather than Minneapolis for the convention.

Arrangement Committee.

The committee on arrangements, also signing the formal call, consists of William Mahoney, St. Paul, chairman; C. A. Hathaway, secretary; W. A. Schaper, of Minneapolis; H. C. Teigan, of Minneapolis, secretary to Senator Magnus Johnson; R. D. Cramer, of Minneapolis; W. H. Green, of Nebraska; Tom Ayres of South Dakota; Joseph Manley of Illinois, and R. H. Walker of North Dakota.

Ex-Senator France Returns.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Ex-Senator Joseph I. France, of Maryland, who has just arrived here from Russia, has declined to make statements to newspaper men at this juncture. He indicates, however, that he possesses fresh material, pertaining to the subjects of the senate investigation committee. France explains his disinclination to receive press representatives partly to his unsatisfactory health, following the ocean voyage, and partly by a desire to disclose his information and opinions at the opportune moment. His views as to the general policies of the Russian government are known to be friendly.

Lay Off Textile Hands.

PENACOOK, N. H., March 27.—The labor situation in this section of the state is bad. The Standish Mills Company is laying off hands, there being no orders ahead. The bosses are not worrying as Palm Beach is not entirely reserved for oil plotters and there are a few more cold days left in this neck of the woods, but the workers are worrying as there are no jobs in any other part of the state.

Austrian Miners Win.

VIENNA, March 27.—The miners of Styria in Austria after having been out more than two months, can record an almost complete victory. Wages are now to be adjusted according to the cost of living index figures. Other gains are an increase in the children's bonus; rates per shift to be revised; no reprisals upon the miners for having gone out on strike. The strike is still on at the Karl mine of the Alpine Montan company.

Russian Wages Increase.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Reports which have reached the New York office of the Russian-American Industrial Corporation describe progress made by the Moscow "experimental factory," the model plant among the 35 garment factories under the All-Russian Clothing Syndicate.

While output at this factory rose 25 per cent during 1923, workers' wages at the same plant have increased 42 per cent over the rates paid a year ago.

Coolidge Farm Propaganda.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Representative Summers of Washington, a staunch Coolidgeite, is conducting a franked propaganda for the McNary-Haugen agricultural export bill, in which he declares that this measure will "increase present prices of wheat about 40 cents a bushel, corn and hog prices about 40 cents, and cattle about 30 cents." He asserts also that its purpose is to give the farmer's dollar the same relative purchasing power it had before the war.

DEMOCRATS GET WHAT IS LEFT OF OKLAHOMA PARTY

Reconstruction League Names Millionaire

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 27.—A real farmer-labor movement will be started, by workers and farmers of this city following the complete betrayal of their interests at the convention of the Farmer Labor Reconstruction League at El Reno, at which the democratic party was indorsed and a plutocrat was nominated.

The Workers Party offered credentials for D. Cobb and Helman. All the committee were favorable to seating them, but Victor Purdy, and finally his argument prevailed and the credentials were tabled. Having no champion on the floor of the convention to plead our cause and no outsider allowed to plead his own we were forced to silence.

Wrightman Nominated.

The convention endorsed the democrat party and nominated a full state ticket choosing a multimillionaire, C. J. Wrightman, for senator on the grounds that the league is busted and he can finance his campaign and will help others to get thru. Wrightman is against government ownership of railroads. He is about of the same make-up as any reform Roosevelt republican would be. Sold to the highest bidder.

The platform was made to suit him on railroads by declaring the league stands for "regulation or public ownership of public utilities."

A cheap foreign exclusion act was passed and my suggestion to pass a resolution to condemn the pending congressional bill was ignored. No mention was made of Russia. A move to unite the Farmers' Union and the Farm-Labor Union was turned down.

The convention voted to strike out the word "regulation" from the railroad clause in the platform but a reactionary vice-chairman declared the motion lost. The majority was so visible that the farm delegates went home quite peeved over the defeat.

Otherwise the platform is the usual populist platform that has been handed down for forty years.

Dan Hogan Turned Down.

Dan Hogan introduced a resolution leading to a third party and the endorsement of Robert La Follette, also to send delegates to the meeting at Cleveland July 4th. It was turned down so no attempt was made for St. Paul. It was truly a southern democrat convention with a large body of former socialists all divided against themselves. The Farm Labor Union was the most hopeful sign of the convention. They were not well organized but showed a large sense of class solidarity and an understanding of what farmers and workers want. They have invited me to come to a number of places and present the trend of the movement of farmer labor in the northwest.

We will start a petition at once for a Farmer-Labor Party. It requires five thousand signatures and all we have to do is to name the party and go to bat, as I understand the resolution that passed for a third party. We will call it the Farm Labor Party of Oklahoma. The old farm labor party is dead and does not count. It is like the socialist party that had just six people at the state convention.

OUT WITH DAUGHERTY!

Fake 5 Cent Trolley Fare Is Exposed by N. Y. Correspondent

To The DAILY WORKER: I recently read in The DAILY WORKER that the Public Service Electric Co. of New Jersey had made profits on a five cent fare—meaning that it had reduced the fare from eight cents to five cents and was stealing more money than before. I believe that it could be done, but, being a resident of the Public Service State I know that the P. S. did not actually reduce the fare. The P. S. split the territory into zones. For instance, from Passaic to Paterson the fare used to be eight cents, with one fare. Now the P. S. charges two fares, at five cents each, totally ten cents. No wonder the P. S. makes money. Ten cents is more than eight cents.—SEYMOUR ZASKIN, Passaic, N. J.

BURNS MUST GO!

MACHINE MEN IN PLENTY AT BIG CONVENTION

Payroll Brigade Rule Pittsburgh Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 27.—Increasing the dues, the present assessment of one-half of 1 per cent to 1 per cent, and an additional assessment of $1.00 per year for a building fund, are things intended in this convention, by the machine in charge of affairs in District No. 5. The machine has grown so large that the present revenue, which is already a drain on the miners of the district, is far from sufficient to meet its exorbitant needs. The financial report submitted to the convention and accepted by those who spent it, is so glaringly extravagant, that, were it not for the slush funds received from the International Union, the report, instead of showing a small balance, would be showing a deficiency of about $50,000.

Fat Boys Violate Constitution.

The men who are here representing the rank and file, and who are sufficient to represent a majority of the membership of the district, are protesting in vain against the overwhelming number of pay-rollers and their henchmen, who are representing no one except the machine. These men are flanked by international organizers from many other districts, all of whom are voting. To overcome these obstacles, the delegates are planning to have the rank and file leave the picks for a sufficient length of time to change things in the convention.

They plan to have the miners come into Pittsburgh from their respective "camps" and sit in the convention, taking as much play in the affairs of the convention as the pay-rollers are doing, even to the extent of voting. The "Law" and "Constitution" are being "done up brown" by the machine, wherein it applies to the progressive delegates, but their interpretations of same are different when application is asked for the Fat Boys.

Each session produces a bitter battle and every issue is being railroaded, while the delegates who are not clear on the issues are becoming so disgusted that they threaten all kinds of things, even to the extent of going home to advocate the keeping of the tax and assessments at home. What will develop as the battle waxes warmer is more than can be forecast now, but whatever does, will furnish no surprise.

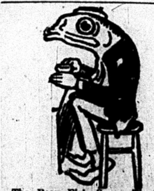
Spend Money Recklessly.

The machine succeeded in seating its organizers in the battle that came with the credentials committee report, and the next big event will be the report of the constitution committee. Van A. Bittner, who once presided over this district, but who was forced to resign in 1916, will be chairman of this committee and to the wise, this is sufficient. This "chief representative" of the International Union is considered so valuable to the machine, that when he was forced to resign as president of the Pittsburgh district, he was given a job by the then international president, John P. White, and for his services he is paid $1,200 a year more than the ordinary organizers. He has evidently served well, for he has been retained ever since and is doing his stunts regularly.

It is under the report of Bittner's committee that the question of increased dues and assessments will be considered, so unless the rank and file can be gotten into Pittsburgh to prevent it, the miners will find that they will be taxed so heavily that it will be more of a burden than they can stand. The chances are that much trouble will accrue as a result of the vicious legislation being attempted and passed here, at least it is promised and if it materializes, the machine will find that they have bitten more than they can chew.

Rank and File Awakening.

The shutting down of mines, the slow work of those supposed to be running and the already bad conditions that prevail, and which were refused "airing" at the sessions yesterday, will all tend to help the miners come to a realization of their helpless plight and will force the necessary courage to rid themselves of the misleadership they now have.



The Poor Fish Says:—The Hindoos are very ungrateful. They rejected the budget of the Ramsay MacDonald government. While Mr. MacDonald is making such a valiant effort to prove he is not a radical, those who should know better insist on making a fuss.

OUTLOOK DARK FOR COLORED KU KLUX KLAN

Freeman, Negro Paper, Exposes Fakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 27.—Along with all the other diabolical plots of the Ku Klux Klan to gain ascendancy in this state the latest plot has come to light. There has been organized a "black" Klan movement, under the misleading name of "Shades of Lincoln."

"Spittoon Wiper" Visible Factor.

The organization first became noted when they rented a suite of offices in the Pastime Recreation Hall, and proceeded to hold meetings. One Rev. Christian, of the A. M. E. Zion church, reputed thief of the church's money and at present a "spittoon wiper" at the State house, is the visible factor.

One Mr. Washington, of Fort Wayne, is the originator, apparently. One J. K. Brown, local attorney, is known as the "King Kleagle." They have an application card that insists that the applicant be an "Afro-American of protestant faith, without allegiance to any other country, creed, sect, etc. Must be opposed to undesirable immigration, etc.," all in strict mimicry of the reputed application questionnaire of the "Koo Koos."

"The Freeman," an independent colored weekly, exposed this organization originally, in last week's issue and is engaged in running down the evidence in the case. Following the appearance of the Freeman article the agent for the building requested the "shades" to vacate.

Where'd They Get the Dough?

None of the gentlemen (?) named have more than carfare from one day to the other, yet they have $1,500 worth of office furniture paid for and installed (about to be put out in the street) and are making flattering bids to prospective "workers." Rev. Christian is a strong "Jackson" man, the candidate for governor who is a reputed Klansman. Jackson has a corps of colored workers who are feverishly attempting to exploit the people.

Are the Shades part of the Jackson personnel? We will find out. We will also destroy this ignorant menace ere it recoils and strikes the heart of an already crushed people.

Senator Ralston for Daugherty.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator Ralston of Indiana has joined his boss, Tom Taggart, in the anti-labor stand assumed by Taggart when he recently indorsed Attorney General Daugherty. Ralston pretended to be much alarmed when other Democratic senators proposed to read Taggart's indorsement of Daugherty to the senate and to chastise the Indiana boss for his involvement of their party in the Daugherty mess.

Swede Lands Dollars.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., March 27.—Edna Cudahy, daughter of the late Jack Cudahy, was married here yesterday to Lt. Lais Lithander, an officer in the Swedish army. Mrs. Lithander married Percy Brown, a Pasadena bank teller, in 1920 and they were divorced last year.

CROWE DETECTIVE SAYS POLICEMAN BEAT UP PICKET

Tells Us About Assault On Miss Altschuler

Detective William Schroeder, of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe's staff, stopped a DAILY WORKER reporter on So. Market street yesterday morning and asked him to "tell the editor" that he had not helped to beat up Sophie Altschuler.

"It was Officer 3181 who trimmed her," said Schroeder.

"I arrested her and turned her over to the other fellow and he trimmed her there in the hallway.

Officer 3181 Under Charges.

"He's under charges now. The union lawyer asked how it was I signed the complaint against her if I didn't help to beat her up. I just arrested her for violating the law but I didn't beat her."

Schroeder says that Miss Altschuler slapped his face when he squeezed her arm but that it didn't hurt him.

"These girls aren't rough," he continued. "They don't carry any hat-pins or dangerous weapons or make trouble when they are arrested. No one has any business to beat them up."

Miss Altschuler, who spent several days in bed after the assault by Officer 3181 and there were blue marks on her arm where the detective had gripped her when he arrested her.

Looks Out for Ribback Co.

Schroeder keeps a fixed post in front of Ribback's factory at 221 So. Market street and has been a leading witness against strikers seized under "Dennie" Sullivan's injunction writs. He is a sallow-faced man of medium height, with a well knit frame and keenly observant eyes. Crowe has detailed him to strike work. Officer 3181, of whom he spoke, is a regular, uniformed city policeman under the direction of Chief Collins and Mayor Dever.

In reference to the detective's statement that his prisoner had "violated the law" the testimony of citizen witnesses is that the girl was peacefully picketing. This, according to United States supreme court decisions, is within the law. It is also within human rights. The streets are the people's and workers have as much right to use them as have employers, detectives and private "sluggers."

Get Spring Hats.

ROME, March 27.—Pope Pius has bestowed the red Berretta Rochetto upon Cardinals Hayes and Mundelein. The ceremony was simple, attended only by those cardinals who are personal friends of Hayes and Mundelein. The latter expressed thanks on behalf of both; the Pontiff replied briefly.

Favor Child Labor Amendment.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The House Judiciary Committee favorably reported the Child Labor Constitutional Amendment, which would enable Congress to enact anti-child labor legislation.

The Supreme Court has twice held that Congress, under the constitution, is without power to regulate child labor.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE RESENTS PACIFIST CHARGE

Is Against Capitalist Militarism

By HARRY GANNES.

Imminent failure of the campaign to enlist the youth in the Citizen's Military Training Camps is driving the capitalist press to desperation. Brent Dow Allinson, a Christian pacifist, is made the object of vicious attacks launched by the combined Chicago brass check association, the American Legion and a number of other pro-militarist organizations.

Militarists Losing.

It was not the innocuous talk that Allinson delivered before the Epworth League meeting in Evanston recently that evoked the prolonged attack that is being carried on, but the fact that there is little indication that the American youth are ready to be dragged into another world war. At the Northwestern University the Students' Military Training Reserve Officers' Military Training Corps are losing members, while the ex-soldiers openly proclaim their refusal to take part in another slaughter fest.

Every anti-military and pacifist organization in the country is being connected with the Young Communist movement, the Young Workers League of America and its Junior Groups. It is claimed that the Y. W. L. is the brains behind the entire anti-military and pacifist propaganda in the United States. The ridiculous charge has been made that Trotzky is personally supervising the anti-military propaganda spread by Allinson and others.

Not Non-Resistants.

The Young Workers League is definitely an anti-military organization but is far from being connected with Tolstoian or Christian pacifists. The anti-military campaign carried on by the Young Workers League of America is not conducted in secret but is an open, working class, militant fight against the growing imperialism and growing armaments in the United States. The last report of the United States War Department showed that the military forces in this country had grown by about 50 per cent in the past 10 years. United States capitalists are financing military operations in Mexico and the South American republics.

A Crazy Charge.

That the anti-military campaign carried on by the Y. W. L. and the Junior Groups is inspired by Trotzky is a ridiculous asertion and is based on the fact that the Young Workers League works in close harmony with the Young Communist International in carrying on its military campaign. The headquarters of the Young Comunist International are in Moscow but have no direct connection with Trotzky. The military program is outlined by the young workers themselves, who are members of the Communist leagues all over the world and is carried out by the members of the organization and so many of the outside young workers as can be gotten to realize the danger to themselves of capitalist wars.

Whereas the capitalist press is trying to isolate the anti-military struggle carried on by the only revolutionary youth organization in the United States, the Young Workers League, to a fight against American militarism, it must be clearly pointed out that the Y. W. L. is co-operating with the young Communist Leagues everywhere as it recognizes that the entire capitalist world is involved in modern imperialist wars.

The present anti-military program of the Y. W. L. was adopted at its last convention, May, 1923, and has formed the basis of the anti-military campaigns carried on by the American young Communist organization.

Militarism Spreading.

"American capitalism is arming itself as well as are the European nations," declares the resolution on militarism and anti-militarism. This warning has not proven over stressed. The British Labor Party since taking over power has authorized the increase of the naval strength of Great Britain; South America is spending millions for armaments; and in the United States stupendous preparations are being made this summer for increasing the military forces of the United States.

Evident opposition by a great section of the American people, and especially the young workers, has thrown the pro-military organizations, such as the American Legion, the Chicago Tribune and the Daily News, into hysterics. An attempt was made to declare all anti-military propaganda seditious. The state's attorney was called upon to prosecute the Young Workers League, among other organizations, under the decision in the Bross Lloyd case which makes distribution of strike literature a crime. No action has yet been taken as the state's attorney's office deems its case too weak and an evident infringement of the most elementary rights guaranteed by capitalist law in Illinois.

There is some connection between the issuing of the recent leaflet addressed "To All Young Workers, Soldiers and Sailors!" by the Y. W. L. at this critical moment when the capitalists are trying to mass the youth in the Military Training Camps and the concerted attack on all who proclaim anti-military opposition.

Workers Did Not Join.

Last summer the allotments for the Citizen's Military Training Camps were nowhere near filled and the fear that this will be repeated this year in the face of the mass propaganda undertaken by the Y. W. L. among the factory workers and in the schools is driving the capitalist newspapers and their militarist organization to drastic attempts to suppress the Y. W. L. whose anti-military propaganda is the most purposeful in arousing the working youth against any participation in capitalist wars.

No brow-beating bluff will thwart the Y. W. L. in carrying on a persistent anti-military campaign at this time. The league will more than ever throw its full strength in the carrying out of its program under the slogan of: "Down With All Capitalist War!" In acting on the following program, the Y. W. L. emphasizes the fact that its struggle against militarism is not and cannot be a pacifist one, but "is the struggle of a militant, unarmed class against its armed oppressors"

Y. W. L. Program.

Here is the Y. W. L. anti-military program:

Immediate steps must be directed against further increase in armaments on the one hand, and on the other toward a discouraging of voluntary military training.

1. War against armaments.

(a) Continuous efforts to awaken the workers to opposition to armaments.

2. Propaganda amongst the youth likely to be recruited for military training camps, students corps, or the like.

(a) Printing of leaflets and circulars, to be distributed among the young workers and working students, pointing out the purpose for which they are trained.

(b) National campaigns participation in military training at periods when the training camps are opened or at times when the question of military training is before the workers.

3. Work among the children to point out the militarist character of the Boy and Girl Scout movement.

(a) Every attempt must be made to reach as large a section of the proletarian children and prevent their membership in the Boy and Girl Scout organizations.

(b) Enlist the aid of the worker parents in the struggle against the Boy and Girl Scout movement on militarist and anti-working class grounds.

Fight White Guardists.

4. Fight against Fascism and White Guard organizations.

(a) Together with the Party, the League will carry on work against the formation of anti-working class Fascist organizations such as the Ku Klux Klan, the American Legion, the American Sentinels, etc.

(b) To secure the co-operation of all labor organizations for the fight against Fascism and White Guard organizations.

5. Propaganda among the ex-service men and disabled soldiers.

(a) To point out the treatment meted out to soldiers in capitalist wars.

6. Utilization of dissatisfaction of the armed forces.

(a) The dissatisfactory conditions of the soldiers and sailors, as well as within the training camps, should be portrayed in League and Party papers.

At all times the anti-military work of the League must be carried on in closest co-operation with the party, for tho the majority of those who bear the brunt of war are the youth, crises of this nature affect the entire working class and the best results can be achieved only by the closest harmony with the leaders of the Communist forces in the United States, the Workers Party of America.

Socialists Collect For Ebert

The New York Leader, of March 15th, in its editorial "Aid for the German Unions" calls upon all Socialists to contribute for the support of the German trade unions and German Socialist organizations.

It announces that contributions are to be sent to the American Federation of Labor and states that "the American Federation of Labor is the custodian of funds collected in this country for the German unions—and for all organizations in Germany. Funds shall be sent locally to Morris Berman, Forward Building or direct to the American Federation of Labor in Washington."

Workers should also note that the Gompers fund ostensibly only for the German Trade Unions, is also intended to support the German Socialist organization. The charge made that Gompers is collecting not to feed the German workers but to combat the militant class conscious workers in the German labor movement is further substantiated by this announcement. Mr. Gompers in conspiracy with the right wing Socialists in America has even overcome his "prejudices" against the German Socialists with whom he refused to have anything to do with by getting out of the Amsterdam International because for him they were "too red".

It seems that the German Socialists have become black enough for Mr. Gompers to come to their rescue.

It is the duty of all workers to point out that the Gompers fund is not to assist the millions of starving workers and their children but is a weapon with which to beat down the efforts of the German proletariat to free itself from its miserable condition and is a prop to support the crumbling machine of the capitalist lackeys, the Socialist labor officials.

The International Workers Aid is the only proletarian organization that is actually feeding the hungry German workers. The workers must support this fund only to assist their fellow workers in Germany.

The Struggle for the Party

Being the continuation of the report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organization.

III. The Fractions and Groups.

THE second important question occupying us at present is that of the formation of fractions or groupings. In my opinion this is one and the same question. It is known to you, comrades, that our opponents, Comrade Preobrazensky and others, represent the matter somewhat as follows:

"At one time we had full liberty to form fractions within the Party. Altho we passed thru difficult times at the beginning of the civil war, still we were able to debate freely as to whether we could call upon the military specialists or not, whether the Brest peace should be concluded or not, and so forth. But since the Tenth Party Congress we have been limited, there is no longer any free expression of opinion in the Party. This shows that our whole inner Party policy has been mistaken since the Tenth Party Congress, and that the decisions of the Tenth Congress were thus mistaken in themselves. It is therefore necessary to re-examine the decisions of the Tenth Party Congress."

Lenin Drew Up Resolutions.

I have already pointed out that the decisions of the Tenth Party Congress were arrived at with the participation of Comrade Lenin, and not only this, but that they were his decisions. He drew up the resolution passed by the Tenth Party Congress, he gave the address, he was the chief speaker of our Party at the Congress on precisely this subject.

But let us assume that even Comrade Lenin might be in error. Then the comrades should say this straight forwardly, and not make an attack on the disciples of Lenin, an action very much lacking in courage. But let us really look into the matter, comrades, and see if the conditions ruling in the Party at the time of the Brest peace were really so idyllic as to be worthy of being rendered eternal?

Our Party is still so young that the majority cannot remember what happened at the time of the conclusion of the Brest peace, about five or six years ago. At that time a fraction had been formed, calling itself the "left communists." The leading theoretical leader of this fraction was Comrade Bucharin, and one of its practical organizers was the late Ooritzky.

A large number of leading members of our party joined this fraction, at one time almost one-half of the Central Committee. This fraction expressed itself as opposed to the conclusion of the Brest peace. Its members violated Party discipline in this same hall and voted against the decisions of the Central Committee in the All Russian Central Executive when the question of the Brest peace was decided. It issued its own newspaper.

Danger of Groups.

In a word, it acted like a party within the Party, like an independent fraction. And such a state of affairs is designated as normal! I should like to relate to you an episode with reference to that time, one which I have just got to know lately. At that time, now held up to us as an ideal period, the left social revolutionaries, who were also against the Brest peace but in reality represented a petty bourgeois and counter-revolutionary party, had become so bold that they applied to the left communists with the official proposition that the Soviet of People's Commissaries, headed by Comrade Lenin, should be arrested, and a new Soviet of People's Commissaries be appointed.

We did not hear of this until a few days ago when Comrade Bucharin informed a great meeting at Moscow of it. When the debates over the fraction question had reached their present point, Comrade Bucharin said to himself: This cannot be kept secret any longer, I shall tell the Party straight out how matters stood at that time.

Please notice the following. At that time the fraction of the left communists was headed by excellent workers, old, tried and tested. It is true that some of them had joined the Party only a short time before, as for instance, the late Ooritzky, but there were also such old Party comrades among them as, for instance, Bucharin. They indignantly rejected the proposal of the left social revolutionaries.

Why Wasn't Central Informed?.

We thank them for not having arrested Vladimir Ilyitch; but the fact that they did not inform their Central Committee of the matter, and that we did not hear of it until six years later, is an excellent historical illustration of what fractional struggle signifies in a Party governing a state.

When a party is not governing a state, then a fraction is still an evil, but a more or less bearable evil; in such a case the parties quarrel as to whether some newspaper be published or not, whether some secretary be appointed, etc. These disagreements have no reference to the government, to the question of power. But when a party is governing a state, and especially when civil war is raging, then every fraction struggle within the party is transformed into a struggle for power. This struggle is completely disastrous. And where other forces exist as well, hostile to us, as, for instance, the left social revolutionaries, this petty bourgeoisie gone mad, then we have that third party ready to take advantage of the dissensions of others for its own benefit.

Anti-Semites Are Conducting Drive On German Unions

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, Mar. 27.—Anti-semitism is being dragged into the ranks of German labor. A fascist organization, the German Nationalist Workers' Association, is appealing to the workers to leave the trade unions of the General Federation of Labor, which they assert are controlled by the Jews, and to form labor unions without Jews.

The president of the general federation and the presidents of almost all the large unions are non-Jews, tho nothing in the by-laws prevents Jews from attaining office.

FRANCE IS USING BELGIUM AS HER MILITARY VASSAL

Plans Naval Base for War on England

By A. HABARU.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRUSSELS, March 27.—The slight improvement which seems to have taken place in the relations between France and England since the MacDonald government took office will not have a lasting effect.

The main reasons for the rivalry still exists and will become stronger as time goes on.

France has secured a great strength in metallurgy, now that the mines of Loraine belong to her, and little by little she is gaining the primary on the continent.

When France becomes the greatest continental power her expanding interests will be hitting against the interests of Great Britain with greater force than ever.

Getting Ready For War.

France is carefully studying the means of fighting the next war against England. She is improving her flying corps; she is increasing her navy. Further she is seeking the means to build a railway thru the Sahara, and this will enable her to send to France by land without fear of English submarines, millions of Negroes from Senegal and the Niger. Last but not least, owing to the servility of the Belgian government, France is organizing in Flanders, on the Belgian coast, a base for her navy—in case of war against England.

Naval Base on Belgian Coast.

The war has shown how every important the Belgian coast will be in a naval struggle. In the hands of the Germans it meant a big danger for Great Britain.

The French plan to transform Zeebrugge, Bruges, into a naval base. The Belgian war fleet has been conveyed to Bruges, where the Belgian sailors are trained on the French warship, d'Entrecasteau. Bruges will become an important military base, too. The biggest barracks of the country will be built there. Important factories in the neighborhood to manufacture war engines will be erected there.

Secret Military Pact.

There is a secret military agreement between the two countries The Belgian navy is strongly bound to the French navy. The Belgian officers are instructed in France; their maneuvers are taking place there. France has given Belgium a war training ship and further a scheme is being prepared to establish an air railway between France and Bruges in order to avoid the danger of a flood by the bombardment of the dams and locks of the Yser.

All the above facts cannot be denied. France is making use of her small vassal, to prepare for the next war against the new enemy, i. e., against England.

Another Sky Pilot Caught.

INDIANAPOLIS, Mar. 27.—Rev. Louis Holloway, pastor of the United Brethren Church at Atica, Ind., is in jail here awaiting a hearing before Federal Judge Anderson on a charge of violating the Mann act.

After his hearing here he will be taken to Danville, Ill., to face similar charges there. It is alleged that he took a young girl choir singer to Danville and registered at a hotel with her as man and wife.

LARKIN LOSES SUIT AGAINST UNION CHIEFS

Expelled From Union As Sequel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, March 27.—Following a lawsuit which ended unfavorably for him, James Larkin, founder of the Irish Transport and General Workers Union, was expelled from that organization by a vote of the executive committee.

Briefly the events which led up to the expulsion are as follows:

Air Thick With Charges.

On Larkin's return to Ireland after his deportation from America, he got into a personal quarrel with William O'Brien, general treasurer of the union. Larkin was general secretary. The air was thick with charges and counter charges.

Finally Larkin convinced himself that as a result of the action of two branches of the union in Dublin O'Brien, general treasurer, and Thomas Foran, general president of the union, were suspended from their offices. With his brother-in-law and a few others he refused the officers admittance into their headquarters.

The officials secured an injunction restraining Larkin from interfering with them in the performance of their official duties, so Larkin had to open the doors for them. Larkin then tried his hand at the injunction game. He charged the officials of the Transport Union with various "high crimes and misdemeanors" but unfortunately his evidence was very vapory when he reached the court room.

Both sides were defended by a brilliant array of counsel but Larkin dismissed his after their failure to secure a further continuance of the case.

William O'Brien on the witness stand admitted that Larkin was still general secretary but under suspension as a result of his action in excluding the officers of the union from their offices and charging them with misappropriation of funds. Larkin was general secretary of the union since 1909 and his salary was paid to his wife by arrangement during the 8½ years he was in America. The total sum amounted to about $10,000.

Invokes English Law.

Larkin claimed that O'Brien was not legally elected to the executive committee. He also charged that the union violated the law in using union funds for political purposes. This the officials admitted but suggested that violating English law was not considered a crime in Ireland.

Larkin did not oppose using union funds for political purposes on principal but he said it was a violation of law. The judge held that as the union officials were changing the rules of the union to evade the violation of the law, it was rather belated to punish them for it.

One member of the union executive committee was charged by Larkin with being a thief. It was proved, however, that he was discharged by a baking company for over-extending credit rather than for embezzlement of the firm's funds as Larkin thought. He drove a delivery wagon.

Several women witnesses testified for Larkin that they were not paid mortality benefits when their husbands died because their books were in arrears. The union officials claimed that it was not legally empowered to pay benefits under these conditions, as they would leave themselves liable to court action by someone who might be scrupulous about observing the law.

Case Decided Against Larkin.

The case was decided against Larkin with costs. This will mean a debt of several thousand pounds on Larkin's shoulders.

It can hardly be said that Larkin covered himself with glory in the trial. Without any knowledge of legal procedure he foolishly discharged his counsel as he did in the New York trial with equally unfortunate results. His fight against the union officials if not tied up with questions of funds and if free from personal attacks involving financial scrupulousness might be successful as the workers are by no means satisfied with the leaders.

The only result of the trial was to prove that the present officials, tho poor revolutionists, are better bookkeepers than Larkin, who according to the testimony signed a financial statement as secretary of the union in 1913 to the effect that there was the sum of approximately seventeen hundred pounds in the Hibernian Bank to the union's account when there was not a penny there.

It is feared that nothing can now avert a split in the union.

Danish Strike Settled.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—A cablegram from Copenhagen to the Danish legation here declares that the dispute between the association of employers and the unions of unskilled labor in Denmark has been settled by government conciliators. Lock-outs and strikes affecting more than 70,000 workers had been set for this spring, but these are now apparently averted.

EMPLOYES OF DULUTH GARMENT BOSS ON STRIKE

Patrick Company Fired Union Members

To The DAILY WORKER: The F. A. Patrick Company of Duluth celebrated St. Patrick's day by informing its employes that a number of its former employes discharged for being members of the union would not be reinstated. On hearing this the remainder of the employes also union members quit work and have not yet returned.

The employes of the F. A. Patrick Co. decided to organize. The firm always boasted that it was its policy not to discriminate against union members in its employ. But on March 11, eight workers were fired for being members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to the knowledge of the firm.

The union organizers secured an interview with Mr. Ahern, the manager of the department, who admitted they were discharged for being members of the union. The organizers asked their reinstatement but this was refused.

On March 17 the workers reached the limit of their patience and walked out. The fight is now on to a finish. Not a single striker deserted the ranks and a strong picket line is maintained.

Fishermen's Price For Salmon Cut; Fish Prices Soar

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 27.—The Canadian Fisheries Association, has reduced British Columbia fishermen 7½ cents a fish on Sockeye salmon for the coming fishing season. The price to be paid fisherman this year is 22½ cents as against 30 cents last year. This is paid only for Sockeye salmon. Chum salmon and other inferior fish are paid a fraction of this price.

In face of the cut suffered by the fishermen of this province, the cannery owners of British Columbia are receiving the highest prices for sockeye in the United Kingdom markets and elsewhere. This price will hold for sometime due to the fact that the Japanese government has commandeered the fish pack of the Japanese canneries to relieve the earthquake distress.

PERU TYRANT IS TOOL OF U. S. PLUTES

Denounced by Head of Mexican Education

(By The Federated Press)

LIMA, Peru, March 27.—A letter that will cause a tremendous uproar in Peru and no less sensation in Mexico has just been smuggled past the rigid Peruvian censorship and into this tyrant ridden country by Jose Vasconcelos, Mexican minister of education. The letter, impersonal in tone, damns the petty dictatorship of Leguia, Peruvian president who was "made-in-the-U. S. A." and just falls short of counselling a revolution.

The letter will have a tremendous effect in all of Latin-America, for the whole of South America looks to Vasconcelos for spiritual leadership. In Mexico, the minister of education has recently been under heavy fire from certain quarters because of his feud with Morones of the Federation of Labor and his firing of certain labor or semi-labor functionaries and retention of reactionary elements in the department of education. The radical tone of the letter will, however, tend to controvert many of the charges against him.

Presents Resignation.

When Vasconcelos issued a vigorous attack on Vivente Gomez, autocrat of Venezuela and, like Leguia, tool of Standard Oil and the American state department, he accompanied it with his resignation so as not to embarrass the Mexican government. His resignation was not accepted, and in due time relations were broken off between Mexico and Venezuela. Now his resignation will be presented once more, and it is impossible to predict the outcome.

All Latin-America is beginning to talk about the tyranny of Leguia in Peru. Papers from Argentine, and other South American countries, and even from Cuba and Panama, are full of polemics against him. Jose Ingenieros, of Argentina, is another outstanding figure in Latin-American culture, and he, like Vasconcelos, has added his powerful voice to the chorus attacking American imperialism and its Peruvian tool. But none of these attacks will have the effect of Vasconcelos' letter, for it is addressed directly to the students of Peru and comes from a cabinet minister in the country that is most idealized by liberal elements in the rest of Latin-America.

Taken by Force.

The grinding exploitation of the Indian tribes on the nearer slopes of the Andes whose property, owned under a system of primitive communism, has been taken from them by force, and who are driven to work for foreign (especially American) capital to the crack of the slave-driver's whip, has resulted in widespread revolts. These are blind strivings to restore the "Empire of the Incas" and the system of primitive communism that yielded peace and freedom and plenty.

Student and labor leaders from the coastal plain are turning to the problem of linking up this blind force with their own strivings for industrial socialism or modern communism. They are studying Kechua, the native Indian dialect in order to explain modern social philosophy to the non-Spanish speaking tribes. The Indians readily understand the conversation between their rebellion against capitalism and that of the industrialized workers.

JIM MACLACHLAN CHEERED AT BIG MASS MEETINGS

Lewis and Gang Near End of Rope

Jim McLachlan, released from a Canadian prison, where he was incarcerated with the aid of John L. Lewis and the British Empire Steel Company, is now speaking to large and enthusiastic meetings thruout the mining fields of Nova Scotia, while the provisional officers who are sent in by Lewis to take the place of the deposed officers are afraid to face the miners.

The letter printed below, which was written by Jim McLachlan to Thomas Myerscough, shows what desperate straits the Lewis tools are in. It appears that the "great mind" of the international union, the strutting popinjay, John L. Lewis was flimflammed and bunkoed by the British Empire Steel Company, and his lackeys are no longer able to live up to the generous promises they made to the miners.

Some Debt!

In addition to their other troubles the "cuckoo officers," "Slimy" Barret and Company have a debt of $100,000 hanging around their necks and the business men who advanced them credit now threaten to put them behind the bars. Roguery does not always pay. The letter follows:

Dear Comrade Myerscough: Your letter of March 6th had evidently gone to the Pen after I left there and only reached me here two days ago. While in Dorchester, I found the guards all right and while I could not get any papers of any kind, yet thru some of the guards I learned much of what was going on, on the outside especially about the U. M. W. convention. I am not a bit the worse for my jail experience, I lost a few pounds of flesh, was only able to tip the scales at 136 pounds, when I came out, but just about my "fighting" weight.

John L's imposed officers in this district are in a bad way. First, they could not tell the men whether they were on strike, or a suspension. Then they contracted over one hundred thousand dollars debt with the merchants in relief during the "strike" or "suspension" and now John L. won't pay, saying that they had no authority to contract this debt. The little merchants are in the air, their small working capital being used up in this debt and are threatening Barrett and Co., with the law. Then the miners voted down their "Montreal Agreement" and Dalrymple swears this is the first time in the history of the mine workers that men ever voted against an agreement negotiated by their officers.

Afraid To Go To Meetings.

The proposed contract is actually a cut to the men. None of the Lewis men dare go to a local union but content themselves by talking to the men thru the yellow press. They are, I feel sure, on the run and I expect big things to take place here before May. I also feel sure that the officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation have doubled-crossed Lewis.

Before the contract was negotiated Dalrymple, Barrett and Co. proclaimed that they would come back with the 1921 rates. This the officials of the company had promised as a reward for deposing Livingstone and the rest of us, but when it came to the real shown-down, they refused to come across, so they had to take what they could get. All of these things taken together are making the bunch good and sick.

The question of the debt, and the question of the action to be taken in view of the adverse vote comes up at the Internationa Executive Board in April, and I would not bat an eye to see Lewis pull up stakes in Nova Scotia. Meantime the locals here are becoming more aggressive, demanding a convention to; first, draw up new wage demands and second, appoint men to run a district election. Since coming out on the 5th, I have held packed meetings every night, except three nights, and I know these meetings are worrying the Fat-men to death. We shall keep up the fight until the Lewis gang are driven out.

With kindest personal regards,

I am, with comradely greetings,

J. B. McLACHLAN.

Europe's Wheat Acreage.

A slight decrease in winter acreage in some of the leading winter wheat producing countries of Europe is reported to the United States department of agriculture. The combined winter wheat acreage in Belgium, Bulgaria, Roumania, Poland, Spain, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia and Lithuania is estimated at 33,350,000 acres compared with 33,788,000 acres in 1923. Estimates for Germany and France are not yet available.

Radical German Cartoonist Fined For His 'Ecce Homo'

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, Mar. 27.—George Crosz, one of the ablest cartoonists of Europe, who has been devoting his talent to the advancement of the working class, has been fined 500 gold marks (about $125) for "obscenity."

The indictment came as a result of his book of illustrations, Ecce Homo. Grosz declared that by picturing conditions as they are he wanted to hold up a mirror to our modern society so that it might see itself and reform. A number of authorities testified either in person or by letter in favor of Grosz, among them Max Liebermann, the painter, and Maximilian Harden, the publicist.

WORKERS PARTY AND I. W. W. TO DEBATE ISSUES

Ralph Chaplin to Act as Chairman

What promises to be one of the most attractive debates staged in this city for many years will be held in North Side Turner Hall, on Sunday afternoon, April 13, between James P. Cannon, representing the Workers Party and Forrest Edwards, the Industrial Workers of the World, with Ralph Chaplin, revolutionary poet, in the chair.

The question to be debated is "Resolved that the Workers Party must fail to accomplish anything of importance for the workers." Forrest Edwards will take the affirmative and James P. Cannon, the negative.

Forrest Edwards is a member of long standing in the I. W. W. and was one of the twenty year men in Leavenworth. James P. Cannon is assistant secretary and member of the central executive committee of the Workers Party.

The proceeds will be divided fifty-fifty between the Labor Defense Council and the General Defense Committee.

Communist Organ Reappears in Italy Despite the Fascisti

Evidently the Italian Fascisti are unable to suppress the Communist movement altogether, for a Communist daily newspaper, L'Unita, has again started publication on Feb. 12, which is the first time since the Fascisti came into power that a Communist daily has at last been able to appear in Italy. The revolutionary movement is alive in Italy and the appearance of the Communist daily after a long suppression is the best manifestation of that. Even the Fascisti cannot destroy the Communist movement as they set out to do.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

Wonderland

By A. BURGESS

MANY years ago, before quite many of the readers of this section were born, a little baby opened its eyes and looked around. Like all little babies, it started to cry. Immediately a mother, full of mother-love for her little one, soothed her baby to sleep. Now I will call this little baby Anna, because it was a little girl.

As time passed, little Anna grew from babyhood to childhood. Every time she cried her mother comforted her just as she had done when she was a tiny baby, with the same mother-love and understanding.

When little Anna was about seven years old she soon found there were many things she wanted that her mother could not give her: good food to eat and warm clothing to wear. So one day she came to her mother's knee and said:

"Mother, why does not daddy give you money every week to buy us things with, like other little girls' daddies do?"

Little Anna opened her eyes and could not understand how it was possible to be worse off than her daddy and mother.

As she grew older she found that there were plenty of little children badly fed and clothed; and she wondered what was wrong. She soon found out there was plenty of food and clothes for everybody in the world but if you could not get wor and earn money you could not have plenty to eat. So she thought when she grew up she would help these people to get work. But, then again, everybody was so busy looking after themselves; they forgot all about the people who had no work; so she joined the Junior Section of the Young Workers League, hoping by doing so to help make life better for the little ones that are being born every day. I am sure all the little Communist readers would like to do the same. And you can only do so by getting all your little friends and yourself down to the meetings of the Junior Section.

Aids Germany's Starving.

(Note—This is a letter from a child of a miner in Barrackville, W. Va.):

Dear Comrade: I took a little activity for the starving children of Germany. There has been held a dance at Grantown on First of March. By instruction of our group of young workers that I was supposed to be at that dance and collect money for the starving children of Germany. So I went there and done my duty the best I could do it. I collected $14.05. Every one I saw for this purpose they were surprised. When they saw me doing the job. And lot of them asked me who instructed to do this. I told them Young Workers Group of Barrackville. Then they asked me what kind of a group is that. That that is the first time they heard of such a group. So I went in a debate with them and I explained to them all about it. They even did not forget to ask me am I going to send it in any of the papers that they can see their names and sum of money. I told them that I am going to send it to the DAILY WORKER. I had the answer that they do not have the paper. I told them why don't they get one. That that is the only paper that the working man should read. They asked me the address and I gave it to them. I hope they will subscribe for it. Furthermore I can say that the young movement at Barrackville are progressing good. But one thing is that we are going to lose our group leader. He is going away from this state to Pennsylvania. I hope that the branch at Barrackville furnish us another one like he was. I called all the young workers to join with us.

Please put this in the DAILY WORKER that will give the workers a good attention of this territory. Fraternally yours, MARY BRAJKOVICH, Group Secretary.

Foster Tears Hide Off German Socialists In Labor Herald

Reports state that the majority of the socialist party members remaining in the party at Toledo, O., are also members of the Ku Klux Klan, and it is indicated that that Fascist organization in combination with these "socialists" and reactionary leaders of some of the unions, especially the Toledo Local 105, I. A. M., is behind the attempt to expel left wing militants of the Trade Union Educational League from the union.

Fascism in American Unions.

With the Klan working strongly within the Indiana district of the U. M. W. of A. and at other points, all signs show that American Fascism is penetrating the American labor movement just as much and even more than it has done in Germany, where, as pointed out by Wm. Z. Foster in the April issue of the Labor Herald, the enemies of the Communists have united in a conspiracy against any revolutionary effort of the German workers

In Foster's article, entitled, "What's Happening In Germany," a most thoro analysis is made of the treachery of the "Social-democrats" of Germany, how their traitorous "civil peace" during the war betrayed millions of workers to the war machine, and after the war, their vicious butchery of every worker who fought for revolution instead of capitalist reconstruction was aided by leaders of the trade unions and the Fascist tools of Stinnes and the other great industrialists.

Lesson From Germany.

American workers who are now only beginning to feel the first appearance of Fascism in their unions should read Foster's article, which is the most important one on Germany appearing anywhere this month, in order that they may see, not only the movement of Germany, but the future of America mirrored before them, in order that they may know how the German workers are fighting ever more successfully against the same dangers which will appear in America in the future.

Gompers Backs George Berry, Strikebreaker, For Vice Presidency

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Chester M. Wright, director of the information and publicity service of the A. F. of L., has issued a three page statement of the candidacy of George L. Berry of the Printing Pressmen for the Democratic nomination for vice president. No mention is made of the character of platform or running mate which Berry would demand, but his record and indorsements are elaborately set forth.

The statement declares that Berry's candidacy is indorsed in writing by every member of the executive council of the A. F. of L., and by "practically every international labor union." Indorsement is claimed also from "practically every city labor council and state federation of labor in every state of the Union." Berry is a newspaper editor, trade union leader, an extensive farmer and landowner, is director of a bank, and is interested in mercantile and timber enterprises.

Of his trade union character it is stated "he has demonstrated his courage on many occasions in the maintenance of peace, the sanctity of contract, and the harmonious relationship between employers and employes. This is best demonstrated by his courage in settling the outlaw newspaper web pressmen's strike, which occurred in New York City last September, for which action be received the unanimous commendation of not only the American Federation of Labor but of leading newspaper and magazine publishers and the general public of America."

Chicago Russians Unite in Defense Of Foreign Born

A provisional committee for the protection of foreign born workers has been formed by five Russian organizations in Chicago. It will co-operate with the Chicago council that represents all the national groups of foreign born workers and the labor unions of the city.

The Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia, the White Russian People's Society, Lira, Zoreki Radiny and Russian branches No. 1 and No. 2 of the Workers Party participated.

CANADIAN RAIL WORKERS HOLD BIG UNITY MEET

Delegates from All Over Canada Present

By TIM BUCK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL, March 26.—One of the most representative and business like gatherings the amalgamationists have ever held, was the amalgamation conference convened by the Montreal Amalgamation committee at the Railroaders club here.

Seventy-four delegates; all credentialed by their local lodges to both the divisional convention and the amalgamation conference, coming from points as far apart as Port Mann, B. C., and Richmond, Quebec, and representing every craft strengthened by delegates from the Canadian Brotherhood of railroad employes, constituted a conference of no mean order.

Get Down To Work.

Terry McGovern, chairman of the C. P. R. Federation (Montreal) called the meeting to order with a few timely remarks on the work so far done by the Montreal committee, pointing out that when first organized it had been expressly arranged that it should be provisional only; carrying on the work of education and organization in the interest of the amalgamation movement, until such a time as it was possible to organize a really representative gathering such as the present where a real national committee could be elected and the work could be properly organized on a national scale.

Delegate McGovern having been elected as chairman of the conference, and the rules of order being adopted, the report of the provisional secretary was called for.

Secretary Longs report, free from all verbiage; and dealing only with actual work accomplished, showed very clearly that altho the committee had considered themselves merely provisional; they have done trojan work. Nearly $600 has been raised for propaganda work (mostly locally). Copies of the Minnesota plan have been published in French and distributed among the French speaking railway workers of Quebec, numerous local amalgamation committees have been set up at various points particularly in Ontario, sympathetic relations have been developed between the amalgamation forces and the C. B. of R. E., and endorsation of their work have been received from no less than three hundred local lodges thruout the Dominion, all of which are on file.

Out For Amalgamation.

Resolutions were dealt with reaffirming the determination of the Railroad workers of Canada to work in co-operation with the St. Paul committee until amalgamation is an accomplished fact, urging support of the "Amalgamation Advocate" and appointing Secretary Bill Long as contributing Canadian Editor, on the setting up and the work of the local amalgamation committees, and one drawing attention to the menace of the various schemes of co-operation, standards of production, etc., whereby the International officialdom is endeavoring to reduce trade unionism to an appendage of the capitalist system, and a means of increasing the exploitation of the workers in the direct interest of the employing class. The Conference went on record unanimously as reaffirming the conviction of the progressive railroaders that in the present crisis of capitalism no schemes of collaboration can help the working class. Our only hope lies in militant industrial organization.

Executive Elected.

An executive representative of all crafts represented, with power to add representatives of other crafts was elected, to function on a National scale. Delegate McGovern was reelected as Chairman of the National committee, Bill Long was re-elected as Secretary, Delegates Smith of the Carmen, Toronto, and Corrigan of the Boilermakers, Montreal, were elected vice Chairman and Treasurer respectively. Delegates Dalyrymple, Stratford; Wall, Montreal; Thompson, Montreal; Snedden Stratford, Wilkinson; Knowles Walsh and Hughes of Montreal; Jack Lakeman of Edmonton; Chisholm of Toronto and Mattick of the Moulders, Winnipeg, will compose the new national executive.

Washington Reporters Talk Unionism as Publisher's Axe Falls

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Murmurs of anxiety and suggestions of the need of a trade union of Washington press correspondents fill the press galleries at the Capitol, since the death of the New York Herald, and certain changes in the staffs of other big papers which have dislodged a number of popular correspondents here. Within a short period of years Frank Munsey has extinguished the New York Press, Globe, Mail, Sun, and Herald, and is now rumored that he is about to consolidate the Telegram with the Evening Sun. Each of these changes has had its effect in Washington. At the same time Hearst has been buying up papers in different parts of the country, with consequent changes in the Washington staff.

The threat of creating a trade union is not taken seriously, however, by the various bureau managers.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

German Relief Work Knifed by Yellow European Socialists

(F. S. R. Press Service)

On February 16th at Luxemburg, the first meeting of the Executive Committee of the Socialist Workers International, which is the "Second International", took place.

Resolutions galore were presented and passed. Among them one urging governments to grant recognition to Soviet Russia but at the same time condemning the Soviet Republic. Nothing concrete was done with regard to laying plans for activities which will help feed the German workers, but a resolution was passed condemning the International Workers' Relief Committee.

The International Workers' Relief Committee is conducting at present more than fifty Soup Kitchens in Germany in which workers, their wives and children are being fed. The Second International does not like this because it shows up their impotency to do anything concrete for the workers of Germany. Mr. Crispien of Germany therefore introduced a resolution condemning the work of the International Workers' Relief Committee and the Executive Committee of this Second International promptly voted to send out a circular letter to all its affiliated bodies the world over, warning them against this terrible International Workers' Relief Committee. The plot is now complete. The destructive criticism will be conducted on an international scale.

In the meantime the International Workers' Relief Committee is busy working.

The Race For Ruin

Representatives of the armed air forces of the United States and Great Britain are racing around the world and here we have a clear example of the prostitution of scientific discoveries and mechanical advances to the service of imperialism.

Not only has a purely scientific project been given a competitive national character, but the entire expedition is of a military nature—handled by national militaristic groups whose interest in the experiment is to determine the relative efficiency of military aircraft of both nations.

From the public statements of the aviators it is easily seen that the expeditions are merely mimic warfare. The British announce that they intend to beat the Americans and the Americans are equally determined to humble the Britishers; each group of contestants will use the experience gained in the flight to make improvements in their fighting machines.

Almost the entire field of aircraft development is in the hands of capitalist governments which means that it is available principally for warfare—offensive warfare because the airplane is not a defensive, but an offensive weapon whose major function, according to the admissions of the aircraft experts, will be laying waste to territories inhabited by non-combatants. "Destroying the civilian morale of the enemy" is the euphemistic phrase used to decribe the bombing and gassing of towns, cities and countrysides by the enthusiastic exponents of military aircraft technique.

Modern capitalism mobilizes for the purpose of war and loot, for the subjugation of the workingclass of its own and enemy nations, the scientific discoveries that, properly used, would make this globe a paradise by eliminating heartbreaking toil and linking the world peoples together in one huge family.

Communism proposes to do this and upon the heads of the Communists therefore is poured the bitterest denunciation by those who see nothing incongruous in using the wonder of air-navigation to bring death and misery instead of a fuller and happier life to the toiling millions.

But idealism and a vision of a better future accomplishes little against the destructive technique of modern capitalism, so Communists, in addition to urging the workers to organize and concentrate their power against the capitalist state, urge likewise the acceptance of every opportunity by the workers to master the intricate machines of modern industry and warfare so that in the struggle for power that will come the workers may also use them. The lackeys of capitalism must be deprived of a monopoly of the state power thru the breaking of their monopoly on mechanical means of suppression as well as by the destruction of their monopoly of the press and other avenues of information and education.

Capitalist Nationalism

One of the stock-in-trade arguments of the capitalist apologists, liberal and conservative, progressive and reactionary alike, in behalf of the present economic system is that it permits and fosters the growth of nationalism, of the existence of independent national groups enabling the various peoples to develop their peculiar spirits, cultures and other obscure virtues.

As usual the objective facts give the lie to the high-sounding claims of the capitalist champions. The present system, breeding wars and national strife, is decimating the various peoples occupying the continent of Europe. Capitalist customs barriers, employing class tariffs, complicated money system, oppressive profiteers' taxes to maintain huge armies to suppress the workers and peasants and perpetuate capitalism, are only a few of the inherent capitalist forces at work, undermining the very existence of the nations whose independence is supposed to be so sacred to the League of Nations.

The attempt to apply the fraudulent formula of capitalist nationalism has given the coup de grace to the heralded efficient economic system it took two generations to build up. On the ruins of the Austro-German machinery of production there have risen many so-called nationalities that are the very antithesis of the principle of self-determination and national freedom. Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and the Baltic countries are only puppets in the hands of the French and British imperialists. The governing cliques of these countries are the very ones drowning these various national peoples in blood and misery.

The only country in the world where national independence is a reality and not a sham behind which there hide the imperialist hangmen of the masses of all peoples, is Soviet Russia, the implacable foe of capitalism and the vanguard of Communist Internationalism.

Bishops and Bayonets

Bishop Nicholson, of the Methodist Church, has come out against the pacifist movement in his organization. In an interview the worthy bishop says:

> "If the flag is fired on I will be in the forefront of those demanding its defense."

If we understand the viewpoint of the pacifists this is exactly what they complain of—the fact that bloody-mouthed prelates and politicians are always willing to be in the front ranks of those DEMANDING defense, but that their military ardor is satisfied with this vicarious method of participating in the slaughter.

The casualty list of the last imperialist struggle contained but few names of those demanding defense; it was the dupes of the demanders that paid the price of death, disease and misery.

We do not take the pacifist position; on the contrary we consider it a danger to the workingclass faced with the armed might of the capitalist state, but we heartily join with the embattled bible students in urging that bishops and bankers, employers and editors of war-mongering sheets—the whole tribe of capitalistic panderers—be considered first line troops in the next war brought on by clashing imperialist interests. There is little hope of this desirable result occurring, but it is interesting to visualize the panic that would ensue among the big-paunched, soft-handed dispensers of advice to the workers to go and get themselves killed gladly whenever the ruling robber band sends out word to its lackeys that its wealth and power are in danger.

Bishops will talk enthusiastically about bayonets when there is no danger of their own robes being punctured, but the peaceful message of the master will be quickly called to mind if there is a remote possibility of their coming in contact with the business end. Under such circumstances there doubtless would be a remarkable unanimity in the agreement of the church militant to surrender even the front line position in the ranks of those who were simply demanding "defense of the flag" and other emblems and institutions of modern capitalism.

Why the Change?

Judging by the character of the new publicity drive launched by the entire capitalist press of the country against the continuation of the Teapot and Daugherty scandal investigations, one cannot fail to be impressed with its being very much akin to the powerful drive organized several months ago in behalf of the Mellon scheme. Just as the Mellon maneuver was a product of careful planning, heavily financed by the big business interests, so is this present drive. The new publicity campaign, in which the yellow Hearst sheets are especially active, bears all the earmarks of an organized conspiracy, far more devolped than even the Mellon and Bok peace schemes.

The central point in the entire tirade against the continuation of the investigations is that Congress ought to wake up and do something. The demand is now made that the Senate should stop being a grand jury and resume its normal function of serving as a legislative body. Bitter complaint is being made against the failure to secure legislation on certain big questions confronting the country.

The ways of gods and politics are surely devious. They are particularly devious when the economic class interests of the employers demand their being so. Why the complete change of front? How comes it to be that the Hearst sheets, always feeding the poor "public" on the dirtiest of sex and other scandals and peddling the worst of morbid "stuff," are now yelling against being overfed with Washington scandals? What has happened to its news stomach, always accustomed to the coarsest of food, that it is now too delicate to digest the information about the rottenness of capitalist control of government? What has happened to change the minds of the hired editors that they are now shrieking for more laws? Was it not only a few weeks ago that they were up in arms against Congress enacting so many laws and were demanding that the House and the Senate stop legislating and keep its hands off business? Why are these jackals and hyenas of the capitalist world now spitting, growling and crouching against the calling of witnesses from the underworld to show what is what about Daugherty and Coolidge when all their lives they have specialized in feeding the readers on the sensations of such witnesses? Have not these same underworld thugs been the most trusted agents of our cabinet? Have not their same capitalist masters organized leagues against the enactment of more laws only a few months ago? Why are these bankers and manufacturers now so anxious to secure legislation on the bonus and the railroad question when but yesterday they fought tooth and nail against the consideration of these problems by Congress?

Why the change? We have a hunch. We know. The employing class of this country does not fear legislation. The delicate balance of power in Congress Coolidge can be counted upon by them to veto most if not all laws objectionable to the bosses. But a continuation of the investigations always bears the danger of someone spilling information which will tend to undermine further the already shaken confidence of the masses in the strikebreaking government of the United States. Herein lies the fear. Herein lies the cause of the change. And herein lies the best reason for the workers and farmers to put a halt to these criminal efforts of their employers and to force a continuation of these investigations to the limit.

The Minority In the British Trade Unions

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.
(Written Specially for the Daily Worker.)

THE last few weeks have witnessed a definite and encouraging revival of the left-wing spirit among the rank and file of the British labor unions. It will need all of the best tactical and organizational efforts of the British militants to give this new spirit a direction, a crystallization, so that it does not uselessly expend itself, and thus leave the movement where it was before.

There have been attempts before at the organization of a minority movement in the British labor unions. For some years, there existed various local organizations, Industrial Leagues, etc., which drew, in great measure, their inspiration from the industrial unionist propaganda in America. Members of the British Socialist-Labor Party played a considerable part in these early organizations. They did not, however, share the dualist conceptions which prevailed, at that time, in the United States, and sought to bring about industrial unionism thru educational and agitational work within the existing unions.

Syndicalist Agitation.

Then, with the return of Tom Mann to Britain, there came a development of Syndicalist agitation. A number of militants were grouped around Tom Mann, and the "Industrial Syndicalist," was published as their organ. These British Syndicalists owed far less to the Anarchist tradition, however, than did their conferes in the Latin countries. Their point of view was strongly Marxian, altho their position regarding parliamentarianism was that of our Anarcho-Syndicalist friends. It was before the Russian revolution, when the revolutionary conception of the nature and historical functions of the capitalist state had not clarified in such marked degree as it later did, thru the clear and scientific teaching of Lenin.

Still later, during the war, there came the Shop-Stewards' Movement, the first real attempt to create, on a national scale, a left-wing industrial movement. This was in the time of the shop committees, the period of the heroic struggles of the workers of the Clyde, led by their shop stewards. This movement, however, laid special emphasis on the creation of shop committees, at the expense of the other necessary tactics—the penetration of the trade unions, the conversion of the Trades Councils into organs of militant action. For this reason, partly, and also probably because of the great slump after the war, the shop committee movement lapsed.

The Red International.

And then, for a long dreary time, during which the offensive of capital had its own predatory way with wages, hours and shop conditions, and the unions lost hundreds of thousands of members, there were but sporadic, scattered attempts at the building-up of a real nation-wide movement within the trade unions.

Nevertheless, preparations were being made. The Communist Party of Great Britain had come into being, with its definite policy of trade unions work, along the lines laid down by the International. A British Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions had been established in the United Kingdom. And slowly the forces of the left began to reassemble.

The problem in Great Britain is somewhat similar to that in America. The British workers have been isolated from the currents of European Socialism. Their economic position, for years, was better than that of the workers of all other great European powers. The colonial empire of Britain enabled certain sections of the British proletariat to be maintained by the employers in comparative comfort—at the expense of the toiling millions of India, Egypt and other lands. The workers' leaders, therefore, and wide strata of the workers themselves, were saturated in the ideology of the small bourgeoisie. It has required the disconcerting suddenness of the reduction of their standard of living, since the war, to bring them to some realization of the necessity of vital changes in trade union structure and tactics. Now, however, the soil is prepared; the objective conditions for the revolutionizing of the British trade union movement are present. What is now needed is the perfection of the mechanism by which the revolutionists may take advantage of these conditions.

The Gigantic Task.

And, slowly, this mechanism appears to be evolving. It is slow work, and all due account must be taken of the special traditions and psychology of the British organized workers. The launching of luridly worded manifestoes, the calling of enthusiastic conferences—at which splendid speeches are made, but no definite plans for future work are formulated—are not enough. Laboriously and laid, in the great key industries, for carefully, the ground-work must be a real vital rank-and-file movement, a movement which will not be something superimposed upon the workers, but which will answer their immediate needs, and will grow up out of their own efforts. In this task, the duty of guidance and leadership falls upon the Communists and the adherents of the Red International of Labor Unions.

There are already signs that the British minority movement is at last getting on to an organized basis. There is at present, for example, discontent among the miners. Negotiations are proceeding with the mine-owners, and there is a definite likelihood of a great industrial struggle in the mining industry. And it is precisely among the miners that the militant left-wing movement is growing apace. On February 16, the first issue of "The Mineworker" appeared, the fortnightly official organ of the National Miners' Minority movement. Already two issues of this journal have appeared, and its reception among the miners has been most encouraging. After the publication of the first number, letters and articles literally poured into the office, signifying the intense interest which the miners are taking in the movement.

Miners Active.

There have recently been held district and national conferences of the militant, progressive miners, with the result that a movement, on an organized national scale, has now been started. A program of demands has been drawn up, which the rank-and-file is pressing upon the Executive of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, urging them to make it the basis of their demands in their negotiations with the employers. The program includes such demands as: (1) Wages to be based on the cost of living, the basis of which shall be the wages paid in 1914; (2) A weekly wage to be guaranteed to all workers; (3) The six-hour day; (4) An allowance of one-fifth shift, to be paid on all afternoon and night work.

The growth of the miners' minority movement is full of encouragement. It would be swifter if only the militant miners were in the position to finance organization campaigns. But the recent long period of unemployment, and the extremely low wages they now receive, make it hard for them to pay the expenses of putting organizers into the field.

Among the transport workers, also, there are signs of an awakening. The "International Seafarer," organ of the seamen's section of the International Propaganda Committee of Transport Workers, of the R. I. L. U. is being published in London, and is widely circulated among the workers in the ports. During the recent dockers' strike, the militants organized a National Transport Workers' Solidarity Committee, which is now to become a permanent body, and is to initiate the minority movement among the transport workers.

Left-Wing conferences have been called, also, for the metal trades. These conferences are not of the earlier type—mainly propagandist—but are definitely for the purpose of setting up machinery for the organization of the minority movement.

Thus, there appears to be a new and refreshing movement at work within the ranks of the British organized workers. The building up of minority movements in the great unions of the key industries, the organized attempt to bring Left-Wing influence to bear upon the Trades Councils—these are the tasks confronting the militants of Britain. Especially important is such work at the present juncture, when there rules, in Britain, a new kind of government—a government, not of labor, but of labor leaders. The immense political importance of a Left-Wing movement in the trade unions—which are all affiliated to the Labor Party—will be obvious.

After the organization of actually functioning minority organizations within the trade unions—really functioning organizations, I say, and not merely committees on paper—there will be the task of bringing the representatives of these various movements together in a national conference of the militant elements in the labor organizations. And, out of this conference, will probably be born the national organization which will co-ordinate and further the work of establishing a solid, active and growing Left-Wing movement.

Team Work Necessary.

But this means an immense amount of hard work. It means efficient team-work among the militants, and an adoption of the best organizational technique. And, as I have said, the means at the disposal of the impoverished British workers are but small. Nevertheless, the task must be accomplished; and, eventually, it will be. A good beginning has been made. It must be actively followed up. There is a ferment of discontent among the masses. It is now the task of the militants to use every effort to direct this discontent along the organizational channels which will lead the revolutionary British workers to control over their mighty industrial organizations, and thus to victory in the struggle against the capitalist class.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

* * * *

The Situation in Kansas.

AS JOHN BROWN left for Kansas, he turned to his wife and the remaining members of his family and said: "If it is so painful for us to part with the hope of meeting again, how must it be with the poor slaves, who have no hope?"

John Brown was always sanguine in his ventures; but the events before him would have tried the hope of a superman; they were to be bloody, exacting, terrible. It was what he needed, however for John Brown went to Kansas with a greater project in his mind, the attack on Virginia and the South, and Kansas was to be for him the rough, harsh school in which he could train himself for that supreme effort.

Evolution From Pacifist to Warrior.

With his youngest son, Oliver, then about eighteen years old, and a son-in-law, Henry Thompson, John Brown left Chicago in August. The party had a heavily loaded wagon drawn by a "nice, stout, young horse," that was stricken with distemper when they reached Missouri, and could barely drag himself along. Their progress was therefore slow; a scant seven or eight miles a day. But it gave them an opportunity to see and hear things in Missouri, then fiercely pro-slavery, and the reservoir from which were drawn most of the border ruffians who were raiding Kansas, and trying to force it into the phalanx of slavery states.

Companies of armed men were constantly passing and re-passing on the route to Kansas, and they were continually boasting "of what deeds of patriotism and chivalry they had performed there, and of the still more mighty deeds they were yet to do." As Brown wrote home in a letter, "No man of them would blush when telling of their cruel treading down and terrifying defenseless Free State men; seemed to take particular satisfaction in telling of the fine horses and mules they had killed in their numerous expeditions against the damned Abolitionists."

John Brown was roused by all this; already he was changing from the peaceful patriarch to the fearless warrior in the field. One incident illustrates this. When the little party reached the Missouri River at Brunswick, Missouri, they sat themselves down to wait for the ferry. There came to them an old man, frankly Missourian, frankly inquisitive after the manner of the frontier. "Where are you going?" he asked. "To Kansas," replied John Brown. "Where from?" asked the old man. "From New York," answered John Brown.

We Will Not Die Alone!

"You won't live to get there," the old Missourian said, grimly.

"We are prepared," John Brown answered, "not to die alone." Before that spirit and that eagle eye the old Missourian qualied; he turned and left.

It was in October, after an arduous trip, that John Brown and his party reached the family settlement at Osawotamie. They arrived weary and all but destitute, with about sixty cents between them. And they found the settlement in great distress; all of the Browns, except the wife of John, Jr., completely prostrated with fever and ague, gotten from the rough conditions. They were living in a tent exposed to the chill winds, and were shivering over little fires on the bare ground. All the food left was a small supply of milk from their cows, some corn and a few potatoes. It was an unusually cold winter that year; on October 26 John Brown saw the hardest freezing he had ever witnessed south of his bleak farmhouse in the Adirondacks; and all the Kansas pioneers in it as did the Browns.

Nobody in Kansas that first winter knew what comforts were. While the Browns paid the penalty for living on low ground in a ravine and in tents, their bitter experience with sickness and hunger was not as bad as that of many other Northern families. Starvation and death looked in at many a door where parents lay helpless, while famished children crawled about the dirt floors crying for food, and shrieking with fear if any footstep approached, lest the comer be a border ruffian (as the Southerners were called), instead of a friend. For pure misery and heart-breaking suffering these pioneer tales of Kansas are not surpassed by any in the whole history of the winning of the West.

Puts New Life Into Sons.

But old John Brown was indomitable; he put new life and energy into his six sons; by November two shanties were well-vanced and the food problem had been lightened. They were getting into good shape for the winter, and preparing to take up their share in the settling of Kansas, when the hot breath of war scorched all these plans, as it did many another Northern settler's.

There would be little time for growing corn for the Browns thereafter, or for the other settlers; the slavery question demanded an answer first.

One dread that had worried the Browns before leaving home proved unnecessary. It was their fear of the Indians. The Browns were terrified when the first big band of Sacs and Foxes in war paint surrounded their tent, whooping and yelling, but they had the good sense to ground their arms, and the Indians did likewise. Thereafter both sides were great friends, John, Jr., went often to visit their old chief; once, when in the following summer, the Indians came to call again, they were "fought" with gifts of melons and green corn. "That," said Jason Brown, "was the nicest party I ever saw."

John Brown, Jr., used to ask the old chief questions, as, "Why do you Sacs and Foxes not build houses and barns like the Ottawas and the Chippewas? Why do you not have schools and churches like the Delawares and Shawnees? Why do you have no preachers and teachers?" And the chief replied in a staccato which summed up wonderfully the bitter, century-long experience of his people: "We want no houses and barns. We want no schools and churches. We want no preachers and teacher. We bad enough now."

Indians Were Good Friends.

No, the Indians were friends. The men really to be feared were not long in putting in their appearance. One night six or seven heavily armed Missourians rode up to the door, and asked whether any stray cattle had been seen. The Browns replied in the negative; and then, as newcomers, they were asked, in the border slang, how they were "on the goose."

"We are Free State" was the answer, "and what is more, we are Abolitionists."

The men rode away, but from that moment the Browns were marked for destruction. They did not shrink from danger, however. They nailed their flag to the mast; armed themselves, and plunged into the thick of all the political battles then raging. In a short time their settlement was to become known as a center of fearless, and if necessary, violent, resistance to all who wished to see human slavery slavery introduced into the territory. John Brown's life work had begun.

OUR BOOK REVIEWS

Woman and the Labor Movement. By Alice Henry. Published by Geo. H. Doran.

Alice Henry in her book, "Woman and the Labor Movement," traces the role of woman in industry from the early days of our ancestors to the present day.

In the course of the development of this subject the author deals with such problems as industrial legislation, minimum wage, extent of woman labor during the war and the Negro woman in industry.

Legislation as the cure for all ills has been practiced to a greater or lesser degree thruout the United States, in remedying unfavorable conditions of the workers. The disheartening experience of the American workers in this regard justifies the secondary importance of this phase of work as expressed in the following statement: "Altho men have in this country mostly depended upon organization to win improvement in their working standards, they have not hesitated to make use of legislation when that seemed the better plan."

The author also considers, in her treatment of "Women and the Labor Movement," the organizations that are working for the betterment of women in industry. Among these organizations is the National Women's Trade Union League which "stands for placing industry upon such a basis that the long and exhausting strikes of which we have had so many, shall be made unnecessary thru such organizations of the workers that industry can be placed upon an equitable basis and the collective agreement and not force or individual profit be the deciding factor in any industrial arrangement or re-arrangement." The author might well have stressed the fact that it is impossible to attain this end under a system which lives and thrives on profit by exploiting the labor of the workers.

Thruout the book, the author brings out that the problems of women in industry are only a part of the many problems facing the labor movement today. They should therefore not be treated as separate problems in which only women are intersted but one in which men and women must unite in order to achieve results.

The book is well written, easy to read and understand, and should prove of value to those who are working in the labor movement.—JULIA SCHULNER.

N. Y. PRINTERS INSISTING ON SIX-HOUR DAY

Shorter Hours Solution For Wide Unemployment

By H. M. WICKS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Mar. 28.—The greatest unemployment in the printing industry since the crisis of 1907 was the motivating force that caused the adoption of the present demands of Big Six (Typographical Union No. 6).

Gradual Slowing-Up.

When the new scale of hours and wages was presented to the newspaper publishers in December the industrial depression had just become acute; for months there had been a gradual slowing up of orders in the commercial and book end of the industry causing a steady increase of unemployment and short-time work.

The falling off of commercial and newspaper advertising hit the large dailies. In other periods of crises the smaller newspapers of New York suffered severely and on many occasions were close to bankruptcy. Taking advantage of the panicky feeling pervading the ranks of these so-called independent newspaper owners, the representative of the House of Morgan, Mr. Frank Munsey, began a campaign of newspaper buying and consolidation, with the result that the unemployment, already a serious problem in the job branch of Typographical Union No. 6, was accentuated by the influx into the ranks of unemployed of those displaced thru newspaper amalgamations.

Printing an Industrial Barometer.

Old heads in the printing and publishing game know that this industry is one of the surest barometers of industry. The great corporations place most of their printing orders in the city of New York. Chicago does a great deal of tariff work for the western trunk line railroads. In both cities there has been a marked decline of railroad work. Especially have the railroads curtailed their summer advertising. This advertising has dropped by over one hundred per cent since last year.

Automobile catalogs are fewer and far less elaborate than in the other years since the war. Textile establishments have cut their advertising down to almost zero, while the mail order houses are all cutting their orders. This is significant as it reveals the fact that the capitalists know we are in a period of crisis, altho newspapers are not saying anything about it. In the last crisis the printing industry was not hit until toward the close of the period for the reason that every railroad in the United States had to revise all its tariffs after passing from governmental control to private hands again.

Today, however, the printing industry, as in the past, is a true barometer of industrial prosperity.

Shorter Hours a Solution.

Reducing the hours of labor from eight to six will absorb part of the unemployed. In New York, with the inauguration of a five-day week it would practically solve the question temporarily. Realizing this fact the militants in Big Six got together and waged a staunch fight for shorter hours with the result that the demand for the six-hour day was incorporated in the new scale presented to the employers on the newspapers.

In face of unemployment in the industry and a period of acute industrial depression setting in thruout the entire country many trade unionists are telling the leaders of Big Six that this is a poor time to strike.

The time to strike is now, just before the rush of Easter advertising by the department stores and specialty shops. This is one season of the year, until the beginning of holiday advertising, that the great newspapers can make immense profits and by striking now we can bring the newspaper owners to their knees.

26 Strikers Smile at Sullivan's Sentences; All Still Free While Injunction Verdict Is Appealed

Twenty-six garment strikers smiled as Judge "Dennie" Sullivan sentenced them on charges of contempt of court for violating the injunction he granted his friends the garment bosses.

All the cases are being appealed by defense attorneys Peter Sissman and William Cunnea and not one of the girls and men Sullivan so gladly sentenced is in prison or has paid a cent of fine.

Three 50-Day Sentences.

Fifty-day sentences were given Louis Sokcloff, John Gottleib and Morris Kravis, each of whom was also fined the sum of $200.

A ten-day sentence was imposed on another devoted striker, Marion Brosdick, who also received a $200 fine. Minnie Seidel was sentenced to five days in prison and $150 fine.

Other Labor Fighters Fined.

No other jail sentences were imposed. All the others were fined, as follows: Clara Gabin, $125; Ida Selkoff, $175; Minnie Sugarman, $125; Celia Factor, $125; Valentina Piescki, $125; Emma Deering, $150; Margaret Welch, $150; Charles F. Muller, $200; Mrs. Pengras, $100; David Krus, $150; Sarah Hourwitz, $125; Yetta Roseman, $125; Rose Stone, $125; Anna Feldman, $125; Fannie Rosen, $125; Isadore Dixler, $200; Mary Hourwitz, $125; Esther Monart, $125, and Bessie Fishman, $125; Eugenia Schlacter, $100.

Mrs. Schlacter is a widow with four children. She is striking and fighting for the union shop so that she may put more food into the mouths of her little ones.

Evelyn Bornfeld and Clara Cacken were brought into Sullivan's court on attachments for contempt of court late in the afternoon. They will be arraigned Tuesday.

Hold Strikers Twelve Hours

The three garment strikers who were arrested and held for more than 12 hours and finally charged with conspiracy and assault by the police of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, were arraigned in Shakespeare Ave. police court yesterday.

PICKETS! Turn Back the Scabs Monday Morning

There must be a double force of pickets Monday morning to turn back the scabs the bosses will try to get over Saturday and Sunday.

Last Monday the same thing happened but the pickets were out in force and turned the scabs away. Scores of scabs who came up in yellow cabs, and in the private cars of the bosses, with "sluggers" on guard, were met by pickets and turned away.

DAILY WORKER men, who were out on the line, saw the pickets work. They saw the success the pickets had.

Pickets were arrested, of course. Pickets were roughed up, of course. Drunken policemen and sluggers shoved them about and cuffed them as they were paid to do, but the pickets kept up their fight. Whenever they saw a prospective scab coming they went up to her and told her that a strike was on and that she must keep away.

Strikes are won on the picket line. They are won by defying the police and "Dennie" Sullivan's injunctions.

STRIKES ARE WON BY KEEPING THE SCABS AWAY.

Seventy-eight garment bosses have already been compelled to surrender to the workers of Chicago.

ON TO THE PICKET LINE MONDAY to keep away the scabs and win.

LONDON MAY WALK IN DARK; STRIKES GROW

Electrical Workers in Threat to Quit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 28.—The threatened strike of the subway motormen called in sympathy with the tram and bus drivers may bring about the downfall of the MacDonald government or the establishment of a temporary dictatorship, unless a last minute effort to avert the tieup is successful.

To make matters still worse for Mr. MacDonald and his right honorable associates, the city electrical workers threaten to plunge London in darkness to aid their fellow workers who are on strike. The British workers are certainly showing a fine spirit of solidarity.

The possibility that the infamous DORA or Defense of the Realm Act may be again resurrected for use against the strikers by the so-called labor government has filled the British working class with anger.

Coupled with that is the offer of the British Fascisti and other White Guard organizations to assist the government.

The sympathy strike is scheduled for midnight and MacDonald summoned opposing parties in the transportation dispute to the ministry of labor early today for a desperate eleventh hour effort to avert the threatened walkout.

Such a strike would complete the paralysis of London's transportation and its consequence might readily involve the fall of the government. The crisis is considered the most serious MacDonald yet has faced.

Fearing the strike of subway workers inevitable, big business firms today converted all available space into bedrooms to accommodate employes who will have to sleep near their jobs.

In consequence London's shops were swamped with demands for oil and kerosene lamps and fuel.

$35,000 PRICE FOR FEDERAL JUDGE'S JOB

D. of J. Probers Get Latest Quotations on Judiciary

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28.—Former representative J. Van Vechten Olcott, of New York, today told the senate committee investigating the Department of Justice that Wayne Wilson, a member of the National Republican Club, two years ago offered to secure his appointment as a federal judge for $35,000.

Olcott said he rejected the offer and felt that it was his duty to inform the committee of the incident.

So far as he knew, Olcott said, Wilson did not represent anyone in the Department of Justice.

Olcott is a republican. He served two terms in congress, 1904-1908, from the Fifteenth New York District.

"When this man came to me and told me that my name was prominently mentioned for a place on the bench I was naturally flattered," said Olcott.

"Little Money Necessary."

"After we talked the matter over, he said, 'you know a little money will be necessary.'"

"I told him that I was highly appreciative of the honor but I could not understand putting up any money."

What amount did he mention?"

"He said that I should pay $10,000 when my name was sent to the senate and $25,000 when I was confirmed."

"What did you say to that?"

"I said 'let's forget it.'"

"What company was he with in New York?" asked Brookhart.

"I believe with the National Surety Company," replied Olcott.

"We expressed regret at the naming of this man but the committee must have it," Brookhart said.

"Wayne Wilson was the man," Olcott repeated.

"Did he represent anyone else?" asked Senator Jones.

Represented "The Boys."

"He said he was representing 'the boys.'"

"Did he mention the names of 'the boys?'"

"No."

Did he name Howard Mannington?"

"No."

"Was he prominently identified with politics in New York?"

"He was a member of the National Republican Club. I never heard of his holding office. He called to see me shortly after the introduction of a bill in Congress to increase the number of federal district judges."

Olcott was then excused.

Kentucky's Liquor Has Kentucky Son In Troubled Mess

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Representative John W. Langley, Kentucky, indicted on a conspiracy charge in connection with liquor withdrawals, appears in court today to plead and give bond for his trial.

At the same time Langley's colleagues in the house are considering his status.

Langley was indicted with five others, including:

Millard F. West, Lancaster, Ky., former deputy commissioner of internal revenue.

Russell M. Sackett, Ben L. Moses, Harry Sattler, all of Pittsburgh.

Sidney Reiss, New York.

SOUL OF TRAIN BANDIT JENNINGS REVOLTS AT ACTS OF POLITICIANS

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The ancient and honorable "stick-up" profession has fallen upon evil days, says Al Jennings, once king of the outlaws.

The former train robber, fresh from his appearance before the senate oil committee, chewed his finger nails bitterly in the ante-room of the capitol today while he mourned the passing of "honest" American banditry.

"Thieves in my day were good moral men," said Al, as he fingered an angry lock of Irish red hair. "They believed in the bible, God Almighty and the efficacy of a six shooter to settle any argument.

"Most of them didn't drink—but if they did hanker occasionally a shot of red eye, they waited until after working hours. Those boys knew that hooch and hold-ups didn't mix.

"But that of course, is all changed now," he continued. "There are only two kinds of bandits in this age and a good he-man Oklahoma killer wouldn't wipe his feet on either. First, there is the crooked politician and, second, the high school scapegrace."

"The old time robber usually was forced into a life of crime. Perhaps a hasty shooting had put him outside the pale of the law. He robbed to live," he said.

"The juvenile criminal of today isn't a poor cow-puncher who knows he's done wrong. He goes into it because he wants to, because of the excitement, because he knows that the only crime today is getting caught.

"Then comes dope and liquor to spur up his courage. With his 'snow' to sniff, he's a raging lion. Without it, he is a cringing, cowardly rat... The men who held up mail trains single handed twenty-five years ago didn't need a 'shot' to give them nerve. They had it. I'm one and I've still got it."

LOUCHEUR, BIG STEEL KING, IN FRENCH CABINET

Next Step May Be Dictatorship

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, March 28.—Louis Loucheur, wealthiest of French Industrialists, accepted the important post of Minister of Commerce and of Posts and Telegraph, in the new Poincare cabinet. The presence of the rich steel baron in the French government was commented on widely today. It was noted that Loucheur is the author of the famous declaration that France would never pay the debt owed to the United States.

Owes $4,000,000,000.

France owes the United States around four billion dollars. A large part of this loan was used by France to pay the cost of raising up big military establishments in Poland and other European countries under France's tutelage.

Poincare is completely revising his cabinet. His resignation is now considered in many quarters as a ruse to get rid of some of the deadwood in the last cabinet and to lay the groundwork for the establishment of a dictatorship. It is freely stated here that Morgan before granting the loan that saved the franc and the Poincare government, secured the promise that repayment of the one hundred million dollars must not be allowed to depend on the whims of a parliament.

New Cabinet.

With three posts yet to be filled the cabinet is as follows: Premier, and foreign affairs, Poincare; colonies, Fabry; war, Maginot; public works, Le Trocquer; interior, Deselves; liberated regions, Marin; finance, Marsal; education, Jouvenel; labor, Vincent; commerce and agriculture, Loucheur.

Refusal To Submit His Files Brings Ouster

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28.—At the request of President Coolidge, Attorney General Daugherty today resigned from the cabinet. The resignation was announced from the White House where Daugherty's letter acceding to the President's demands was given out.

"The resignation of Attorney General Daugherty will not halt the senate investigation of his administration of the Department of Justice," Senator Wheeler said when told of Daugherty's resignation.

Daugherty's letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. President:

"I hereby acknowledge receipt your letter of March 27 by the hand of your secretary requiring my resignation as attorney general of the United States.

"Solely out of deference and in compliance therewith I hereby tender my resignation. While you do not state when you desire my resignation to become effective I must respectfully request it become effective forthwith.

"Yours very truly,
"H. M. Daugherty,
attorney general."

The president's letter to Daugherty follows:

"My Dear Mr. Attorney General:

"Since my conference with you I have examined the proposed reply you suggest making to the demand that you furnish the committee investigating the Department of Justice with files from that department, relating to litigation and to the bureau of investigation.

"You represent to me and to the committee in your letter that it would not be compatible with the public interests to comply with the demand and conclude your letter with a statement that I approve that position. Certainly I approve the well established principle that departments should not give out information or documents where such a course would be detrimental to the public interests and this principle is always peculiarly applicable to your department which has such an intimate relation to the administration of justice.

"But you will readily perceive that I am unable to form an independent judgement in this instance without a long and intricate investigation of voluminous papers, which I cannot personally make and so I should be compelled to follow the usual practice in such cases and rely upon your advice as attorney general and head of the department of justice.

KIN IS CALLED AND WALSH IS MUCH PAINED

Subpoenaing Solon's Brother Brings Fight on Spencer

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28.—A partisan break has developed in the senate oil investigating committee and is causing threats of an attempt to oust Senator Seldon P. Spencer, Missouri republican. Democrats threaten to carry their fight against Spencer to the floor of the senate.

They charge the newest republican member of the investigating committee with improprieties in attempting to "get something on" Senator Walsh, chief of the democrats and leading prosecutor.

Conferences of democratic members of the committee have been held and two methods of proceeding against Spencer have been discussed.

Two Methods Proposed.

1.—Presentation of a formal motion in the senate asking his removal from the committee.

2.—A directly opposite policy of giving him every leeway.

At least two senators say they will lay Spencer's actions before the senate in speeches.

The Missouri senator was appointed to the vacancy of Chairman Lenroot a little more than a week ago. He immediately aroused Walsh with his manner of questioning witnesses and Walsh openly charged him with "putting words in the mouths of witnesses."

In a turbulent session of the Senate Oil Committee today, Senator Walsh, Montana, charged that Spencer Selden Spencer, Republican, Missouri, a member of the committee, had, subpoenaed John Walsh, his brother, "to cast malicious suspicions upon me."

John Walsh denied that he had any connection with either the Sinclair or Doheny oil companies or was in any way connected with the leases made by Albert B. Fall.

The sharp conflict between Spencer and Walsh further widened the breach between Spencer and the Democratic members of the committee.

Will Hays' Denial.

When the committee met today Chairman Ladd read a telegram from Will Hays denying he ever received $25,000 from Jake Hamon in connection with a "deal" at the last Republican convention as charged by Al Jennings, former bandit, yesterday.

Walsh announced his brother John was present and ready to testify but Spencer said he was not ready to examine him.

"You owe it to my brother to clear up the matter immediately," Senator Walsh said. "My brother has been under investigation for more than two months by persons determined to discredit these hearings. Because of that he is under suspicion."

Spencer then agreed to put John Walsh on the stand.

Walsh said he was a lawyer, born in Wisconsin.

"Do you represent the Mutual Oil Company?" Spencer asked.

"No."

"What oil companies do you represent?"

"Strictly Speaking."

"Strictly speaking I represent no oil company. I do, however, represent a holding company, known as the American Republics Corporation of which J. S. Colina is president. It holds oil stocks. I am counsel and a member of the board."

"Does the company have any interest in oil leases in Wyoming and California?"

"No."

"My company has no interest in oil leases there."

"What oil companies does the holding company hold stock in?"

"About 15 or 16 companies."

Walsh said he also represented several development companies which have not yet begun operations.

"You never have been engaged in the oil business in any way?" asked Spencer.

"No, sir."

"You never have visited the office of the secretary of the interior in regard to oil matters?"

"No, sir."

In excusing Walsh, Spencer asked him to keep in touch with him.

Cal and Sinclair, With Backs To Wall, Defy Attack On Grafting

By LAURENCE TODD
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Despite the frantic protests of E. B. McLean, voiced thru his Washington Post, the senate has proceeded not only to seek the criminal indictment of Harry Sinclair for his refusal to testify before the oil investigation committee, but it has followed immediately with a resolution suggesting to the house the impeachment of C. C. Chase, collector of customs at San Antonio and son-in-law of Albert B. Fall.

Cal Keeps Crook Chase.

Chase refused to testify on the ground that his answers might incriminate him, yet after this confession of criminal status President Coolidge failed to immediately order his dismissal. When Senator Bursum, staunch defender of Fall, pleaded that Chase would probably resign his federal job, Minority Leader Robinson replied that no resignation would be permitted to protect an offending officeholder.

The testimony which the committee expected to get from Chase related to the trip which he made to see Price McKinney at Cleveland, when Fall begged McKinney to perjure himself by testifying that Fall had borrowed $100,000 from McKinney. Discussing this affair on the senate floor, Senator Dill declared that the perjury of McLean as to this $100,000 loan to Fall was later framed up at a conference in Atlantic City. Dill urged the impeachment of Chase which was suggested in the resolution offered by Senator Walsh and adopted, 70 to 0 on a roll call.

Sinclair Hires A. P. Man.

Sinclair has reached into the office of the Associated Press and employed as his publicity man, at a salary alleged to be $15,000 a year, the one man on the Associated Press staff in Washington who has been conspicuously sympathetic with the oil crowd. The salary is at least double what he has been receiving.

An analysis of the Teapot Dome lease, made by W. W. Tarbell of Bethel, Conn., an oil expert, showed that the lease violated all of the rules which usually protect the owners' interests. It provides no bonus, such as is almost universally paid, and the royalty rates are so arranged as to enable Sinclair to profit by restricting production. He has restricted production, Senator Dill declared, with mathematical regularity.

U. S. Abets Oil Trusts.

Still more sinister is the clause giving to Sinclair and his partner, the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, thru the Sinclair Pipe Line Co., which they jointly own, the monopoly privilege of delivering oil from the Wyoming field by pipe line eastward. Possession of this monopoly, Tarbell impressed upon the committee, gives to Standard Oil and its allies the control of oil prices in the American market.

committee wants these papers because of a claim that they disclose your personal conduct of the department. Assuming that the request of the committee is appropriately limited to designated files, still the question will always be the same.

"In view of the fact that the inquiry relates to your personal conduct you are not in a position to give me or the committee what would be disinterested advice as to the public interest.

"You have a personal interest in this investigation which is being made of the conduct of yourself and your office, which may be in conflict with your official interest as the attorney general. I am not questioning your fairness or integrity.

"I am merely reciting the facts, that you are placed in two positions, one your personal interest, the other your office of attorney general, which may be in conflict. How can I satisfy a request for action in matters of this nature on the ground, you, as attorney general advise against it, when you as the individual against whom the inquiry is directed necessarily have a personal interest in it?

"I do not see how you can be acting for yourself in your own defense in this matter and at the same time and on the same question acting as my adviser as attorney general.

"Positions Incompatible".

"These two positions are incompatible and cannot be reconciled. I am sure you will see that it is necessary for me to have the advice of a disinterested attorney general, in order that I may discharge the duties of my office in this and other matters. I feel certain that you will know how deeply I regret that this situation has arisen. It only illustrates the difficulties which are certain to recur with ever increasing embarrassment and your inability to perform satisfactorily the duties of attorney general under present conditions.

"You will readily understand that it is not now my intention to prejudge the issues which remained to be developed in this investigation. I recognize that you are entitled to a full and fair hearing. But as there is no way by which you can divest yourself of the interest you have personally in the investigation I can see no way but for you to retire as attorney general and I am therefore compelled to request your resignation.

"Very truly yours,
"Calvin Coolidge."

The president requested Daugherty's resignation yesterday when his secretary, C. Bascom Slemp, delivered Mr. Coolidge's letter dated March 27 to Daugherty.

Daugherty's reply, presenting his resignation and requesting that it be made effective at once was dated today and was taken to President Coolidge this morning by Warren F. Martin, special assistant to the attorney general.

History of Case.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, intimate friend and political advisor of the Harding administration, was forced out of office today by the fire of a senate investigating committee, which prompted President Coolidge to ask his resignation.

The man who more than any other effected the nomination of the late President Harding, went out only after a long struggle in which he defied the senate and house committees to find him guilty of wrong-doing in office and opposed the counsel of senatorial friends to resign his post voluntarily.

"Untimely," Says Henry.

Asserting that President Coolidge's action was "most untimely," Daugherty, in a seven page letter to the president given out today at the Department of Justice said Mr. Coolidge was following "a dangerous doctrine" in suggesting that "an attack upon a cabinet officer disqualifies him for further official service."

"All the pretended charges against me are false," continued Daugherty. "But whether true or false, if a member of the cabinet is to be incapacitated or disqualified by the preferment of charges against him, no matter how malicious or groundless, and he is compelled to give up his responsible position and sacrifice his honor for the time being because of such attack, no man in any official position is safe and the most honorable, upright and efficient public servant could be swept from office and stable government destroyed by clamor.

The Indignant Daugherty.

"I cannot escape the conviction, Mr. President, that your request for my resignation is also most untimely. It comes at a time when truth is banishing falsehood from the public mind, even tho I have not as yet had an opportunity to place upon the witness stand before the senate committee a single witness in my defense or in explanation or rebuttal of the whispered and gossipy charges against me."

Pressure for Resignation.

The ouster of the attorney general came with dramatic suddenness after weeks of speculation as to how long President Coolidge would resist the demands that he put him out.

Many of Coolidge's intimate friends and numerous republican leaders in and out of congress persuaded Coolidge insistently to act for the good of the party.

Even indirect methods were employed to indicate to Daugherty that it would please the president if he got out.

But Daugherty remained adamant. He would leave, he said, only if guilty of misconduct in office were proved against him or if Coolidge personally demanded it.

Astounding Disclosures.

Meantime, the senate committee investigating his conduct of the Department of Justice began hearings which to date have developed the most extraordinary and sensational stories of intrigues, "deals" of all kinds and the inter-change of huge sums of money for mysterious purposes—inter-changed between men, according to the testimony, who were intimate friends of Daugherty or involved with friends of his.

The resignation was brought about by a letter sent to Daugherty yesterday by President Coolidge, requesting the attorney general to leave, which was replied to today with a request by Daugherty that the resignation be effective immediately.

Solicitor general James M. Beck will become acting attorney general, according to statute, until a successor to Daugherty is appointed by the president.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

NEAR PANIC AMONG MASTER CROOKS WHEN DAUGHERTY IS DUMPED

NEW YORK, March 28.—Feigning apprehension over the announcement of President Coolidge's request for Attorney General Daugherty's resignation and the latter's immediate stepping out, professionals again attacked the whole stock market today

Altho it was evident that the Washington situation was clarified rather than otherwise affected by this development, the renewed assault broke prices in the general list to levels which brought necessary liquidation of impaired marginal accounts.

Selling of this character accellerated the decline in stocks like steel, Baldwin, American Can, Corn Products and other industrial favorites. In issues with a thin market, such as Fisher Body, Kelsay Wheel, General Cigar and Buffalo and Susquehanna Railroad, bad breaks took place and the trading at times was nearer demoralization than at any time since the current decline got under way last month.

26 STRIKERS IN COURT SMILE AT DENNIE'S EDICTS

Garment Strike Writ Sentence Is Appealed

The state asked that their cases be continued till April 17.

The three strikers had been arrested Thursday morning and the union had their attorney take out a writ of habeas corpus. Before the writ was returnable the state's attorney's men came into court and said that the men had been booked.

It was apparent yesterday that the state's attorney's office did not want to have a preliminary hearing because the defendants in that way might learn something of the charges against them.

Bosses Want No Hearings.

The state's attorney wants plenty of time in which to prepare a case against them without giving the men a chance to defend themselves. The state's attorney's men may take the case to a grand jury and ask indictments before April 17. In that way the men who are charged with conspiracy and assault would not have a chance to prove their innocence till they were brought to trial.

Eight other strikers have been indicted, it was learned yesterday. They were charged with malicious mischief and conspiracy to do an illegal act. According to the information in the hands of the union lawyers the men are charged with having entered the plant of Blum and Templer at 178 W. Adams St. on the 27th of February, the first day of the strike, and having called the workers there out on strike.

The eight men who are reported indicted are: Sam Ross, Adolph Rodinowitz, Hyman Goldman, Bruno Bontwisky, Joe Gallor, Dan Glassman, Harry Matin and Charles Roof.

Trude Discharges Fourteen.

Fourteen strikers were discharged in So. Clark St. police court yesterday when their cases were called. Judge Trude discharged them after a trial in which all of the cases were massed.

Less Than Five Minutes.

The mass trial took little more than five minutes. The police merely said that the girls had been picketing and the judge discharged them. The judge has repeatedly told the police that arrests for picketing should be made under the injunction issued by Judge Sullivan. That has had no more effect on the police who have continued to try to arrest all pickets who came anywhere near the strike district. That the police are only trying to accommodate the bosses is proven by the fact that arrests are made when they cannot prove to Judge Trude that the girls should be arrested.

Sullivan Frets Again.

In Judge Sullivan's court the judge got worried as to the method he should use to prove to the strikers that his injunction and the dignity of his court is not a joke. He asked Peter Sissman what method he would use to impress on the strikers the fact that he had issued an injunction and that it should not be violated.

Sissman told him that the strikers believed that the law which permitted him to issue an injunction, have persons brought before him for violating it, and trying them for that violation was wrong. He said that as long as the strikers believed that they would undoubtedly treat his injunction as they have been treating it.

"When the people who violate the injunction of this court are brought in here and tried by the same man who issued the injunction they very naturally resent the operation of such a law," he concluded.

Both the prosecution and the defense summed up the evidence against the various strikers who have been tried and on whom judgment has not been passed.

Sullivan Is Bosses' Judge.

Constantly during the summing up of the evidence in favor of the strikers which Sissman made the judge would interrupt and try to make a point against them. The judge said that he had made careful notes of all the testimony and that he did not need Sissman to refresh his memory. He seemed from his remarks to have made notes only of the testimony of the bosses and their witnesses. He was constantly reciting from his notes and on one occasion very incorrectly.

Five more strikers were brought into Sullivan's court to prove to the honorable that they had no contempt for him. They were: Anna Galich, Bessie Katz, Joseph Klavitz, Isadore Kreger, and Sam Dorf.

He's Some Robot!

After taking their names the judge set their cases to be heard next Tuesday. They were released on their own bonds.

13 Pickets Arrested.

Thirteen strikers, picketing in the heavy rain yesterday afternoon, were arrested on S. Market street. They are: Samuel Smith, Barnet Soll, Alphons Graham, Frank Rokosh, Ben Stein, Dave Rosenthal, Stanley Skeass, Clara Junburg, Maude Kaleta, Mary Muchelaught, John Swukakyi, Ben Altman and Mary Kozow.

Impeach Coolidge! Let Him Follow Daugherty!

Harry M. Daugherty is out.

The worst attorney general that corrupt American capitalism ever produced has been forced to resign.

But he is only one of the great army of grafters in high places. He is only a cog in the whole rotten capitalist political machine.

• • • •

The DAILY WORKER has fought incessantly for the ousting of Daugherty. It fought Daugherty because Daugherty is typical of capitalism. Every blow the DAILY WORKER directed at Daugherty was a blow intended for the decadent social system that produced the Harding regime, the most vicious and debased in all American history; that gave us Coolidge, the Strikebreaker President; that spawned the democratic labor-baiter, Attorney General J. Mitchell Palmer, succeeded by the republican, Daugherty, who did the dirty work of the big business interests when he raided the convention of the Communist Party in Michigan, and when he fought the railroad strikers, hitting alike at the political and the industrial organizations of the workers.

• • • •

The capitalist press will again begin to cry "Enough!" It will use the ousting of Daugherty as an excuse to call off the investigations in Washington. It will try to cover up the filth in the nation's capitol—to counteract the stench that arises everywhere.

But the DAILY WORKER will fight on. It will continue to unmask corruption in capitalist government, to reveal the real nature of big business rule.

• • • •

The same money that bought Harding's nomination and election in 1920, bought the nomination and election of Cal Coolidge as vice president.

If the Harding administration was corrupt, Coolidge was a part of that administration.

Coolidge knew of the bribery, not only in the peddling of oil leases, but in all the branches of government. And he remained silent, acquiescent.

It was Coolidge who sent his private telegrams to "Eddie" McLean, the capitalist editor, and the goat, Fall, at Palm Beach, Florida. Coolidge, even if he sits in a high place, is just as guilty as the hungry receiver of the cheapest graft.

• • • •

If impeachment proceedings are not brought against Cal Coolidge, who held on to Daugherty to the very last, then the ousting of Daugherty means nothing.

COOLIDGE MUST BE IMPEACHED. HE MUST BE DRIVEN FROM OFFICE.

• • • •

And the workers and farmers of the United States must organize NOW, must close their ranks everywhere thruout the nation, so that they will be able to take the greatest possible advantage of his going.

Famous Three Year Pact Means Nothing To Big Coal Barons

KANSAS CITY, March 28.—Demand for a cut in wages of forty thousand coal miners employed in the southwestern states, was presented by mine operators to union representatives in a joint conference here today.

At a preliminary meeting before the joint conference the mine owners decided that a reduction in expenses is necessary if the mines are to continue in operation, and voted to reduce wages.

The present contract expires April 1st.

Hiram Reaches Tape Ahead of Cautious "Cal" in S. Dakota

PIERRE, S. D., March 28.—With Hiram Johnson the victor on the face of unofficial returns, managers of the campaign of President Coolidge in South Dakota today messaged the president for permission to start a recount.

Robots Will Murder Each Other in Next War; Exit Heroes

COPENHAGEN, March 28.—Mechanical soldiers, directed by wireless rays, will fight the next war, if the claims of Niels Aasen, Norwegian scientist and inventor, prove true.

Aasen claims to have invented a soldier automaton which can fire 2,000 rounds a minute, thus virtually doing away with human "cannon fodder."

The invention has been offered to the Danish government.

Patient Demands High Fee for Doctor's Attention

The "anesthetic kiss" was introduced today with the filing of a suit for $100,000 by Mrs. Evelyn Siegan, 26, against Dr. Louis M. Myers.

While undergoing examination in the physician's office, Mrs. Siegan charges Dr. Myers put her under an anesthetic and performed his osculatory operation, the bill charges.

PITTSBURGH COAL DIGGERS DEMAND DOLLA FREEDOM

Vote Repeal of Flynn Anti-Sedition Law

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 28.—The Pittsburgh miners passed resolutions for the repeal of the Flynn anti-sedition law and for the release of Jacob Dolla, a victim of the steel strike, by unanimous vote, at their convention in session here.

Surprise was occasioned in the ranks of the progresives when the above action was taken, because of the rock-bound attitude taken on other measures by the machine forces.

However, they will not allow themselves to be fooled by this action, because they realize that such things have been done before and it is a long way from passing a resolution, to forcing action on it.

Well! Well!

They were equally surprised when Feeney, of Coke Region fame, made a good speech in favor of the Dolla resolution, because he has consistently been against anything that has been presented by the progressives. However, he took this occasion to advertise the fact that he was on the job during the steel strike.

The resolution on the question of recognition of Soviet Russia was treated with the same consideration as was done at Indianapolis. The Howat resolution was under discussion at noon adjournment, with Van Bittner having the floor for the beginning of the afternoon session.

Discuss Local Conditions.

The afternoon session was full of interesting discussion on affairs affecting local conditions but the pay roll, true to its to its own cause, say that little consideration was given to any of the abominable conditions described, that is, as far as the voting in the convention was concerned. Of course, they promised that they would look into the cases mentioned and would get settlements satisfactory to the men and the local unions affected.

Delegate John W. Hayman, presented a good argument in favor of a resolution presented by his local, regarding the scales at the mine where he is employed at Washington, Pa. Hayman declared that the scale was so high in the air that neither the company weighman nor the miners' check weighman could see the scales. This made little differences to the machine, for when the vote was taken the machine voted in its usual way and the scales at the Washington mine are still in the air.

OIL SCANDAL HAS MEXICO ON ITS EAR

Oil Men Tried to Split Southern Republic

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, March 28.—Teapot Dome is gushing into Mexico as the mania for deciphering code telegrams spreads across the border.

Sensational Exposures.

The result is a series of exposures no less sensational than those in Washington and involving prominent Mexicans and in part the same figures that have been oil-soaked in the U. S. A.

The newspaper Universal Grafico is running a series of telegrams and letters between Albert B. Fall and his representatives on the American side of the line and Marxian generals here. The facts, tho long suspected, have all Mexico by the ears, for they involve a new partition of Mexico with five northern states and the entire oil fields involved. A secession fomented and financed by American oil and mining interests, with immediate recognition of the secessionists virtually assured by men close to Harding, such as Daugherty and Fall (and even the name of Hughes figuring).

Why were these professional filibusters so anxious to annex the Mexican oil and mine regions, if they were able to use (as they have) the state department of the United States to exact concessions and nullify article 27 of the Mexican constitution?

The answer is found in Teapot Dome. They knew it would be easier to get concessions for a song from men like Fall if the region became American territory than to bully it out of refractory officials. The exposures show that the alleged bandit Villa shot the first briber that was sent to him, and that the second, when he heard of the fate of his predecessor, sold the letter he bore to President Carranza.

Saw Much of Secretary Hughes.

They show further that Fall and his gang financed a revolution by General Cantu in Lower California, but that it fell thru. The disreputable General Gonzales, member of Carranza's cabinet; General Pelaez, one of the leaders of the recent rebellion, and General Cuellar, were all tools. A certain "Caso" whose real name has not yet been decoded, "has of late (to quote one of the telegrams) seen a good deal of Hays (Charles Evans Hughes) and reported made good impression."

"He (Caso) and Garza (General Cuellar) have also seen Thomas (Fall, then secretary of the interior). Latter apparently well impressed with Garza."

All these and many more things the telegrams and letters reveal. Continuing the same telegram which was sent by W. F. Buckley, who signed himself "Langford," to J. H. Sears in the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles, and decoding it as far as possible we find:

"General Cuellar has apparently made deal with California Company (Doheny). Mona (General Gonzales) is working hard and is looked on favorably by Dover (Daugherty) and other friends of Haynes(President Harding)."

Recognition by U. S. Promised.

Another telegram from Buckley to Sears reads in part:

"I have been advised definitely that Company (the government of the United States) will immediately give appraisal (recognition) to Thompson (Palaesz) if he will take land. I have so advised him. I also think company would give appraisal to ANY ONE WHO MAKES A CREDITABLE SHOWING . . . and that we can immediately thereafter secure from the company all manner of facilities at boundary and soon thereafter secure appraisal."

"If you will meet me at a place designated by you on the border I promise to bring to our conference one of the most eminent statesmen in the United States with powerful influence with BOTH OUR NATIONAL POLITICAL PARTIES relative to questions pertaining to Mexico. I refer to U. S. Senator Albert B. Fall . . . no living American knows the conditions in Mexico better than he. Now, General Villa, I have discussed this question thoroly with Senator Fall and most of the prominent mining men of Chihuahua, and the press of this country is generally with you in forming a stable government, especially IN NORTHERN MEXICO . . . I grimly believe that he (Fall) and some of his friends (and you) can organize a plan to forward your interests, there being only one condition that they will require of you—that is, that you protect American lives AND PROPERTY. . . With a combination like this to assist you, you will soon have large revenues from mines of Chihuahua and from many other sources. . . ."

This letter is signed by Chas. F. Hunt and dated El Paso, Jan. 17, 917, just before the outbreak of the ar and under Woodrow Wilson's ministration. The telegrams are July, 1921, under the Harding inistration.

Trachtenberg Ends Successful Tour In Nutmeg State

Alexander Trachtenberg has just ended his tour of Connecticut, speaking to large meetings at Bridgeport, Waterbury and New Haven.

In Waterbury, the "brass town", uniformed police and police not in uniform attended the meeting in considerable numbers. The mayor of Waterbury is a very cautious man and believes in preparation. A little personal conversation with the police however, brought out the welcome information that they were glad to be detailed to hear a lecture on Soviet Russia rather than walk the streets in the bitter cold weather. And after the meeting they all voted the speech acceptable and interesting.

The meeting in New Haven was attended by a goodly sprinkling of Russian anarchists and Social Revolutionaries. As happened once before, they attempted to monopolize the end of the meeting by asking all the questions and doing all of the discussing. But as before, they did not get away with it. When Trachtenberg pointed out (these counter-revolutionists were much concerned about freedom in Russia) that Soviet Russia did not intend to permit that kind of freedom which had as its aim the assasination of the Soviet leaders and the reinstitution of the reactionaries, the audience approved with loud applause.

Scott Nearing Bursts Free Speech Fetters On Stamford, Conn.

The Scott Nearing meeting at Stamford, Conn., ended the reign of suppression in this city and it is now to be hoped that free speech and assemblage will suffer no further assaults here. This was the first open meeting the Workers Party has held in this city. The audience was large and "select" for federal agents, the wife of the judge and some of the high school faculty were present. The many workers who attended, however, appreciated the lecture, "Oil and the Germs of War," most. Many questions were asked after the lecture.

In Hartford the largest meeting in the history of the party was held. Seven hundred people filled the Grand theater and a collection of $125 was taken. Two hundred copies of The DAILY WORKER and much other literature was sold. The audience signified its willingness to attend future Workers Party meetings by giving names and addresses so that notification can be sent them.

The Bridgeport Nearing meeting was held in Metal Trades Hall. Every seat was filled. Here Nearing spoke on the Teapot Dome scandal. He stressed the importance of the June 17 convention and the organization of a class farmer-labor party as the beginning of the end of bribery, corruption and exploitation of the workers and farmers.

Soviet Recognition Necessary to Relief Of U. S. Farmers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Debate on the McNary-Haugen export marketing bill in the senate is expected to renew discussion of the do-nothing foreign policy of Secretary Hughes, which was last taken up when Senator Borah's resolution calling for recognition of Russia was before the upper house.

It has been Borah's contention, and the belief of most of the progressives on both sides of the aisle, that the American farmer cannot get higher prices for his products until the people of Europe are enabled to buy more. This means reconstruction of Europe, relations with Russia, evacuation of the Ruhr by the French, and credits to Russia and Germany.

Senators Shipstead and Magnus Johnson have insisted that the farmers of the west are no longer to be saved by credit if they cannot get a price for their crops equal to the cost of production. They indorse the demand that the state department seek peace instead of further trouble in Europe.

California Supreme Court Rebukes Judge For Prejudiced Trial

(By The Federated Press)

SACRAMENTO, Calif, March 28. The California supreme court has refused to review the Flanagan and Stangeland criminal syndicalism cases, in which the appellate court has reversed the decision convicting these two men. The appellate court had also reprimanded Judge C. O. Busick for his prejudice in dealing with this and other criminal syndicalism trials. The defense will now move immediately for a transfer of Flanagan from San Quentin and Stangeland from Folsom to the Sacramento county jail. It is expected however that the cases will be dismissed before another trial date is set.

FARMER-LABOR UNITY HOLDS IN MINNESOTA

Non-Partisan League Will Co-operate

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 28.—Contrary to statements circulated in the hostile press, the Non-partisan league of Minnesota has not broken with the Farmer-Labor Federation headed by William Mahoney of St. Paul. At its recent convention the league voted to affiliate with the federation. The league will retain its identity according to the terms of the arrangement worked out with the larger body.

Plan of Action.

The Non-partisan league will hold on to its paper, the Minnesota Leader. The plan under which the league will work with the federation is briefly as follows:

1.—The federation will concentrate in cities and towns and unorganized territory.

2.—The league will continue its organization work in its present territory.

3—The league will continue its paper, the Minnesota Leader.

4.—The league will pay dues to the federation on the same basis as labor unions, that is, 2 cents per month per capita as provided in its constitution.

The central committee of the Farmer-Labor Federation met last Saturday and appointed the following executive committee to act between the meetings of the central committee: Walter J. Kennedy of Simpson; Fred E. Osborne of South St. Paul and R. D. Cramer of Minneapolis. William Mahoney of St. Paul, chairman of the central committee, and Ralph Harmon of South St. Paul, secretary, also will be ex-officio members of the executive committee. Mr. Mahoney will be the chairman of both committees.

"Farmer-Labor Advocate" Organ.

It also was decided to make the Farmer-Labor Advocate of St. Paul, started about a year ago, the official organ of the federation.

The central committee members who attended the meeting in St. Paul Saturday follow: First district—Walter J. Kennedy, Simpson, Non-partisan league; J. P. Placek, Austin. Second—John F. Johnson, Hanska; W. C. Sprague, Madelia, Non-partisan league. Third—Fred E. Osborne, South St. Paul, Non-partisan league; A. C. Welch, Glencoe, Non-partisan league. Fourth—Frank Fisher, St. Paul; Frank Starkey, St. Paul. Fifth—R. D. Cramer, Minneapolis; J. O. Johnson, Minneapolis. Sixth—A. H. Hendrickson, Sauk Center, Non-partisan league; E. W. Anderson, Becker, Non-partisan league. Seventh—Judge Harold Baker, Renville, Non-partisan league; Heming Nelson, Atwater, Nonpartisan league. Eighth—George E. Webster, union man, Hibbing; H. W. Dart, railroad brotherhood, Proctor. Ninth—J. C. Pratt, Crookston; Louis Engstrom, Roseau, Non-partisan league. Tenth—C. R. Hedlund, Minneapolis; G. H. Lunberg, Montrose, Non-partisan league.

Cop Transgresses Etiquette.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28.—When a poor working man is beaten up for resisting an officer that ends it. But when nine business and professional men were arrested in a drinking row at a fashionable restaurant, one newspaper was too delicate even to mention their names, while the policeman who handled the men a bit rough and the sergeant who didn't stop him have both been suspended from the force.

Ohio Non-Union Mine Conditions Related By Correspondent

A letter describing the bitter non-union conditions in the mines near New Port, Ohio, has come to the DAILY WORKER from John J. Moravesky, a union miner there. The Walford Coal Co., and other companies there have been operating non-union for three years.

Miners, who are working only on a part time basis are getting $4.00, $4.50 to $5.00 for outside work and $5.00 to $6.00 for inside day men, with tonnage rates for loaders only 60 cents. The union scale price is $6.88 for outside work and $7.50 for inside work, with loaders paid 78.8 cents per ton, besides pay for dead work. For men with families ranging up to seven children the non-union wages, at irregular employment, represent the direst poverty.

The non-union coal mines there are surrounded by union mines, but there is danger the non-union area will be extended.

Our correspondent tells of a United Mine Workers" organizer being stoned away from the premises of the company. The bosses forbade him admission and some of the stones were flung by "100 Per Cent American" scabs.

Nine men who listened to the organizer were discharged and ordered to move from their company houses.

The bosses say they can't pay the union scale and sell coal for $1.80 a ton but they do not say that M. S. Wolford and Edgar Wolford, his son, control the majority of the company stock and that these two are buying coal from the Wolford Coal Co., and retailing it for $7.50 a ton at their coal yard under the name "Fountain Coal Co.," Akron, Ohio.

Workers in Akron, Ohio, and elsewhere, should buy only union coal and help the miners to win, the miner urges rightly.

Oranges Rotting In Florida Orchards Thru Dealers' Greed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DADE CITY, March 28.—Wholesale waste of fruit is going on in Florida orchards because the owners will not pay enough to make it worth while to gather it. Right near Dade City thousands of bushels of oranges are rotting on the ground in the groves, going to waste. The price is only 75 cents per gathering a crate, or a little over 1 1-2 bushels.

Organizer F. E. Marshall, of the Farm-Labor Union of America, reports that there are now about 100 members in Pasco county in spite of the opposition of local dealers.

California Cattle Kings Fattening Off Hoof-Mouth Disease

(By The Federated Press)

SACRAMENTO, Calif., March 28. Quarantine headquarters for the foot and mouth pestilence which has been affecting California cattle has accused several large cattle owners of the state of having deliberately allowing their herds to become infected so that they could be killed and the owners collect the indemnity paid by the state and federal governments for all cattle so slaughtered. The bureau in charge states that henceforth all such cases will be fully prosecuted and payment will be refused for animals infected with the disease on purpose to collect the indemnity.

JOB SHORTAGE GROWING, SAYS LELAND OLDS

United States Seeks World Control

At another successful monthly meeting of the T. U. E. L. at North-West Hall, Leland Olds of the Federated Press sketched in figures and statistics the growing power of American imperialism and it's effect on the increasing unemployment.

"The conduct of the war, the peace treaty, today's maneuvers of Morgan and our own Hell 'n Maria Dawes, are all steps having in view the placing of the economic control of the world in the hands of U. S. bankers," said the speaker.

"Since 1916" he continued, "the Navy League and the banking interests have been outspoken in their plans that the American dollars replace the pound sterling as the monetary standard of the world—and that we have a strong navy to back up the American dollar."

Olds Gives Figures.

In figures on our basic industries he pointed out the coming serious unemployment. "The attempt is already being made," he said, "to lengthen hours of work and decrease wages as part of the plan of the American bankers to gain the position held by England for the past century, in whose grip rested the world's economic control."

Earl Browder, editor of the Labor Herald, whose summary of the most important developments in the world of labor are becoming an outstanding feature of these meetings spoke on "The Situation in the German Trade Unions." He pictured briefly the disintegration of the German trade unions under the past reactionary leadership. "The situation has become so serious," explained the speaker, "that today they are forced to appeal to Sam Gompers for their wages. The press "he continued," is ruined. Today the once mighty unions are hardly able to publish a small weekly bulletin. And the speaker felt sure they owed the printer for this.

Communists Only Hope.

"The growing power of the Communists who are the only force holding the unions together today in Germany is the only hope of the German workers," the speaker explained.

The reports of the delegates were featured by the summary presented by A. Overgaard of the machinists on the situation in Toledo, where T. U. E. L. members are being expelled from the union on charges of "overthrowing the government" and because the accused members talked often "of Russia and China" and the officials "don't like it."

Has Money for Sluggers.

ST. LOUIS, March 28.—The Manganese Steel Co. refuses to grant the new $7.50 a day scale of union molders, an increase of 50 cents. But at a hearing of an injunction suit brought by the company against the union it was disclosed that the firm has been paying $10 a day to deputies to "guard" the struck plant. The company wants the court to stop by an injunction the effective picketing which has been carried on by the union since last October. The company also insists on the right to fix the price of piece-work "without interference" from the union.

"Ancient History"--But the Workers Never Forget

The Chicago Tribune and the Union Trust Company wonder why the DAILY WORKER cannot consider their school land lease deal "ancient history" and let it go at that. They feel that the workers ought to forget.

When the Tribune put over its 99-year school lease steal in 1880, it no doubt hoped the workers would forget. It showed its brazen indifference to public protest when, in 1895, it had its lawyer, president of the school board, wipe out the 10-year revaluation clause.

Both the Tribune and the Union Trust Company are rich and powerful. But 99 years is a long time and many things are more than likely to happen before the year 1980. The 56 years ahead are not yet "ancient history." They contain many days of retribution for the plunderers of the at present poorly organized masses.

The Union Trust Company now has the school land lease to the property at the corner of Dearborn and W. Madison Streets, which it calls the "heart of the business center of Chicago." It is able to put up a big fight for its robber's loot.

It has on its board of directors:

Richmond Dean, vice-president of the Pullman Co., the sleeping car trust.

Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

These in addition to a lot of smaller fry. What a power facing the workers and farmers in this one financial institution: a phone magnate, heads of powerful railroads, of the food trust, of the farm implement trust, and the steel trust.

They feel secure, no doubt, in regarding their past crimes, including the plundering of the Chicago school children's land lease as "ancient history."

But the day of the workers and farmers is coming. The oppressed are organizing politically and industrially as never before.

The crimes of the present masters will never become "ancient history." An enraged people will demand that the criminals of today atone for every crime committed.

THE WORKERS NEVER FORGET!

Hiram's "Victory"

In a contest marked by a most shameful squandering of money and purchase of influence, Hiram Johnson has nosed out Cal Coolidge in the republican primaries of South Dakota.

The contest was close all the way thru and was the best proof of the fact that the republican membership sees no difference beween the conservatism of Coolidge and the "progressivism" of Johnson. The very fact that the race was within the republican party shows that they are both reactionaries of essentially the same stripe.

Hiram Johnson cannot afford to celebrate the South Dakota victory with too much pomp and satisfaction. This state was the one place where he centered his heavy artillery. Here Wrigley spearmint-chewing gum dollars, not pennies or nickels, flowed freely. There was a bitter anti-administration fight because of the fierce struggle between Governor McMaster and Senator Sterling for the senate nomination. The indorsement of Sterling by Coolidge automatically put the powerful state republican machine of the governor at the disposal of the Johnson forces. Yet, the California senator won only by a scratch.

The best evidence of the collapse of the Johnson candidacy is afforded by the decision of Wrigley, the millionaire backer and chief supporter of the Californian's aspirations, to stop financing him. Wrigley is jumping on the Coolidge bandwagon. This dooms the hopes of Johnson. Without plenty of money, capitalist politics cannot be played successfully.

Apparently there is a reformation of lines in the republican party, with all shades of big capitalist opinion staking everything on Coolidge in order to beat back the assault on the organization and the fundamental class interests involved. The other day, William Randolph Hearst, who was a loud-mouthed backer of Hiram Johnson all the time, came out with a song of praise and hearty indorsement for Coolidge. Now Wrigley, another Johnson angel, jumps into the openly reactionary fold. These are the signs of a decisive fight in which Johnson, attempting to pose as a middle of the roader, stands no chance.

May Day In Europe

Not since the masses of France and Germany demonstrated in an ugly mood on May 1st, 1920, has the European political powder magazine been in such danger of explosion.

Soon national elections will be held in Germany. All observers are agreed that the parties of the extreme right and the extreme left will make heavy gains. The Social-Democratic Party, occupying the middle role but serving as the kept handmaid of the reactionaries in their dirtiest work against the famished German proletariat, is losing ground rapidly and steadily. The effect on the European politico-economic situation of the inevitable sharpening of the class conflict in Germany ensuing from such a parliamentary situation is inestimable.

The French elections have been deliberately put off until the German results are known. French imperialists will then use the growth of Right and Left strength as a club over the masses. An alarm of new, serious dangers to France will be sounded to mislead the workers. The bogus of Junkerism and Bolshevism will be raised in all viciousness to stampede the masses in support of Poincare and the iron and steel interests organized in the Comite des Forges.

But the French masses cannot be misled so easily now. The workers, poor peasants, ex-soldiers and even some sections of the lower middle classes, are enraged at the Morgan loan and its terms binding the French masses hopelessly to American finance monopoly. The hundred million dollar loan is a drop of relief in the sea of financial and political troubles in which the imperialist French government now finds itself. There is trouble brewing in the Dawes Commission. The German industrialists are showing signs of restiveness with its prospective terms. Poincare is having the time of his life holding on. His resignation and immediate acceptance of the task of forming a new cabinet are only straws showing which way the wind is blowing. A storm of serious dimensions is threatening to overwhelm his present precarious hold on the government.

Under these circumstances the Communist Party of France is bound to make considerable headway. With Communist gains in France and Germany the European volcano is soon bound to rock the continent to its very foundations. May Day in Europe, 1924, deserves most careful watching by the workers of the world.

The Poison of Pacifism

The appearance of a young pacifist, Brent Dow Allinson, at the Northwestern University in behalf of an anti-war movement making rapid headway amongst the students of the country has aroused the ire of the "best citizens" of Chicago and its fashionable suburbs.

The Tribune and the Hearst Herald and Examiner, supposedly actuated by the common danger of the pacifist "scourge" overwhelming the nation, have buried their sharp hatchets of yesterday and are now vieing with each other in a call to arms against the anti-war movement in the local schools. In a series of vicious attacks and malignant diatribes, these saffron journals of the exploiters have denounced pacifism as a danger primarily because of its poisonous effect on the plastic mind of the youth.

Let us analyze a bit this poison in pacifism. Is the opposition of the young students to force, to infernal wars in itself a poisonous doctrine under all conditions? Would the Tribune have the working masses believe this as the cardinal truth of the controversy? If so, would the Tribune indorse the opposite policy of general resource to force, to wars under all conditions? Would the Hearst sheet applaud the use of force by striking coal miners in defense against attacks by hired armed thugs of the operators on the defenseless women and children of the coaldiggers? Would not our morally indignant Tribune and Examiner then engage in denunciation of the force employed by the workingmen in self-defense far more vigorously than the denunciation now resorted to by the pacifists of the capitalist recourse to hellish destruction of the lives of the workers and farmers in support of the imperialist interests of our bosses?

No one will be fooled by the cries of the capitalist press about the "poison" in the pacifist propaganda against militarism and particularly regarding the opposition to supporting this or any other employing class government in its decimation of hundreds of thousands of workingmen in order to defend billions of dollars of capitalist profits and investments. Wars, force, armed struggle are all sacred and moral to the capitalists, their newspapers and churches when employed in behalf of the interests of the exploiting class. Wars, force, armed struggles are unholy and "poisonous to the mind of youth" when employed against the capitalist class. Non-resistance and pacifist doctrine are most holy to the bosses when workingmen are on strike and are terrorized by gunmen in and out of uniform; when bankrupt farmers are being driven off their land at the point of the gun by sheriffs serving the banking interests. Capitalist class interests are the sole criterion of holiness and morality to the Tribune and Hearst.

The poison in pacifism, in so far as the capitalist class is concerned, lies in the fact that it may develop, sooner or later, under certain conditions, into the sound revolutionary doctrine of organized workingclass refusal to fight capitalist wars and into the proletarian desire of fighting the only war in which the workers of the world should engage—the war against capitalist imperialist wars and capitalism.

Chicago Has Made No Effort In Twenty Years to Clean Up Its Ghettoes and Slums

No effort has been made by the city to clean up Chicago's slums and ghettoes in the twenty-four years intervening between the disclosures by the City Homes Association in 1900 of dangerous housing conditions, and the present time.

Charles Ball, who has been a chief in the sanitary department of the city Department of Health for over a decade, told the DAILY WORKER yesterday that all the evil conditions, described in the first extensive survey of housing conditions in this city, still remain, intensified by increasing population and proportionally higher rents.

"For the past twenty-five years," said Mr. Ball, "Chicago has ignored the fast growing slums. She has been content to let the private interests control the housing of her citizens. Private interests have cared nothing for the welfare of the people as a whole. The city ordinances governing apartments are entirely adequate, and the Department of Health hasn't enough men to enforce those we do have."

Many Problems Await Attention.

"There are many housing problems in congested portions of the city, which are awaiting attention," it is mildly put in a Department of Health report. "These are found in buildings constructed prior to the last three years, and mainly buildings constructed for two or more families. Coupled with these are poor insanitary conditions existing in many places of employment. There are also many crowded areas with front and rear tenements with conditions many of which could and should be remedied."

Look in any yearly report of the Chicago Department of Health and you will find similar statements. Always it is pointed out that unbearable housing conditions are still "awaiting attention," and that the number of sanitary and building inspectors is "inadequate to cope with the situation." Compare this state of affairs with any yearly report of the Board of Health of almost any European city. Liverpool Department of Health report states that in one year 2,342 new apartment houses were erected and 386 were caused to be torn down by the Department of Health.

The two investigations into Chicago's housing conditions which are considered by housing experts to be the most authoritative and the most thoro, are the report of the City Homes Association mentioned above, and a survey of the "Cost of Living in American Towns," compiled by the British Board of Trade, admitted to Parliament records, and recently made a United States senate document.

Chicago Noted For Slums.

The latter, reporting on Chicago, shows that conditions have not been improved in this century. On the contrary, they have been allowed to get worse until now Chicago has an unsavory reputation for its slum life. Chicago is known as the town of millionaire packers and steel magnates. Thru its neglect of the congested district, Chicago is also known as a city that cares nothing for the physical or moral welfare of her working citizens. People are too busy making money at private pursuits to take a public spirited view of the housing situation.

"The building of houses for sale is done almost entirely by private speculation," the British experts point out. "In the past a large proportion of the houses in Chicago, particularly in the poorer districts, have been erected with little regard for either building or sanitary regulations, and in large areas conditions exist today which call for determined action on the part of the health authorities. Statistics reveal appalling conditions of housing, great overcrowding, and acute destitution.

"An inspection made for the purpose of this report of the districts described in the report of the City Homes Association in 1900, show that no general improvement has taken place in housing conditions, and that in some respects they are getting worse.

"The crowding together of these several storied tenements would of itself be prejudicial to the health of the inmates, but when workshops and stables are found in the rear, as often happens, the evil is intensified. Moreover, a large proportion of the frame buildings, which were but flimsily constructed at the outset, are now old and in a neglected condition."

Buildings Erected For Profit.

"Most of these buildings were erected without any provision against damp, a defect which is all the more serious in Chicago owing to the marshy soil, and the fact that during heavy rains the sewers overflow, and to the large number of basement and cellar dwellings.

"During the heat of summer the pavements are overcrowded at night with men, women and children who, finding the stifling atmosphere of their overcrowded quarters insupportable, prefer to sleep in the open air. A generation of slum dwellers is growing up in this large district of squalor which in the future will hardly fail to increase the gravity of Chicago's social and municipal problems."

The above districts mentioned by the London visitors did not include South Chicago and the stockyards district, as they were recognized to be, by far, the worst in the city. Of these two sections, it is briefly mentioned that "Back to back houses of wood, resting on piles largely predominate, and a great number of cellars and basements are inhabited. Beds are crowded together and are often occupied by day and night workers in turn."

"Large sections of the city," the report concludes, are constantly filled with dust and clouds of smoke from vast numbers in adjacent foundries and railroads in adjacent districts. The air is further polluted by piles of refuse accumulating in the streets and alleys. Forty five per cent of the people live in rear flats, rear buildings or basements, with small windows and no sunlight. Consumption is steadily increasing among the poor of Chicago generally, and the need for better housing is urged."

Nothing Has Been Done.

In a quarter of a century, the municipal government has done absolutely nothing to remedy these conditions. Private real estate concerns, have been the cause or the death of hundreds from disease, and the ill-health and extreme discomfort of many thousand more. It is time the working people of Chicago saw to it that the city departments were no longer used as mediums to carry on graft, or to give favorites political patronage. It is time the wishes of the private real estate concerns were ignored, and their influence curbed, in order to get something done to abolish the frightful slums of the city.

Unemployment in the United States

follow the direction of the following slogans:

Political.

Government operations of non-operating industries and shops.

Inauguration of public works.

Nationalization of mines, railroads and public utilities.

Abolition of child labor.

Unemployment insurance administered by the workers.

Grants by the government.

Industrial.

Industry must be responsible for maintenance of its workers.

Equal division of work among members in each industry and shop.

Assessment of employed for relief of unemployed.

Establishment of control committees of workers to regulate production and investigate accounts.

Struggle against sabotage of employers.

Unemployment insurance supported wholly by the employers, and administered wholly by the workers.

In every action the aim shall be to accomplish the utmost of political enlightenment with the greatest possible immediate struggle. The political nature of the fight against unemployment must be developed and strengthened, without carrying the immediate struggle so far ahead of the understanding of the workers as to destroy the mass character of the movement. It shall be a major effort to actually obtain all possible immediate benefits for the unemployed, which must be made the basis for wider demands and more intense struggle. The trade unions, all workers' organizations, and the unorganized employed, must be drawn into organized participation in the unemployed demonstration and actions. The slogan of "Solidarity of interest between the employed and unemployed" must be heavily stressed at all times.

The methods and instruments of action in the fight against unemployment will include every section of the organized labor and revolutionary movement. In all political actions of the Party the unemployment issue must be brought to the fore more and more as the industrial crisis develops. The issue of unemployment must be raised in all councils, conventions, and other gatherings of workers, by proposals of concrete actions, including joint committees of trade unions, etc., with the unemployed, demonstrations, deputations to governmental bodies with demands based upon the slogans of the struggle, and in all shops and factories by proposals for action uniting the employed with those thrown upon the streets.

The Workers Party must be made the organizational and ideological center for the entire movement. The Party press must develop an agitational and educational campaign on unemployment, giving an increasing amount of attention and space to it. Every Party committee must make a special study of unemployment as it develops its particular sphere of activity and report from time to time to the Central Executive Committee. Workers Party members must participate in a leading position in every action of the unemployed, giving it direction and consciousness.

As unemployment develops upon a mass scale nationally, which is definitely to be expected in the not distant future, the Party must take the lead in simulating, initiating and organizing, councils of the unemployed in co-operation with the unions and other workers' organizations, upon a local, state, industrial and national basis.

(Note on Textile Industry.)

The textile industry is like coal mining and copper, suffering from a large shift in production from one field to another. This makes the unemployment problem severely felt in many New England textile centers which are operating at from 20 to 60 per cent of capacity. In the textile industry as a whole, however, there is not the paralysis indicated by the condition in New England, because the southern mills are running at 100 per cent to 130 per cent of single shift capacity. The average for the textile industry as a while is around 94 per cent at this time.

Thus the acute unemployment in Fall River, Lawrence, New Bedford, the Pawtucket Valley, etc., is largely caused by the shift in production and not by a crisis in the textile industry as a whole. The completion of the great textile merger of a year and a half ago, which centralized almost the entire industry, has made it possible for the textile trust to close down the New England mills and throw the production into the southern section without causing injury to the capitalist interests involved. The increased profits from the lower wages and child labor of the south go to pay interest on the idle investments in the north.

The comparison between the total employed in December, 1922, and December, 1923, does not, of course, give anything like a complete picture of the employment condition in the textile industry. Employment figures month by month for the years 1921-22-23 shows the stretch between the low and high points, which are January, 1921, and March, 1923, respectively, to be a little over 62,000. More illuminating are the yearly averages which are for the three years, 255,580; 248,361, and 278,331. The number employed for December 1923, is seen to be 24,000 or a little below the peak figure and 38,000 of 17 per cent above the low point. It is interesting to note, however, that there is no such tremendous fluctuations in the yearly averages.

ing" at the time when the new economic policy was introduced, three years ago. One or two hundred thousand members were thrown out. Any worker or peasant, whether Communist, might bring charges against a party member, that he was acting unworthy of a Communist—that he got drunk or profiteered or was rough with the workers under him. The hearings were open; if the Party considered the member a drawback, he was thrown out.

Less spectacular "cleanings" go on constantly without comment. I have met Communists in the past two years in Russia who were causing chaos who were playing petty politics, who were destroying efficiency by personal grudges. I have felt utterly hopeless of the department or industry in which they worked. Then after six months or a year, I have suddenly heard that these men had been "cleaned out" of the party and transferred to jobs of unimportance and I have known that other people than myself had observed them, and that a force was constantly acting, sometimes delayed and sometimes mistaken but striving for the purity of the Communist ranks. Only this autumn the Central Committee of the Party laid hands on certain high officials in Moscow and sent them down for temporary jobs in the provinces for no other reason than that they were "living too much like bourgeois and getting out of touch with the common people."

Hard Workers.

Half a million men organized on such terms are scattered across Russia. North of the Arctic Circle, south of the Caucasus, east of the Volga, I found them in the timber industry and little provincial towns, a far-flung group sent out to be ministers of finance in little republics, or sawmill workers laboring to increase production. Every large factory, every notable village, has its Communist nucleus. If any factory had no Communists, some would be sent from Moscow to get jobs there. They would do the work of foremen, or machinists or carpenters or managers. But they are expected to work harder than anyone else, to stay later, to be examples of loyalty and energy, to know the demands of the workers and explain to them the plans of the government. They are expected to secure and hold political leadership by constant diligence in public affairs.

About once a year the basic problems of policy arising in government go out to a party referendum.

The Communist group in every factory and village will debate it, and send delegates to a district meeting. The district meeting will discuss it again, among other questions, without censorship and with concrete charges of oppression and abuse of power. The districts will then send delegates to regional conferences and thence to the Caucasian or Ukrainian or White Russian Party Congress; till at last the views of the entire membership meet and mingle in the great All-Russian Congress, ultimate authority on the policy of Russia's ruling Party.

When policy is once determined, whether it be a question of the management of heavy industry, or of the relation of little nationalities within the Soviet federaion—it becomes the duty of all party members to go home and explain to the people of Russia just why the decision was reached. It is their job to justify the government to the people, and see that the complaints of the people reach and influence the government before the pressure becomes too great. Long before the petty discontents of peasants or coal miners or Ukrainians or Armenians can reach the stage of organized protest, a vast network of the Communist machine detects these discontents and appraises them. A recent series of strikes in South Russia caused much searching of heart in the Central Executive of the Party. "What is the matter with our local Communist groups," they asked, "that they did not discover these discontents and meet them in time."

Party Realistic.

In its daily action the Communist Party is highly realistic. While it has a definite goal for Russia's future development, it does not attempt to enforce that goal at once. It caters to popular desires, trying always to mold that desire in the direction of its own aims. For instance, there is a great desire among peasants for modern agricultural machinery; the government imports machinery, but sells by preference thru peasants' co-operatives which farm their land in common. That is one typical instance of the use of economic pressure to guide the development of Russia in the direction it wishes.

They all know the job they are on, and their part in relation to Russia and the rest of the world. The Communists in the oil industry know the importance of oil in the world's commerce; the Communists who died fighting the famine did so knowing that agriculture was the basis of Russia's reconstruction. The Communists on low wages in the schools know what depends on the education of the youth towards the goal they have set.

They are not on a personal job; they are on a state-wide job, and they know it. Even mortal disease does not release them; it merely transfers them to other work. I met a man who had been general of an army in Siberia and was now dying of tuberculosis in a little provincial town, transfered to secure a better climate, but still working on. I knew a young boy who spent four years in Hungarian prisons and has incurable heart trouble from the tortures he endured; he is in the far north building roads where the open air life will help keep him alive a little longer.

Why should anyone enter a Party which demands such discipline? For the fun of building on the greatest undeveloped lands of the world a Workers' Republic, the next great forward step in history. There are always people who would rather run public affairs than enjoy private comfort. The organization of the Russian Communist Party allows these people to choose themselves by a hard and simple test. It is a disciplined oligarchy which anyone may join if he would rather organize a co-operative commonwealth than be comfortable.

A Strong Challenge

Young men, energetic men, respond quickly to such a challenge. Behind the Communist Party lies the League of Communist Youth, almost equal in numbers to the adult party, also under discipline which increases as the years go on, preparing to enter into government. Behind them are the Young Pioneers, who already have no memories antedating the Revolution.

Just as a piece of statecraft, quite aside from its working class significance, the Communist Party of Russia is a rather wonderful machine. It has its methods of dectecting discontent before this reaches the dangerous stage. It has its methods for keeping its own ranks pure and energetic. It has its test for selecting out the men and women who are really more interested in "politics," that is, in managing public affairs, than they are in any private recompense. . . . Some day some of its methods may fail; failure is always possible to any human organization. But the Party is making plans for developing a Workers' and Peasants' Republic towards a co-operative commonwealth thru a long term of years, with perfect confidence that it will be able to keep power. There is no sign of any organization in Russia likely to contest its power, in even a single state or city.

Unemployment in the United States

Statement adopted by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

UNEMPLOYMENT is a constant scourge of the workers under capitalism. It is ever present in some degree, except in those periods when rival groups of imperialists whet the workers to murdering each other and when production of war materials temporarily absorbs the full labor forces; in "normal times" it is the so-called industrial reserve army, while in times of acute crisis, unemployment throws millions of workers upon the streets takes on a mass character it but brings into bold relief the inherent problems that face the working class at all times.

Mass unemployment, however, does present its own distinctive problems in the character of the immediate struggle of the workers, particularly of those directly involved. It, therefore, becomes of vital importance for our Party to have exact knowledge of the growth and extent of unemployment, its sectional and industrial variations, its tempo of development, and to prepare definite lines of action for the workers in their struggle against its devastating effects.

Immediate Cause of Present Unemployment.

The capitalist system of the world has, since 1919 and up to the latter part of 1923, presented a spectacle of constantly declining production and growing unemployment. It is in the throes of the most profound crisis of history. Many millions of workers are deprived of all chance to make a living, and those who work have their wages constantly driven down. The United States is an integral part of world capitalism, and it is impossible that it should escape participation in this crisis.

In 1921, when the first big drop in exports to Europe from the United States occurred as a result of Europe's bankruptcy, there were 5 to 6 millions of workers thrown out of employment in the resulting depression. But in spite of the fact that in 1922 and 1923, exports declined still more, yet American capitalism was able temporarily to recover itself, increase production to new high levels, and generally to restore "normalcy."

The principal factor in this temporary recovery in the face of lost export markets was an unexampled domestic market, created by great capital expenditures, chiefly in the tremendous boom in the building industry, great replacements and extensions on the railroad systems of the country, and also in the unheard-of expansion of the automobile and oil industries. More than ten months ago, however, Roger Babson was pointing out what the Communists knew, that "Many of the men now getting an increase in wages will be out of work before 1924 is ended."

The domestic markets could not continue indefinitely to absorb the high production of American industries under the limitations of capitalism. The turning point came in May, 1923, and industry has been on the down-grade since that time with a growing accompaniment of unemployment. This downward tendency will, in the not distant future, develop again the phenomena of mass unemployment in the United States.

Present Extent and Rate of Unemployment.

We are certain that unemployment on a mass scale will face the working class in the near future. That does not mean that we can say positively that it will be in the summer of 1924, or the winter of 1924-25 or even that it may not be held off until the summer of 1925. The tendency is fixed by broad underlying factors which do not admit of unemployment being prevented, but the tempo of development is subject to variation by many minor factors.

Thus at the present moment there has been a distinct check in the downward trend, with many factors in the industrial situation registering an appreciable improvement. As an example of the facts that substantiate this observation may be cited the record of car-loading for the week ending March 1st, which exceeded by a wide margin the loading record for any week in January, February or March in history.

So eminent an economist as Eugene Varga has said, in his review of the economic situation of the world for 1923: "Production and the whole economic life of the United States and Canada continue on a fairly good level, without so far showing any clear signs of an approaching crisis. We do not wish to say that this crisis will not soon arise. In accordance with the general experience of capitalist production this should be the case in the not distant future, but so far as we can observe there are no objective visible signs at present."

In this judgment the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party agrees with Comrade Varga. The United States is not yet suffering from an acute industrial crisis. The situation has not fundamentally changed since Comrade Varga wrote his report. Unemployment has not developed a mass character in the United States.

The downward tendency of production and the growth of the number of unemployed is, however, distinctly marked and threatening. While it would lead to serious error to overestimate its immediate significance as a national problem, it is still a fact of the utmost importance in its implications for the future. Many facts are at hand to point this out.

For example, in the textile industry (See note on Textile Industry —last page) there is, according to the figure of the U. S. Bureau of Census, (report covering key centers of the industry), a decrease in the number of persons employed from December, 1922, a total of 264,752, to December, 1923, the number of 261,914, or a decrease in the number of employed 2,838 during the year in the centers covered by the report or a little over 1 per cent while the operations of the industry, by volume of production, decreased in percentage of capacity from 74 to 63 in the same period, indicating much partial employment.

Bituminous coal production fell (comparative figures based on the 1913 index) from a peak production during the year of 126, and a yearly average of 114, to but 101 in December, 1923. The building industry estimates a 10 per cent to 15 per cent reduction in operations for 1924. Railroad construction and replacements, optimistically estimated some months ago at two billions of dollars for 1924, has not materialized and will doubtless not be realized in anything like that sum. The railroads have reduced their operating forces by 175,000 during the latter part of 1923 and since. The trend toward unemployment has been accentuated by the hundreds of thousands of farmers driven from the land and into the cities by the agricultural crisis. These are but a few of the objective facts that point to the unquestionable growth of unemployment.

Along with this gradual trend in the general situation goes more violent displacements within certain industries and localities. Thus the coal industry is in the midst of a most difficult readjustment which is throwing large numbers out of employment in the entire industry, while in certain restricted fields the industry is flourishing. Coal mining was so expanded under the necessities of war, that it has a productive capacity 40 per cent above the needs of the domestic market in times of peace. Operators are taking advantage of this fact to shift production from union fields and high-cost mines, to non-union areas and low-cost pits.

This internal adjustment, involving the expulsion of 200,000 miners from the industry by force of starvation, creates a major crisis in the coal mining industry. The copper industry presents a somewhat similar situation, with an industry keyed up to war needs, now cut off from European markets, and with the added complication of new low-cost ore fields recently opened to exploitation with great expenditure of capital which are shifting the center of gravity of the industry toward the new fields, and thereby displacing labor and creating unemployment.

These industrial and sectional problems of unemployment require special programs of action for the workers in the respective fields, coordinated and included in the general struggle, adjusting to local conditions the fight against imminent impoverishment and unemployment; they canot alone, however, be made the basis of a general program to fight unemployment, which must be built upon the situation of the American working class as a whole. On this general situation at this time, we can say that unemployment is increasing and threatens to assume a mass character sometime between the summer of 1924 and spring of 1925, but it has not yet reached that stage.

Program for Fighting Unemployment.

The Workers Party shall take a leading part in the fight against unemployment in all its phases. The following general considerations will guide our participation in such struggles:

Unemployment is an inevitable accompaniment of capitalism, and can only be abolished with the system that produces it. The struggle against unemployment must be calculated to enlighten the workers to this fact, without dampening the ardor of their struggle but rather intensifying it. To this end, practical sets of demands must be formulated and a program of action established, designed to weld all manifestations of protest against unemployment into a national movement; this must in turn be adjusted to each local and industrial situation in a practical manner.

The slogans and practical actions of the struggle will follow two general channels, the political and industrial; they will be directly against the government as the representatives of the capitalist system, and against the industry and individual employer as the immediate exploiter. These two aspects will often be interwined and interchangeable, but for clearness are considered separately. They will

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG (Anise)

IF TROTZKY and Rykov, and Zinoviev and Kameneff, and the dozen chief men in government in Russia were to die tonight, blown up in some explosion in the Kremlin, the government of Russia would go on without a break. This is what the capitalist groups of earth do not realize, tho the workers of the world know it very well. There would be another great funeral in the Red Square, there would be a confusion of detail in many government offices where the organizing head was gone. But the successors to these men would step automatically into office, or be selected by the appropriate committees, there would not be even a new election needed. The form of government and all its major policies would be untouched.

The Communist Party.

The governing power in Russia lies in the Communist Party, of half a million men and women. They continue from year to year to govern one hundred and thirty million people. Longer than any government in the world they have held power. Cabinets and thrones all over Europe rise and fall, in our own United States we have the periodic shifting of parties, as accumulating discontent throws out the party that is "in," and gives a chance to the party that is "out," until it in its turn disillusions the people, and is replaced by the ever-swinging pendulum of our two-party system.

The Communist Party of Russia, ruling by a one-party system, does not worry about accumulating discontent. It has grown stronger year by year. It expects to keep on growing stronger. It makes plans for five, ten, fifteen, twenty years ahead, expecting to hold government for an indefinite period. As far as observations over a thousand miles of Russian territory and continued for two years indicate, it has a good chance of doing so.

How does it keep control? The answer is not to be found in the annual elections. Once eacr year the people of Russia have, theoretically, the chance of electing an entirely different government. Even from week to week any factory of five hundred workers may recall and replace its representative in the city soviet, the only body to which it elects directly. Practically, however, the results are known beforehand. Representatives change, delegates are recalled and replaced, but the control of the Communist Party goes on.

I visited two elections in Moscow. They take place not by ballot, but in open assembly. Any factory or government department or enterprise with five hundred workers is entitled to one representative in the city council, the Moscow Soviet. Elections last for an entire week, each factory selecting the afternoon which suits it, holding its election meeting on factory time, so that practically all workers attend, hearing reports and choosing representatives.

How They Vote.

I went with the employes of the Foreign Office to see them vote. They had less than 500 employes, so they combined with the State Bank and a few little factories to choose their representatives. They gathered in a central hall; they sang the Internationale and heard reports. A man from the Communist Party made the first report, telling what last year's program had been and how far the government had fulfilled it; what next year's plans were, in city taxes and water supply and municipal repairs, as well as in national issues. His chief appeal lay in pointing out that everyone got more wages this year than last and had better food, more clothes, better living. "The rest of Europe is growing continually worse; Russia is growing rapidly better; vote for the Communist Party which has improved your conditions." Such was the theme of his speech.

The audience was obviously in control of the meeting. They determined how long he should speak, granting him at first twenty minutes and then extending the time. Disappointment swept the hall when no opposition candidates declared themselves. "How dull," said a Communist sitting near me. "Can't they even give us a debate?"

The factories that had an opposition bragged about it. "We had the best election in town," said the Amo Auto Factory. "Three different candidates and lots of attacks on the government. A Social Revolutionary denounced the Communists for failing to keep their promises. 'Five years ago they promised you a new world,' he jeered. 'Now they offer you a better water-supply and a few more electric lights.' . . . There is interest in that kind of election." Yet here also the election was merely an interesting debate; nobody doubted that the Communists would be returned to power.

Is It By Terrorism?

Is it by terrorism that the Communists keep power in such elections? Certainly none was visible on the surface. The audience laughed and asked questions and made comments for and against the speaker. There was no sense of constraint, a good time was had by all. Half a million men do not terrorize one hundred and thirty million by mere openness of discussion unless some other more subtle form of control lies behind it. The Communist control goes farther back into industry and life and is more permanent than any election day meeting.

It is a very remarkable organization—this Communist Party of Russia. Millions of votes are cast for it each year, but these voters do not rank as Party Members. Voting is incidental expression of approval; to be a Party Member is a life-long job. It is to be organized into a compact unit whose purpose takes precedence over every other interest. You are a Communist first and everything else afterwards. You are on call always, to go wherever you are sent in Russia.

It takes from six months to three years to join the Communist Party. You state in your application the kinds of work you are fit for. You go into regular classes to fit yourself; you attend discussions on economics and international relations and internal problems of Russia.

In the far north I met Rimpalle, organizing mica mines and feldspar quarries in an undeveloped region. Hiking ten to eighteen miles daily, wading thigh-deep in swamps, organizing unlettered peasant labor to develop little mines. At the summer's end he brought back from his prospecting one hundred thousand dollars worth of mica; he checked it up in a barn behind the statehouse in the little provincial capitol, and then turned back three days northward to his job. He got for his summer's work "my food and one resoling of my boots." . . . I asked him if he were a Communist, and he smiled shyly and said: "A candidate." When Rimpalle has worked like that for a year or two, he will be admitted to the Party.

Sever Discipline.

All Communists go under severe discipline which enters into their pay envelope and the kinds of work they are allowed to do. They cannot make money by private trade or by exploiting the labor of another. If they get a wage higher than a certain sum, which was once almost nothing, but is now about fifty dollars a month, they must divide the surplus with the Party treasury, which maintains hospitals, day nurseries, sanitariums for the sick and dependents of the Party. If they get even as low as twenty dollars a month, they find it attacked by famine assessments and other emergencies, as well as by ordinary party dues. I know men and women who gave their wedding rings to the famine, because it was voted by the local branch of the party.

Thus the Party builds itself into one solid family, pooling its resources and uniting its forces. This organized force is always ready for action; it can be cast at a word into any part of Russia. When shock troops were needed to stiffen the battlefront, when men were needed to stem typhus epidemics, or to fight famine, or to increase production in some ruined factory or flooded mine—Communists were mobilized and sent to these jobs. The Communists talk always in terms of "fronts." First, there was the war on many fronts; then there was the "famine front"; then the "front of industry," and now the "front of education." This means that, lacking sufficient men for all the jobs of rebuilding Russia, they attack one after another the most important and crying needs, and throw their organized force for a time in that direction.

A girl of my acquaintance was "commissar" of a typhus hospital during the height of the Polish war. She told me how a thousand men were brought in and laid on the floor in the commandeered high school building. They had no soap, no beds, no bedding, no change of underwear for sick, lousy men from the front. "But we mobilized beds and bedding and underwear," she said.

"How does one mobilize underwear?" I asked in curiosity.

"It was a town of sixty thousand souls," she answered. "We sent word that every family should give us one suit of underwear. Of course we could not compel them; we had no authority; it was a voluntary tax. Except for the Communist; Communists are not permitted to refuse. We Communists are making the Revolution; we must give whatever is demanded."

How Graft Is Punished.

Week by week the Communists of my acquaintance receive orders to go on certain evenings to teach reading and writing in factory night schools, or to give certain Sundays to community work. In return for this discipline, this giving up of all human rights, Communists get the job of ruling Russia. They are given trusted posts and job preference in high offices. They do not get as high pay as the experts and technical men employed under them, but they get more honor. The experts are supposed to be working for money; the Communists are supposed to be working for loyalty.

The temptations such men are exposed to can be easily imagined by anyone knowing the ancient habits of bribery in Russia, or even the ordinary desires of human nature. But the Party keeps close watch of its members. Their wages are known; their style of living is apparent. If a Communist is caught in crime against the Republic the penalty is more severe than for the ordinary man. Graft in office, which in others might be merely the bad habit of old Russia, is in him treason to the Revolution. High Communists have been shot for graft in office.

For lesser offenses he may be demoted, or transferred to some harder, less comfortable job in the provinces or even "cleaned out" of the Party. There was a great "clean-

The Struggle Within the Russian Party

Being the continuation of the report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organization.

IN THE resolution passed at our conference, I made use of the expression: The struggle between two fractions within a party which is governing the state contains the germ of two governments. And at the beginning of the year 1918 the germs of two governments existed.

At the present time everybody smiles at the idea that Bucharin and Ooritzky could ever have seriously contemplated deposing Comrade Lenin and replacing him by Pyatakov. But at that time the situation was such that this plan could be brought up in the party of the left social revolutionaries hostile to us.

We were a hair's breath removed from the most appaling disaster. The cause of the revolution hung by a hair. I shall never forget meeting Comrade Lenin in the corridor of the Smolny after we had received the news that the Germans, utilizing our hesitation with regard to the conclusion of the Brest peace, had sent their troops against Pleskau. Comrade Lenin said to me: "Everything seems to be lost. For once in my life I gave way to people who were leading the Party on the wrong path, and now it seems as if the revolution is to be lost thru it."

Danger of Situation.

When it is asserted that we should return to the times of the Brest peace, then we say: No, the lesson which we learned at that time shall not be in vain. It is not such a very great misfortune when the Party commits this or that error, so long as it is made wiser by the experience. The errors committed at the time of the Brest peace have shown us that fractional struggle signifies the decay of the proletarian dictatorship.

Comrades, consider more attentively the atmosphere prevailing in Moscow. We hear that Leningrad is provincial. I take the liberty of believing that this is not quite the case. Leningrad is the central, which is developing more and more. Comrades Sapronov and Preobrazensky say: "To be sure, out there in the provinces they are behindhand and have no comprehension for the attractions of freedom of fraction and discussion," etc. Thus we are simply provincial

And look at what is going on in Moscow. Over every wire and by wireless as well, in every commissariat and sub-commissariat, of which there are a million and one, the whole of the employes occupied in these commissariats and sub-commissariats are all buzzing with the same idea; there is something wrong in their Party, some rupture is preparing in the Party; let us see what is going to happen; let us wait and see how it will end.

Fractions Cause Demoralization.

The same subject matter is busying bourgeois and "state officia." Moscow. It is just as I said on the occasion of the Brest peace. As soon as any differences of opinion arise in Party life these spread at lightning speed over the whole state apparatus, and the state apparatus splits and begins to whisper in corners instead of working. And the first to be delighted at a quarrel within the Party, should a quarrel really come about, would be the bureaucratic section of our state apparatus. Other parties may permit themselves squabbles, they may afford themselves this luxury—they possess neither commissariats nor specialists, nor state officials.

But we may not do this.

In the course of a discussion at Moscow a young comrade observed the whole "mischief" in the Party originated in its having seized power.

Comrades, there is a small grain of truth in this. Formerly, before the Party took over power, and no such pressure was put upon it, it was not troubled with any questions of the state apparatus. Thus it would appear that the whole "mischief" arises from our having taken over power. But allow me to say, comrades, that all that is good also arises from our having taken over power. We formed the Party for the special purpose of overthrowing the bourgeoisie and placing the power in the hands of the workers.

About two weeks ago the discussion took such a turn that some of us said: "The resolution passed at the Tenth Party Congress, prohibiting the formation of fractions, must be cancelled. Unless this is done, no workers' democracy will be able to accomplish anything." There are some less experienced and less diplomatic comrades who are still saying this. Thus, for instance, today's Pravda publishes an article by Commade Krylenko, attorney for the republic. So far as I am aware, Comrade Krylenko does not belong to the fraction of "democratic centralism," but speaks solely as a jurist, from the viewpoint of legality, and says: 'If you do not allow freedom of fighting from a definite platform, then the whole workers' democracy is abolished."

What is a Fraction?

I should like an exact definition of what a fraction or group is. If you do not want fractions, we shall of course agree, as demanded by Party discipline.

"But we are prepared to say that the workers' democracy is again, as it was after the Tenth Party Congress, merely a proclamation upon paper."

I do not know in which direction Comrade Krylenko tends at present, but it seems to me that his profession is leading him astray; he is anxious to have a neatly rounded juridicial formulation of what a fraction is, what a group is, and what a workers' democracy is. Instead of taking life as it is, he is looking for some "code," and stumbles over it. But we are confident of being able to come to an agreement with such comrades as Comrade Krylenko. We believe that he will comprehend that tho it is difficult to draw up a code of criminal law under the conditions imposed by the new economic policy, the working out of a code on groups only requires the good will of a revolutionist who really understands the interests of the revolution, and does not put the question sophistically, asking: "Can I, for instance, join Comrade Preobrazensky?" He receives the reply: "Yes, you can."—"Can I speak in the same nucleus?"—"Yes."—"Can one speak in five nuclei?"—"You can do that too."—"Then it seems to me that this is the solution of the riddle, and that you will have to admit freedom of fraction."

Speak Candidly.

In my opinion, such a viewpoint is unworthy of a revolutionist. No one asks that anyone should not join others, or not take part in the nuclei. No, join the nuclei if you please, but do not forget that we are the sole legal Party in this country, that we are surrounded by enemies on all sides, and that we must not allow the formation of groups.

Two weeks ago the question was raised as to whether we could cancel the resolution passed by the Tenth Party Congress, that is, Comrade Lenin's resolution. Then we plunged into the night. When these comrades saw that it would be so easy to annul the resolution of the Party Congress, that altho Comrade Lenin is ill and unable to take part in the fight himself, he has schooled a number of other people during the course of thirty years, and these know how to defend his cause when he himself is chained to his bed (applause), then they retired to the positions which they had ready, and put the question as follows: It is possible to manage without fractions, but allow us groupings.

To this we replied that we were very will aware that these groupings were nothing more nor less than the same fractions.

Why hide behind pseudonyms?

It is better to speak candidly on the matter, as Comrade Krylenko does.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Central Committee of Workers Party Supports South Slavic Bureau Against Former Editors

The disruptive tactics of former opportunist editors of the South Slavic section of the Workers Party were condemned by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party in a statement which is published herewith:

Dear Comrades: The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, upon the request of the Bureau of your Section, has held an extensive hearing on the controversy between certain members of the South Slavic Section and the Bureau, regarding the attitude of the Bureau toward Cvetkov and Kutuzovich, former editors of the Party organ.

On Feb. 24, members of the C. E. C. met with your Bureau, with Comrades Fisher, Jurich, Horvat, Znavor and Mirakovich also present, and went into the situation at length, hearing statements and arguments from both sides for eight hours.

Since that time both sides have submitted written statements and translations of articles, all of which have been carefully taken into consideration by the C. E. C. We find all elements agreed that Cvetkov and Kutuzovich should not be taken back into the Party.

The issue is between the Bureau, which insists that it has been fighting for a Communist policy in its controversy with the ex-editors, and those comrades who have objections to the personalities and methods of the Bureau.

Supports the Bureau.

The Central Executive Committee most emphatically states that it supports the general line of policy followed by the Bureau of your Section in its fight against the former editors, Cvetkov and Kutozovic who left the paper without the consent of the Bureau, and who left the Party of their own accord. The Central Executive Committee declares that the fight of the Bureau against these former editors and against their influence was and is a fight for a Communist Party and a fight for a Communist ideology in the ranks of the South Slavic comrades. We find this policy justified by the statements published by Cvetkov and Kutuzovich, in the leaflet sent out by them and in the "Novi Swijet," which prove that they do not understand Communism or the functions of a Communist Party. Their false, malicious and unsupported charges of mishandling of money were crimes against the Communist movement. They evidence a strong aversion, not against mistakes of revolutionary propaganda, but against propaganda for a revolutionary program itself. They show affection for bourgeois intellectuals, but strong dislike for proletarian members of their own organization who propagate the class struggle. They act in the capacity of provocateurs, by denouncing the Party in its relations to outside organizations, and in other ways. They repudiate party discipline, and hold to their "rights" to write and say whatever they please, without responsibility to any organization. They published a very demoralizing article in the coal strike, parroting the cheap arguments of the capitalist press and discouraging the strikers, thereby proving that they had not the most elementary knowledge of the class struggle and how a Communist should act. The Bureau acted according to its Communist duty when it took vigorous action against these and other things, which are nothing less than the manifestations of opportunism.

Good Comrades Misled.

It is to be regretted that a few good proletarian comrades have been under the influence of Cvetkov and Kutuzovich, to such an extent that they have defended these un-Communist actions of theirs and have written in the "Novi Swijet" against the Bureau. Party members cannot write for non-party publications, except under the directions of Party committees; when non-Party papers are attacking the Party, it is not permissable that Party members should assist in any manner; but to go into such a hostile paper to air grievances of the Party, is an act which the Party itself cannot allow to continue for one moment. The C. E. C. calls upon every member of the Workers Party to cease writing for, or supporting in any way, the "Novi Swijet."

The Party is not opposed to "intellectuals" in the movement nor is it opposed to cultural activity. True intellectuals who come to the movement to serve it, and not attempt to rule it, are to be welcomed. But the rank and file proletarian comrades must not allow themselves to be terrorized into the belief that only intellectuals are qualified to take a leading part in the movement and that workers should hold their tongues. This state of affairs, fostered for years in the South Slavic section of the Party, is a very unhealthy one.

"Intellectuals" Must Behave.

Cultural activity, so long as it is based upon the class struggle and the Communist program, and does not degrade our Party from the position of fighting leader of the working class into a mere bourgeois educational sect, is to be encouraged and developed. But the Party cannot agree that this necessary cultural work can only be done by certain individuals who try to use their ability and training as a club to force their own direction upon the Party. Cultural work must be developed by the proletarian elements themselves, with the assistance of such "intellectuals" as are willing to subordinate themselves to the interests of the workers and the discipline of the Party. The South Slavic Section of the Workers Party undoubtedly contains men and women capable of developing this feature of your work who are at the same time tried and trusted comrades, with loyalty to the Party and to the Communist International.

Every Good Comrade Welcome.

The Central Executive Committee is not interested in supporting or condemning any individual member of the South Slavic Section. We want to draw every good Communist into active participation in the work of the Section, including those comrades who, thru misunderstanding, have been misled into supporting the enemies of our Party. In your coming Convention we hope that you will have a full and frank discussion which will result in the selection of a Bureau that will have the complete cooperation of every member and which will at the same time have the necessary understanding of Communist principles, Communist discipline, and loyalty to the Communist International. The Central Executive Committee will send a special representative to the Convention to assist in the solution of all problems confronting you, the liquidation of controversies, and the fraternal unification of all true followers of the Communist International for the great struggles which lie before us.

We call upon every South Slavic Worker, members and ex-members of the Party, to return to the work of building up, strengthening and perfecting our Party, to eliminate all old quarrels, to join together in the most energetic participation in our general Party life and Party work in the American class struggle.

United to conquer the future for the Workers Party!

With Communist greetings,
C. E. RUTHENBURG,
Central Executive Committee,
Workers Party of America.

The Development of the Teapot Dome Campaign

Statement of the Daugherty investigation adopted by the Central Executive Committee Workers Party.

THE investigation of Daugherty and the Department of Justice growing out of the Teapot Dome situation affords the Party a splendid opportunity to draw the whole labor moverent into a big political campaign.

There is no man more hated in the whole labor movement, there is no other individual in the whole government bureaucracy against whom an attack can be centered as affectively by the entire labor movement, regardless of differences of political opinion that may prevail amongst the workers, than Attorney General Daugherty.

The Wheeler investigation of the Department of Justice has only begun. It has already proceeded far enough to show that the disclosures in this instance will be at least as significant in its effect on the political situation as the Teapot exposure has been to date.

The Wheeler investigation affords the Party an opportunity to draw the organized labor movement into the role of being the most active and dangerous opponent of Daugherty.

Towards this end we propose the following policy of the Party.

1. The Party must do everything possible to have the Wheeler committee investigate and make public the high handed deeds of the Department of Justice and the Burns Agency in the last national strike of railway shopmen and in other struggles of the workers.

2. The Party members should immediately secure the adoption of resolutions in such labor bodies as Mineapolis, Detroit, Buffalo and Chicago Federations of Labor calling upon Senators Wheeler and Brookhart to investigate the conduct of the Department of Justice and the Burns Agency in the last big strike.

3. These central bodies should ask the Railway Employes' Department of the American Federation of Labor to insist on being heard on the experiences of its membership with the agents of the Department of Justice and the Burns detectives while on strike.

4. That the Party call upon the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to demand that it be given a chance to divulge all the information in its possession about the criminal activities of the Department of Justice and the manipulations of Burns and Daugherty against organized labor, particularly insofar as its right to strike and organize have been flagrantly violated by these department and bureau heads.

5. That our members in all local labor unions shall secure the adoption of resolutions calling upon the executive council of the A. F. of L. to accept the above policy and calling upon the Wheeler committee to go to the bottom of the record of the Department of Justice and its bureau of investigation in strikes, in disputes between the employers and the workers, and in its general activities against working men trying to organize.

6. That the Party take steps to have such bodies as the Civil Liberties Union demand a thoro investigation of the forces behind illegal conduct of the Department of Justice and its raid on the Bridgeman convention and the Trade Union Educational League office in 1922.

7. That mass meetings be arranged by the Party in co-operation with labor unions, farmers' organizations, farmer-labor parties and general organizations of labor on the Daugherty investigations.

8. Tho the Party will undoubtedly be the dynamic force in this movement which must be part of our general Teapot Dome campaign, it would be best to arrange these meetings in accordance with the above policy along the widest possible basis of the united front.

9. That the DAILY WORKER concentrate its greatest attack on Daugherty and Burns from the labor angle. This is especially necessary since Wheeler and his committee are planning to keep the working class angle as much as possible in the background.

10. That the Young Workers League get into the Teapot campaign by making this issue its next major campaign organizationally and in the press.

11. That the National Defense Council map out a program of action whereby it can be linked up with the campaign against Daugherty and Burns.

Conclusion.

One of the main weaknesses of the Party's campaigns to date has been the fact that we have not thrown out sufficient slogans to appeal to all workers, regardless of their differences of opinions, to struggle against the employing class.

The great interest aroused in governmental affairs by the Teapot Dome investigation and the special oportunity afforded us thru the Wheeler investigation to intensify this great interest amongst the laboring masses by giving our appeal a strong labor color enables us to throw fundamental slogans of the following nature which trend to unite the workers as a class against the capitalists as a class and hence against the government as their agency:

(a) Down with the use of government force in strikes and labor disputes.

(b) Down with government by injunction.

(c) Down with the employers' private armies of detectives and gunmen.

(d) Down with all interference with the right to strike and organize.

(e) Out with Daugherty and Burns. Punish them by imprisonment for their high handed violations of the above-mentioned elemenetary rights of the workers as prescribed even by present laws.

(f) Let us organize and get together politically to make impossible the rule of other Dughertys and Burnses. This is the Farmer-Labor political slogan in effect.

The Party of Lenin - - -

By H. GERISH

SINCE the existence of the Soviet government the capitalist, as well as the so-called "socialist" press, has tried to impress upon the minds of the workers of the world that the Communists in Russia are maintaining power only because of the "bloodthirsty Cheka." The proletariat of Russia more than once proved their lopalty to the Soviet government and the Communist Party. The more the capitalist press and the heroes of the Second International raved about "persecution of workers," "jailing of socialists," "suppression of democracy," etc., the more did the workers rally to the support of the Communist Party. For the proletariat of Russia realize that it is due to the leadership of the Communist Party that they were able to come out victorious in the battles against all white guard generals, who enjoyed moral and financial support of the world bourgeoisie and its lackeys of the Second International. The laboring masses of Russia know that it is due to the leadership of the Communist Party, that the Soviet government was able, in 1921, so successfully to liquidate the famine.

Toiling Russia Supports Communists.

The least sign of danger always served as a signal for the whole of toiling Russia to rally under the banner of the Communist Party. Those who were fortunate enough to be in Moscow last summer and witness the great demonstrations of the workers in reply to the Curzon ultimatum will not fail to appreciate the fact that the Soviet government and the Communist Party enjoy the full confidence and support of the whole laboring population.

The mere publication of the Curzon note was sufficient for the workers and peasants of Russia. Without any agitation of any kind, the workers left their places of work and flocked into the streets in hundreds of thousands. Was there any agitation necessary? Not at all. For the workers and peasants of Russia know what war against the Soviet government means. The spontaneous demonstrations thruout the union proved the strength of the Soviet government and the Comunist Party. It proved that while the workers and peasants of Russia do not want war they are, nevertheless, prepared to defend the victories of the revolution with the last drop of their blood. They demonstrated to those who were still in doubt, that a threat against the Soviet government is a threat against them—the workers and peasants.

With the death of Lenin the Communist Party suffered its greatest loss. In every difficult situation the Party could always depend upon Lenin. He could always foresee in advance the difficulties that would face the Soviet government and the Party, and he was always able to adapt the tactics of the Party and the government to the given situation.

Party Membership Increases.

Now, Lenin is no more. The Party will have to carry on the difficult tasks ahead without the aid of his clear mind, and exceptional insight of its great leader and teacher. That the Party will succeed, in spite of all difficulties, there can be no doubt. Lenin has left us a strong, centralized and disciplined party which is supported by the whole of toiling Russia.

Do the workers of Russia realize these difficulties? The best answer is given by the workers themselves. Whole factories of workers thruout the country have sent in applications for joining the Party. Reports to date show that over 120,000 workers have applied for membership in the Party. In Moscow alone over 34,000 applications have been received. In Leningrad over 31,000 workers have applied for membership. And Moscow and Leningrad are no exceptions. From every nook and corner of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republic reports are coming in that the workers are flocking into the Party in thousands. The Russian proletariat is sending its best sons to fill, by their collective work, the vacancy left by Lenin.

It should be remembered that these applications for membership into the Party, come exclusively from workers from the bench.

In conformity with the decision of the Party conference, held in January, only this class of workers are at present accepted into the Party. In order to strengthen the proletarian kernel of the party, the conference resolved to draw into the Party 100,000 workers from the bench within the next year, for the same period closing the doors for all others.

100,000 Members In Six Weeks.

Only six weeks have passed since that conference, and not only must we not wait a whole year in order to add 100,000 workers to the Party, we are already far ahead of that goal.

One illustration will be sufficient to give the reader an idea of the present frame of mind of the Russian workers:

At a meeting of one of the factories in Moscow, at which applications from the workers of that factory were discussed, one of the applicants, an old man of about 58, who has been working at that factory for the last 25 years, was asked: How does he explain the fact that in all these years he did not join the Party, and now has finally decided to apply for membership. The old worker with a determined look in the face replied: "I am an old man. I don't know very much about politics. I only know that my best years I have spent at this factory, and it's only since the October revolution that I felt that my work is worth while. I did not join the Party till now because I considered myself to be too old to be of much use. At the same time Ilyitch was alive. Now, Ilyitch is dead. It is the duty of every honest worker to join the Party of Ilyitch and continue his work."

The last words of the old worker were spoken with tears in his eyes. At the same meeting 56 workers handed in their applications for membership. After the meeting the secretary of the factory committee said: "If this number is not sufficient, we will give more. We will send to the Party the best among us."

Build the Party of Lenin.

These words are repeated in Moscow, as well as in Leningrad, Nizhni-Novgorod, Kharkov, Odessa, Kiev, Tiflis, Vladivostok, Samara, and thruout the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

At the grave of their dead leader and teacher, the workers of Russia proclaim: We shall build and strengthen the Communist Party—the Party of Lenin.

Moscow, Feb. 29, 1924.

CIVILIZATION

Morning:
The city groans,
Embowels, amoeba like, its heritage of putrid living.

Evening:
The city grows dark under a sky of graying blue.
Crevices, between houses, crevices long and narrow
Seep in the darkness.
The groaning of street cars,
The shuddering of a galaxy of whirring wheels,
Factory whistles, clamoring with its insistent
Cry of pain and unwillingness to grant men their
Brief nightly parole.

Night:
The city vomits forth a part of itself,
And ashamed at the paleness of day, with a subdued growl,
Folds a curtain of night on the weary deeds of the bed.

FASCISM; A LETTER FROM ITALY

By G. MASCI

AT the Conference held on December 19th under the direct auspices and in the presence of the Prime Minister Mussolini, between the leaders of Italian industry and the principal leaders of the Fascist Trade Unions, the complete failure of the programs and the practice of Fascism in the spheres of Trade Unionism had to be recognized.

The feverish attempts made by Fascism, before and after having obtained power, to create a trade union movement which would be at its service, are well known. It is also known, how these attempts, while succeeding to a rather considerable degree in the agrarian field, have failed almost completely in the industrial sphere. It was easy for the Fascisti, in view of the life and working conditions of the poor peasants, and of the rural workers dispersed in a great number of villages with feeble ties between the Trade Unions, to destroy the Socialist organizations of the land workers and to force the rural masses by means of physical terror and of the economic boycott, to enter into their corporations. It was otherwise in the industrial sphere, except with the railway employes, amongst whom much can be obtained by state coercion and by the ever threatening menace of discharge, and also with the dockers who had already their strictly guild-like organization determined by the conditions in the traffic at the Italian ports which is developing very spasmodically, in relation to the preponderance of exports and imports and to the seasonal activities for grain, coals and coffee.

Made Up of Criminal Elements.

In the large industrial towns, the Fascists only succeeded in gathering inconsiderable groups, consisting nearly everywhere of unemployed and of criminal elements, who, by means of the Fascist party ticket obtain impunity for sabotage, theft in work-shops and personal violence against foremen. And yet it was necessary for Fascist politics to win the masses at any price.

The Fascist Government can only maintain power so far as it renders life impossible to other organizations which are not Fascist. Mussolini bases his power on large strata of the petty bourgeoisie, which (since they have no function in the productive life and hence do not feel the antagonisms and the contradictions resulting from it), in fact believe the class struggle to be a diabolical invention of the socialists and communists. The entire so-called hierarchic conception of Fascism is dependent upon that fact. It is indispensible for this conception that no independent organization of a typical class character exist and that the modern social life be organized in a series of petty corporations subject to and controlled by the Fascist elite, being the concentrated expression of all the prejudices and utopian visions of the petty bourgeoisie. Hence the necessity for Integral Trade Unionism, which is a revised conception of the Christian democratic Trade Unionism, substituting the deified nation for the religious idea.

Opposed by Industrials.

This program was resolutely opposed by the industrials, who refused to enter the Fascist corporation, to allow themselves to be controlled by Rossoni and his like. The Fascists, some months ago, in face of the repulses by the industrials, began a demagogic fight, which went so far as their announcing and propagating in great style a general strike of the metallurgical and textile workers. The campaign against the industrials culminated immediately after the visit paid by Mussolini to the Fiat works of Turin on the anniversary of the Fascist "March on Rome." The workers of the Fiat, six or seven thousand of whom had been gathered in the courtyard of the factory in order to hear a speech by Mussolini, received the leader of the Fascists in a hostile manner. The Fascists accused the Turin industrials of having fostered the anti-Fascist spirit of the masses, of preferring to treat with reformist organizations instead of with Fascist ones, of discharging from the Works the Fascist workers, thus preventing the development of the corporations and so on; they went so far as to attack personally in a coffee-house the chief of the Fiat, Senator Giovanni Agnelli. The situation became very serious for the industrials as well as for the Government.

Communist Opposition Voiced.

The Communist Trade Unions Committee intervened in the agitation, inviting the working masses to take part in the struggle against the industrials in order to enlarge the movement, even tho the struggle had been engaged in by the Fascists. The agitation was stifled by the central leaders of the Fascisti, and the Conference held on the 19th of December was convened. In the speech Mussolini delivered there, he recognized, that it is impossible to organize workers and industrials in one and the same trade union. Integral Trade Unionism, according to Mussolini may be applied, only in the sphere of agrarian production. The Fascists have to respect the organizatory independence of the industrials and have to work only in order to avoid the outbreak of class conflicts. The meaning of these words is clear. The Fascists abandon even the keeping up of the appearance, not only of a struggle against the industrials, but also of any attempt to equilibrate, under their arbitrary control, the interests of the classes and they have only the confessed task of organizing the workers to surrender them to the capitalists bound hand and foot. This is the beginning of the end of the Fascist Trade Unionism.

Immediately after the conference, many land owners protested loudly against the discriminating treatment shown by Fascism to industry and to agriculture. They denounced the violence which they said the Fascist Trade Union Organizers exercised to the detriment of the land owners' interests, by compelling them to respect labor contracts, which of course declare to be absurd and opposed to the interests of the nation, and they claim to be allowed to reconstitute the General Confederation of Agriculture which had been absorbed by the Fascist corporations. At Parma the agrarians have placed themselves in direct opposition to Fascism, provoking a whole series of incidents and conflicts. At Reggio Emilia, the deputy Corgini, former under-secretary of state to the government of Mussolini, has been expelled from the Fasci and leads a raging campaign in favor of the organizatory independence of the land owners.

It is to be remarked how great a success was obtained by the tactics applied by our Party, in order to unmask before the masses the Fascist Trade Union leaders who had raised such a hubbub against the industrialists. It is true, these tactics procured to the Fascists the satisfaction of having meetings attended by many thousands of workers, but they led also to forcing the Fascists to the wall, to causing them to eat their words and to discrediting them even in the eyes of the most backward portion of the working masses.

Disintegration of Fascism.

If these tactics were generalized and also extended to the agrarian field, it would be possible to accelerate in a high degree the disintegration of Fascism and hence the reorganization of the revolutionary forces. But against this there are the reformist socalists as well as the maximalist socialists who still have control over the Trade Union Centrals and of the only periodicals of a proletarian character still published in Italy. Thus they demonstrate once more that they do not really intend to fight against Fascism. It is true, they risk much if they attack Fascism in order to contend with it, within its own Trade Unions or in the agitations sometimes got up by it, for control and leadership of the masses entering the movement. On the other hand, it is certain that large strata, not only of rural workers, but also of factory workers who have no other chance of fighting against the bourgeoisie are drawn to these agitations by the Fascist demagogy, hoping thus to wring something from their employers. The intransigeance shown by the reformist and maximalist gentry, is in fact no intransigeance against Fascism, but against the poorest and most backward portion of the workers. Moreover, it is never true to itself and makes many concessions to the Fascists who are governing.

The Border Ruffians Hold an Election.

NO FAIR-MINDED reader of history can doubt, in glancing over the records of that time, that the South took the first bloody and brutal offensive in their attempt to force slavery on Kansas. Later, the Free State men from the North, under leaders like John Brown, General Lane and Captain James Montgomery, took up arms, too, and defended themselves bravely; but at first, they were victims of the South's determination to carry its point.

Stealing the Elections.

The Southerners began the attack by stealing the elections for the territorial legislature. Thousands of Missourians, on horseback and in wagons, with guns, bowie knives, revolvers and plenty of whisky, poured over the line in November, 1854, and encamped near the polling places. The ballot boxes were extravagantly, even humorously, stuffed; the elections were carried for the South. There was nothing concealed about the affair; in fact, the Missouri newspapers had gaily whipped up recruits for the raid.

Many of these men, Border Ruffians, as the North called them, were hired for the work. Others came for the fun; others because they hated Yankees; others because they were devout believers in Slavery.

"They wore the most savage looks and gave utterance to the most horrible imprecations and blasphemies," said Thomas Gladstone, a relative of the great statesman of that name, who was in Kansas at the time. "In groups of drunken, bellowing, bloodthirsty demons, armed to the teeth, they crowded about the bars and shouted for drink, or made the night hideous with noise on the streets."

Free State Men Punished.

Their fraudulent Pawnee legislature convened and passed a code of punishment for Free State men. Under the code, no one opposed to slavery in any manner could serve on a jury, or hold any office in Kansas.

Death itself was the penalty for advising slaves to rebel, or even supplying them with literature that would have that effect.

The mere voicing of a belief that slavery was illegal in Kansas was made a grave crime. Any person who said in public that slavery was wrong, or any person who even "introduced into the territory, any book, paper, magazine, pamphlet or circular"—saying this, was to be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for a term of not less than five years.

This notorious Clause 12 was obviously aimed at the New York Tribune and other anti-slavery journals, and was meant to shut off every whisper of free speech. And it did not work.

For the Free State settlers would not recognize the legality of the legislature, and held an election of their own. And so there were two legislatures in Kansas Territory, two governors and governments. All the fighting that followed centered about this dualism, and about the mad, desperate butcheries and burnings begun by the Southerners, when they saw they could not cow the Northerners into submission.

Troops Against Free State.

President Pierce, who was pro-slavery, sent a message to Congress in which he sided with the fraudulent legislature and its code, declaring it legal, and threatening the Free State men, whom he called traitors, insurrectionists, and seditionists against the United States government.

In all the Kansas conflict, he threw federal troops and federal politicians against the Free State men. The South rejoiced at his stand, but the Free State men went on with their work. And John Brown and his sons took a leading position in the fight.

Harvest Song

By JEAN TOOMER

(From the book "Cane", by permission of Boni and Liveright, publishers, New York)

I am a reaper whose muscles set at sundown. All my oats are cradled.
But I am too chilled, and too fatigued to bind them. And I hunger.

I crack a grain between my teeth. I do not taste it.
I have been in the fields all day. My throat is dry. I hunger.

My eyes are caked with dust of oatfields at harvest-time.
I am a blind man who stares across the hills, seeking stack'd fields of other harvesters.

It would be good to see them . . . crook'd, split, and iron-ring'd handles of the scythes. It would be good to see them, dust-caked and blind. I hunger.

My throat is dry. And should I call, a cracked grain like the oats . . . echo—

I fear to call. What should they hear me, and offer me their grain, oats, or wheat or corn? I have been in the fields all day. I fear I could not taste it. I fear knowledge of my hunger.

My ears are caked with dust of oatfields at harvest-time.
I am a deaf man who strains to hear the calls of other harvesters whose throats are also dry.

It would be good to hear their songs . . . reapers of the sweet-stalk'd cane, cutters of the corn . . . even tho their throats cracked and the strangeness of their voices deafened me.

I hunger. My throat is dry. Now that the sun has set and I am chilled, I fear to call. (Echo, my brothers!)

I am a reaper. (Echo!) All my oats are cradled. But I am too fatigued to bind them. And I hunger. I crack a grain. It has no taste to it. My throat is dry . . .

O my brothers, I beat my palms, still soft, against the stubble of my harvesting. (You beat your soft palms, too.) My pain is sweet. Sweeter than the oats or wheat or corn. It will not bring me knowledge of my hunger.

The Development of the Teapot Dome Campaign

The Party of Lenin - - -

By H. GERISH

SINCE the existence of the Soviet government the capitalist, as well as the so-called "socialist" press, has tried to impress upon the minds of the workers of the world that the Communists in Russia are maintaining power only because of the "bloodthirsty Cheka." The proletariat of Russia more than once proved their loyalty to the Soviet government and the Communist Party. The more the capitalist press and the heroes of the Second International raved about "persecution of workers," "jailing of socialists," "suppression of democracy," etc., the more did the workers rally to the support of the Communist Party. For the proletariat of Russia realize that it is due to the leadership of the Communist Party that they were able to come out victorious in the battles against all white guard generals, who enjoyed moral and financial support of the world bourgeoisie and its lackeys of the Second International. The laboring masses of Russia know that it is due to the leadership of the Communist Party, that the Soviet government was able, in 1921, so successfully to liquidate the famine.

Toiling Russia Supports Communists.

The least sign of danger always served as a signal for the whole of toiling Russia to rally under the banner of the Communist Party. Those who were fortunate enough to be in Moscow last summer and witness the great demonstrations of the workers in reply to the Curzon ultimatum will not fail to appreciate the fact that the Soviet government and the Communist Party enjoy the full confidence and support of the whole laboring population.

The mere publication of the Curzon note was sufficient for the workers and peasants of Russia. Without any agitation of any kind, the workers left their places of work and flocked into the streets in hundreds of thousands. Was there any agitation necessary? Not at all. For the workers and peasants of Russia know what war against the Soviet government means. The spontaneous demonstrations thruout the union proved the strength of the Soviet government and the Comunist Party. It proved that while the workers and peasants of Russia do not want war they are, nevertheless, prepared to defend the victories of the revolution with the last drop of their blood. They demonstrated to those who were still in doubt, that a threat against the Soviet government is a threat against them—the workers and peasants.

With the death of Lenin the Communist Party suffered its greatest loss. In every difficult situation the Party could always depend upon Lenin. He could always foresee in advance the difficulties that would face the Soviet government and the Party, and he was always able to adapt the tactics of the Party and the government to the given situation.

Party Membership Increases.

Now, Lenin is no more. The Party will have to carry on the difficult tasks ahead without the aid of his clear mind, and exceptional insight of its great leader and teacher. That the Party will succeed, in spite of all difficulties, there can be no doubt. Lenin has left us a strong, centralized and disciplined party which is supported by the whole of toiling Russia.

Do the workers of Russia realize these difficulties? The best answer is given by the workers themselves. Whole factories of workers thruout the country have sent in applications for joining the Party. Reports to date show that over 120,000 workers have applied for membership in the Party. In Moscow alone over 34,000 applications have been received. In Leningrad over 31,000 workers have applied for membership. And Moscow and Leningrad are no exceptions. From every nook and corner of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republic reports are coming in that the workers are flocking into the Party in thousands. The Russian proletariat is sending its best sons to fill, by their collective work, the vacancy left by Lenin.

It should be remembered that these applications for membership into the Party, come exclusively from workers from the bench.

In conformity with the decision of the Party conference, held in January, only this class of workers are at present accepted into the Party. In order to strengthen the proletarian kernel of the party, the conference resolved to draw into the Party 100,000 workers from the bench within the next year, for the same period closing the doors for all others.

100,000 Members In Six Weeks.

Only six weeks have passed since that conference, and not only must we not wait a whole year in order to add 100,000 workers to the Party, we are already far ahead of that goal.

One illustration will be sufficient to give the reader an idea of the present frame of mind of the Russian workers:

At a meeting of one of the factories in Moscow, at which applications from the workers of that factory were discussed, one of the applicants, an old man of about 58, who has been working at that factory for the last 25 years, was asked: How does he explain the fact that in all these years he did not join the Party, and now has finally decided to apply for membership. The old worker with a determined look in the face replied: "I am an old man. I don't know very much about politics. I only know that my best years I have spent at this factory, and it's only since the October revolution that I felt that my work is worth while. I did not join the Party till now because I considered myself to be too old to be of much use. At the same time Ilyitch was alive. Now, Ilyitch is dead. It is the duty of every honest worker to join the Party of Ilyitch and continue his work."

The last words of the old worker were spoken with tears in his eyes. At the same meeting 56 workers handed in their applications for membership. After the meeting the secretary of the factory committee said: "If this number is not sufficient, we will give more. We will send to the Party the best among us."

Build the Party of Lenin.

These words are repeated in Moscow, as well as in Leningrad, Nizhni-Novgorod, Kharkov, Odessa, Kiev, Tiflis, Vladivostok, Samara, and thruout the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

At the grave of their dead leader and teacher, the workers of Russia proclaim: We shall build and strengthen the Communist Party—the Party of Lenin.

CIVILIZATION

Morning:
The city groans,
Embowels, amoeba like, its heritage of putrid living.

Evening:
The city grows dark under a sky of graying blue.
Crevices, between houses, crevices long and narrow
Seep in the darkness.
The groaning of street cars,
The shuddering of a galaxy of whirring wheels,
Factory whistles, clamoring with its insistent
Cry of pain and unwillingness to grant men their
Brief nightly parole.

Night:
The city vomits forth a part of itself,
And ashamed at the paleness of day, with a subdued growl,
Folds a curtain of night on the weary deeds of the bed.

FASCISM; A LETTER FROM ITALY

By G. MASCI

AT the Conference held on December 19th under the direct auspices and in the presence of the Prime Minister Mussolini, between the leaders of Italian industry and the principal leaders of the Fascist Trade Unions, the complete failure of the programs and the practice of Fascism in the spheres of Trade Unionism had to be recognized.

The feverish attempts made by Fascism, before and after having obtained power, to create a trade union movement which would be at its service, are well known. It is also known, how these attempts, while succeeding to a rather considerable degree in the agrarian field, have failed almost completely in the industrial sphere. It was easy for the Fascisti, in view of the life and working conditions of the poor peasants, and of the rural workers dispersed in a great number of villages with feeble ties between the Trade Unions, to destroy the Socialist organizations of the land workers and to force the rural masses by means of physical terror and of the economic boycott, to enter into their corporations. It was otherwise in the industrial sphere, except with the railway employes, amongst whom much can be obtained by state coercion and by the ever threatening menace of discharge, and also with the dockers who had already their strictly guild-like organization determined by the conditions in the traffic at the Italian ports which is developing very spasmodically, in relation to the preponderance of exports and imports and to the seasonal activities for grain, coals and coffee.

Made Up of Criminal Elements.

In the large industrial towns, the Fascists only succeeded in gathering inconsiderable groups, consisting nearly everywhere of unemployed and of criminal elements, who, by means of the Fascist party ticket obtain impunity for sabotage, theft in work-shops and personal violence against foremen. And yet it was necessary for Fascist politics to win the masses at any price.

The Fascist Government can only maintain power so far as it renders life impossible to other organizations which are not Fascist. Mussolini bases his power on large strata of the petty bourgeoisie, which (since they have no function in the productive life and hence do not feel the antagonisms and the contradictions resulting from it), in fact believe the class struggle to be a diabolical invention of the socialists and communists. The entire so-called hierarchic conception of Fascism is dependent upon that fact. It is indispensible for this conception that no independent organization of a typical class character exist and that the modern social life be organized in a series of petty corporations subject to and controlled by the Fascist elite, being the concentrated expression of all the prejudices and utopian visions of the petty bourgeoisie. Hence the necessity for Integral Trade Unionism, which is a revised conception of the Christian democratic Trade Unionism, substituting the deified nation for the religious idea.

Opposed by Industrials.

This program was resolutely opposed by the industrials, who refused to enter the Fascist corporation, to allow themselves to be controlled by Rossoni and his like. The Fascists, some months ago, in face of the repulses by the industrials, began a demagogic fight, which went so far as their announcing and propagating in great style a general strike of the metallurgical and textile workers. The campaign against the industrials culminated immediately after the visit paid by Mussolini to the Fiat works of Turin on the anniversary of the Fascist "March on Rome." The workers of the Fiat, six or seven thousand of whom had been gathered in the courtyard of the factory in order to hear a speech by Mussolini, received the leader of the Fascists in a hostile manner. The Fascists accused the Turin industrials of having fostered the anti-Fascist spirit of the masses, of preferring to treat with reformist organizations instead of with Fascist ones, of discharging from the Works the Fascist workers, thus preventing the development of the corporations and so on; they went so far as to attack personally in a coffee-house the chief of the Fiat, Senator Giovanni Agnelli. The situation became very serious for the industrials as well as for the Government.

Communist Opposition Voiced.

The Communist Trade Unions Committee intervened in the agitation, inviting the working masses to take part in the struggle against the industrials in order to enlarge the movement, even tho the struggle had been engaged in by the Fascists. The agitation was stifled by the central leaders of the Fascisti, and the Conference held on the 19th of December was convened. In the speech Mussolini delivered there, he recognized, that it is impossible to organize workers and industrials in one and the same trade union. Integral Trade Unionism, according to Mussolini may be applied, only in the sphere of agrarian production. The Fascists have to respect the organizatory independence of the industrials and have to work only in order to avoid the outbreak of class conflicts. The meaning of these words is clear. The Fascists abandon even the keeping up of the appearance, not only of a struggle against the industrials, but also of any attempt to equilibrate, under their arbitrary control, the interests of the classes and they have only the confessed task of organizing the workers to surrender them to the capitalists bound hand and foot. This is the beginning of the end of the Fascist Trade Unionism.

Immediately after the conference, many land owners protested loudly against the discriminating treatment shown by Fascism to industry and to agriculture. They denounced the violence which they said the Fascist Trade Union Organizers exercised to the detriment of the land owners' interests, by compelling them to respect labor contracts, which of course declare to be absurd and opposed to the interests of the nation, and they claim to be allowed to reconstitute the General Confederation of Agriculture which had been absorbed by the Fascist corporations. At Parma the agrarians have placed themselves in direct opposition to Fascism, provoking a whole series of incidents and conflicts. At Reggio Emilia, the deputy Corgini, former under-secretary of state to the government of Mussolini, has been expelled from the Fasci and leads a raging campaign in favor of the organizatory independence of the land owners.

It is to be remarked how great a success was obtained by the tactics applied by our Party, in order to unmask before the masses the Fascist Trade Union leaders who had raised such a hubbub against the industrialists. It is true, these tactics procured to the Fascists the satisfaction of having meetings attended by many thousands of workers, but they led also to forcing the Fascists to the wall, to causing them to eat their words and to discrediting them even in the eyes of the most backward portion of the working masses.

Disintegration of Fascism.

If these tactics were generalized and also extended to the agrarian field, it would be possible to accelerate in a high degree the disintegration of Fascism and hence the reorganization of the revolutionary forces. But against this there are the reformist socalists as well as the maximalist socialists who still have control over the Trade Union Centrals and of the only periodicals of a proletarian character still published in Italy. Thus they demonstrate once more that they do not really intend to fight against Fascism. It is true, they risk much if they attack Fascism in order to contend with it, within its own Trade Unions or in the agitations sometimes got up by it, for control and leadership of the masses entering the movement. On the other hand, it is certain that large strata, not only of rural workers, but also of factory workers who have no other chance of fighting against the bourgeoisie are drawn to these agitations by the Fascist demagogy, hoping thus to wring something from their employers. The intransigeance shown by the reformist and maximalist gentry, is in fact no intransigeance against Fascism, but against the poorest and most backward portion of the workers. Moreover, it is never true, to itself and makes many concessions to the Fascists who are governing.

The Border Ruffians Hold an Election.

NO FAIR-MINDED reader of history can doubt, in glancing over the records of that time, that the South took the first bloody and brutal offensive in their attempt to force slavery on Kansas. Later, the Free State men from the North, under leaders like John Brown, General Lane and Captain James Montgomery, took up arms, too, and defended themselves bravely; but at first, they were victims of the South's determination to carry its point.

Stealing the Elections.

The Southerners began the attack by stealing the elections for the territorial legislature. Thousands of Missourians, on horseback and in wagons, with guns, bowie knives, revolvers and plenty of whisky, poured over the line in November, 1854, and encamped near the polling places. The ballot boxes were extravagantly, even humorously, stuffed; the elections were carried for the South. There was nothing concealed about the affair; in fact, the Missouri newspapers had gaily whipped up recruits for the raid.

Many of these men, Border Ruffians, as the North called them, were hired for the work. Others came for the fun; others because they hated Yankees; others because they were devout believers in Slavery.

"They wore the most savage looks and gave utterance to the most horrible imprecations and blasphemies," said Thomas Gladstone, a relative of the great statesman of that name, who was in Kansas at the time. "In groups of drunken, bellowing, bloodthirsty demons, armed to the teeth, they crowded about the bars and shouted for drink, or made the night hideous with noise on the streets."

Free State Men Punished.

Their fraudulent Pawnee legislature convened and passed a code of punishment for Free State men. Under the code, no one opposed to slavery in any manner could serve on a jury, or hold any office in Kansas.

Death itself was the penalty for advising slaves to rebel, or even supplying them with literature that would have that effect.

The mere voicing of a belief that slavery was illegal in Kansas was made a grave crime. Any person who said in public that slavery was wrong, or any person who even "introduced into the territory, any book, paper, magazine, pamphlet or circular"—saying this, was to be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for a term of not less than five years.

This notorious Clause 12 was obviously aimed at the New York Tribune and other anti-slavery journals, and was meant to shut off every whisper of free speech. And it did not work.

For the Free State settlers would not recognize the legality of the legislature, and held an election of their own. And so there were two legislatures in Kansas Territory, two governors and governments. All the fighting that followed centered about this dualism, and about the mad, desperate butcheries and burnings begun by the Southerners, when they saw they could not cow the Northerners into submission.

Troops Against Free State.

President Pierce, who was pro-slavery, sent a message to Congress in which he sided with the fraudulent legislature and its code, declaring it legal, and threatening the Free State men, whom he called traitors, insurrectionists, and seditionists against the United States government.

In all the Kansas conflict, he threw federal troops and federal politicians against the Free State men. The South rejoiced at his stand, but the Free State men went on with their work. And John Brown and his sons took a leading position in the fight.

Harvest Song

By JEAN TOOMER

(From the book "Cane", by permission of Boni and Liveright, publishers, New York)

I am a reaper whose muscles set at sundown. All my oats are cradled.
But I am too chilled, and too fatigued to bind them. And I hunger.

I crack a grain between my teeth. I do not taste it.
I have been in the fields all day. My throat is dry. I hunger.

My eyes are caked with dust of oatfields at harvest-time.
I am a blind man who stares across the hills, seeking stack'd fields of other harvesters.

It would be good to see them . . . crook'd, split, and iron-ring'd handles of the scythes. It would be good to see them, dust-caked and blind. I hunger.

My throat is dry. And should I call, a cracked grain like the oats . . . echo—

I fear to call. What should they hear me, and offer me their grain, oats, or wheat or corn? I have been in the fields all day. I fear I could not taste it. I fear knowledge of my hunger.

My ears are caked with dust of oatfields at harvest-time.
I am a deaf man who strains to hear the calls of other harvesters whose throats are also dry.

It would be good to hear their songs . . . reapers of the sweet-stalk'd cane, cutters of the corn . . . even tho their throats cracked and the strangeness of their voices deafened me.

I hunger. My throat is dry. Now that the sun has set and I am chilled, I fear to call. (Echo, my brothers!)

I am a reaper. (Echo!) All my oats are cradled. But I am too fatigued to bind them. And I hunger. I crack a grain. It has no taste to it. My throat is dry . . .

O my brothers, I beat my palms, still soft, against the stubble of my harvesting. (You beat your soft palms, too.) My pain is sweet Sweeter than the oats or wheat or corn. It will not bring me knowledge of my hunger.

The "National Farmer-Labor Party"---In Memoriam

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

ROBERT M. BUCK and J. G. Brown, for the group calling itself the National Farmer-Labor Party, in the New Majority for March 22, explain the position of that almost defunct organization relative to the recent Minnesota conferences, the June 17 convention, the July 4 conference, the Communist bugaboo and many other things.

To Correct False Impressions.

It is solely for the purpose of clearing up any false impressions created by the gentlemen mentioned above that this article is written. Their expressions of despair at and disappointment with the outcome of the Minnesota conference are merely an extension of the attitude they assumed at these important meetings and it is therefore necessary to state clearly what that attitude was and what the delegates to the Minnesota conferences represented. Neither from the article in the New Majority on the Minnesota conferences signed by Robert M. Buck nor from the official report of Buck and Brown as delegates can be learned the fact that every conference and convention beginning with the St. Paul meeting of the Farmer-Labor party representatives from seven states on March 10, to the convention of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor party on March 14, represented by delegates of functioning Farmer-Labor parties and economic organizations, hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers.

These delegates had been elected by their organizations for the specific purpose of passing upon the advisability of calling a great convention of delegates from labor unions, working class political parties, co-operative societies, etc., and organizing these forces on the political field.

The organizations represented at the Minnesota conferences were those which had committed themselves to a political party separate and distinct from the parties of American capitalism and whose attitude towards independent political action was not predicated upon the bolt of one or more progressives from the old parties but adopted as the fundamental principle of political action for a mass party of workers and farmers.

Authoritative Gathering.

The St. Paul conference was a mandated body. Every delegate came with authority to make decisions on behalf of his organization and represented there were the Western Progressive Farmers of Washington, the Farmer-Labor parties of Washington, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, The Progressive party of Nebraska, the Farmer Labor Federation of Minnesota, the local party of Buffalo, N. Y., and the Federated Farmer-Labor party. In addition to these bona fide parties there were the National Farmer-Labor party of America—a party in name only, without members or even a good mailing list—represented by Buck and Brown; the seceding Illinois faction of this same organization represented by Rodriguez and Gifford Ernst and a non-existent labor party in Washington, D. C., represented by one William V. Mahoney.

The vote against holding the proposed convention on June 17 is given by Buck as 12 to 6 without any explanation of its character. It is enough to say here that Rodriguez, Ernst, Buck, Brown, William V. Mahoney of Washington, D. C., with one Minnesota delegate voted in opposition with the obvious corollary that the June 17 convention was favored by all of the bona fide farmer-labor parties outside of Minnesota and by half of the Minnesota delegation. It should be noted also that the secession of Rodriguez and Ernst gave the "National" Farmer-Labor party two more votes—a total of four, one for each member.

This gives the lie to the statements made and reiterated by Buck and Brown to the effect that it was Communist control that forced the setting of the convention date. As a Communist I wish that this were true, but the facts are otherwise.

The truth of the matter is and everybody who attended the Minnesota conferences knows it, that Buck and Brown, united for the purpose with Rodriguez and Ernst, came to St. Paul, not to work for unity in the Farmer-Labor ranks, but to destroy the movement for a class Farmer-Labor party in the interests of the Conference for Progressive Political Action and the middle class elements which the officialdom of that organization follows.

Destructionist Efforts.

This group, representing nothing and nobody but themselves since they bolted the July 3rd convention, tried to scare the other elements in the conferences with the threadbare tales of the Communist menace, disrupt the northwest movement and leave nothing but scattered fragments to be picked up by the politicians and union bureaucrats who will dominate the July 4 gathering. They were willing to take the risk of wrecking the whole movement for a class farmer-labor party in order to accomplish this purpose.

Meeting with no success in St. Paul because their tactics and the motives that prompted them were well understood by the real representatives of the Northwest Farmer-Labor movement who, however, accorded them the courtesy of listening patiently to every lie, misrepresentation, slander, innuendo and jesuitical argument they had to lay before the conference, this group then went to Minneapolis, and, forming another united front with the most reactionary section of the Minnesota labor and farmer movement, hung around the fringe of the powerful organization that was taking form and peddled their poison to everyone that would listen.

United Front of Reaction.

During the three conferences that were held in Minneapolis following the St. Paul meeting, the conferences that brought unity in the labor-farmer movement in Minnesota, these free-lance apostles of a policy of timidity and hesitation, were seen with such obstructionists and careerists as Baldus and Thomason of the new defunct non-partisan league, Parsons and Vandenberg, meal-ticket artists and fakers par excellence, in short they co-operated to the best of their ability with the Van Lear-Townley clique that prostituted the Minnesota Daily Star and did its best to make the Minnesota movement a tail to the political kite of spineless and crooked office-seekers.

William V. Mahoney of Washington, even journeyed to St. Cloud and continued his scandal-mongering at the convention of the official Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota until he was squelched by William Mahoney of St. Paul, chairman of the farmer-labor federation of Minnesota.

The report published in the New Majority is therefore sadly lacking in both detail and truth. Were it a truthful record of what took place in Minnesota it would state that the men who signed it and two of their allies already named, at a time when a great coalition of the working class forces of the Northwest was taking shape, deliberately sabotaged the unity process as well as they could and that their activities were a source of aid and comfort to every foe of the labor movement and were commented upon gleefully by the capitalist press of the Twin Cities.

Habitual Bolters.

After mentioning not a single one of the developments in Minnesota that are recognized even by labor's enemies as of the greatest significance, Buck explains that his organization (composed of himself and Brown) did not sign the call for the June 17 convention "in view of its domination by the Communists, not from any red-baiting motives, not because they are radicals, but because it is impossible to work with them toward the establishment of a labor-party that organized labor will support."

This is a rather frank admission that the secession of the Buck-Brown group last July was no accident but that they are habitual secessionists; it is also an admission that at St. Paul they refused to be bound by the majority decision of the real farmer-labor parties who find no such difficulties in working with Communists and that in any gathering of workers where their vaccillating policy is beaten by a policy of action they will refuse to go along.

The Future.

The Buck-Brown-Rodriguez-Ernst group now pin their faith on the C. P. P. A. and July 4. They bolted the Cleveland convention of this organization against the advice of the Communists who told them to stay on the inside; now they are going back to their vomit. They have no faith in June 17, they say, because they do not believe it possible that respectable middle class politicians will accept support from an organization with which the Workers (Communist) Party of America is affiliated; they have forgotten all about the June 17 convention as the best guarantee of independent action on July 4 and they now stake all, not on the workers and farmers, but on politicians and labor officialdom—the same elements they have many times denounced as hopeless.

Where will this little handful of former progressives finally align themselves? It is hard to say but right now they are headed with John Fitzpatrick, their economic foundation, straight for the Gompers camp. There they may find a quiet resting place but just at present they are homeless, helpless, hopeless and alone.

Facing Fascism in Great Britain

By J. T. WALTON NEWBOLD

THE OTHER DAY, traveling down thru France, on the Riviera express, fate and fortune were so good as to project me, suitably equipped with non-comittal guidebooks and literature, into a compartment in which were two ex-officers, one Italian and the other British. We got into conversation which became, to say the least, interesting. It started with the franc. It went on to the pound. It embraced the Labor government, and the guardsman became still more interesting. The Italian proved to be a Fascist. They grew communicative. I smiled my sympathy and my encouragement.

Fascism—The Cult.

My compatriot was engagingly frank. Fascism is the thing and matters are going on very nicely. It is the cult in the regimental messes and in the West End clubs. One of these days, and before so very long something is to happen to "those damned fellows from the Clyde." They will be taught a salutary lesson. It will be rather "a rag, don't you know." "We are going to have no Bolshevism in England."

Now, this week-end one finds in the reactionary press a chorus of denunciation of Wheatley, torrents of abuse of the Clyde men, violent attacks upon the Communists of Poplar. The whole of the Conservatives and a very large section of the Liberals are rallying against Wheatley and his interpretation by an executive act of the whole case of the left wing elements in what affects the treatment of the unemployed worker.

Wheatley intends to force the pace. The issue he has raised makes a direct and immediate appeal to the great masses of the unemployed and the low paid workers. He has raised the issue of whether or not the workers are to permit the powers of the State and the local authorities to be used as the framers and defenders of the whole poor law system intended they should be used, to enable the master class to use the necessities of the poor for the undoing of the bargaining power of the poor.

Wheatley's action, like that of our comrades in Poplar, is indeed revolutionary, striking at the whole vile system of bourgeois class rule across hundreds of years. Wheatley's action is a step, as the master class knows (and, knowing, squeals), towards the use of political power, embodied in the state and local authorities, for the purpose of breaking the capitalists' economic advantage over the worker.

On Eve of Fascist Violence.

It is a step that, affecting the principle all local expenditure and, therefore, all the big rate payers who, under democracy, find themselves in a grotesque minority, will cause these big rate payers here, as in Italy and Germany, to finance and assist organizations for "cleansing" local and national authorities of socialists and Communists.

We are one the very eve, comrades of the entire left, of fascist violence here in Great Britain.

It now becomes apparent, from what Maxton has said concerning the appointment of Lord Chelmsford to the Admiralty, that the navy chiefs have declared a mutiny, a class revolt against the working class.

After the army revolt at the Curraugh in 1914, we have the navy revolt at the admiralty in 1924. We have the same insolence shown by the Scottish legal fraternity.

It may seem a little thing, but it is very symptomatic of the arrogance of the king's immediate court entourage, and of their insufferable impudence, that the Londonderry household, which was the go-between for the army rebels and Carson with the king in 1914—has been entertaining, not on behalf of the government but on behalf of the opposition, the ambasadors of the United States, France, Italy and Spain.

Kellogg, ambassador of the United States, is notoriously the nominee of the Morgan house, i. e., of Tory influence in American finance and politics. The Vicomte St. Aulaire, ambassador of France, belongs to the circle of Bonapartist-Monarchist reaction, profoundly hostile to recognition of the Soviets and favorable to the right wing of the Bloc National. The Spanish and Italian ambassadors are the avowed agents of fascism.

Insult to Laborites.

Quite evidently, we are here witnesses of the official representatives of American and European reactionary governments attending the party reception, not of the government to which they are accredited (in theory), but of the opposition.

If the Labor government does not understand in its full bearings the significance of this insult to themselves as representatives of the working class they will understand nothing. If they do not understand it is no reason why we should be equally supine and spineless.

The reaction is organizing in the ward rooms, in the messes, in the clubs, under the eye—and you may warrant that Nickie's cousin's eye is an approving eye—of the king himself, to defend here in London and thruout Britain the close preserves of landed and financial privilege.

The hitch in recognition; the need of watching all attempts to whittle down that recognition by bringing pressure to bear upon the government during the coming negotiations with Russia; the incident of the admiralty officials; this case of Poplar; all these veiled insults and intrigues—require that all the elements of the Left-Laborites, Socialists, and Communists call into being once more, this time to strengthen the hands of the Labor government, the councils of action, national and social.

Organize!

We must organize, and at once, the whole working class behind the government so that it can have the assurance that whatever it does immediately behind it stands a watchful, resolute working class movement.

ECONOMIC FORCES DISMEMBERING THE BRITISH EMPIRE

By SCOTT NEARING
(Federated Press Staff Writer)

Economic forces are at work that are destined in the not distant future to dismember the British empire.

Superficially these forces appear in the mad scramble for fuel oil; in the smothering burden of unemployment; in the huge debt of seven billion pounds sterling (one pound is $4.22 present exchange) carried by the Mother Country; in the heavy taxes that must be paid in spite of the trade depression. But underlying these threats, and overtopping them in importance, is the economic development that has taken place during the past decade in Canada, Australia, India and South Africa.

British imperial policy has been built on the theory that raw materials produced in the dominions and colonies would go to the British isles duty free; would be fabricated in British industrial establishments, and would then go back, in the form of finished goods to the colonies and dominions from which the raw material had been secured. Thus the cotton of India, the wool of Australia and the hides of South Africa would travel half around the world to be manufactured and would then find their way back half around the world again, in the form of calico, worsteds and shoes.

Under this plan British ship owners would secure a profit both on the outgoing and on the return voyage, British jobbers would take their toll on both the raw and the finished product; British manufacturers would add a "reasonable return" on capital; British insurance would "carry the risk," and British bankers would "advance the credit."

This was all very well at the outset, while the dominions were economically under-developed. The richness of the newly tapped resources, a little extra effort on the part of colonial workers and the absence of any large parasitic class in the now countries made up the difference between the amounts received for raw material shipped to the Mother Country and the amount paid for the finished products sent back in British ships.

But the colonies and dominions gradually matured economically—that is, they developed facilities for converting raw materials into finished products right on the spot where the raw materials were produced. Thus they saved the cost of shipping them half way round the world and back again.

Bankers Dig Own Grave.

In this work they were greatly assisted by British bankers, who, all unwittingly, were busy cutting their own throats.

British bankers took the money which British manufacturers and traders had made out of the manufacture and transport of colonial raw materials and invested it in the colonies—first in the production of raw materials (mining and lumbering); then in public utilities (railroads and electric light plants), and finally in manufacturing establishments that competed directly with similar plants in Britain.

When the war broke out almost half of all the British overseas investments was placed in Canada, India, South Africa and Australia. This policy of developing colonial industry was destined, in the long run, to destroy the colonial market for British goods and thus overthrow the economic system which was making the investments.

The war created such an immense home demand for steel, chemical, textile, leather and other products that the British manufacturers were temporarily unable to supply the colonial markets. Indeed, the demand became so great that the colonies and dominions found a market in Great Britain for the steel, chemical, textile, leather and other manufactured products which they were able to produce.

Thus overnight, the tables were turned and colonial manufacturers were called upon, not only to supply the home market, but to supply the market of the Mother Country as well. The process is well illustrated in the experience of Canada.

Example of Canada.

The manufacturing industries of Canada were carried on in 21,306 establishments in 1915. Two years later, the number of establishments had jumped to 34,392, and in 1919 it stood at 38,344, or nearly double the number for 1915.

During these four years the amount of capital invested in manufacturing increased from $1,994,000,000 to $3,230,000,000 and the value of the product from $1,407,000,000 to $3,520,000,000. Those increases are accounted for, in part, by the increase in prices, but the number of workers engaged in the manufacturing industries rose, during the same four years from 497,190 to 682,434. Here is evidently a growing volume of manufacturing, which may be disposed of thru home sales or thru exports.

There are no figures available giving the changes in home consumption, but the export figures are contained in the Canadian Year Book. Two or three illustrations will serve to establish their relation to British production.

Canada exported $65,081 yards of cotton fabrics in 1914. In 1917 the figure stood at 846,099 yards. The value of woolen manufactures exported in 1914 was $81,555, and in 1917 $725,148. In this connection it is worth noting that the exports of Canadian woolens to Great Britain in 1914 was $26,542; in 1915, $113,629, and in 1917, $294,886, or nearly 12 times the value of 1914.

The same thing holds true of the iron and steel industry. The value of exports in 1914 was $2,809,000, of which $441,000 went to Great Britain. By 1917, Canada was exporting $41,840,000 in steel and iron, of which $22,900,000 went to Great Britain.

Here was an immense productive machine, built to supply war demand, and producing those very textile and steel products which made up the bulk of the British manufacturing enterprise.

Australia, India, South Africa.

The same thing that happened in Canada happened in Australia, and for the same reasons. Like Canada, Australia had a rich local market, largely supplied by British goods. When this supply was curtailed, the Australians began making their own textiles and shoes.

The Australian Year Book reports 3,090 employes in woolen, cotton and tweed mills in 1913, turning out a product valued at 926,000 pounds. By 1919 the number of workers had increased to 4,087 with a product valued at 2,330,000 pounds. The number of boot and shoe workers was 13,436 in 1913 and 15,960 in 1919. During the same years the value of the product rose from 4,000,000 to 7,100,000 pounds.

Similar facts might be cited from India and from South Africa.

Beginning under the pressure of war necessity, these colonial and dominion industries taught the local populations:

(a) That it "makes work" and "circulates money".

(b) That the cost of domestic manufactures is equal to the cost of imported manufactures minus transportation, insurance, jobbing and banking charges.

(c) That domestic industry keeps manufacturing profits at home where they are reinvested.

(d) That the local groups thus created have a vested interest in home industry which provides the basis for a local industrial society.

This is the new-old lesson of economic independence—the lesson that Carthage learned from Tyre; that the English colonies in America learned from this same Great Britain and that the present British colonies and dominions are now learning. When the lesson is thoroly assimilated, the British empire of 1924 will have lost some of its most important economic units.

COMMUNIST-CHILDREN'S-COLUMN

SCHOOLGIRL BOLSHEVIKS.

By STELLA JACKSON (Age 12)

"Oh, my," said Pippin, for the fiftieth time that evening, "What a dense, stupid, thick-headed lot they are." She was curled up on a sofa, gazing at a copy of THE YOUNG COMRADE, but thinking of her school mates. When she arrived at school, the day before, she had been greeted quite enthusiastically, but when Pamela Ford saw her read THE YOUNG COMRADE she had stood transfixed with amazement, her eyes like saucers. The others gathered round to stare in their turn. Pippin looked up, stared also, saw that her eyes were fixed on the paper and said, "Want to read it, any of you?"

"Are You a Bolshevik?"

"Are—are you—a—a Bolshevik?" asked Trix, the monitor of the class, incredulously.

"Yes, ra-ther!" replied Pippin, with a laugh.

"Philippa Moore! Well!" exclaimed the monitor and half the girls rushed outside to spread the news and talk it over in horrified whispers. The other half stayed and told Pippin what they thought of her. She was a silly dunce; she was mad; she couldn't help it, it was her parents' fault; she was a wicked person; she had bats in her belfry; these were some of the opinions. When they had been given the girls turned and marched away. Since then Pippin had practically been sent to a school for bad girls, by her teachers. The girl whose room she had been sharing in the school had packed up and gone away. So there she was—on the sofa. Suddenly a timid sort of a knock came on the door; it opened, and a girl's face peeped in. When she saw Pippin she gave a merry smile and came in, shutting the door behind her.

"I'm so glad you've come to this school," she said. "I'm a young Bolshevik, too!"

"What!" gasped Pippin. "Well, I don't suppose this stuck-up lot of idiots will stand for more than one."

"Won't they?" chuckled her visitor. "I've converted three already; and each of them has converted one—that makes seven—no, eight of us. How old are you? Have you a nickname? What shall we do next"

A Meeting Is Called.

"I'm thirteen. They call me Pippin at home. Shall we call a meeting?"

"Yes, do lets—I know! One of our band, Sylvia Green, shall make a speech protesting against the meanness of sending us Bolshevik girls to the 'Bad girl schools' without any cause. Then you can answer questions at this meeting. If you have some more copies of THE YOUNG COMRADE we can distribute them."

"Yes, I've plenty."

"That's good."

Next morning a neatly written notice apeared on the school bulletin board, reading: "A meeting will be held in the school playground immediately after lunch. You'll discover the subject when you get there."

"They say 'curiosity killed the cat,' but this is a case of 'curiosity will fill the playground with students'," laughed Yetta (Pippin's visitor) as she and Sylvia watched them pouring in.

Sylvia's speech was very successful; she told the students that the reason why they wanted to send the girls away from the school was because they were fighting for the workers. The capitalist newspapers, because they were afraid of the Bolsheviki, said that they were bloodthirsty, wicked, horrible people.

Then Pippin, in answer to the question, "What are the Bolsheviki?" said: "Bolsheviki is the name given to the great party which now rules Russia. The word Bolsheviki really means 'majority.' In order to free themselves from the tyrannical reign of the Czars, the Russian workers and peasants rose in revolt and there was a revolution. Now, there are no rich, there is no tyranny. Furthermore, the children of Russia today do not have to slave away in the mines, mills and factories like they do in this country in many cases. The children of Russia have their own organization called 'The Young Pioneers' and they play, study and work for the good of the workers' government and the working class."

Pippin sat down amid a storm of cheers.

The Group Functions.

Yetta then produced a sheet of paper, pen and ink, and said: "Will those of you who agree with us now, sign their names here?"

Nearly everybody signed, and those who did not were laughed at. And that is how the little band of schoolgirl bolsheviks grew to be a Junior Group of the Young Workers League, functioning right in the school.

BRAND CROWE AS LABOR ENEMY

Daugherty's Going Can't Save Coolidge

PUSH WEEKS, MELLON INTO MAELSTROM

Harding's Mantle Wrecking Whole Republican Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—Calvin Coolidge ousted Harry M. Daugherty in the hope that he would relieve the pressure that threatens to wreck his cabinet and make of the present republican administration an international laughing stock.

The republican papers thruout the country are endeavoring to present this belated act of "Cautious Calvin" as another proof of the wisdom which animates this Wall Street automaton, showing that while he has an eye to the dignity of the office and the preservation of the best interests of the American people he refused to be bludgeoned by the enemies of the republican party into a hurried compliance with the almost universal demand for the ousting of the Attorney General.

Oily Tool of Big Interests.

But Coolidge cannot save himself by letting Daugherty go. The attorney general at worst was only the tool of big capitalist interests who controlled the present administration, of which Coolidge is the head.

It has been proved to the satisfaction of everybody that the Harding cabinet was a bought and paid for cabinet, bought and paid for by the money power in an open manner, signifying their contempt for the workers of this country and confident of their power to block any effort to bring them to book for their crimes.

Calvin Coolidge is today the responsible head of that group which agreed to barter away the resources of the United States for a consideration. He assumed the mantle that Harding wore and on his assumption of the post left vacant by Harding's death, Mr. Coolidge promised to faithfully carry out the policies of his dead prodecessor. This he has faithfully done. He has kept his promise to the plunderbund.

"Pay-triotism" Is Exposed.

Calvin Coolidge today stands convicted before the bar of public opinion as the head of the greatest conspiracy that ever revealed the class character of the American government. The alleged patriotism of the capitalist parties is now exposed as a sham. It has been proved that both parties have sold for cash the very resource they were charged to protect. In dropping Daugherty, Coolidge is simply throwing a bone to the wolf of popular indignation which is howling for his own head.

The workers and farmers of the United States will not be satisfied until the ringleader of this conspiracy is brought before the bar and impeached. Coolidge was the boon companion of all the criminal elements who have been charged publicly and convicted of violating the laws, made by the capitalists themselves but laws that are only enforced against the working class. Coolidge must go.

The DAILY WORKER correspondent learns that Daugherty is not in a merry mood and is threatening from his resting place in Atlantic City to "spill the beans, but it is no secret that tremendous pressure is being brought to bear on him by the money power which is backing Coolidge for the presidency to keep his mouth shut. As a matter of fact the situation has become so desperate that men in high places go around well equipped with defensive weapons and that the fate of Jake Hamon and Jess Smith oftentimes rises up to bedevil the

CANADA WILL RECOGNIZE RUSS SOVIET

Assurance Given Trade Delegation By Premier King

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OTTAWA, Ont., Mar. 30.—The Canadian government will recognize the Russian Soviet Republic as a step toward the cementing of closer economic relations between the two countries declared Premier King of the Dominion government in a letter to M. Yasikov, head of the Russian trade delegation, which was made public here today.

The action meets with approval thruout the country. The Soviet envoy stated that following an interview with Premier King he wrote him a letter asking whether Great Britain's recognition of Russia would be followed by similar action on the part of Canada. The published letter was the premier's reply.

Canada is the first great English speaking nation on the American continent to recognize the Soviet Republic. It is freely predicted here that the United States government will experience more and more difficulty in withholding recognition, now that its northern neighbor has taken action.

EDITOR'S NOTE—In order to get the question of Russian Recognition vividly before its readers, the DAILY WORKER asked Alexander Trachtenberg, recently returned from Soviet Russia, for an article on this question. He reviews the situation as follows:

THE Czecho-Slovak Foreign Minister Benes was reported to have prophesied on New Year's Day that the year 1924 will be remembered by the re-establishment of complete diplomatic relations between most of the European and Asiatic countries and Soviet Russia.

Benes is one of those European foreign ministers who spends more time traveling about foreign capitals than in staying at home.

In addition to his aims of getting a loan here and an agreement there, for his government, Benes is trying to become a leader in the League of Nations by playing the role of pacifier and great statesman in Central Europe and the Balkans.

BLAST KILLS, BOSSES EVICT COAL MINERS

Workers Suffer in West Va. and Pennsylvania

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 30.—Fifteen bodies of the 26 miners killed Friday in a gas explosion at the Yukon, Number 2, mine of the Yukon-Pocahontas Coal Company, have been brought to the surface.

Rescue workers have penetrated far into the mine in search of the additional eleven bodies.

The bureau of mines here was still without details of the disaster. Yukon, a mining settlement in McDowell county, is without telephone service and its only communication with the outside world is over rough mountain roads. The blast occurred just after the men entered the mine yesterday morning, about three quarters of a mile inside the mine.

JAMESTOWN, Pa., March 30.—Twenty miners occupying houses of the Vinton Colliery Company, Vintondale, have been served eviction notices as result of a strike at the mines there. Officials of district No. 2, United Mine Workers, one week ago protested the evictions to Gov. Pinchot, but the regular legal process is being followed out and notices to vacate within a week have been served by the sheriff.

LABOR PICKS FEATHERS OF SCAB CROWE

Slugger of Girl Strikers Is Exposed by Committee

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, strike-buster and slugger of garment girls, is denounced in a long statement issued Sunday by the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

This statement, which the DAILY WORKER is publishing in full, will be scattered far and wide thruout the city of Chicago to warn workingmen and women of the nature of the employers' reptile in the state's attorney's office, who has turned the county prosecutors' office over to Dudley Taylor, attorney for the garment bosses and the Illinois Employers' Association.

Told To Get Goods On Crowe.

The facts which the committee has gathered against the strike-breaking state's attorney since they began their investigation four weeks ago at the orders of the Chicago Federation of Labor show that:

Crowe has sold out to the garment bosses and is seeking to break the strike of the sweatshop workers by wholesale arrests and brutality; and that:

Crowe is the enemy of all union labor and is using the state's attorney's office against the entire labor movement.

The committee's statement follows:

TEXT OF CROWE REPORT.

TO THE Chicago Federation of Labor—Your Committee of Fifteen, appointed to investigate the State's Attorney's activities in the Ladies' Garment Workers' strike, respectfully submits the following report of its investigation:

Your committee has found:

(1) That State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe has openly and flagrantly permitted misuse of his office in the interests of the garment manufacturers of this city;

(2) That his record in the present Garment Workers' strike is only one instance among many other instances of the misuse of his office in the interests of the manufacturer's and employers' associations;

(3) That in his adopting and following of a brazen and militant policy against organized labor he has gone so far as virtually to turn over his office to the Employers' Association and to Dudley E. Taylor, their attorney;

(4) That he has been derelict in the carrying out of his primary duties and functions as the prosecuting officer of crime;

(5) That in spite of the fact that Cook County has appropriated more money yearly for the state's attorney's office in the past four years than ever before, crimes of a major nature, including murder, have been committed and have gone unpunished to an appaling extent;

(6) That the platform upon which Mr. Robert E. Crowe stands for re-election is an unveiled threat to break the back of organized labor in Chicago, and that it is supported by the interests represented by the notorious "Wheat King" James Patten, and by Dudley E. Taylor, the "injunction" attorney for the Garment Manufacturer's Association and for other employers' associations.

Crowe Found Guilty.

Mr. Crowe stands convicted in the eyes of labor as one of labor's worst foes. He is convicted, not only by his own numberless utterances against organized labor, but more especially by his acts of relentless labor persecution.

In an election pamphlet entitled "Law Enforcement," issued in January, 1924, by the state's attorney, he prints a number of excerpts from letters and press comments by a number of individuals, whose anti-labor policies have become matters of common knowledge. Most of these letters refer by inference to his work on "labor cases." The editorials which he quotes, and in which he seems to

The Foul Press and the Garment Strike

THE garment strike must be going pretty strong. The bosses must be bending their knees before the strike forces. Victory must be perching on the banners of the strike pickets, in spite of city police and private thugs, in the face of Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's injunctions, jail sentences and fines.

Otherwise, why do the Tribune and the Herald and Examiner take such care to manufacture "an assassination plot" out of an alleged shooting at the home of one of the garment manufacturers, Saturday night?

The Tribune stated that "Nicholas Kovler, clothing manufacturer, who has been one of the most active employers in attempting to break the strike of the garment workers," . . . "His wife, and a seven-year-old child were seated at a table in the dining room, and a maid was standing nearby when the bullets thudded against the wall. One of them embedded inself in the wall directly above Mr. Kovler's head, while the other missed his wife by inches."

SHATTERS TRIBUNE STORY

What a different story Mr. Kovler, himself, told directly to the DAILY WORKER. What a different setting for the Tribune's "plot" the manufacturer himself gives. He states that his wife was in the kitchen, that the child was asleep in a bedroom, that he had himself left the room, and that the maid was leaving when the alleged shots were fired. This shatters completely the Tribune's hair raising story, that it prominently displayed on the first page of its widely circulated Sunday issue. This was the first garment strike story that had found its way to the first page of the Tribune.

Since Mr. Kovler assures the DAILY WORKER that he has not had any trouble with bootleggers, we have our own theory about this shooting, if there was any shooting, which we even doubt. This theory has worked out successfully in previous labor struggles, and we refer it to the Chicago police, whom the Tribune claims are busy "bringing in all the business agents and active pickets in the garment workers' unions."

FIRED BY PRIVATE DETECTIVES

This theory is that some gunman in the pay of a fee-hungry private detective agency, that is getting fat off the strike, fired the shots. The strike has been going on for four and one-half weeks and the services of private thugs, gunmen and plug-uglies come rather high. The bank accounts of the bosses, therefore, who have been paying for the standing army of strike terrorists furnished by these private detective agencies, must be getting rather low.

These private detective agencies know, that when the bosses begin getting weak around their check books, a few threatening letters, a few shots in the night, or into an empty room, or a little fake publicity in a daily newspaper, always helps to again start a flow of gold into their coffers. We do not doubt that this was the incentive back of the attack on the Kovler home.

MAKE THE FINKS CONFESS

We suggest to the police department—especially to the sleuths of State's Attorney Crowe's office—that they raid the private detective agencies in the city, put their officials and gunmen thru the third degree, even as they grill innocent workers, and we assure them that then they will come near to a solution of the shooting at the Kovler home on last Saturday night.

But we do not expect them to do anything of the kind. That would help the strikers, and the city (democratic) and county (republican) administrations are against the strikers.

But when the foul press and the bosses' tools begin using these tactics, then one thing is sure, and that is—THE STRIKERS ARE WINNING.

The frantic lies of the Tribune and Herald and Examiner show that the garment bosses are waging a losing fight.

"Union Shooting" Story Shot To Pieces By Story Garment Boss Kovler Tells The Daily Worker

Nicholas Kovler, dress manufacturer, at 337 S. Market street, has nearly as wild an imagination as the Chicago Tribune.

He has told half a dozen different stories since Saturday night, saying "the union" tried to shoot him at his home at

UPHOLSTERERS APPEAL FOR MEN TAYLOR FRAMED

Raise Money to Fight 4 Boycott Convictions

The Upholsterers' District Council of Chicago announced yesterday it will appeal the case of their four members who were recently found guilty of conspiracy to boycott for refusal to work with scabs during the strike. The four men, who were all officials of locals of the upholsterers' union, were indicted thru the efforts of Dudley Taylor, attorney for the upholstery bosses and the Illinois Employers' Association.

The unionists were tried before Judge Hosea Wells in Superior court and the jury found them guilty and levied a fine of $50 and $100 on each of the defendants. Fred Jurish, a member of the painters' union, was also tried and found guilty at the same time, but the judge later reversed the finding of the jury in the case and released him.

40 Unions Fight Sentence.

Since then the upholsterers have secured stay of sentence from the court to permit them to prepare an appeal to the Appellate Court. More than forty unions were represented Saturday at a meeting in the offices of the Chicago Federation of Labor where plans were made to raise money to carry the appeal to the higher court.

Altho the appeal will cost much more than the paying of the fines would be, the upholsterers feel that to let the sentence stand unchallenged would establish a dangerous precedent on which other unionists would be hauled into court to defend themselves when the bosses failed to break a strike.

Bosses Use Boycott.

Capitalist courts have held in the past that when a group of business men decide not to patronize a firm and inform each other of their intention, they are within their rights. In the case of the upholsterers, however, the lower court has held that when a group of union men attempt to use the boycott they are subject to the penalties of the law.

The upholsterers were charged with asking union men not to work with scab upholsterers during the recent strike of the upholsterers. That and that only was the thing the state proved against the union men.

The Federal court in South Dakota in the case of Montgomery Ward & Co. vs. Mannix, held that people have the right to refuse to deal with any firm or individual for any or no reason and having that right they necessarily have the right to inform others of their intention and the reasons for it. But that was a case where two rival commercial organizations were asking the protection of the law. Will the law in this state be interpreted in a different fashion when labor organizations try to use the boycott?

Federation Unions to Aid.

The meeting of union representatives Saturday voted to send a letter and a speaker to all local unions affiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor and ask them to vote contributions to help pay the cost of the appeal. The upholsterers explained that their union was not in a position to pay the costs of the appeal because of the long strike which they have just gone thru and the fact that they, unaided, paid all the costs of their trial. They pointed out that they were well able to pay the fines levied but were appealing only because of the trade union principle involved.

Fight of All Labor.

"Unless this principle is fought for other unions will find themselves in court for telling their fellow unionists there is a strike. This appeal is being made for the labor movement. If we were in a position to pay the costs of the appeal we would do it gladly. But we are not. Since we are fighting for the labor movement and in order to protect its rights we ask the labor movement to held pay the costs of the fight," Thomas O'Shea, business agent of Local No. 111 of the Upholsterers' Union and one of the defendants said.

Union contributions should be sent to Chicago Federation of Labor at 166 W. Washington street. Contributions should specify that the donations are for the Upholsterers' Appeal Fund.

take particular pride, are the ones which "congratulate" him on his labor indictments and convictions.

"Pet" of Employers.

The manner in which Mr. Crowe became the "pet" of the interests is readily and easily disclosed when the history of the state's attorney's official acts is unfolded. When he was running for office in 1920, he bellowed forth his thunderous threats against Victor Lawson of the Daily News and the McCormick family of the Tribune. He would, he announced, put them in jail if they persisted in their illegal practices.

On October 28, 1920, it is reported in the Daily News of Chicago that:

> I am going to make Victor Lawson observe the law. I am going to try and make Victor Lawson pay his taxes, and if I don't succeed in doing it, I am going to put an additional burden on the taxpayers of this state. . . . I am going to make the taxpayers of this city buy him a ticket on the Chicago & Alton R. R. to Joliet, and I am going to give Victor a free ride, and then we are going to keep him at public expense until he learns to behave himself.

Lawson Not Jailed.

Mr. Victor F. Lawson is not known to have changed his ways materially. And yet the taxpayer of this state was not forced to assume any additional burden by buying him a ticket to Joliet. Mr. Crowe was to make Mr. Lawson "observe the law"—and if he failed, he promised to put him in jail. Mr. Lawson is not known to be now observing the law any more than he did then. Has he been put in jail? Has he so much as been questioned, let alone been arrested?

Today Mr. Crowe says that Mr. Lawson is a law observing citizen. He quotes him prominently in his own pamphlet. Why? Why is Mr. Lawson's present opinion commendatory? Because Mr. Lawson feels that the state's attorney has filled the bill as far as his policy against organized labor is concerned. Says Mr. Victor F. Lawson:

Capitalist Editor Praises Crowe.

> The showing you made of thirty-six convictions in recent trials of men who have used the good name of labor as a cloak in the perpetration of grave crimes against the social order is most notable and encouraging. I congratulate you.

On July 9, 1920, the Herald & Examiner reports Mr. Crowe to have said:

> I maintain that the State's Attorney's office should be conducted as a law office solely, and not as a club to punish enemies, political, or otherwise, and that it should not be used to promote political fortunes of a faction of a party; or used by the incumbent as a stepping stone for political advancement.

And again on September 9, 1921, in the Tribune, in connection with the election fraud cases:

Brother in Election Fraud.

> This respondent (Robert E. Crowe) is ready, able and willing, now and at all times, to prosecute any person or persons guilty of crime, regardless of the party or faction, with which such person may be identified.

On February 19, 1921, the Chicago Daily News carried a report, reproduced in part here, exposing various election frauds, in which the name of Sarsfield Crowe, a brother of the State's Attorney, seems to have been implicated. Was Mrs. Sarsfield Crowe prosecuted? Or did Mr. Robert E. Crowe find him entirely innocent?

In 1920, both the Tribune and the Daily News were loud in the denunciation of the supporters of Robert E. Crowe. Expose followed expose as to the vice lords that they stated were the backbone of his campaign. A few portions of these crying articles are reproduced here. "Vice, Gambling, Rampant near Home of Crowe," "Posters Tell Whom Vice Kings Aid," "Crowe's Poster in Dives," and so forth.

Who Pays Crowe's Bills?

Today, Mr. Crowe apparently has additional advertising facilities. His large posters and advertisements are to be seen on Michigan Boulevard and the Drive.

This advertising on a large scale is expensive. Someone must pay for this costly advertising. Mr. Crowe certainly can't afford to pay for it out of his salary of less than $12,000 a year. But contributions apparently are not lacking. Indeed, it would be singular if they were lacking considering the zeal which the state's attorney's office is showing in supporting the garment manufacturers in the present strike.

Squanders County Money.

His record in the fulfillment, or rather nonfulfillment of the legitimate duties and functions of his office supports no other explanation.

In the years 1921 to 1924, inclusive, Cook County has appropriated for his office no less than $2,133,786.[illegible]7, an average of over $533,000 a year; in the four years preceding Robert E. Crowe's incumbency, the county appropriated $1,513,065.88, a yearly average of about $378,000. It is thus seen that the appropriations for the present State's Attorney were 41 per cent greater than for his predecessor.

In spite of these colossal increased appropriations, criminals of the most vicious sort continue their depredations in Chicago practically unmolested. The February 12, 1924, issue of the Journal carries the item that altho there had been committed 270 murders in Chicago, there have been only nine convictions.

Chicago Graft Ridden.

On October 6, 1923, the Herald & Examiner says the following editorially:

> Chicago is graft ridden. Had there been no bribery, there would have been no beer murders. But we still await in vain a word or act that would indicate an investigation of corruption by the state's attorney's office, a call for or a suggestion of a special grand jury, or any other official movement to put the grafters in Joliet. Tribute of $140,000 a day!—and nothing doing in the criminal court building.

Again, on March 5, 1924, the Tribune quotes Chief of Police Collins to the effect that

> A nation-wide syndicate of criminals has made its headquarters in Chicago. The most dangerous of gunmen have collected here. The old arson ring, the pickpocket trust, and confidence men's alliance and the late beer running crews were just office boys compared to the present aggregation.

Busy Hounding Strikers.

But Mr. Crowe is at present too busy hounding striking garment workers to pay any attention to what is fast becoming a desperate criminal situation in Chicago!

When he was prosecuting the so-called "labor cases," which arose out of the "Dailey Commission's inquiry," he was on the lookout for special and expert assistance. And he had no difficulty in getting it—he simply appointed one of the Tribune lawyers.

When the recent Duffy murders were committed, and the "probe" was begun, and all indications, which even a layman could discern, seemed to point to the fact that desperate gangs of criminals were apparently operating in Chicago with immunity, did Mr. Robert E. Crowe look around for "special and expert assistance?" He did not. He put part of the responsibilty of investigating and prosecuting this case into the hands of one of his youngest and most inexperienced assistants. The job of unraveling the evidence in this important case was entrusted to a young man who stepped out of the class room and into the state's attorney's office—a young man who had just been admitted to the bar.

If Mr. Crowe was really serious in his efforts to clear Chicago of what Chief of Police Collins calls a "Nation-wide syndicate of criminals," would he have assigned a person just out of school to tackle the problem?

Dudley Taylor the Boss.

Mr. Crowe has other matters that seriously concern him. He has to "deliver" to the employers' and manufacturers' associations before election. He has to prove that he will "go along."

In the upholsterers' trial it was clearly brought out that Dudley E. Taylor, the attorney for the employers' association in that case, and the attorney for the garment manufacturers at the present time, had no difficulty in having the upholsterers' union officials arrested and brought in by police officers attached to the state's attorney's office, without any warrant of law, and then and there questioned and examined them.

The "courtesy" of the state's attorney's office was thus turned over to this Dudley E. Taylor. He could interrogate any union official at will, and examine such union records as he pleased by merely sending forth police officers and having them brought in.

Taylor Runs Crowe's Office.

The vast ramifications of the control of the state's attorney's office which this Dudley E. Taylor exercises can hardly be overestimated. His hand is seen in practically every official move which Mr. Robert E. Crowe has made in any "labor case." Mr. Dudley E. Taylor has acted as the attorney for the notorious Citizens' Committee to Enforce the Landis Award. The Citizens' Committee in about two years of its existence has collected a fund, according to press reports, of no less than two and a half million dollars to carry on its fight against organized labor. Mr. Taylor is the legal representative of the employers' associations and the manufacturers' associations, and he is the attorney that has been instrumental in taking out the present injunctions for the Chicago Garment Manufacturers.

Arrests in Garment Strike.

It is therefore not at all startling, in view of these facts, to find Mr. Robert E. Crowe

(1) Swelling the ranks of the privately hired gunmen by detailing some fourteen police officers for duty in connection with the garment workers' strike. These police officers are attached to the state's attorney's office to assist him in the preparation of cases. They are in no wise to be used for ordinary police duty nor are they to be loaned to any employers' organization for the purpose of breaking a strike. Altho there were about 100 uniformed police officers assigned for duty in the strike zone by the police department, they made but 10 per cent of the arrests, while the fourteen police officers from the state's attorney's office in the same area, made about 90 per cent of the arrests;

(2) Making these wholesale arrests by his officers in an attempt to injure the morale of the strikers; and

(3) Permitting on the part of his police officers brutal conduct towards the striking Ladies' Garment Workers, the vast majority of whom are women.

Hates Organized Labor.

These facts, as stated, are not startling. Mr. Crowe has disclosed his bitter prejudices against organized labor on numerous occasions. His "poorhouse or jail" speeches, and his "keep them busy defending themselves" speeches are clear and concise condemnations of himself, from his own mouth.

On May 2, 1922, the Chicago Daily News reported that, in a speech before Rotary Club members at the Hotel Sherman

> State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe warned defendants in recent labor trials that he was going to put them either in the poorhouse or the penitentiary. "I understand that the Quesse defense fund is $90,000, but I will put him either in the poorhouse or the penitentiary. Every indictment will be tried."

Promises War on Labor.

And, again on August 22, 1922, the Tribune reported that labor cases still pending in the criminal courts are to receive Crowe's immediate attention, and quoted him as saying:

> We now have an unprecedented building boom going on in the city, and I am going to keep these men so busy defending themselves that they will have no chance to kill building.

If further proof were needed that Robert E. Crowe is an unquestioning tool and willing agent of the "Citizens' Committee," it is provided by the report of February 5, 1924, which appeared in the Tribune. The essence of this report is reproduced. It describes a banquet held at the Union League Club, and stated that Plutes Laud Crowe.

> The prosecutor (Robert E. Crowe) was a guest at a luncheon given in his honor at the Union League Club. W. R. Abbott, president of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, presided, and there were between thirty and forty leaders in Chicago's business life present.
> A motion to endorse Mr. Crowe was made and passed unanimously. Among those who spoke were T. E. Donnelley, chairman of the Committee to Enforce the Landis Award; Jas. A. Patten, also an active supporter of that movement, and Ezra Warner of Sprague, Warner & Company.
> Other speakers dwelt upon the history of Crowe's prosecution of labor cases.
> Before the meeting closed, there was a general agreement that those present would do everything in their power to aid in State's Attorney Crowe's primary and election battles. Dudley E. Taylor, secretary and attorney for the Association, was directed to keep the Association on its toes during both campaigns.

Your committee respectfully submits, therefore, that the facts cited in this brief report conclusively prove that Robert E. Crowe's numerous nefarious practices brand him as one completely subordinated to the will of those who have been and still are waging a bitter fight against organized labor.

And, your committee further respectfully submits that this report, if acceptable, be given the widest possible publicity, to the end that the best interests of the community in general, and labor in particular be promoted.

Words of "Mother" Jones Spur Pickets to New Efforts Today

The striking garment workers will go to the picket line this morning with the speech of "Mother" Mary Jones, delivered to them Saturday afternoon, still ringing in their ears.

"Mother" Jones, who is on her way to California from New York, stopped over in Chicago long enough Saturday to speak to the strikers.

"Mother" Jones, veteran of a thousand strikes and hundreds of jails, talked to the strikers, most of whom are girls, not as a labor leader, but as woman to woman. In spite of the fact that "Mother" Jones is well past eighty she spoke with the pep and punch of youth. Joined to the pep and punch was the wisdom of innumerable years of experience.

This Strike Is War.

"This strike of yours is war. It is damned real war. You girls are fighting and I want to tell you to keep on fighting.

"Don't care about police in or out of uniform. Don't care for jails, courts or injunctions. Picket, strike, fight.

"Don't let anything scare you. You are right in demanding decent wages and conditions. Remember that and keep your courage up. Don't let their sluggers and hired thugs frighten you.

"Some of you workers are mothers. Talk to those police and sluggers and gangmen as you would to your children. You may show them you are right.

Fought Gunmen for 50 Years.

"I have seen gunmen and sluggers in every state in this country. I have fought them for more than fifty years. I know that they cannot do anything but kill you and if they do that you need not worry. I have been in jail more times than anyone can remember and I am still here and I am good for another twenty years.

"If I am here for another twenty years I will still be fighting. They can't keep me still. They can't shut me up.

"And I am damn sure they can't scare me. If you strike with that idea in mind they will not be able to make you lose this strike. And always remember you can strike again and after that strike you can strike again.

"I will see all the bosses and their hired lawyers and other lackeys in hell before I will stop fighting. Girls I am with you and with you strong.

Tells of Miners' Struggles.

"You girls should get the entire labor movement of this town behind you. They can help you. Get them to do it.

"Don't think that this strike is a hard strike even if you do have to fight. Remember the strikes of the miners. I have seen miners strike when they had to leave their homes when the strike began and live in tents. I have had to walk in water up to my waist to get to miners' camps to talk to them because the bosses owned all the roads and other land. But I went and I talked. And I have faced machine guns and soldiers and bayonets to go and talk to strikers. But I always got there and I always talked.

"Don't be afraid of jails or courts or judges or police or gunmen or lawyers. Don't be afraid of anything on earth or in hell. Strike and strike hard."

When "Mother" Jones had finished her speech the strikers cheered her till they were hoarse. To many of the strikers who had recently joined the union and saw this fine old woman who after more than fifty years of continual hard fighting was still full of spirit and determination she was a revelation.

Talk Is Inspiring.

To see a woman old and apparently feeble start to talk and while talking lose all consciousness of herself and regain her youth and strength was inspiring. After she got well under way Mother Jones would pound the table and deliver her message in the same way she did when she began.

"If she could fight for fifty years you kids should be able to strike for fifty weeks. Save some of the pep 'Mother' Jones gave you for Monday. Then take it out and go to the picket line. Before 'Mother' Jones spoke I said that the beginning of the fifth week of the strike would find the strikers without much enthusiasm but with a lot of determination. 'Mother' Jones has given you not only renewed determination but a lot of enthusiasm. Take it on the picket line Monday," one girl striker told the meeting after "Mother" Jones had finished. We don't give the girl's name because Sullivan would have her in court for encouraging violation of his injunction if we do.

Trude Discharges Twelve More.

Earlier in the day twelve strikers were discharged by Judge Trude in So. Clark St. police court when the police were unable to show why they had arrested them. This was the third mass trial and mass acquittal that has occurred in Trude's court in three days.

Strikers who were inspired by the speech of "Mother" Jones to go to the picket line Saturday in the pouring rain met with great success. The bosses were unable because of the rain to get cabs for the scabs. Rainy days mean good business for the taxi drivers and they don't have to wait around for orders.

Pickets Talk to Scabs.

The scabs leaving the shops were compelled to walk in the rain and the pickets had a good chance to talk with them. The police were not brave enough to come out in the rain and risk wet feet and so the pickets worked undisturbed. Not a single arrest was made all day Saturday. Not because there was any lack of pickets on the streets, but because it was too wet for the police.

Many scabs after being talked to promised not to return to work today and the pickets promised to be on hand to see that they kept their promises.

Cases Continued to Tuesday.

Today the strikers, who have been arrested for contempt, will have a respite from attending Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's court. All pending cases have been set to be heard tomorrow and the twenty-six strikers who were last week fined and sentenced to jail will have bonds set then.

When the strikers' cases were called Saturday Attorney Leo LeBosky read to the court from the DAILY WORKER to back up his request that all the strikers sentenced to jail be sent there at once and not be admitted to bail.

"I want to read to your honor from a paper that the strikers read, what they have to say about the way the respondents took the sentences you imposed," LeBosky began.

Reads from "Daily Worker."

Then he read the beginning of the story from Saturday's DAILY WORKER which told how the strikers took their sentences.

"These people boast that no one is in jail. They also call for strikers to go to the picket line in the next column. They urge the strikers to flout the order of this court assuring them that no one has yet gone to jail for doing it.

"I think it is time the court sent these respondents who have been sentenced to jail to go to jail to show that the orders of this court cannot be diregarded."

LeBosky also pointed out to the judge that he was criticized by the DAILY WORKER. "I have been criticized before, I suppose I can stand that," "Dennie" said.

Before the incident of the reading of the DAILY WORKER the court refused to accept bonds signed by Attorney Peter Sissman as security for the appearance of the strikers after their appeal had been heard.

Sullivan Refuses Sissman's Bonds.

The judge refused to accept Sissman's bonds after LeBosky the "tender hearted" told the court that if any of the strikers failed to show up he would be reluctant to collect from Sissman.

Sissman assured him that all the strikers would be on hand to answer after their appeal has been decided and he was perfectly willing to pay up if the improbable happened and a striker was missing.

Sullivan turned down Sissman's offer agreeing that it would pain him immoderately to be compelled to ask Sissman to pay if a striker failed to appear.

The strikers who recalled the unprovoked tirade which Sullivan let loose on Sissman last week smiled at the hypocrisy of the gent with the tender dignity.

Meyer Perlstein Charges Crowe's Men Fired Shots At Kovler Home

Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, charges that the shooting at Nicholas Kovlen was a frame-up by the state's attorney's office and employes.

"I believe the shooting was done by agents of the state's attorney's office and the employers in order to scare those bosses who are thinking of yielding to the union," he said in a statement to the DAILY WORKER.

Taylor's Provocateur Methods.

"In every strike Dudley Taylor is connected with these provocateur acts occur. The plan is to frighten employers and to prejudice the public and the court. Newspapers come out with big stories against the strikers on such a pretext and bosses' lawyers make an issue of it in court.

"The Ladies' Garment Workers' Union had nothing to do with the affair. All the violence in this strike is on the side of the employers and the sluggers and police."

Foul Press Tale Of 'Union Shooting' Is Shot to Pieces

726 S. Cornelia street. Some of these stories appeared in the Chicago Tribune and the Herald and Examiner.

No, he didn't see any union men at the scene of the shooting, he admitted to the DAILY WORKER.

Union Never Threatened Him.

No, the union had never threatened him.

No, he had never had any personal quarrels with any of the union men or women who were on strike.

But the union must have done it, he insisted.

Tribune's Pack of Lies.

The Sunday morning Tribune had carried vivid yarn telling how he and his wife and child were all sitting in the dining room, and the serving maid was standing by, when two bullets crashed thru the window, flying between Mrs. Kovler and the maid. Police were on the job, the stories continued, and all union officials and business agents were to be hauled in for inspection by a woman witness who had been standing in the street and saw two men running away.

This sounded exciting, so the DAILY WORKER asked Mr. Kovler about it Sunday, after his imagination had had time to cool.

Kovler Contradicts Tribune.

Then he said that:

He was not in the room where the bullets entered:

His wife was not in the room:

His baby was not in the room:

None of the family were there except the serving maid, Mrs. Ella Loeder. No, he did not think they wanted to kill the maid. It might have just been an attempt to scare him, he said.

No Arrests Made.

The detective bureau meanwhile said they had not made any arrests and didn't propose to do so. They intimated that they regarded Kovler's story as fishy.

And after all the yarns have accomplished their purpose, for the manufacturer. They spread false stories about the union which is on the way to winning higher wages and shorter hours for the girls he works in his sweat shop at 337 S. Market St.

Oregon Farmer-Labor Party.

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 30.—The newly organized Farmer-Labor party of Oregon indorses the national Farmer-Labor convention to be held in St. Paul June 17. The Oregon party officers are Otto Newman, chairman; Frank Rusmisel, secretary treasurer; A. L. Karnopp, state organizer.

BURNS MUST GO!

PAY-ROLL VENTS ITS WRATH ON 'JIMMY' OATES

Veteran Is In Bad for Exposing Padding.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 30.—Because he forced the removal of "Billy" Feeney's son from the payroll, by showing that he was hired at $200 a month, while neither the International or the Provisional District 4 (Coke Regions) pay-rolls showed any account for him, the machine in the Pittsburgh District intends to vent its wrath on "Jimmy" Oates.

This man Oates, despite his many years of service for the organization, is made the butt end of all the jibes that the machine henchmen can cast in his direction.

One of the oldest men in the district, in point of service, and not very far behind in years, having tramped all over the district in the old days when courage was a very necessary asset he is now made the goat by an unscrupulous set of men as ever pulled on a pair of shoes.

He, Oates, is the man who is responsible for the establishment of the United Mine Workers of America in many of the mining towns in the Pittsburgh district. When Van Bittner was forced to resign as president of this district in 1916, it was alleged that he, or others, had received a bribe of $5,000 and it was then that Oates won for himself the enmity of the machine.

Bittner sent him many telegrams, and ordered that he withdraw the organizers from the Allegheny Valley, but Oates refused to do so and he finally succeeded in organizing the places where he was at.

Murray Turns to Europe.

Declaring that "Soviet Russia appoints all its leaders, in order to increase its efficiency," Phillip Murray made a grandstand plea for retention of the appointive power at the convention of miners in session here. This after all the attacks that he personally directed against the first Workers' government, both here and at the Indianapolis fiasco last January.

He also stated that the officials of the British Miners' Union enjoyed the appointive power, but when his statement was challenged, by a delegate who has not been away from the old country long enough to lose his decided "Scotch" dialect, he took the challenge without rebuttal.

No opportunity is being lost by the machine to cast inferences that this and that resolution "came from Chicago." Lies and insinuations, backed by the overwhelming number of pay-rollers, are ruling this convention. Nothing is being overlooked to link everything of a progressive nature to Soviet Russia, thru its "agents" in Chicago, and the need of salvage for "our splendid organization" is an urgent one.

Defeat Howat Resolution.

The hard skinned delegates from the picks get little consideration from the soft-hand tribe with the glib voices in this convention.

The Howat resolution was defeated with machine-like precision and the resolution on appointive power was rushed thru in like manner.

Van Bittner, as the principal defender of the International Union, in its action on expelling Howat and the rest of the Kansans, told how proud he was of the United Mine Workers of America.

He described it as the greatest organization in the whole world, and John L. Lewis, its president, as the greatest labor leader in the world. He was followed by Vice President Murray and between them they consumed more than three hours despite the fact that, according to the rules, each speaker was limited to ten minutes.

Murray attacked the author of the resolutions and demanded to know who had prepared them. The idea of anyone attacking "the greatest labor leader," as they termed Lewis, was more than he could allow himself to comprehend. He said that the New York and Philadelphia papers attacked Lewis, had cartooned him, with his head to the tail of a snake.

Someone in the convention among the machine henchmen, when Murray was asking who prepared the resolutions, yelled out, "They come from Chicago." Someone else also yelled "They came from Moscow" and Murray answered, "Yes, Comrade Myerscough came with them clear from Chicago."

Turn Down Labor Party.

With the army of pay-rollers and sluggers, the machine is running amuck; they are actually sounding their own death warning, as far as the membership is concerned. When the question of a Labor Party was brought before the convention by a resolution from Wyano, Pa., the committee moved to non-concur and the delegate who introduced it was refused the privilege of speaking for his resolution.

This in spite of the fact that the machine applauded "Jim" Maurer, president of the State Federation of Labor, when in his speech on Tuesday he declared that "now is the time to start a Third Party." The probable reason for this is the fact that President Fagan, of District No. 5, is a candidate for delegate to the Democrat Convention. The only mystery here is how the sedition and Dolla resolutions passed by unanimous vote.

WORKERS PARTY TAKES STAND ON MILWAUKEE POLL

Swabeck Writes About Tuesday's Elections

By ARNE SWABECK
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 30.—With a period of industrial depression and consequent unemployment in prospect, Tuesday's municipal elections become of added importance to the workers in Milwaukee. The candidates, both those endorsed by the Socialist Party and by the Milwaukee manufacturers, are mum on this question. They have nothing to offer for the relief of such a situation, nor have they anything to offer concerning the many vital questions confronting the workers at the present time.

Yet these elections become a question of choosing an alternative. The election of David S. Rose, as mayor, endorsed by the manufacturers, would mean a complete crushing of the last vestige of labor participating in government. It could mean nothing else than a renewal of the police terror of the olden days, with all possible support to the attempts to crush labor unions. The election of Daniel W. Hoan would at least mean an expression of opposition to the candidate of the big capitalists.

Must Defeat Bosses' Candidates.

The Workers Party, local Milwaukee, in a statement issued, clearly points out that in view of these facts, and particularly in view of the fact that the Workers Party has no candidates in this election, and is therefore unable to call upon the workers of Milwaukee to support its candidates, they should support the candidacy of Mayor Hoan and the others endorsed by the Socialist Party.

Of course this does not mean a united front with the Socialist Party upon its program of meaningless phrases. It is purely a question of defeating the candidates of the capitalists. The Workers Party has repeatedly invited the Socialist Party, both nationally and in many cities, to become part of a united front of the American workers thru the formation of a Labor Party, such a united front to be based on an active struggle for the pressing needs of the workers.

Point Out Socialist Failures.

The statement issued by the Workers Party, despite the fact that it calls upon the workers to support this ticket endorsed by the Socialist Party, very definitely points to the record of failures in the past and the betrayals by the Socialist Party, of the best interests of the workers.

It tells the workers that it would be a mistake to vote for the Socialist candidates without understanding that it will never militantly fight for the needs of the workers. It points out what some of the duties of a real working class party are.

It points out that the Socialist Party has made no attempt to participate in a united front of the American workers thru the formation of a class Farmer-Labor Party. It has made no attempt to be represented at the coming convention to be held in St. Paul, June 17th, called by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and many other State Farmer-Labor parties and groups, called for the purpose of forming a class Farmer-Labor Party. It points out that the duty of the Socialist Party is to join in such a movement; that it should fight to secure relief for unemployment; that it should assist the unions in organizing the unorganized; and that it should strive to actually protect the political rights of the workers and consistently fight for the abolition of the issuance of injunctions as a means, in the hands of the capitalists to suppress the workers.

Workers' Economic Needs Many.

The economic and political needs of the workers of Milwaukee are as many, and as pressing, as in any other city.

The Workers Party in its statement issued demands for the workers of Milwaukee:

First:—Immediate action by the City Council appropriating funds for the relief of the growing unemployment.

Second.—Money for this purpose to be raised thru requiring licenses for all business organizations, with a charge for such licenses sufficient to provide the money.

Third.—The organization of shop councils in all city and public service institutions made up of representatives of the workers with power of these shop councils to regulate hours of labor, working conditions and to participate in the management.

For the coming industrial depression, and for that matter for the present situation, as well, these demands are of particular importance. The workers of Milwaukee should unite their forces for the adoption of such measures and in making the demands even upon the Socialist Party, not commit the mistake of believing that the Socialist Party, with its present leadership, will fight for its achievements. Nevertheless they should force the hands of this leadership so the workers may become definitely convinced of the necessity of building a truly revolutionary party which can take the place of the Socialist Party—a revolutionary party which can become a vital and integral part of the working class, expressing all the struggles of the workers and lead the way to their emancipation.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Official Neglect, Corruption and Graft Are Blamed For Bad Housing Conditions in Chicago

The prediction of twenty-four years ago, that if housing evils were allowed to go unchecked, Chicago would have a great tenement house population crowded together in stifling quarters—with over half the total population living in dirty surroundings, with practically no air and sunlight—has now come to be a fact.

In 1900 the City Homes Association, assisted by many welfare agencies and college workers, conducted the first scientific and thoro investigation of housing conditions ever made in Chicago.

It was declared by these investigators that "the purpose of the investigation is to lay a foundation for reform." The investigation is important because of its scope, its scientific procedure, and because all housing experts say that nothing has been done since that time to better the evils exposed, in fact, that conditions have been allowed to become more acute.

Corrupt Politicians Blamed.

The blame for the evil housing conditions found is laid to "official neglect, corrupt politics, lack of organization to force action, and above all, to success of the slum landlord in combating his individual property interests against the health and sanitary necessities of the working people of Chicago."

Some of the conditions reported are: Union street, condition of rear tenement is awful; Maxwell street, bad lighting, very dirty; Thirteenth street, a typical bad tenement, cheap narrow, dark, dirty stairs; Ashland avenue, rubbish thrown under the sidewalk; Holt street, only two yards in block dirty and insanitary; Noble street, yard very dirty, rubbish all about; Ewing street, lots strewn with rubbish and garbage."

"Inside the apartments the rule was found to be darkness, lack of air, uncleanliness, and poisonous gases. Musty, fetid rooms, which cannot be ventilated because of brick walls overshadowing the windows, were found, with inevitably accumulated dirt, mold and vermin. Emanations from the body, foul air in dwelling and sleeping rooms complicates all difficulties of bad building and construction and doubles the cost to the tenants of dark, unclean, and badly ventilated rooms. The limited amount of cubic air-space for each individual caused by overcrowding has been known to suffocate children.

Rotten Housing.

"The miserable construction and ill-repair of many tenement houses causes damp and unwholesome dwelling places which are obviously unfit for human beings to dwell in. Basements and cellars are inhabited, and in some of them all the most serious inside sanitary conditions are found.

"The evil effects of overcrowding are numerous. Children are kept up and out of doors until midnight in summer because rooms are unendurable; cleanliness of house and street are made difficult; the air is filled with foul odors of every kind; a state of nervous tension, and lack of home privacy are created.

"Chicago's tenement house population is oppressively dense. Our density of population is most appalling. By comparison to the height of our dwellings, the real density of Chicago's population equals the worst in the world. In the districts investigated there is a great crowding of population in a small area. The density of some blocks is over four hundred per acre. If this were extended over the whole area of Chicago, it would mean that the entire population of the United States could be housed in Chicago. In one lot of less than one-seventh of an acre, 125 people are housed. Applying this figure to the whole area of the city, it would mean that more than the entire population of the western hemisphere could be housed in Chicago.

Evils of Rotten Conditions.

"Some of the evils resulting from this overcrowding are; immorality, perverted sexuality, drunkenness, pauperism, debauchery, high death rates, a pitiful increase in infant mortality, terrible suffering among little children, scrofula and congenital diseases, encouragement of infectious diseases, inability to work, reduction of physical stamina, consumption."

"Chicago may take into account that the neglect which permitted these conditions to arise is at the expense of the health and welfare of thousands of working people who are now living in these tenements. The working classes of Chicago are the worst sufferers. The neglect permitted is at the risk of even greater danger in the future."

When it is taken into account that the conditions described above were in existence twenty-four years ago, and that nothing has been done in all that time to stem the steadily accumulating evils, it is evident at the present day, what a terrible price in life, health and comfort must have been paid by the workers of Chicago, in order to allow the private real estate concerns to increase their profits.

Paving Alleys—Some Remedy!

Charles Ball, a well known lecturer and writer upon housing conditions in this city, who is a chief in the sanitation bureau of the Department of Health, said to The DAILY WORKER yesterday: "In the last quarter of a century, all that we have done to eliminate Chicago's housing evils has been to clean up and pave a few alleys." Mr. Ball is daily in touch with housing conditions in Chicago. Every day he receives reports from his sanitary inspectors from all over the city, besides making numerous tours of inspection himself. Mr. Ball says: "The conditions reported twenty-four years ago by the City Homes Association are in existence today in a greatly multiplied and more acute form. No great number of unfit houses have been torn down; the city has built no apartments or made no effort to eliminate even the worst slums. I believe that the worst obstacle to better housing facilities is the criminal way we have allowed private interests to entirely control the city's building and housing program."

In a quarter of a century of managing the city's affairs, all that the municipal authorities have to show in the way of improvement, is the paving of a few alleys, as against the indescribably dangerous and unhealthful way workers of the city are forced to live.

Youngstown Workers Organize Council to Aid Foreign Born

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Mar. 30.—Council For the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers went over with a bang here. The meeting was attended by delegates from twenty-five local fraternal and labor unions and turned out to be one of the most educational meetings ever held in Youngstown.

Speakers from the various labor organizations roundly condemned the proposed immigration laws and Max Lerner of Cleveland dealt more in detail with the meaning of the proposed laws and their effects on labor.

William McCabe, Painters' Union, elected president, and Morris Been as secretary. Joseph Coope, treasurer.

An executive committee of seven was elected and a committee of three to represent the council at the Labor Congress was also elected.

Resolutions were read and adopted and will be forwarded to Congressman John Cooper and Senators Fess and Willis.

Arrangements are being made to hold one of the largest mass meetings ever held in Mahoning valley with well-known speakers to address the meeting.

For Western Ohio Council.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Mar. 30.—A call to organize the United Front Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of western Ohio has been mailed out by the Farrell Defense Committee. Meeting to be held Sunday afternoon, 2 p. m., at the Federal Hall, 338½ West Federal street, to which all believers in free speech, press and peaceful assemblage are invited to attend.

The Civil Liberties Union is supporting the call and will assist in organizing the council.

Salvationists Guzzle Swell Eats as They Raise $$ for Hungry

NEW ORLEANS, March 30th.—Teams of business men organized to raise funds for the down and out fund of the Salvation Army meet daily at an expensive restaurant to "lunch and talk over affairs." It is not stated whether the check is paid out of the collections or "put on ice." However, there is more eating and talk indulged in by the gentlemen than work for the unfortunates.

Home Life Destroyed

THE large majority of the Negro families have had their home life destroyed because most Negro women are forced into industry in order to make both ends meet. Today we give the results of an investigation into the wages, and reveal the conditions which these Negro mothers meet in the factory. Until segregation of the Negro, and real estate profiteering are abolished, the Negro family life will be non-existent. Nine out of ten Negro homes take lodgers into their overcrowded family circle. If the Negroes want to better their housing facilities, and if they want a practical program with which to abolish the housing evils, they are advised to attend the Negro Tenants League mass meeting, in Odd Fellows' Hall, next Monday evening.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE WARRING ON MILITARISTS

Fighting Boy Scouts, 'Y,' and the Rest

By HARRY GANNES.

There has been no let up in the slanderous and vicious campaign carried on by the capitalist papers against all anti-war elements and particularly the Young Workers League and its Junior Groups.

Several members of the Young Workers League and the Junior groups have been called for questioning by teachers and principles who want to aid the capitalist newspapers in their endeavor to snuff out any opposition to their war preparations.

United Front, Anti-War Meet.

The basis for linking up the Allinson and other pacifist movements with the revolutionary anti-military work carried on by the American young Communist organization is the joint students and young workers meeting held in June of last year to found a united front of all elements willing to join in a concerted attack on the growing militarization of the United States. Brent Dow Allinson represented the mildest of pacifist elements, while the Young Workers League of America thru Martin Abern and Al. Albright stressed the Communist military and anti-military program and refused to co-ordinate with any of the milk-and-water pacifists present. No agreement for work was arrived at at the Waukegan Students Conference.

Y. W. L. Anti-Military Leaflet.

The Young Workers League has since been carrying on a lone campaign against militarism particularly in the schools and thru the Young Worker and the Young Comrade. Recently a special anti-military leaflet was printed pointing out the immediate war dangers.

Particular emphasis was laid by the league on the use of the boy scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and other capitalist youth organizations as military units by the American government. In the last war the Boy Scouts were organized into an effective military unit and were widely used by the militarist forces in carrying on the war. The Y. M. C. A. became the educational unit for the army with the express purpose of making better soldiers out of the young men who were drafted.

Against Y. M. C. A.

Hence the Y. W. L. anti-military campaign has been directed with all the force at its command particularly against these organizations and the citizen's military training camps who disguise themselves as benevolent institutions.

There is very little indication that the young workers will be frightened into meek submission to militarization. Pressure is being exerted on the students by pointing out that the Y. W. L., a Communist youth organization, is most energetic in its demands against the struggle against arming for future capitalist wars.

Boy Scouts A Dud.

Two military campaigns now being conducted by capitalist forces are are meeting with obvious failure. The attempt to enlist the boys of the working class into the Boy Scouts is falling short of the mark set by the organizers of this movement; and the call for young men to enlist in the Citizen's Military Training Camps is not meeting with a responsive nod from the young workers in this country. They still remember the rotten, stinking food served in 1922, and the brutal officers who made life miserable for the young wage slaves who were unfortunate enough to enlist in these camps.

Vets Are Wise To Wars.

Disgusted by the wholesale graft in the veterans bureau and the failure of the bonus, the world war vets are proving to be a discouraging element to any war attempts on the part of the imperialistically inclined American capitalists. The mass exodus from the American Legion and the drop in the number of students who want military training, is the inspiring cause for the anti-red and anti-pacifist campaign now being put over by all pro-militarist organizations in the United States.

Our War On Militarism.

"This is the time to stress our anti-military work," declared Martin Abern, secretary of the Young Workers League; "we had planned a national anti-military campaign for this spring, irrespective of the action of the pacifists or the American Legion and the Tribune, and are going to keep up our work among the young workers and students. We realize that our organization is not of mass size; but we know that the American youth is disgusted and disillusioned about the sacred nature of American capitalism and is not ready to lay down its life for the bloody dollars of the Morgans and Rockefellers. The endeavor should be to arouse the working youth to a realization that the anti-military struggle must be a Communist one and should steer clear from the dangerous shoals of pacifism.

"The Citizen's Military Training Camps and the Boy Scouts will receive our special attention. We call upon the working children and the working youth to join us in our endeavor to destroy the war monster now being created by the American capitalists. Our slogan is, 'Down With All Capitalist Wars;' and it is up to the youth of the working class to smash the capitalist war danger."

In Memoriam Arvo Usenius

Born February 15th, 1892, at Helsingfors, Finland
Died Monday, March 10th, 1924, at Superior, Wis., U. S. A.

THE WORKERS PARTY of America and particularly the Finnish Federation suffered a great loss by the death of Comrade Arvo Usenius who died as all militant workers would hope to die, "on the job."

Coming to America from Finland eleven years ago Usenius contracted tuberculosis while working at his trade as a machinist in the big machine shops of the East. Joining the Finnish Federation, Usenius later became a member of the Communist and Workers Parties.

Comrades in Ishpeming, Mich., remember his splendid efforts as director of their dramatic work. Coming to Superior, Wis., three years ago, Comrade Usenius was found in the forefront of every Party activity particularly in Y. W. L. and T. U. E. L. work.

In his position as assistant editor of our Finnish Daily "Tyomies", he worked up to the last, leaving his desk at 7:00 P. M. on Monday, March 10th, he died in his home one hour later.

Those who knew him will long remember him as a loyal and hard-working member of our Party and our hope is that each one of those who knew him will emulate his spirit of devotion and sacrifice which impelled him to give unstintingly of his services to our Party even while the dread of disease was working its ravages upon him. The best memorial we can give him is to work as he worked for Communism.

DEFY INJUNCTION, PICKET AND WIN, SWABECK URGES

Workers Party Speaker Addresses Strikers

"Defy the injunction: Picket and Win the Strike!"

This was the message of Arne Swabeck (district organizer of the Workers Party to the regular meeting of the garment strikers at 180 W. Washington street.

Swabeck hailed the victory of the garment strikers of Boston and told the strikers that the sweatshop bosses of Chicago could be brought to their knees by militant tactics.

Double Picketing Monday.

Victory will be won, cried the speaker, by keeping the picket lines strong. Picketing must be doubly strong Monday morning.

The strike is not just the fight of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. It is the fight of the entire labor movement of Chicago. Every sincere union man, of whatever craft, should go out on the picket line and aid in the gallant struggle that the garment strikers are waging, Swabeck urged. Applause came from the strikers who have been welcoming the support radical union men from other trades have been giving their fight.

Girls who have been keeping the picket lines filled cheered while he poured out his scorn on Judge "Dennie" Sullivan and his injunction.

"Judge Sullivan thinks that the streets belong to the bosses," said Swabeck. "The strikers know that they belong to the people and they are going to continue to walk the streets in spite of him"

Old Party Politicians.

The Workers Party speaker pointed out the political significance of the strike. The mayor whose policemen are beating up pickets is an old party politician. The "labor" alderman who refuses to raise his voice at the city council is also an old party politician. Until the workers elect their own representatives on a farmers' and workers' party ticket they will continue to be betrayed.

A workers' government would put all the private sluggers and labor pounding policemen off the strike district and put in strikers who were deputized to preserve order, he said, and these workers would see that the "sluggers" stopped slugging.

National Defense Committee Appeals For Assistance

To the DAILY WORKER: A mistaken impression is being spread that all political prisoners have been freed and that consequently there is no further need for defense and relief work. That defense is still a matter of vital interest to all workers can be shown from the fact that the National Defense Committee alone is defending seventy workers who are facing deportation.

Our most recent case is that of Judah L. Cooper who was arrested on February 3rd at Bayonne, N. J. at a Soviet Russia Recognition meeting by two professional spies and was indicted under the Federal Conspiracy Act. It is all right for bankers, business men and congressmen to ask for recognition of Soviet Russia when the recognition means business, but it is a crime for a worker to voice his sympathy and ask for support of the Workers' Government. This is another example of American justice.

These men have participated actively in the labor movement and it is due to their activities that they are being persecuted. This, therefore, is your fight and you must help.

You are urged to make an outright donation to the National Defense Committee, or to contribute some articles for the Third Annual International Bazaar which will take place April 10th thru 13th at Central Opera House, New York City.

No High Wages for Workers in Next War Militarist States

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—Brigadier General H. S. Wolfe of New York, a finance reserve officer addressing the reserve officers of the Ninth Army Corps area declared that in the next war, the big industrial establishments of the United States would co-operate with the government in seeing that the workers who remained in the factories would not draw high wages while others received army wages.

Of course the general did not state that the industrial magnates would not be allowed any profit on the commodities produced for war purposes, the sacrifices would be made by the workers.

"We desire to organize the industries of the countries so that we will be able to mobolize them as the man power of the country is being mobilized," said General Wolfe. Thus we have our rulers preparing for the next holocaust and cold bloodedly planning the most effective methods of sending the workers to their doom at the least possible cost.

FREEDOM FOR FILIPINOS IS FRISCO DEMAND

Big Mass Meeting Will Be Held in New York

At the enthusiastic mass meeting of workingmen in San Francisco a strong demand was voiced for Wall Street getting out of the Philippines. The meeting, held under the auspices of the local Workers Party, was addressed by Communist and Filipino speakers and strongly denounced the Republican and Democratic parties for their policy towards the Filipino people. Special commendation of the Workers Party activities in behalf of Filipino freedom from American imperialists was voiced at the mass rally which adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, the Congress of the United States, by an almost unanimous vote of its members, representing the Republican and Democratic parties, passed on August 29, 1916, the Jones Act declaring it to be 'the purpose of the people of the United States to withdraw their sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize their independence as soon as a stable government can be established therein'; and

"Whereas, this was a clear and definite promise on the part of our government to grant the Filipinos their freedom as soon as such a "stable" government should have been established; and

"Whereas, such a government has been established in the Philippines for many years, as testified to by their former Governor-General, Francis Burton Harrison, in his book entitled "The Cornerstone of Philippine Independence", and as is quite evident to any impartial observer of the Islands; and

"Whereas, the workers of the United States are opposed to the imperialistic schemes of the present Governor-General, Major-General Leonard Wood, who is repaying the millionaire backers of his campaign for the Presidency of the U. S. in 1920 by handing over to that same group of American exploiters the development of the enormous natural resources and the industries of the Philippines; and

"Whereas, there is now pending in Congress a bill to grant the Filipinos their immediate freedom from American rule: as an independent nation:

"Therefore, be it resolved, that this mass-meeting of American and Filipino workers and citizens demand that the government of this country fulfill its solemn promise and that we urge the Congressmen and Senators from this state to support unreservedly the granting of immediate independence to the Philippines.

"Be it resolved that we condemn the Republican and Democratic parties for their failure to give the Filipinos their freedom and that we commend the Workers Party of America for its stand in behalf of immediate Philippine independence.

"Be it resolved that copies of this resolution be sent to the press and the Congressmen and Senators from this state."

On April 2 at 8 p. m. the workers of New York City will hold a monster rally for Philippine freedom at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th St. Pedro Guevara, Philippine resident commissioner to the United States, Scott Nearing and Jay Lovestone will be the speakers.

The Daily Worker "May Day Special"

THE WORKERS of the world will again celebrate on the coming first of May the victory of their Russian comrades in establishing the first Workers Republic in human history and maintaining it against the combined attacks of world capitalism.

Soviet Russia will be hailed on next May Day by hundreds of thousands of demonstrations as a challenge to the capitalist system and a star of hope to the struggling working masses of all lands.

The workers in every country will appraise the results of the year's struggles. They will take lessons from the past and prepare for the future. It will be a day of reckoning and a day of inspiration.

The workers of the United States will point to the growing demoralization of the capitalist parties as evidence that the capitalist system even in young America has been stricken with a mortal disease from which it cannot recover. The Teapot Dome scandal alone is evidence enough of this.

Radical organizations, progressive unions will call on the members to honor the international holiday of the working class. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has sent out a call to its locals thruout the country to make immediate arrangements for the celebration of May First. That union has fixed the day for the opening of its biennial convention on the second Monday in May so that it would not conflict with the May Day celebration.

The "May Day Special" of the DAILY WORKER will carry the news of arrangements for the May Day demonstrations thruout the country. It will carry articles from the leaders of the world Communist movement. It will fittingly celebrate labor's international holiday in an edition that will put in the shade all previous special issues. Its writers and cartoonists will do their best to make the first May Day issue of the DAILY WORKER a historic one. Get on the job immediately. Order a bundle. Fill out the blank printed below and send it in at once.

TRACHTENBERG MAKES BIG HIT IN HUB SPEECH

Told of Present State Of Russian Affairs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., March 30.—Several hundred Boston workers heard intimate details about the Russian government, finance, industry and education from the lips of one who spent almost a year in Russia, and who had a further opportunity to travel in the other European countries and make comparisons. Alexander Trachtenberg, who was the representative of the Workers Party, had ample opportunity to investigate for himself, due to his knowledge of Russian. His previous contact with unions in this country, and his editorship of the American Labor Year Book qualified him for an analytical survey of the situation.

He traced the upward development of Russia in international affairs, pointing to the shifting of the International Naval Conference to Rome because Russia had boycotted Switzerland, as an index to the power of the first proletarian state.

If Employment Shark Doesn't Get You the L. A. Policemen Will

To the DAILY WORKER: What shall we think of a system which forces idle men to patronize employment agencies of the worst type and claps them into jail if they do not get jobs.

The Los Angeles police under Vollman, who claims to be a "scientific policeman of today" are arresting jobless men in large numbers for the mere crime of being out of work.

The way workers are forced to patronize these employment offices is illustrated by this experience:

Sent To Employment Shark.

On Feb. 25, 1924, a friend of mine and myself went out to look for work, and we listened to the following "information" given to a big crowd of men by a little boss, speaking for a big one, a local merchant:

"Well, we want 150 men tomorrow, and you can get the necessary information thru H— Bros. on Second Street" (an employment bureau).

Now, the point is this: (1) Is the work on this speedway in Hollywood going to be a 50-50 proposition (between the boss and said employment shark) of hiring and firing—as usual in the past—for the sole purpose of squeezing the last dollar out of unfortunate, idle men? (2) If not, why did they not hire the men on the spot, or send for help from the free employment bureau—in which idle, destitute workers are crowded like sardines in the fishing trust's tin cans every workday of the week?

"Unconstitutional."

The law, regulating employment bureau's, has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court of the earthquake state.

What do fundamental, natural, rights of a small fish amount to, anyhow, compared with man-made property rights of a Big, man-eating Shark in the merciless sea of the master class?—L. T. Rendal, Los Angeles.

The Role of the Workers Party in the Farmer-Labor United Front

A Letter to the District Executive Committee of Minnesota, Authorized by the Central Executive Committee

Chicago, Ill., March 27, 1924.

District Executive Committee,
District Nine,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Comrades: It has come to the attention of the Central Executive Committee, that the question of policy to be followed by our Party organization in the Farmer-Labor Party has been before the District Executive Committee and divergent views have come before that committee on this question. The Central Executive Committee directs me to make the following statement to the District Executive Committee regarding the matter:

The situation in Minnesota is of vital importance to our whole Party organization. In Minnesota the Farmer-Labor Party is in existence in a definite, crystallized form, and the policy which we adopt in Minnesota will be a precedent for the whole Party in relation to the National Farmer-Labor Party when that organization is finally crystallized. It is therefore important that we adopt the correct Communist policy in Minnesota as a guide to our whole Party for its work inside of the Farmer-Labor Party thruout the country.

Our Work as a Communist Party.

In order to put the question of this policy in a correct relationship, we must proceed from the basis of what is our work as a Communist Party. The Workers Party prides itself in being a Communist Party; that means, that it considers its work to build up and lead the forces which will bring about a proletarian revolution in the United States and establish a Soviet form of government and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. Our struggle to achieve this end gives us our right to call our Party a Communist Party. We are organized to attain that end and all the work which we do as a Party must lead to this goal which we are striving for.

Methods of Reaching Our Goal.

With this fact firmly fixed in our minds, the next step is to consider thru what methods we can build up the forces which will create the proletarian revolution and establish the Soviets and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

One method which might be considered as a means, is that of convincing the majority of the workers thru propaganda that the present capitalist system is a system of exploitation and oppression for the workers of this country and that the government is the instrument of the ruling class for maintaining this system and that they must establish the Soviet Government and the Proletarian Dictatorship. This method of propaganda is the method of such organizations as the Socialist Labor Party and the Proletarian Party.

As a Communist Party we use the method of propaganda in carrying on our work, but we know that merely thru theoretical propaganda about the evils of the capitalist system and the necessity of the Proletarian revolution, Soviets and the Proletarian Dictatorship, we can never win the majority of the working class and mobilize them for the struggle to achieve these ends.

The Communists' method of work includes, besides the method of propaganda, the method of participating in the every-day struggle of the workers, and thru such participation, winning leadership of the working class and thus creating the movement which can bring about the proletarian revolution. We know that the class conflicts which the capitalist system produces continually, bring the workers into conflict with the ruling class over immediate questions of wages, working conditions, and other matters affecting their daily lives. It is the Communist policy to enter into the struggles of this character which arise under the existing order and to fight side by side with the working class, showing at each development of such struggles the necessity of steps forward, because the working class cannot win any final victory until the proletarian revolution is achieved.

The United Front Policy.

In the application of this Communist stategy, the Communist International has developed the policy of the United Front. For us, the Farmer-Labor Party and in other United Front movements, we associate ourselves with other groups of workers in struggles over immediate questions affecting the workers' lives. We fight with them against the capitalist oppression which they are conscious of.

Our purpose in thus fighting with the workers is to help them win whatever can be won thru such struggles. But this is not our only purpose. We have as our principle aim in the United Front, to win the masses of the workers for the struggle against capitalism and for the proletarian revolution, Soviets, and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

We know that the great masses of workers are not sufficiently conscious of the character of the capitalist system so that today they will listen to us if we carry on mere propaganda against capitalism and for the Soviets and the Proletarian Dictatorship. On the other hand, we know that in the process of the struggles against capitalists over immediate questions, there will arise those circumstances which will make it possible for us to point to the need of a struggle against the whole system of capitalism and to the Soviets and the Proletarian Dictatorship as the means of expressing the workers' power.

For us as a Communist Party this latter possibility of the United Front is of the greatest importance. It is because the United Front creates the most favorable circumstances to bring about an advance of the working class toward the final struggle for the Soviets and Proletarian Dictatorship that we enter into the United Front.

Every decision we make as to the policy which we are to follow must be determined by the above statement of what we are aiming to achieve in a United Front movement and our policy will only be a correct Communist policy if it brings us closer to our goal of the Proletarian Revolution, Soviets and the Proletarian Dictatorship.

Errors in Policy Proposed to the District Executive Committee.

When viewed in the light of what has been said above, the proposal made by certain members of the District Executive Committee that we shall nominate candidates who are members of the Workers Party on the Farmer-Labor ticket, but that these candidates shall make no public declaration that they are Communists, and that they shall run for office merely on the Farmer-Labor program, immediately appears to be what it is, a non-Communist policy.

How would such a policy help us in our work of winning support for our Communist principles, the Proletarian Revolution, Soviets and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat? If our members are to run as other candidates run for office on the Farmer-Labor ticket, what will distinguish them from these candidates in the minds of the working class? How will the Communist party gain anything from the United Front under these conditions? We are not interested as a Communist Party in electing any individuals to public office, for the mere sake of electing that individual to public office. We are not interested as a Communist Party in electing candidates to public office merely for the purpose of supporting the immediate demands which may appear in a Farmer-Labor Party program. We say to the working class, and it is our duty to say to the working class during the campaigns of the Farmer-Labor Party, that these immediate demands will never bring about the emancipation of the workers from the exploitation and suppression of capitalism.

It is the duty of a Communist elected to a legislative body of the capitalist state to carry on revolutionary propaganda there against the capitalist government. Frank Miner, when a member of the Minnesota legislature, correctly understood this policy when he introduced a bill to abolish the existing government of Minnesota and establish the Soviet form of government. But if our candidates on the Farmer-Labor ticket do not announce themselves as Communists, do not, during their campaign, carry on agitation for the full Communist program including the proletarian revolution, Soviets and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, they will have no mandate from the workers to enter the capitalist legislative bodies and there conduct their revolutionary propaganda.

The policy which was proposed to the District Executive Committee does not in any way distinguish our candidates from other candidates on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket. It means simply that our Party and our candidates are a part of the Farmer-Labor Party and nothing more. It would mean that we would not do that work for which we entered the United Front of the Farmer-Labor Party and in place of using our position as part of such a United Front for Communist activity and to advance the Communist movement, that we ourselves would merely become an adjunct of the Farmer-Labor Party.

The Central Executive Committee, therefore, disapproves of these proposals.

The Communist Policy in the Farmer-Labor Party.

What then is to be the tactics of our Party as part of the United Front political organization called the Farmer-Labor Party? We believe that the minority of the Minnesota District Executive Committee correctly formulated this policy.

We must nominate Communists, members of the Workers Party, in the Farmer-Labor Party primaries. These Communist candidates must, during the primary campaign, publicly announce themselves as Communists and members of the Workers Party. They must publicly support the full Communist program, stating in their speeches and writings and in the platform submitted to the workers, that they ask support because they stand for a proletarian revolution, the establishment of the Soviet government, and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Only thru these tactics will we be playing the part of a Communist Party in the United Front. Only thru these tactics will we be performing our duty as a Communist Party in carrying on the struggle for the proletarian revolution, Soviets and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

If our candidates are defeated in the Farmer-Labor primaries, then we will issue a statement in the name of the Party to the effect that we have carried on the fight inside of the Farmer-Labor Party for the correct policies which will lead to relief for the workers from capitalism, but since the majority of the workers are not yet sufficiently conscious of the need of the methods proposed by the Communists, we will not, therefore, desert them in their immediate struggle, but that we will give our full support to the Farmer-Labor ticket which has been selected by the masses of workers and farmers.

Should our candidates be nominated in the primaries they will thus obtain a mandate from the workers and farmers to continue their fight for Communist principles in the election campaigns and in the legislative bodies of the capitalist government.

The policy here outlined is the only correct Communist policy, and this policy must be put into effect in Minnesota and thruout the whole country by our Party organization as quickly as the Farmer-Labor Party appears in the crystallized form which has come into existence in Minnesota.

Dangers to the United Front.

There will be those who will object to this Communist policy on the ground that it endangers the United Front. Let us say frankly here that each time we show our Communist face and our Communist policy in a United Front, we endanger the United Front. If we are never to endanger the United Front, that means that we will never show our Communist face or advocate our Communist policies within the United Front. If we are to follow such a policy, then we have no Communist reason for joining in any United Front movement.

As has already been stated, we enter into the United Front because the United Front offers the best method of carrying on the struggle for our Communist principles and of achieving our Communist goal.

And we must take those actions which will help us in that work irrespective of any other consideration.

The Minnesota Situation.

The Minnesota situation still presents some special problems in view of the fact that there exist both the Farmer-Labor Federation and the legal machinery of the Farmer-Labor Party. In order to meet these problems, the Central Executive Committee directs the District Executive Committee to apply the following policies:

1. The Party must accomplish two results in the question of candidates in the Minnesota elections:

(a) To bring the identity and program of the Workers Party before the workers as distinguished from all other elements in the Farmer-Labor Party.

(b) To defeat the candidates who are opposed to the Farmer-Labor Federation and who would use their control of the State Committee to sabotage the June 17th Convention in favor of July 4th.

2. The Party shall enter candidates for the State Legislature, U. S. Senator, and such offices as are not involved in the question of the appointment of the chairman and members of the legal State Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party.

3. In view of the fact that the entry of the Workers Party candidates for Governor and other state offices which appoint the State Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party would so divide the votes of the candidates who favor the Farmer-Labor Federation and the June 17th convention as against the July 4th conference of the Committee for Progressive Political Action as to give the nominations to candidates who would appoint a state committee of the Farmer-Labor Party which would be hostile to the Farmer-Labor Federation and the June 17th Convention, we do not enter candidates for these offices.

4. Our Party shall support for these offices those candidates who openly declare themselves for the Farmer-Labor Federation and the June 17th Convention who have the best chance to be nominated.

5. Our Party in Minnesota shall enter into no agreement with progressive labor leaders as to candidates, but shall determine its attitude independently and make a public declaration of its attitude and the reasons for it.

6. The District Executive Committee shall issue a public statement explaining that it has not entered its own candidates for Governor and some other states offices in the primaries only because it does not want to endanger the Farmer-Labor Federation and the June 17th Convention. This statement shall clearly set forth the program of the Workers Party and its attitude toward the Farmer-Labor Party and the various elements in it and the whole campaign of our Party in the elections shall be conducted along this line.

7. Members of the Party in Minnesota may become candidates for office only by permission of the Party and those becoming candidates must openly declare themselves to be members of the Party and seek support of the workers as such.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

New England Leads In Low Wage Rates Recent Figures Show

NEW YORK, March 30.—New England is revealed as the low wage paradise of the open shoppers in a recent statement covering average hourly wages paid in manufacturing establishments represented by the National Metal Trades Association, the one big union of metal trades employers. Thruout the New England states members of this association paid employes of machine shops, foundries and pattern shops an average of 56 cents an hour during January as compared with 62.2 cents an hour in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. In these three states members of the association were paying an average of 60.6 cents in July, while New England paid 53.5 cents in the same month. In Ohio and Indiana they were paying 59.1 cents in January as compared with 57 cents in July.

Michigan establishments come close to equaling the low record of New England with an average of 58.4 cents in January and 56.4 cents in July. Illinois, Wisconsin and Missouri report 58.8 cents in January and 57 cents in July.

It should be noted that these are non-union wages and that the majority of concerns represented have so organized their work that the greater part is done by employes classed as semi-skilled or machine operators. Unskilled labor is included in the average.

The National Metal Trades Association has a membership of over 1,000 concerns which employ together more than 600,000 workers. No firm operating under an agreement with metal trades labor unions is eligible to membership in the association. It has always attacked the cost of living basis for determining wages. By doing so it has prevented the development of standard or minimum wages rates on which groups of workers could unite.

Scab Building Trades Council Organized In Minneapolis

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 30.—Open shop elements aiming to destroy the organized labor movement in this section are responsible for the organization of the Amalgamated Building Trades and Labor Union declares prominent labor leaders here.

The intention of the "union" is to bring about "more friendly relations between employers and employes." This so-called union will incorporate so that it can be sued by employers!

J. R. Bjorkland, secretary of the Carpenters' Local No. 7, declares the new organization goes a step farther than the company union but will not have the support of the workers as it is evidently organized in the interest of the capitalists.

The officers are: Mr. Pettibone, president and general business agent; S. D. Frye, treasurer, and C. E. Reese, secretary. Its program shows clearly that it is a creation of the building contractors. It is in part as follows:

A nine-hour day and a 48-hour week during the summer construction period; to permit non-union men to work with union men during shortage of help; to allow one tradesman to perform the work of other tradesmen on short time jobs at the request of the employer; arbitration of difficulties; opposed to immigration.

Mexican Workers Given Telephone and Telegraph System

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, March 30.—The Mexican government is ready to turn over to private ownership the telephone and telegraphs which it has controlled for nine years. Offers are pouring in from all over the world. The Swedish Ericsson Company is trying to get control. The latest offer has been received from Hayden, Stone & Co., an American syndicate of Boston. One by one the Latin-American public utilities are falling into American hands.

Here's the Reason.

MEXICO CITY, March 30.—The Mexican government owes its employes 58 days' pay. Most of the teachers who have families to support have had to sell their furniture and pawn everything they could lay their hands on. Porters and cleaners are starving, and yet the Obregon government is piling up millions of pesos in the National Bank of New York, to pay interest on the debt—which this year will amount to 35,000,000 pesos ($17,500,000).

MAJORITY OF MINE VICTIMS FOREIGN BORN

Hundreds of Children Left Fatherless

By YOSIO NISHIMURA.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CASTLEGATE, Utah, March 30.—The latest report from Carbon County, Utah, shows there were 97 foreign born among the 173 victims of the Castle Gate explosion, the fact eventually tells what one of the basic industries of America—most perilous, yet most essential of all industries—owes to those foreign born peace time soldiers.

The Utah Fuel Company, notorious with its tactics of force and violence against the miners passive resistance, produced ghastly crops of human corpses and human misery:

Orphan, 1 to 5 years old	117
Orphan, 6 to 10 years old	72
Orphan, 11 to 18 years old	59
Widows	151
Old mothers	25
Total Dependents	424

Since there are 117 children under 5 years, practically all of the dead miners were in the prime of life—about 30 years old. Just imagine 424 dependents with many more crying in the far away lands while the Utah Fuel Company is groaning about the estimated loss of $750,000 as the result of the mine being obliged to remain ilde for one month, probably.

Several miles away from Castle Gate, there lies a beautiful plateau, situated 8,500 feet above the sea. In the midst of the blooming columbine and the sego lillies there stand 200 tombs, the last resting place of the victims of the Scofield mine disaster of 23 years ago.

Castle Gate or any other mine in Utah is not a gas mine and if proper precautions were taken with abundant air current and keeping the mine free from coal dust, etc., the mine would be safe. Numbers of times the miners attempted to organize a union and protested against the existing unbearable conditions and each time they were forced with guns pointed in their faces to disband the organization. Not very long ago the miners of Castle Gate took to the hills, right across the creek and held the fort for a week under the cross fire of the gunmen and the state militia.

"Gas is fast accumulating in the mine. Unless the Kemmerer Coal Company does something, there will be a catastrophe. Best we can do is to beat it." This remark was uttered by a miner, Kozaki, just one day before the horrible explosion of Frontier mine, Kemmerer, Wyoming last fall. On account of his wife and children, he had to work one day more to cover their traveling expense, that one day cost him life.

It is a dangerous practice to leave the safety of the miners' life to an inspector who was picked up from incompetent captains of coal companies. He is holding his office because he prefers to stay in the pump house or the repair shop of the mine he has to inspect and make the same old story, "Excellect condition." All the while he stays on the company's property, he is sure to carry bonded stuff on his hip and usually with a sunny smile, which means money in his pocket.

Right after the inspector's "examination," according to the New York Times, the present Castle Gate disaster followed.

PUSHING WEEKS, MELLON INTO THE MAELSTROM

Daugherty's Exit Can't Save Coolidge

William J. Burns will soon follow Harry Daugherty out into the cold world. William J. Flynn, Burns' predecessor, is in close touch with the situation in Washington and is assisting the "D. of J." investigators hoping that in the event of a Democratic victory that he will be back on his old job again. But the workers have no more reason to love Flynn than they have to love Burns. Both are among the most contemptible creatures that ever trod the earth and should be behind the bars for their many crimes against the working class.

The guns of the probers are now levelled at Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and John W. Weeks, secretary of war. In fact the bewhiskered secretary of state, Mr. Hughes, has finally been dragged into the quiz. A startling story—the most startling since the investigation opened—was told last Saturday by Captain H. L. Scaife, former Department of Justice investigator. He stated on the witness stand before the committee investigating the Department of Justice that high government officials were involved in a plot with the Japanese government and big manufacturers to defraud the government of which they were members.

Blames Crooked Politicians.

Captain Scaife declared "as a result of my investigations into the aircraft and other cases I became convinced that our government is being overthrown not by Bolsheviks but by crooked politicians."

This testimony has created terror in the ranks of the big capitalists who own both parties. At the very moment when the Department of Justice was combing the country for radicals, smashing labor unions and trying to fasten the Dupont Wall Street explosion on the Communists, the government was, thru its department heads actually engaging in illicit commerce with spies of the Japanese government and with agents of grafting concerns who were robbing the government of hundreds of millions of dollars.

The effect of these revelations are of course fraught with danger to the present two-party system by which the ruling capitalist class of this country maintains its political equilibrium. Already, frantic appeals are being sent out from Republican headquarters calling for a let up on investigations, else there is danger that neither party can win out in the next election with the result that the election may be thrown into the house. A bill has been introduced which would permit congress to meet immediately after election and the inauguration of the president to take place on January 3 instead of March, as hitherto.

Among the sensations in the testimony of Captain Scaife was the charge that the Bosch Magneto Company, a German owned corporation was sold to the firm of Hornblower and Weeks—Secretary of War Week's concern—for over two million dollars less than its stock was valued at.

The captain's testimony was, in brief, as follows:

1. That Attorney General Daugherty was connected with a plot to defraud the government in the Bosch Magneto case, T. B. Felder, law partner of Daugherty, assured Scaife that the attorney general had come to terms with the company. Felder offered Scaife $10,000 for his silence. Feider made the agreement with Daughrty on May 5, 1922. (That was three months before he raided the Communist convention in Bridgeman on a charge that it was engaged in a plot to overthrow the government.)

The sale of the Bosch Magneto Company was financed by the banking house of the present secretary of war.

2. That in 1922 when relations with Japan were critical Daugherty had evidence that Japanese spies were taking pictures of the fortifications along the cost line of the United States but no preventive measures were taken by the attorney general. That the Standard Air craft corporation which had charge of making airplanes for the government during the war was owned by the Mitsui company of Japan, which in turn was an agency of the Japanese government in this country, and thru which they paid their spies. This company gave a bribe of $100,000 to Daugherty and Jess Smith to call off the prosecution. The prosecution was called off.

So startling was the testimony of this former D. of J. man that the revelations of Nicholas Cimine of New York attracted little notice, tho in ordinary times they would get a big press. He told of meeting with Howard Mannington and Daugherty to secure the appointment of a liquor man as immigration commissioner in New York. In return for this work he received around $1,500.

Meanwhile the Democrat sappers are busy undermining the position of Mr. Mellon. They hold that his connection with the bootleggers renders him unfit for office. A resolution was introduced in the senate calling for an investigation of his office. There is a statute, more honored in the breach than in the observance, which prohibits—but does not prohibit—anyone connected with mercantile or commercial corporations from occupying the position of secretary of the treasury. Other cabinet members slated for a scourging are Wallace, Hoover and Work.

Howard Mannington, once private agent of Harding and the writer of most of his pre-election speeches is on his way from Paris where he has been in hiding. He is wanted by both the Daugherty and Teapot Dome committees.

Tho Coolidge dropped Daugherty from the cabinet, their relations can be judged by the fact that the grafting ex-attorney general will be a Coolidge delegate at large on the ticket to be voted in the Ohio primaries April 29, with the blessing of the White House. Thus it is clearly evident that Coolidge merely let Daugherty go, hoping to appease popular clamor for a head, but with the mental reservation that in the event of Coolidge's re-election the ex-attorney general would be in the next cabinet, perhaps as prohibition director.

The Teapot Dome committee continues to grind out sensation after sensation and the end is not yet in sight.

New evidence has come to Senator Thomas J. Walsh concerning the "Million Dollar Vote Bribe" story of Al Jennings, two-gun politician from the West.

If confirmation of the information now in Walsh's hands is received, a subpoena for two or three prominent men who knew of developments at the last Republican national convention will be issued today.

Jennings charged on the witness stand that the late Jake Hamon told him of a million dollar deal to elect President Harding, whereby Hamon was to get the secretaryship of interior and lease the government oil lands to private interests.

Will Hays, who was charged by Jennings with getting $25,000 of the million, also will go on the stand next week to be questioned regarding his vehement denial of the story.

The Struggle Within the Russian Party

Being the continuation of the report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organization.

IV. Composition of Our Party.

WHY may we not allow the formation of fractions or groups? Besides the reasons already given, we have additional motives for not allowing this. Consider, for instance, the inner situation of our Party, remember the difference in age of its members, the division of work obtaining in the Party, and the numbers of its personnel.

Our Party is the largest in the world. It takes the first place among all the parties in the Comintern. Whatever faults it may have, it was the first to carry out a great revolution, and has now held its position at the head of the victorious working class of Russia, for seven years. However, many weak points we may discover in it, it possesses other, and so strong points, that these latter outweigh the former a million times.

Age of Members.

Let us look at the Party as it really is. Above all, let us take into consideration the various ages of its members. Before the year 1905 there were 2,517 active members in our Party, between 1905 and 1916 7,916 joined, in the year 1917 35,154, in the year 1918 63,643, and in the year 1919 107,840, in the year 1920 121,789, in 1921 40,419; in 1922 there were scarcely any new members admitted. Seven thousand members joined without the year of their admittance being noted. This record comprises, after all Party purgings, 360,000 members.

Up to the year 1916 we had 10,000 members; in the year 1917, 80,000. All other members were admitted later, the overwhelming majority in the years 1919 and 1920.

What does it signify when the membership of a party is thus constituted? Every party has its history.

Our Party has a very peculiar history. The history of our Party comprises the brief period of 20 to 25 years, and almost the whole of its membership is terribly young, and has only belonged to the Party for two or three years. This is naturally the result of the fact that we were working underground for 20 years under czarism at the task of laying the foundations of the Party, and during this time it was impossible for great masses to join the Party. One hundred thousand persons joined the Party between 1917 and 1918.

More Agrarians.

This was the generation which the party had reared during the period of its illegal activity, during the period of the "Iskra," the "Pravda" and the "Svesda," until October, and a little later than October. These members total one-quarter of the membership of the Party, but three-quarters are quite new comrades, who have joined since 1919, and who possess splendid qualities, for they have passed thru the school of revolution, the school of the civil war.

We know that they possess strong points putting any other experience in the shade. But there is something which they do not possess, comrades—and it is their misfortune and not their fault that they do not possess it—and that is the knowledge of the history of the Party, of the whole traditions of the Party, of that holding together which only the long years of underground work under the heavy yoke of czarism could have brought about!

Further, comrades, you must observe the following circumstance: Until the year 1917 our Party was predominantly a labor party: There were only about 2 per cent peasantry in the Party. Since 1917 and 1918 we have a large number of peasants in our midst—66,000 party members who till the soil, whilst at one time we had only a handful of peasants among us.

The Various Strata.

Besides this, we have a number of followers who go with us without exactly sharing our convictions. The Mensheviki, formerly absorbed the greater part of this description of followers, but now that we are in possession of power, a part of them follow us. Great mass organizations have sprung up around us, as for instance, the Russian Communist Youth Union. This is a magnificent organization, but it too has its faults, and it has members who simply follow the crowd.

Besides this, comrades, we must consider the question of division of work in our Party. I shall try to name the most important categories.

We have "Party workers" (of these I shall speak in further detail later), that is, workers immediately occupied in the Party apparatus.

And then we have Soviet administrators, Party administrators, trade union administrators.

And then we have military workers, comrades working in work shops, 66,000 comrades following the plough, an extensive group of Party members attending educational institutions, the students, whom I shall also mention again later on. I have recounted the main groups only.

Small Number of Old Guard.

We can thus see that there is a great division of labor in the Party; and this cannot be otherwise, as we are governing a great state. This division of work has its advantages, but it has its negative aspects as well. Every comrade becomes specialized in some particular line, and is unable to form a clear survey of other lines.

Now, comrades, look at our party as it is. Of the old guard there remains only a small group of 10,000 men. An enormous number of new members have joined, who have been steeled in the fire of civil war, but lacking in adequate preparation and real party schooling. There has been an enormous influx of peasantry, many other followers have joined us because we were successful, the division of work has ensued. Is it not inevitable that there must be tendencies in the party which strive towards schism

Splits are possible with reference to the Soviets or to the party; a rupture may take place between the old main body of the party and the younger section; it is also possible that breaches take place in economic and productive matters, or in trade union affairs.

Thus we have three possibitities of schism and decay. We are holding all these trends together with one single clamp—with party discipline, with the decisions of the Party Congresses which hold the staff of the Party together. Imagine what would be the result, were we to add to all these fundamental tendencies still one more—the tendency to split into groups. What would happen then?

Fate of Party at Stake.

It would mean the decay of the Party, so much we must candidly admit to ourselves. It is not a question of whether we allow or do not allow this or that person to "join" someone else for the purpose of the existence of the Party itself; the fate of the whole Party is at stake.

And therefore we ask the question, whether the decisions for which Comrade Lenin fought, could only be defended by him alone; must we cancel them, or shall they continue?

(To Be Continued Tuesday.)

Whistle for Robots Blows April 20th at Chicago Turner Hall

The new Labor Production of Karel Capek's great Robot play "R. U. R." will have its first Chicago presentation on Sunday afternoon, April 20, in North Side Turner Hall, 820 N. Clark St. A second performance will be given Wednesday evening, April 23, in C. S. P. S. Hall, 1126 W. 18th St.

Several innovations have been introduced in the Labor Production of "R. U. R." which represents daring departures from the method used by the Theatre Guild in its staging of the play. No liberties have been taken with the author's manuscript. On the contrary, certain devices of setting and costume have been adopted which will serve to bring out the real meaning of Karel Capek's significant dialogue.

The cast has been rehearsing for several weeks. The Robots have become so imbued with the spirit of their role that it has actually become necessary to blow a big, hoarse factory whistle "so that they will know when to stop work." Tickets for all performances sell for 75 cents. They can be secured from the Labor Defense Council, Room 307, 166 W. Washington St.

Kisza; Athletic Club Kaleva, of Brooklyn Finnish Branch of Workers Party represented by A. Rasp and H. Wigell; Jugo-Slav Workers' Sport Club, represented by J. Duimovich; Czecho-Slovak Workers' Gymnastic Federation represented by F. Modrovisky.

Yamashima; Scandinavian Branch of Workers Party, represented by E. Mattson; Workers Party, Finnish Branch of Jamaica represented by K. Kuusisto; Athletic Club Vesa of the Harlem Finnish Branch of Workers Party represented by John Abrahams; Jewish Branch of Workers Party No. 2 Bronx represented by Freda Siegel; Harlem English Branch of Young Workers' League represented by James Geraghty.

After a lively discussion about workers' sports, which took up two or three hours' time, it was decided to call a National Workers' Sport Conference. All delegates were in favor of the policies of the Red Sport International of Moscow.

A provisional Executive committee of five was elected and instructed to issue the call for a workers' sport conference for the purpose of organizing a Workers Sport and Athletic Alliance in America. The P. E. C. was also instructed to carry on intensive propaganda for the workers' sports.

Entertaining Program.

After the conference many of the delegates participated in the annual celebration arranged by the Athletic Club Vesa of Harlem Finnish Branch of Workers Party. A very fine program was arranged in which over a hundred gymnasts took part. In the program were members from the Jugo-Slav Sport Club, the Czecho-Slovak Workers Gymnastic Federation and the Athletic Club Vesa.

More "Red" Scares

John T. Adams, the national chairman of the republican party, and the members of the republican national committee, have both proven themselves to be inveterate liars. On the floor of the senate such venerable truth-seekers as the aged Lodge, the crafty Smoot, and the haughty Lenroot have been forced to admit that their national committee has lied and lied miserably.

Now the leading committee of the republican party is showing signs of acute desperation. In an attempt to becloud the issue and rally all the possible strength to put an end to the oil disclosures it has fired a barrage against Senator Walsh and especially Senator Wheeler, charging them with being "reds." This rot was supplied to the republican committee by the Department of Justice and the Burns Agency. It is exactly this kind of "information" that has been used to convict innocent workingmen, honest strikers of crimes committed by the paid agents of the government and the gunmen employed by the Burns agency.

Wheeler and Walsh are not now and never have been proponents of any doctrine that savors of working class opposition to the capitalist system of government and industry. They are both members of the democratic party which is as much an organization of Wall Street as is the republican party. Walsh has played with the big power interests of his state. He has shirked his duty in uncovering the "principal" in the oil scandal. Wheeler has been closely associated with Walsh for many years. Wheeler has not done a thing to have his committee expose the dastardly activities of the Burns Agency and the Department of Justice in the Trade Union movement. Wheeler is not showing the slightest intentions to attack Burns and Daugherty from this angle either. He is limiting himself to scandal, corruption and other highly "commendable" outbursts of moral indignation. Wheeler is as far away from Communism and the Workers Party as any good democrat can possibly be.

The cloud of dust raised by Adams and his henchmen will not fool anybody. It is an obvious attempt to rally the forces of reaction for a last effort to stifle the investigation. When capitalist gutter-politicians like Adams resort to calling such law-abiding, respectable democrats like Walsh, who fathered the Montana State Syndicalist law, and Wheeler, who has not lifted a finger or uttered a word in behalf of a merciless exposure of the Burns-Daugherty strike-breaking and union-smashing activities, it is as clear as broad daylight that the whole republican party is in desperate straits. Lies and misrepresentation are the first and last refuge of the capitalist politicians oppressing the working and farming masses.

Million Dollar Convention

What a ghastly sight this high-priced capitalist democracy of ours is! It is unfortunately true that dead men tell no tales. Otherwise the country would today be treated to a sorry spectacle of the holiest of holy, of employing class saints being tarred and feathered in the pitchest black of sordid political corruption.

Al Jennings, former train robber, today evangelist, has told the Wheeler committee that a million dollars was spent at the republican national convention of 1920 to put over Warren Gamaliel Harding, Senator Boise Penrose, Will Hays, and Harry M. Daugherty were among the political pawnbrokers playing with the fate of the country who received sums ranging from $25,000 to $250,000. It is very likely that this was the $250,000 found in cold cash in Mr. Penrose's vault after his death. At the time this huge sum of cash was discovered it was a great surprise and mystery to many that so practical a business man as Penrose should have failed to invest this large sum of money. Now the rooster has come home to tell why the slick, crooked boss of Pennsylvania capitalist politics did not dare invest this money at a substantial profit.

The million dollars thus distributed at the republican convention is only a drop in the bucket of what was spent. It is fortunate for many men high in the inmost circles of finance and politics that Harding, Jake Hamon, and Jesse Smith are dead now. These underworld spirits cannot communicate information even to Sir Oracle Lodge, the principal figurehead of the school of scandal, otherwise known as the United States Senate.

This million dollars was paid out by Jake Hamon, another notorious underworld character, in behalf of certain big interests who counted on being given concessions of the type of Doheny's and Sinclair's. Here we have living proof, tho dead men are involved, of the fraud capitalist democracy is. What utter hypocritical balderdash to talk about the potency of universal suffrage of an amorphous mass of workers whose sources of physical and mental life are pawns in the ruthless hands of the present ruling class. This business is as old as capitalist control of government in industry. In 1896 McKinley's campaign fund was more than six million dollars. Roosevelt's election was procured in 1904 at $11,000,000. The Clapp committee disclosures in 1911 revealed that the big oil and other interests contributing to these campaign funds contributed for precisely the same reasons then as Sinclair and Doheny did only a few months ago—to secure a better hold on the government which will thus protect their big interests more effectively.

That million dollar convention with its scores of millions of dollars of graft and bribery, with its Harding-Coolidge administration, with its 67th Congress which handed out $14,000,000,000 in bonuses to the big interests is a stern reminder to the working and farming classes that it is high time that they take matters into their own hands and smash this ugly picture of the pure, democratic capitalist government to smithereens.

The Party

This issue of the DAILY WORKER carries much material that has to do directly with the policies and tactics of the Communist movement.

While all of this material is of the greatest interest to every member of the Workers Party, there is no reason why it should not have an intense appeal to all readers of the DAILY WORKER, in fact, to all men and women who labor.

There is the official statement of the Workers Party and its role in situations similar to that now existing in Minnesota. The struggle in Minnesota is one that is rapidly developing in many other states, where similar political phenomena will appear.

Also in the material that is being published on the discussion within the Russian Communist Party. The Russian party is not different from the parties in other countries. It has problems very much similar to those that exist elsewhere, only on a different scale, since it is the ruling party in a nation covering one-sixth of the earth's land surface. All workingmen and women desirous of building a class party of labor in the United States will profit by reading the discussion within the Russian party.

We cannot urge our readers too strongly, therefore, to carefully read and study this material. Do not put aside this issue of the DAILY WORKER until you have read "The Role of the Workers Party in the Farmer-Labor United Front," on Page Four, and "The Struggle Within the Russian Communist Party," on Page Five. You will become a better fighter for labor for doing it.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success

ing those significant remarks on New Year's Day. Several countries have already fulfilled his prophecy.

Two first class powers—England and Italy—and two of secondary importance, Norway and Greece, have extended de jure recognition to the Soviet Union and have resumed full diplomatic relations, which were interrupted by the revolution.

It was reported the other day that Sweden has also recognized Soviet Russia, altho the news has not been confirmed from Soviet sources.

Historical Antecedents.

The first forms of contact with Soviet Russia were trade agreements which the various Western States negotiated with the Soviet government after acknowledging its de facto existence. These instruments were later developed in de jure or complete political recognition and the establishment of normal diplomatic relations which existed before the November revolution.

The first countries to extend de jure recognition were those bordering on Russia, with the exception of Roumania. Esthonia recognized the Soviets in 1920 and was followed the same year by Latvia, Lithuania and Finland. Poland signed the Riga agreement in 1921 and Germany negotiated the Rapalle Treaty next door to the Geneva Conference in 1922. England, Italy, Norway and Greece are of the 1924 crop of recognition countries.

In addition to the ten European states which have extended de jure recognition to Russia, there are three other states which have previously recognized the Soviet government and have for a time maintained diplomatic relations with it—namely, Bulgaria, Austria and Hungary. These countries have, by the Brest-Litovsk Peace Treaty, extended full recognition to Russia, but severed diplomatic relations when the treaty was scrapped.

Austria has maintained trade relations with Russia, and while the writer was in Vienna last year, the gorgeous Czarist Embassy building was turned over to the Soviet trade delegation—an act usually anticipating complete recognition. Fascist Bulgaria which has offered an asylum to Wrangel and his bandit troops, will have to do a number of things before Russia will agree to a renewal of diplomatic relations.

Similarly, not much love is lost between Soviet Russia and Hungary, and re-establishment of "friendly relations" with Hungary doesn't seem to be very popular in Russia.

Besides the 13 European countries, which have recognized de jure Soviet Russia, must be added Denmark, Sweden and Czecho-Slovakia, which maintains trade relations with Russia, operating only on a de facto recognition of the Soviet government.

Sweden Carries On Negotiations.

Sweden has in addition been conducting for the past three years, negotiations for complete recognition, but is holding out for a better bargain. Premier Truger, like Poincare, has still some illusions about being able to secure better terms thru bargaining, but the recent action of Norway and the popular demands for full recognition at home will force the militarist Premier to capitulate.

The recent news that Sweden has entered the recognition column, tho unconfirmed, proves that official recognition is only a matter of days. Denmark will follow suit before long. It would not remain the only Scandinavian country without diplomatic relations with Russia.

Egoism In Czecho-Slovakia.

Czecho-Slovakia is suffering from n over-dose of egoism. It considers itself a first class power and is also expecting something in return for full recognition. It forgets, however, that it is itself a new state, and must seek its own recognition by Russia.

The European states, which have so far failed to establish any official relations with Russia include: France, Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, Spain, Portugal, Jugo-Slavia and Roumania. Among the eight countries which have maintained an attitude of watchful-waiting several will be greatly influenced and will be moved to revise their attitude by the recent recognitions. Russia is now preparing to negotiate with Russia at Vienna the question of Bessarabia, the annexation of which, altho approved by the allies, was never agreed to by Russia.

Jugo-Slavia, a new state, like Czecho-Slovakia, must also secure recognition by Russia. Holland has recently entered into discussion regarding recognition. Spain has already evinced an interest in the recognition question and is expected to follow the Italian example. Switzerland is out of consideration now on account of the boycott which Russia has imposed upon the Republic for its failure to prosecute those responsible for the murder of Vorovski.

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

Belgium is beginning to show the weakening influence of Poincare but recognition does not seem either sought or expected from that quarter. In France the bitter ender on the Russian question—strong and angry voices are being raised for recognition or at least a reaproachment with Russia.

The coming elections which may bring the defeat of Poincare's Nation bloc by the parties of the radical bloc will probably determine this vexed question. The English and Italian recognition acts are making themselves felt even before the elections.

Asia Coming Around.

In Asia, Russia is recognized de jure by Turkey, Persia and Afganistan, and de facto by China and Japan, leaving only one independent state—Siam—without official relations with Russia. Complete recognition by China is expected shortly, and tho Japan is leaning toward the U. S. since its last catastrophe, Russian recognition is the question of the day in government and public circles there. Japan and the United States are exerting an influence over China against full recognition of Russia, which according to recent news, has been settled by the Chinese and Russian representatives.

In America, neither the United States—a bitter ender like France—nor the different Latin Republics have any relations with Russia. The dominating influence of American Imperialism in Central and Latin America has a great deal to do with the failure of those republics to resume diplomatic relations with Russia.

The Present Russian Policy.

The Soviet policy with regard to securing recognition from other powers is quite different today from what it was two or three years ago. The Soviet government was then willing to offer greater concessions in exchange for recognition and re-establishment of relations with other countries. The inauguration of the new Economic Policy in 1921 was a powerful influence in this regard. Russia needed contact with the outside world to carry out its program of economic reconstruction. But the powers decided to wait and see, hoping to secure better terms by this method. Even at Genoa, when George and Schautzer realized that they had waited long enough, their fear for France prevented their meeting Chicherin half way. Time was passing and Soviet Russia was rehabilitating itself by the scant means at its command. Thru trade agreements with its border states, the Scandinavian countries, Germany, England and Italy, Russia carried on its limited trade without credits and political recognition.

Russia's Remarkable Achievements.

By means of strict economy and improved management, it has accomplished remarkable results in industry and agriculture. The powers began to consider whether the prolonged waiting hadn't already cost them too dearly. I remember hearing Zinoviev declare at the 12th Congress of the Russian Communist Party last summer that the longer the powers wait with recognition the more they will be charged for the time lost by Russia. England and Italy finally decided to consider their own interests and not wait until all the allies made up their minds about the matter.

The countries with which Russia has complete or trade relations suffice for all her economic needs at the present time. She can afford now to say to the rest of the word, "Complete recognition first and negotiations afterwards." Karachan, the Russian delegate to China, can inform the Chinese government that it either ratify the agreement reached between him and Dr. Wang, the Chinese representative, within three days or the whole thing is off. Russia also knows that most remaining countries including France, are fast losing their illusions of expecting to secure bargains for recognition or collect the bills which were originally figured against Russia.

Invincible Soviet Russia.

The growing strength of the Soviet government is the most convincing argument. The removal of the Naval Conference of the League of Nations from Geneva to Rome, because Russia was boycotting Switzerland, demonstrated the radical change in attitude toward the Soviet government. Russia has taken her place among the great powers, and because of her peculiar economic and political structure, is occupying a commanding position in the world.

America Not So Moral.

Even America will be forced to recognize this fact tho it may not be the morally indignant Mr. Hughes who will address the first decent diplomatic letter to the Soviet government. Asked the other day why he thought America was still refusing to recognize Russia now that there was at least one argument less that the United States government would henceforth advance against Russia Puritan America claimed that the Russian government did not consist of morally qualified persons. After the oil graft exposures, Litvinov thought, America would not insist that the Russian government officials had to be as highly moral as its own office-holders.

Bow to Bloody Bolsheviks.

Russia has won her recognition by the military victories of 1918-1920 and her successes on the economic front after peace was achieved. She stands today invincible and continues a glorious inspiration to the disinherited of the world. The "bloody" Bolsheviks with whom the big and small powers vowed not so long ago to have nothing to do, are now being invited to negotiate terms of recognition by one country after another. How did it all happen? The wise old adage "Nothing succeeds like success" supplies the answer to this puzzle.

The Sack of Lawrence.

"YET we will continue to tar and feather, drown, lynch and hang every whitelivered abolitionist who dares pollute our soil," said a flamboyant editorial in the Squatter Sovereign, a pro-slavery paper published at Atchison, Kansas, a Border Ruffian stronghold.

The Slaveryites lived up to this promise. The Free State men at this time had not begun to arm, but doggedly and quietly went about organizing their own government at Topeka. Their actions infuriated the Southerners. Now began the long list of crimes that made the soil of Kansas reek with blood.

It would be impossible to give a full record here of all those crimes. The least that happened was the destruction of newspapers that protested against Southern injustice, such as the Parkville, Missouri, Luminary, which was burned down, the machinery thrown in the river, and the editors threatened with a similar fate if they indulged in further free speech.

Hundreds Murdered.

There were hundreds of abolitionists murdered in Kansas; hundreds of their wives and children were gibed at and threatened and terrified; hundreds of their cabins were burnt down, and thousands of head of cattle stolen.

One of the murders was the killing of Samuel Collins, owner of a sawmill near Atchison, by Patrick Laughlin, a pro-slavery man. No effort was made to punish him by the authorities. But something was done by them in another case. Charles Dow, a young Free State man from Ohio, was cruelly shot down from behind by Franklin Coleman, a pro-slavery settler from Virginia.

What the authorities did in this case was to arrest Jacob Branson, with whom the dead man lived. A pro-slavery sheriff charged Branson with having made threats to revenge his friend. Branson was rescued by a group of his friends with rifles, and taken to Lawrence for protection, Lawrence being entirely settled by the Free State men.

The sheriff called on the governor, and the governor called on the militia, and with the aid of Missouri citizens, about twelve hundred armed men marched on Lawrence, to "put down the rebellion."

The men of Lawrence sent out a call to all Northerners; and John Brown and his men were among those who responded. There were five hundred settlers in Lawrence, and they feverishly fortified the town with embankments; but the whole affair ended by a compromise; there was no fighting; only two men were killed in a light skirmish.

Southerners Demand Blood.

The Southerners left, weak with all the whisky they had drunk on the expedition, according to reliable observers, and angered that they had not been given the chance to burn Lawrence down.

For Lawrence was a sore spot to the pro-slavery men. It was the largest Free State town in Kansas, and the center of all the political activities of that group. It published a newspaper, and its Free State Hotel was the headquarters of the Northerner's government.

There were other murders, despite the treaty signed at this time. And then in February, as Free State men were holding another of their elections, they were assaulted at Leavenworth and many of them forced to flee to Lawrence.

One of the leaders of the Free State men, as he was returning from Leavenworth after the election, was captured by a company of Border Ruffian militia. Wounded and defenseless tho he was, they literally hacked the unfortunate foe of slavery into pieces with their hatchets and knives. Not an effort was made to punish these murderers, tho their names were known by everyone. Some of the slavery jorunals even praised the deed, and called for more. Said the Kansas Pioneer of Kickapoo:

"Sound the bugle of war over the length and breadth of the land, leave not an Abolitionist in the territory to relate their treacherous deeds. Strike your piercing rifle balls and your glittering steel to their black and poisonous hearts."

Guerrilla Warfare Increases.

And in May of that year, after further alarms and disturbances, Sheriff Jones returned with an army of 750 "swearing, whisky-drinking ruffians," armed with rifles, and even two pieces of artillery. This time the Free State men were unprepared. John Brown was not there, nor any other real leader. The Free State men still believed in peace, and lgality. And they saw their Free State Hotel go up in flames, their newspaper plant destroyed, and an orgy of drunken destruction let loose among their homes.

"Let Yankees tremble, Abolitionists fall,
"Our Motto is, Give Southern Rights to All."

This was the inscription on one of the banners of the invading army. Lawrence was the first city to receive these rights. Thereafter Free State men knew what to expect; they began forming companies of riflemen and guerilla fighters to protect their communities against Southern rights.

Communism and the Filipinos

THE Filipino people are face to face with the most serious crisis in the history of their nation. The archipelago is aflame with a spirit of revolt against the dictatorship of Wall Street and the iron rule of the strikebreaker, General Leonard Wood.

President Coolidge's last message arrogantly denying the Filipinos their right to national independence has aggravated the acute conditions. The high-handed interference of the American financiers' auditor with the national freedom movement of the Filipinos has only added fuel to the flames. Unless unforeseen circumstances intervene, we are due for an explosion in the Islands at an early date. The Filipino people know how to fight for freedom. They have valiantly fought for freedom before and they will not brook tyranny, whether it be cloaked in the stars and stripes or any other banner now employed by the imperialist oppressors of the colonial nations.

The struggle of the Filipino masses for liberation from their Yankee exploiters is a struggle which is of primary concern to the American workers. Unless they take a hand in forcing their own bosses out of the Islands, they will, sooner than most now expect, be called upon to shoot down their Filipino brethren in order to strengthen the reactionary capitalist masters today oppressing the American workers and farmers along with the tenants and laborers of the Islands. The working masses of the United States are the only ones who can make their imperialist oppressors holding the Filipinos in subjection get out of the Islands and thus save the country from new wars.

To this end the successful mass meetings of workingmen called by the Workers (Communist) Party in Chicago, New York and San Francisco should be a lightning rod to the whole American labor movement to girdle its loins for a fig to the finish against this commo enemy of the Filipino and our own working class—the big capitalis owning and controlling our government and our industries. Let every labor organization, every farmers' organization, join with the communists in this vital, urgent work. Let the Confederation of Labor in the Philippines, in its coming May 1st demonstration, express its solidarity with the workers and poor farmers of the United States. Under this banner of international working class solidarity, under this leadership of the Communist International, which alone is fighting the capitalist imperialists the world over to the bitter end, will the oppressed Filipino masses and their American brothers win their common struggle against their common enemy—the capitalist exploiters of labor and the dispossessed farmers of all countries.

Investigate Child Labor.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., March 30.—Louis Block, statistician of the California labor commissioner's department, is investigating the child labor problem in the asparagus beds of the Sacramento valley. By the state law, minors 16 years or older may be employed in farm and fruit work during school vacations or out of school hours, but not more than eight hours a day or 48 hours week. Block will go into the question of hours, wages, general treatment and number of children employed.

HOOVER AIDED ANTI-SOVIET WAR

(Special to the DAILY WORKER by Our Own Washington Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Charges made by Captain H. L. Scaife, former Department of Justice agent, that the American Relief Administration, in 1919, on orders of Herbert Hoover, now Secretary of Commerce, diverted $1,000,000 worth of supplies intended for starving Russian civilians to the counter-revolutionary leader, Admiral Kolchak, at Archangel, may be investigated by the Senate Daugherty Committee.

Scaife, in his testimony before the committee Saturday, made passing reference to a "diversion of funds by the administration to finance a revolution in Russia," and later amplified his statement. Hoover, Scaife said, ordered a whole boatload of trucks, medicines, food, clothing and hospital supplies turned over to Gen. Yudenitch, a counter-revolutionary associate of Kolchak, at Archangel. The supplies, he said, were carried in a shipping board vessel, commanded by Captain James E. Martin.

Garment Strike Leader Kidnaped by Crowe's Office

FRAME-UP ON BEALIS, JOINT BOARD HEAD

Hidden From Friends Who Seek His Release

Sergeant Patrick Collins and Detective William Schroeder, from the office of strike-buster State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe's office, invaded the Chicago headquarters of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at 328 W. Van Buren street, late yesterday and kidnapped Morris Bealis, manager of the Chicago Joint Board.

All afternoon and night Bealis was held without any formal charge against him and without bail.

Rushed first to the State's Attorney's offices in the Criminal Court building he was transferred from there to the East Chicago police station.

Habeas Corpus Writ Doesn't Help.

Strikers and union officials who demanded to see him and members of his family were coldly denied admittance. Attorney W. G. Rickert for the union finally got a habeas corpus writ from Superior Court Judge Frederick D. Young—returnable today. Judge Young thus allowed the detectives to work their will on him all night.

Held For Kovler "Shooting."

Bealis is held on "suspicion" of being connected with the "assasination plot" again Nicholas Kovler, dress manufacturer whose shooting story the DAILY WORKER exposed in yesterday morning's issue.

The DAILY WORKER got a definite statement from Mr. Kovler that he was not in the room into which two shots were alleged to have been fired and that he had never been threatened by any union men. Detectives, however, were quoted as saying that they intended to arrest union officials in connection with the ting.

At Detective's Mercy.

ealis is held for "investigation." means for the "gold fish" the "sweat box." He is held ight there at the mercy of the callous bunch of labor hating tives in America.

Mitchel Indicates Guilt.

ar'ier in the day the DAILY ORKER got a statement from the ad of the garment bosses that implied he had guilty knowledge of he Kovler shooting.

This was Frank Mitchel, of the dressmaking firm that takes his name and head of the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers

Arkansas Families In Feud Battle Over Children's Quarrel

BOONEVILLE, Ark., March 31.—A child was killed and eight members of the Van Allen and McCarson families were wounded in the renewal of a feud in Lick Creek Valley near here.

The McCarsons, firing from their house and the Van Allens, barricaded behind a wagon on the roadway, maintained a constant fire until the last member of both families was wounded.

The difficulty arose over a trivial matter. Sam McCarson, 12, and Roby Van Allen, 13, quarreled at a school house in the valley when Roby called Sam's elder sister "bad names."

DAUGHERTY QUIZ TO CONTINUE DESPITE HIS RESIGNATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 31.—At an executive session called for the purpose of planning its future course, the Senate Daugherty investigating committee today decided to continue its inquiry without regard for the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty.

Tho some members favor slowing up proceedings with a view to an early halt of the probe, it was decided by the committee to go ahead for the time being at least as if nothing had happened.

With this decided, the committee tomorrow will continue its hearing of Captain H. L. Scaife, former department of justice agent, and thereafter Gaston B. Means on the stand again.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA NEARER BY CANADA'S ACT

Pressure on Washington Grows Stronger

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, March 31.—Recognition of Russia by the United States government is one step nearer as the result of the impending recognition of Moscow by Canada, in the opinion of the committee of representative American business men who have been working for the last year to smoke Secretary Hughes out of his anti-Russian position.

American Exporters Restive.

Since London and Rome renewed relations with the Kremlin to the advantage of British and Italian business men, American exporters and investment interests have grown increasingly restive under the handicaps imposed on them by the stubborn and short-sighted policy of the U. S. state department. That Canadian business men are now to get in ahead of them is the last straw in breaking the patience of the New York capitalists whose agents report that Russia is the only country in Europe on the up-grade and therefore the safest field for trade and investment.

"In the best interests of both countries" Canada is prepared to recognize the Russian government. Premier King has written to A. Yasikov, Moscow representative in Montreal, according to reports reaching here. This action comes as the result of six weeks of negotiations between the Montreal government and the Russian trade mission which it invited to Canada. Premier King now announces that he is ready to receive a political mission and Yasikov has cabled the invitation to Foreign Minister Chicherin in Moscow.

Oil Scandal May Help.

With the U. S. state department under investigation by the senate for its complicity in the oil scandals, and Secretary Hughes about to open the already discredited Coolidge campaign in New York, the possibility is being discussed hereby that Hughes may soon be anxious to lighten his pack of troubles. Unofficial intimation by Hughes that the Russian trade mission which has been so successful in Canada would find the Washington climate agreeable might relieve the hard-pressed secretary from one source of increasing criticism. It is pointed out here also that Senator Borah, leading advocate of Russian recognition, has recently been taken into the confidence of the Coolidge administration.

FARMER-LABOR PARTY RILED AT LEADERS' ACTION

Charge Fitzpatrick Is Violating Party Rule

A serious division has arisen in the Cook County branch of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States over the action of John Fitzpatrick and E. N. Nockels, original founders of the Farmer-Labor movement, in going directly against the ruling of the Executive Board of the Farmer-Labor Party by indorsing old party politicians in the primaries on April 8.

At their last meeting, March 14, the executive board, with sixteen out of twenty-one present, among the conspicuous absentees being Fitzpatrick and Nockels, unanimously passed the following motion: "That all members and friends of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States be requested to remain away from the polls on primary day April 8; as the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States is the political expression of the organized labor movement (city and rural workers) and it is to be hoped that they will not entangle themselves WITH ANY DISREPUTABLE CITY AND STATE OFFICIALS."

Defied Party.

In direct defiance of this ruling of their party John Fitzpatrick and E. N. Nockels, signed a communication which was given wide publicity in the Hearst press "Hereby urging that trade unionists participate in the primaries April 8 in support of candi-

Resolution of Illinois State Federation of Labor indorsed by John Fitzpatrick and Edward N. Nockels:

"Resolved that the nomination of the three candidates (Small, Jenkins and Kellar) is hereby urged. Further resolved that trade unionists in all congressional and senatorial districts be and hereby are urged to support these candidates."

Resolution signed by Fitzpatrick and Nockels, original founders of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States—. "For the reasons stated in the above resolution adopted by the executive board of the Illinois State Federation of Labor on March 17, the undersigned trade union executives do hereby urge that trade unionists participate in the primaries April 8, in support of Jenkins, Small and Kellar." Signed by Nockels and Fitzpatrick among others.

Motion unanimously passed by the executive board, Cook County branch, of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States—Fitzpatrick and Nockels being conspicuously absent—. "That all members and friends of the Cook County branch of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States be requested to remain away from the polls on primary day, April 8; as the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States is the political expression of the organized labor movement (rural and city workers) and it is to be hoped that they will not entangle themselves with any disreputable city or state officials."

Statement of John Fitzpatrick to the DAILY WORKER: "It is a perfectly logical situation."

SINCLAIR IS INDICTED FOR CONTEMPT OF OIL PROBERS; HIDES HIS PRIVATE AFFAIRS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Harry F. Sinclair was indicted today by the Federal Grand Jury on a charge of contempt of the Senate oil investigators.

Sinclair refused to answer the questions on the ground that the committee—or any congressional committee—was without constitutional authority to compel a man to divulge his private affairs.

Involved in the long legal fight which is expected to follow is the important point of authority of congressional investigating committees—a point which never before has been finally decided by the courts.

Sinclair must appear voluntarily before the court for a rearrangement of bail or a warrant will be issued for his arrest.

The indictment specifically charged Sinclair with ten counts, nine for as many questions which he refused to answer before the committee and the tenth, a general charge that he violated Section 102 of the revised statutes in failing to answer any question.

The indictment charge was as follows:

"That Harry F. Sinclair did unlawfully refuse to answer such questions against the dignity of the United States and contrary to the form of the statute of the same in such case was made and provided."

The indictment was returned before supreme court justice Hits of the District of Columbia Court. It cites legal documents in connection with the leases including the original executive order of President Harding transferring the jurisdiction of the naval oil reserves from the navy to the interior department.

It also contained copies of the various resolutions passed by the senate empowering the Public Lands Committee to investigate the leases and Section 102 of the revised statutes which states that any witness failing to answer questions before a congressional investigating committee can be indicted by the grand jury for contempt.

The indictments was as follows:-

"The Grand Jury for the United States of America impanelled and sworn in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia presents that for many years past the government of the United States has been greatly disturbed by the progressive diminution of the supply of petroleum from which are derived fuel oil, gasoline and other valuable products indispensably necessary to the operation of naval vessels and consequently have been keenly interested in the subject of their conservation and economic production, handling, use and storage of oils for that purpose, especially with reference to occurrence of such supply on the public domain."

The indictment then sets forth the questions which Sinclair refused to answer and closed with the formal indictment of Sinclair.

FRENCH PREMIER TREMBLES WHEN DEPUTIES JEER

Much Laughter Over His Ministerial List

PARIS, March 31.—Premier Poincare received a cool reception from the Chamber of Deputies today when he read his ministerial declaration and presented the new Cabinet.

Frequent interruptions and laughter came from the left benches. Poincare was not his old fighting self. His hands trembled and he appeared noticeably over-strained.

"Canaille! (name of a dog)," shouted Deputy Lacotte, radical leader, "cannot we laugh?"

Poincare retorted that he would re-read his sentences each time there was an interruption. There were plenty of these and at one time he read a phrase seven times.

The Premier shook with rage as Radical deputies ridiculed his announcement of the new ministers, because four of them were Poincare's opponents and politicians feel he has made a political compromise.

Mussolini Hopes for Uprising of Middle Class in England

LONDON, Mar. 31.—Premier Mussolini of Italy foresees "sooner or later" an uprising of the middle classes in England in a somewhat different form from the Fascist revolution, Sir Eric Hambro, prominent British banker, said today in an interview.

Sir Eric referred to a recent conversation with the Italian premier in which Mussolini visualized an entire Europe under the spell of Fascism.

"The keynote of fascism is realization that capital is the friend of the people," Mussolini said, according to the banker. "For this reason they will eventually succeed in eliminating oppressive taxation from capital, thereby hastening a revival of industry."

Sir Eric predicted that Mussolini would have no difficulty in balancing the Italian budget, with such views.

One of Morgan's Coal Combines Announces 200% Dividend

(By The Federated Press)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., March 31.—There's to be another melon cutting party in the coal industry. Stockholders of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co., one of the largest of Morgan's anthracite combine, have just voted for a 200% stock dividend. And when the directors get around to declaring it the slices will be distributed to the small wealthy clique who have owned the anthracite industry since the 1890's and have made pretty sure that the gilt-edged securities did not get out into plebian hands.

The directors last year declared a $40 cash dividend on each $50 share, or 80% hard coal profit. This corporation produces over 5,000,000 tons of the country's annual hard coal supply.

WATSON VISITS COOLIDGE AND APPLIES SALVE

Reactionary Tries to Use Soft Pedal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, March 31.—With the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty presenting what he called a new situation, Senator Watson, standpat republican, after a visit at the White House today called on Senate democrats to unite with republicans in bringing about speedy enactment of tax reduction legislation and other measures recommended to Congress by President Coolidge.

"Now that Attorney General Daugherty has seen fit to resign, a new situation presents itself in the Senate and it seems to me that it is the duty of the democrats to join with the republicans to bring the Senate back to its legislative function," Watson declared.

Sure He Regrets Probe.

"It has been regrettable, altho unavoidable, that four months of this session, with the most constructive legislative program before it of the reconstruction period following the war, has been devoted almost entirely to endless discussion by Congress of personalities involved in the oil leases and alleged wrongdoing in public office.

"I hope the Senate will begin without delay the legislative program laid before Congress by President Coolidge last December and give the taxpayers what they are entitled to—a reduction in taxes and legislation to relieve the farm situation and to bring about improved domestic conditions.

"The Senate must devote itself untiringly if it hopes to conclude consideration of the legislative program and adjourn by June, which we ought to do. The general prosperity of the country would be aided by Congress enacting its program without delay so that business can adjust itself to new conditions called for in new laws."

Counter-Attack Held in Abeyance.

Meanwhile the Republican counterattack on the oil investigating committee was held in abeyance.

George White, chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1920 at his own request has been excused until next week.

White was subpoenaed by Senator Spencer, republican, Missouri, who will question him regarding gifts made to the party campaign fund by Edward L. Doheny. Spencer will attempt to clear up the apparent discrepancy between Doheny's testimony that he gave $75,000 and the $8,000 entry in the committee's books.

The subpoena issued for Doheny at Spencer's request, has not yet been served.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Mar. 31.—"I have no personal feeling against the president. I am yet his dependable friend and supporter."

This statement in Harry M. Daugherty's announcement to the "American people" following his ousting from office, was taken here today as final proof that the former cabinet member has no intention of withdrawing his name as delegate at large to the Republican convention from Ohio, instructed for President Coolidge.

Daugherty's statement, which he promised in an interview Saturday night, did not reveal the "inside story" of events which led up to the president's request for his resignation, but instead called on the people to sacrifice personal interests and stand by the president and the cabinet during the present investigations in Washington.

Hearst's Poison Press Spits Out Lies at Young Workers' Success In Organizing School Protests

By MAX SHACHTMAN

(Editor of "The Young Worker.)

A typical instance of the capitalist press attitude toward a radical workingclass organization was shown here today in the rejection by the Chicago Herald and Examiner's city and labor editors of an opportunity to correct a lying story which they printed in the Monday edition of their yellow rag.

The Hearst rag carried a story of the meeting held by parents of the Cregier school district to protest against the brutal flogging of workingclass children by the principal of the school, a hag named Mary E. Tobin.

The Young Workers League, which participated in the meeting—with its members acting as leading spirits and advisers—was represented by the Herald & Examiner as having backed the demand of the indignant parents to call a strike of the children. The story definitely stated that "the 'Young Workers' also had representatives present and they backed the strike demand." This is vigorously denied by members of the Young Workers League who took part in the meeting and also by impartial attendants.

Wanted Bigger Movement.

The truth of the matter is that the League members turned the tide of the meeting's sentiment against a strike, which, it was pointed out would be premature and very doubtful of success.

Instead of a hasty and inadvised local strike call being issued, the Young Workers League representatives at the meeting prevailed upon the parents to form a permanent organization committee to defend the rights of working class children in the public schools and to organize the parents and children of the entire city in order to present a stronger and more consolidated front on the proposition. Members of the League, together with parents, were chosen by the meeting on the organization committee.

Examiner Dodged Issue.

In an effort to give the Herald & Examiner an opportunity to correct the false impression given by its story, which, it is presumed, was written by the labor editor of the paper, Wm. L. Bliss, the Young Workers League called the latter gentleman on the wire. Bliss was not in, but an assistant answered and tried to sidetrack the issue by asking what the purpose of the Young Workers League was. In this he was not successful.

The assistant passed the buck to the city editor. This honorable gentleman of the press told the League member who was speaking that the reporter was more to be believed than the Leaguer. This, of course, is in direct contradiction to the elements of logic, for no sane man would rather believe a capitalist press reporter if there were any alternative.

City Editor Hung Up.

After the League representative had pointed out that even the reactionary Chicago Tribune had given a more truthful account of the meeting, in which it was admitted that the League members had counselled against the school strike, the Herald & Examiner's city editor hurriedly hung up his receiver and "considered the incident closed."

We suggest that Mr. Hearst, owner of the Herald & Examiner, take advantage of the opportunity to raise this city editor to the post of chief editor for he has shown an undeniable ability as editor of a Hearst rag—the ability to stare the truth about the radicals in the face and refuse to admit the facts.

Try to Frame Strike Leader

Mitchel Does Not Deny.

Mr. Mitchel did not deny that private detectives fired the shots alleged to have gone thru the windows of Mr. Kovler's home, at 726 Cornelia avenue, and which laid the foundation for the Chicago Tribune's story of a union "assassination plot."

At the point blank question of the DAILY WORKER, as to whether the private detectives the manufacturers hire did the shooting, Mitchel paused a moment, then said he had nothing to say for publication.

Passed Buck to Mitchel.

The DAILY WORKER had had another interview with Mr. Kovler in which it queried him about the private detective theory.

Kovler passed the buck to the "Association," as he called it. The "Association hires all our detectives," he told us.

Talking to Mr. Mitchel, the head of the association, the DAILY WORKER reporter urged him to bare all the facts he had about the case and reminded him that early in the strike he had invited the public to investigate his shops and labor policy. The DAILY WORKER asked him whether that invitation had been cancelled but Mr. Mitchel refused to say anything further.

Bealis Strong Strike Aid.

Strikers' officials see the hands of Mitchel and Dudley Taylor behind the seizure of Bealis. The head of the Joint Board was particularly hated by the garment employers because of the support the Joint Board has thrown to the strike. Bealis, himself, is a member of the Cloakmakers' Union which has so generously supported the struggle in which it is not immediately involved. The Chicago local alone gave $10,000 to the strike.

Girl pickets declared that they would redouble their efforts on the picket line and make Crowe's conspiracy fail.

Pickets came out with enthusiasm yesterday afternoon and voiced their arguments to scabs as they left their factories. Four workers were arrested. They are Rose Goldberg, Goldie Tessel, Sarah Zelinsky and Rose Mandrake.

Fight Hoof Disease.

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 31.—Another feeding yard in Los Angeles was placed under quarantine for hoof and mouth disease today. It constituted the only serious development of the scourge contained over the week end.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

PICKETS WIN IN SNOW

Icy wind and flying snow did the garment bosses no good Monday morning—the fifth Monday morning of this hard fight against the Chicago sweatshops. Scores of pickets held the strike lines firm in the Loop, Northwest and West Side districts and turned back the scabs that jumped out of yellow taxicabs under the escort of the association's sluggers.

More arrests were made and several girls were roughly handled by the blue coats and privately paid strong arm men who wall themselves around the labor recruits the bosses were bringing in, but the pickets got results. They got their message over to the workers who had been lured by the stories of employers' agents who said that the strike was over.

Monday Was Decisive.

Both the union forces and the employers had made preparations for this fifth Monday morning. The strike committee and the DAILY WORKER had sent out the call to man the picket lines regardless of weather. The employers' agents for the other side, visited hundreds of homes over Sunday of former workers and prospective strike-breakers. Monday morning came and results showed that the workers side won, had passed the danger day successfully.

Cops Discouraged.

The workers' determination had a discouraging effect on the police. The DAILY WORKER reporter saw them sheltered in warm hallways looking out at the pickets striding thru the snow. Only when a load of would-be strike-breakers approached did the cops come out in force, turning up their heavy coat collars.

Judge Trude's habit lately of discharging most of the arrested pickets is another factor that has for the time being, tended to discourage those "hard guys" on the force who want to make a record for the bosses who slip them their two bucks a day.

Try to Bluff Pickets.

The police were trying out a new method of breaking the picket line—threatening the pickets. The new method did not work any better than the old method of arresting everybody in sight did. The pickets listened to the threats and continued about their business.

The failure of the cops to bluff the pickets made them sore and they increased the severity of their threats but without effect. It was evident from the concerted way the police were acting that they had orders from someone and were carrying the orders out.

Arrests In Morning.

During the morning only three arrests were made. The persons arrested were: Anna Berenbaum, Mary Muehlhaopt and Rose Finesilver. The strikers arrested were evidently taken merely in order to prove at the police station that there were police on S. Market street. The strikers had done nothing to merit arrest. They were picked up and put into a patrol wagon because they were the pickets nearest to it when it drove up.

Clara Miller, a striker, was arrested on an attachment issued by Judge Sullivan and charged with contempt of court. After a preliminary examination her case was set for hearing today together with all the other contempt cases.

Y. W. L. ORGANIZES ACTION AGAINST BRUTAL TEACHERS

Taking Charge of Drive On Miss Tobin

BY NAT KAPLAN.

Editor The Young Comrade.

Besides the fire hazards, seat shortage, unsanitary conditions and the general corruption of Chicago's Public Schools we have to add another feature: Corporal punishment under various pretenses is still in vogue in our elementary educational institutions.

One hundred and fifty parents of children who attend the Cregier School gathered with the intention of immediately declaring a school strike. The meeting was called jointly by the Temporary Parents' Committee and the Junior Section of the Young Workers League.

School Board Ignored Issue.

Mr. Bernard Weil, chairman of the Parents' Committee, opened the meeting. He pointed out that for weeks they had endeavored to take action against Miss Mary E. Toben, principal of the Cregier School, whose brutal treatment of the children and parents was the case of the present revolt. He had endeavored to stay "within the bounds of legality" and had secured an interview with an individual in the local school board, who had passed as McAndrews, superintendent of the Chicago schools. This imposter attempted to appease him with the general hot air spiel of: "We will see what we can do about it." Knocked about, and refused a hearing by bona fide school officials, Mr. Weil declared he was now ready to test his constitutional rights and determine whether he had as much say over the method of raising his children as the corrupt school officials. At this point the general sentiment was for the immediate walkout of the children.

Young Workers League Steps In.

Nat Kaplan, representing the Junior Section of the Young Workers League, pointed out that the present situation in the Cregier School was not a phenomena peculiar only to the Cregier School but was rather one incident typical of the general state of affairs in the schools thruout the country. The arrangement of a school strike was not such a small thing. It differed from an economic strike insofar as it struck a direct blow at the city administration. Were we to decide for a strike at this meeting and have 150 or so children walk out, it would be the easiest thing in the world for the city administration to muster the full force of the Police Department and break the strike up in 15 minutes. We are not opposed to the strike, we can bide our time and organize for a greater victory later. The first thing to be done at this meeting is definitely to organize ourselves into a parents' organization of the Cregier School to elect a permanent executive committee and instruct that executive committee to make plans for the raising of finances, the printing of leaflets, the arranging of further mass meetings and the sending of a representative to the next meeting of the Teachers' Federation of Chicago to secure their support in this battle.

Recite Brutalities.

The floor was then thrown open for a general discussion by the parents and children. Many of the parents cried as the children recited the treatment they had received at the hands of the autocratic Miss Toben. Among the many cases mentioned, the following were of special interest:

(1) Harry Tatlebaum was forced to stand in the hall almost daily by his teachers while they marked him absent. Then on the pretense of poor attendance he was taken to court and railroaded to the parental school. Both his mother and the truant officer testified at the trial that the boy attended the school. But Miss Mary E. Toben, principal of the school, insisted that the judge should send him to the parental school. The judge requested Miss Toben to transfer the lad to another school and give him a chance to make good, but she absolutely refused to do this.

Use Janitor as Thug.

(2) Sidney Chaplick was suspended for whispering. His father went to inquire about it. He was ordered out by Miss Toben. Upon his refusal to leave, the janitor of the building was called in and threw him out. (The same treatment was given to Mr. Arien Weiner)

A few days later Mrs. Chaplick, the mother of the boy, went to interview Miss Toben. Miss Toben refused to listen to the mother and told her "to go bury herself."

(3) On Monday, February 11, four girls were late for their sewing class. They were all made to stand during the entire period for one and one-half hours without removing their heavy winter wraps and were not given their lesson. These girls were: Bernice Weil, Esther Greenberg, Pauline Seltz and Esther Waxlander. Bernice Weil, the first girl, upon her arrival home, collapsed. Upon her revival her mother sent her with a complaint to Miss Toben. She returned this message: "That it was none of the mother's business what the teachers did."

Parents Want Strike.

The fact that ordinarily conservative parents were ready to leap into such a drastic act while revolutionary youngsters were pleading for caution put a peculiar light on the entire proceedings. John Williamson of the Young Workers League then took the floor. He pointed out that the sentiments prevailing for an immediate strike would only lead to defeat of our entire purpose.

The main thing which we are out for is the ousting of Mrs. Mary E. Toben. We must unite on a purely working class basis to secure this aim. We must especially get the Teachers' Federation of Chicago to line up with us and thru them we will endeavor to secure the support of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Youths Systematize Fight.

"Elect your committee now and put some system in this fight and you will surely win," said Williamson. Max Salzman also took the floor and helped to swing the final decision into the proper channel. At last the final action was taken.

The immediate calling of a strike was voted down by an overwhelming majority and a committee of nine was elected. The committee consists of the following: Mr. Bernard Weil, Mrs. B. Weil, Mrs. Rheur, Mr. Ameiser, Mrs. Goodman, John Harvey, Mrs Weiner, Mrs. Spersuman, Lurie and Nat Kaplan.

Mass Meeting Tomorrow.

The committee held an immediate session after the meeting and decided to convene the following day and make preparation for the big mass meeting of all Cregier School Parents to be held on Wednesday, April 2, at 1103 S. Loomis street.

Floods Hit Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Md., Mar. 31.—Five persons, all members of one family, have been drowned and property valued at millions of dollars has been damaged or destroyed by the floods on the Potomac River in Western Maryland, which have driven hundreds of persons from their homes since the water began to rise early Saturday.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

The Tribune's Sunday Spree

WE carefully scanned all the columns of Monday morning's Tribune for some follow-up on its terrifying "assassination plot" featured on the first page of its Sunday issue.

But there was not a word to be found anywhere.

The Tribune had dropped the entire matter.

The Tribune's Sunday spree was over.

* * *

BUT in the eyes of its hundreds of thousands of readers the carefully planned fabrication still stood; that the members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union were responsible for an alleged shooting at the home of the garment boss, Nicholas Kovler.

The falsehood had been planted in their minds. The prejudice had been created. The poison had been spread.

That was all the Tribune wanted.

THE TRIBUNE did not care about the truth of the matter contained in the story it published. The truth did not quit is purpose.

Can it be that the biggest open shoppers are panic-stricken over the plucky struggle being waged by the striking garment workers?

Can it be that this Landis Award sheet has received orders from its biggest anti-labor masters to go the limit in an effort to discredit the strike? It looks that way.

Else why such efforts at misrepresentation of the workers' cause by the Tribune?

THE TRIBUNE went on a Sunday spree, gorging its first page with malicious lies about the garment strike. But it was a spree with a purpose. It was clearly an indication of the unity of the open shop interests in Chicago back of the garment manufacturers.

The lesson should be plain to all organized labor. All workers must close their ranks in more solidified support of the strikers.

Against the unity of the bosses—THE UNITY OF THE WORKERS!

UNITY WILL WIN!

Between Essington And Small, Workers Have Devil's Choice

In addition to his anti-union record where male workers are concerned. Thurlow Essington, candidate of the big interests for the republican nomination for governor, broke his pledge to women workers during his last term in the Illinois senate. The charge is made with ample detail by Agnes Nestor of the Women's Trade Union league of Chicago.

After Essington had promised the women that he would support a bill for a nine-hour day and 48-hour week as a maximum for women workers in industry, he supported a 54-hour measure instead.

"When I asked him after the session," Miss Nestor says, "why he failed to vote for Senator Barr's amendment, after promising to do so, he flippantly said: 'That was before I knew of a 54-hour week and I like that so much better.'

"Senator Essington, after getting the support of the Illinois joint labor legislative board in his 1921 campaign for renomination as state senator on his record for opposing the state constabularly bill, went to Springfield and reversed his position and supported the state constabulary bill."

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The tax bill will be reported to the senate by the finance committee late this week, Chairman Smoot announced today. Filipino Workers Greet Americans

To Pledge Unity Against Common Enemy

THE FILIPINO labor organizations are planning to organize gigantic demonstrations for independence from Wall Street rule on May first.

May First is the national labor holiday in the Philippine Islands. This year, according to information received by Jay Lovestone from Jose Topacio Nueno, a representative of the Manila legislature and the Philippine Federation of Labor, will make special efforts this May first to express its thanks to the American Communists and to unite with the American workers for a common struggle against the capitalist class.

At a meeting to be held under the auspices of the Workers Party on Wednesday, April 2nd, 8 p. m., at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th Street, near Third Avenue, the following will speak: Manual Roxas, leader of the Philippine National Congress, Pedro Guevara, leader of the first strike in the Philippines, organizer of the Seamen's Union, and now resident Commissioner from the Philippines in the United States, Scott Nearing and Jay Lovestone.

Evidence will be made public for the first time showing how General Wood has been handing over the natural resources of the country to the capitalists who financed his 1920 presidential primary campaign.

In the Philippines, General Wood is pursuing the same policies that ex-Secretary of the Navy Fall resorted to in handing over the valuable Teapot Dome oil reserves to Sinclair. Comrade Lovestone will make public the latest information he has secured on the manipulations of General Wood with the Wall Street bankers to enslave the Filipino and American workers.

The Philippine issue will be one of the matters stressed in the International May Day Issue of the DAILY WORKER, dated April 26. Help in the fight to free the Filipinos by sending in an order for the May Day Issue on the blank below:

REDS ARE ISSUE AT PITTSBURGH COAL CONVENTION

Leaders, Under Fire, Call Names at Radicals

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 31.—Encouraged by their excess numbers, the Lewis machine, made disgraceful the scenes of the convention of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, at today's session here. Lies, insults and every dirty trick in their category was unloaded by Van Bittner, Billy Feeney and National Board Member O'Leary in their attempt to belittle the efforts of the progressives to expose them for what they are.

The convention has never had its equal in the opinion of old-timers and there have been "some hot ones." Workers Party Organizer Fred H. Merrick came in for his share of attack this morning, being charged with much of the responsibility for the chaotic state of affairs in the Pittsburgh district. J. A. Hamilton was again riddled and charged with being a "renegade school teacher," while Tom Myerscough, William Guiler and Thomas Ray got more than their share.

Impeaching Officials.

These attacks came as a result of impeachment resolutions presented by the Progressives against all the principal officers of District 5.

Fagan was tied to one of his Indianapolis lies, when, in answer to a question as to whether he had stated in the National convention that the only one telephone at Hills Station, Pa., was in the Coal Co. office. Fagan answered that he had said so. Hills Station is the former home of Thomas Myerscough, secretary of the Progressive International Committee, and the statement concerning the "one phone" was made to give the impression that Myerscough used the Coal Co. telephone.

When Fagan admitted making the statement, Delegate Guiler produced two telephone directories, showing that the Hills Station Cooperation Association had its own telephone, and stated that Myerscough used that phone always. Myerscough was the President of that Association and it was a successful one until the Coal Co. officials of District 5 joined forces to get rid of him.

O'Leary also recounted the visit of Myerscough to the Coke Region to volunteer his services in the strike but stated that same was refused because they did not trust him.

Radical Didn't Fear Gunmen.

Neither did they say that after ten bitter weeks in that camp, Lincoln Hill, which culminated when an injunction was issued, Myerscough was asked by Board Member Hughes to go to Hills Station because the Pittsburgh Coal Co. had imported an army of gunmen who with the State Police and State Militia were playing havoc with the men and women there. Myerscough accepted the orders to go there when the officers of the local union made a point blank refusal to do anything and Myerscough came out of that situation with flying colors.

In his many battles with the reactionary forces in the Pittsburgh district, Myerscough has flung his record in their faces.

Must Face Rank and File.

Knowing that they have the numbers in this convention, they are attacking everyone they can think of, but they are going to have a hard time explaining things to the rank and file. They can have a little fun by poking jibes and insults at the progressives at the convention, but they have to collect their sustenance from the men who work at the union mines and not from those who work in the scab mines which many of the locals that pay-rollers are representing are tached. Feeney went down as as the vermin, of which tribe h part, to find names for Ji Oates.

MANY TAILORS' LOCALS BACKING MAX SILLINSKY

Red Baiters Can't Down Progressive

With nominations coming from some thirty five cities for Max J. Sillinsky for General Secretary Treasurer of the Journeymen Tailors Union, the campaign for the office in the Journeymen Tailors Union has started with vigor.

Since the American Federation of Labor Convention at Portland, when Thomas Sweeney, the present General Secretary Treasurer of the union voted for the expulsion of William F. Dunne, there has been a heated discussion over this action of Sweeney's as against the action of Max J. Sillinsky who was one of those who voted against the expulsion of Dunne.

Protest Vote Against Dunne.

Protest after protest have been registered by locals, individuals and groups in the union against the outrageous action of Sweeney. The official organ,\ issue after issue, has been filled with letters of protest and criticism against himself which Sweeney against his will has been forced to pubish. At first not daring to publish Dunne's speech in Portland, he launched a vituperative campaign of slander and vilification against all those disagreeing with him but the avalanche of sentiment against him became so great that he was forced to publish Dunne's speech in full in the Official Organ.

As the time for nominations for the office of General Secretary-Treasurer grew nearer and it became manifest that Max J. Sillinsky would be nominated against him on the issues that had arisen in the Journeymen Tailors Union, Sweeney began to use the official organ as a mud slinging instrument against Sillinsky and those likely to support the latter for the office.

Today the "Journeymen Tailor" has practically become a personal weapon of Offense and Defense for Sweeney.

Foolish Red Baiting.

Sweeney has inaugurated a campaign of red baiting in the union. All of his opponents, all those desiring different methods to be pursued and different action taken are "Communists, Bolsheviks, Disrupters, Reds." Sweeney has come out as a safe and sane "socialist" and in one of the last issues of the Journeyman Tailor declares that only by building the socialist party will anything be accomplished.

Big Locals For Max.

The last issues of the "Journeyman Tailor" have begun to contain derogatory articles on Soviet Russia, one of them pointing out how Soviet Russia was violating the sacred principle of agreements in refusing to recognize Czarist debts.

Among the locals endorsing Max Sillinsky for Secretary-Treasurer are: Cleveland, Pittsburgh, New York City, San Francisco, Detroit, Butte, Buffalo, Toronto, Canada, Denver and Kansas City. These locals and the members of the Journeymen Tailors Union know for what to take the so-called socialistic leanings of Sweeney and his likes and on the other hand look to Sillinsky's action in Portland as well his stand with Progressives in their policies as assuring them a militant aggressive leadership of their union.

The task of the Progressives in the Journeymen Tailors Union is clear. It is now up to every forward seeing member of the Journeymen Tailors Union to exert every effort to assure the election of Max J. Sillinsky and the voting in of a consistent progressive policy for the Journeymen Tailors Union instead of decrepit reacionary and disitegrating policy of Sweeney and his like.

NEW ORLEANS, March 31.—Edward Rooner and Alvin Johnson, motorcycle policemen, detailed on a special hunt for bootleggers, highwaymen and other law breakers, were found fast asleep in a shed by Supt. of Police Molony on a tour of inspection. They are now looking for another job.

Party Membership, Attention!

THE PRESENT situation of the Workers Party in the struggle for the formation of a mass, class Farmer-Labor Party will be presented to the membership of the party in a series of membership mass meetings in the principal cities.

The development of the Farmer-Labor movement requires the mobilization of the entire party for an intensive campaign during the coming months. It is essential that every party member not only give the campaign the greatest support possible, but it is equally important that every member of the party know exactly what the party is trying to do. The whole party must understand the role which the united front movement for the Farmer-Labor Party plays in the struggle for the Proletarian Revolution, the Soviets and Proletarian Dictatorship.

In order to present the situation to the membership meetings have been arranged in the district headquarters city of eight districts, which will be attended by the members in these cities and also by comrades invited from the nearby cities. These meetings will be addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Party. His subject will be "The Decisive Stage of our Labor Party Policy".

The meetings arranged are:

Cleveland, Sunday, April 6, at 3 p. m., Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid Ave.
Pittsburg, Monday, April 7, 8 p. m., Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St.
Philadelphia, Tuesday, April 8, 8 p. m., Amalgamated Centre, 431 Pine St.
New York City, Wednesday, April 9, 8 p. m., Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.
Boston, Thursday, April 10.
Buffalo, Saturday, April 12.
Detroit, Sunday, April 13.
Chicago, Tuesday, April 22.

Every party member in the cities mentioned should attend these meetings. Every party member within reach of these cities should come to the meetings.

The Party must know and understand the policies of the Central Executive Committee. The Party must mobilize all its strength for the campaign which the Party is now entering.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

BULLETIN

Issued by the
Young Workers League of America,
1009 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

To All Shop Nuclei and Branches of the Young Workers' League:—

Dear Comrades: it becomes necessary to cancel the National Conference of the Young Workers League set for May 30th, 31st and June 1st, 1924, in Chicago. The purpose of calling our National Conference was fully explained in the call. However, there have been changes in circumstances the past few days which necessitate the cancellation of the National Conference.

The Young Communist International has called a Bureau Session in the month of May to take up its immediate problems and its regular Fourth Congress was to be held on International Youth Day, in September. The regulations of the Young Workers League call for a National Convention of the League within four months after the Congress of the Young Communist International. The Young Communist International, however, has decided in view of the change by the Communist International of its congress, to call the regular congress of the Young Communist International immediately after the Communist International Congress in June.

Since it would be necessary to call a convention of the Young Workers League shortly after the Young Communist International Congress, it would mean that if we should hold our National conference as scheduled, on May 30th, the Third National Convention of the Young Workers League would have to follow but a few months after our National Conference. This would be a financial and technical impossibility for us. We are therefore calling off the National Conference and instead will call the regular Third National Convention of the Young Workers League a few months after the Young Communist International Congress.

In the "Young Worker" you can read the letter from the Young Communist International informing us of the cancellation of their Bureau Session and the calling of their Fourth Congress, from which follows, logically, the postponement of our National Conference.

Since you have had the call and agenda for the National Conference but a few days, there should not be any great inconvenience caused because of the postponement.

We ask you to continue energetically with the work of the League; discuss more closely than ever the immediate and future problems and lay the basis for district organizations so that when the Third National Convention of the Young Workers League is called we shall be able to note large strides forward of the League.

With Communist greetings,
MARTIN ABERN,
Executive Secretary.

Teapot Dome Labor Secretary Puts New Chains on Aliens

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31.—The screws have been further tightened on aliens within the United States by Secretary of Labor James Davis who, in a new ruling, declares that an alien who has been admitted to this country for temporary residence must first secure the consent of immigration authorities before endeavoring to become a citizen.

In line with his recent policy of making it as hard for the alien as possible, Secretary Davis now rules that if immigration authorities care to they can ship the immigrant out of the country. An alien who has temporarily been admitted to this country, even tho he decides to remain and become naturalized, is subject to the whim of the immigration authorities, according to the new ruling.

Famer-Labor Forces Of Oklahoma Run Big Oil Candidate

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 31.—Oklahoma's farmer-labor forces are swallowing hard trying to accustom themselves to the sensation of supporting a millionarie oil man for U. S. senator. Charles J. Wrightsman of Tulsa is the nominee of the Farmer-Labor Progressive league for the Democratic primary. His friends stress his ability to finance a campaign.

Opponents of Wrightsman at the El Reno convention united in support of Fletcher Davis, a Pittsburgh county school teacher and member of the Farm-Labor union, to whom rallied the enthusiastic youth of the Red river ready to ride the rods and pass the hat to conduct a campaign.

J. Luther Langston, league manager, came out for Wrightsman, saying that all money expended by the Tulsan would go thru the league to be used in behalf of the entire ticket.

The Oklahoma Leader's forces, rallying about 200 of the 601 delegates present, made a strong fight for a third party but were outvoted. A third party move is under way headed by George Wilson and numerous Socialists and followers of LaFollette who insist on availing themseves of the recently enacted state law to place a Farmer-Labor ticket in the field. They propose to file their ticket and then campaign for the league candidates in the Democratic primary. If the league candidates are successful their names can also be inserted in the third party ticket by having the third party men withdraw in their favor. This has been done in Minnesota Farmer-Labor campaigns.

He Wants the Right Dope.

To the DAILY WORKER—While selling the DAILY WORKER Friday, March 28, on Cadillac Square, a young fellow approached me and asked if this was a Communist paper. On being assured it was, he informed me that he had been hearing a great deal of Communism and Communist literature over the radio. And, as he had little sympathy for the other side, he wanted to hear what we had to say, and purchased a copy of the DAILY WORKER.

dates referred to in said resolution," chief among whom was Governor Small.

The resolution referred to was that adopted by the executive board of the Illinois Federation of Labor which urged the support of not only the Republican candidate Len Small and Newton Jenkins, but also the Democratic candidate for governor, Kent Kellar.

Thomas C. McCabe, secretary of the Cook County branch of the Farmer-Labor Party, when interviewed by the DAILY WORKER, said, "I stand by the decision of the executive board of my party. I don't believe Small will win the nomination anyway. Even if he did, the Farmer-Labor Party intends to run candidates by means of petitions. It was the unanimous sense of the executive board that the old party politicians are disreputable, and I don't believe labor will gain anything by indorsing the old party politicians.

Violated Party Principles.

"Let John Fitzpatrick speak for himself. He knew of the motion which the party executives unanimously passed. Perhaps he has fallen into some trap set for him by the politicians. HE HAS VIOLATED THE SPIRIT, POLICIES AND PRINCIPLES OF THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY, in my opinion. But let him speak for himself."

"It is to be regretted that some trade unionists have placed their liberty in jeopardy and at the mercy of unscrupulous politicians who have in past times aligned themselves against labor."

John Fitzpatrick was faced, by the DAILY WORKER, with the contradictory statements of the party which he helped to launch—The Farmer-Labor Party—and the resolution which he signed. "It is a perfectly logical situation," said Fitzpatrick, "what I meant was that if the trade unionists are bound to enter the primaries, then they should vote for Small. I did not advise them to participate in the primaries."

Let Facts Speak.

But Fitzpatrick did advise trade unionists to participate in the primaries, not only in the communications quoted above, but in his endorsement of the resolution passed by the executive board of the Illinois State Federation signed by Fitzpatrick, which resolved, "The nominations of the three candidates, Newton Jenkins, Len Small and Kent Kellar, are hereby urged. Resolved further, that trade unionists in all congressional and senatorial districts be and hereby are urged and advised to support these candidates."

Fitzpatrick was asked what he had to say to this and to the statement of McCabe that "All loyal Farmer-Laborites must urge unionists to stay away from the primaries."

"That is a different proposition," said Fitzpatrick. He abruptly terminated the interview without saying goodbye, dashing out the door and down the stairs while the DAILY WORKER reporter was asking him another question.

Cabaret Dance Will Entice Tired Reds To Northwest Frolic

An innovation in entertainments will be introduced to the workers of Chicago on Thursday evening, April 3, when the North West Side English branch of the Workers Party associated with the Maplewood branch of the Young Workers League, will polish the floors of the Workers Lyceum at 2733 Hirsch Boulevard for the cabaret dance which every militant foot artist in the city is looking forward to.

It might be stated at this stage of the game that the cost of participating in this novelty is thirty-five cents including your share of the cost of making the world safe for democracy and paying the household expenses of Jess Smith and other gay lads who held forth in Washington before the Teapot burst.

That little matter taken care of we will not let you in on the other secrets but we can hint that between now and Thursday this paper will carry a VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT in the advertising columns relative to the cabaret dance. The advertising manager of the DAILY WORKER bought a ticket for the affair after the committee on arrangements gave him the copy for an ad. The worst is yet to come.

K. K. K. Turns Up A Joker.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 31.—A comical part in the Milwaukee municipal elections was provided by the Koo Koos. The Badger American, the alleged publication of the Klan, has "indorsed" Socialist Candidate, Hoan, for mayor; much to the displeasure of the latter.

Mayor Hoan was quick to repudiate the unwelcome endorsement, but this did not prevent the opposing forces to make an issue of it in the bitter municipal election campaign now taking place in the city.

Mayor Hoan charges that this was a trick played on him for the purpose of alienating about 7,000 colored votes in addition to a considerable Jewish and Catholic support.

Burns Man Planned Deportation and Shooting of Foreign-Born Miner, Secret Letter Shows

How William J. Burns private detectives use the immigration authorities to get rid of radical foreign born workers who are endangering the profits of the corporations which retain the agency is shown in a confidential letter from a Burns operative which has fallen into the possession of the Industrial Workers of the World.

The letter is from Operative "Z.3" to G. G. Pross, manager of the Los Angeles Branch of the Burns agency.

"Getting Rid of a Red."

"Z. 3," otherwise known as J. J. Spear, an Arizona delegate for the Metal Mine Workers Union of the I. W. W. until he was exposed and expelled, says that a certain "Dunn," who seems to be another operative, informs him that an I. W. W. named M. Demitroff was afraid of deportation to Austria, where he would be shot as a deserter from the Austrian army. This, commented "Z. 3," ought to be "a good chance to get rid of our Red."

Other letters in the Burns wobbly file show how all such information was turned over to Department of Justice agents or local authorities in the interest of the copper companies who were retaining the Burns agency.

JIM CANNON AND EDWARDS CLASH SUNDAY, APR. 13

Big Debate at North-Side Turner Hall

Everything points to the certainty that the debate between James P. Cannon, of the Workers Party, and Forrest Edwards, of the Industrial Workers of the World will be the biggest event of its kind that Chicago has had in years. Indications are that both Workers Party and I. W. W. members, in Chicago, are wholeheartedly back of their men.

Ralph Chaplin, who will act as chairman, is one of the "old time wobblies" who was released from jail only a short time ago, under the blanket pardon issued by President Coolidge.

Forrest Edwards, who will try to show "that the Workers Party must fail to achieve anything of importance for the workers," is also an ex-inmate of Leavenworth penitentiary. He was formerly secretary-treasurer of the "Agricultural Workers Industrial Union," the agricultural branch of the I. W. W. He is said to be widely known in the harvest fields of the west.

"Jim" Cannon, presenting the viewpoint of the Workers Party, has been a prominent figure in the revolutionary working class movement for years. He is national chairman of the Workers Party.

The question to be debated is: "Resolved, That the Workers Party must fail to accomplish anything of importance for the workers," with Edwards taking the affirmative, and Cannon the negative. The struggle will take place at the North Side Turner Hall, Sunday afternoon, April 13.

New York Bosses' Joker Would Kill Compensation Bill

NEW YORK, March 31.—Organizations representing over 900,000 wage earners have joined together here to fight the 'joker" which the employers are endeavoring to insert as an amendment to the Twomey-Wilson silicosis bill, introduced by labor.

Declaring that if the employers substitute is passed by the legislature, the entire Compensation act of New York will become null and void, representatives of the Worker's Health Bureau, the New York Federation of Labor, the Central Trades and Labor Council, and the Building Trades Compensation Bureau, point out that the joker would create a medical board of three physicians, whose decision would be final.

"Sillicosis is a lung disease prevalent in certain dusty trades, and often leading to tuberculosis," these organizations declare. "The effect of the joker would be to nullify the Compensation Act. The injured worker would be denied the right of appeal."

Legion Gets Stung; Bergdoll Refuses To Return to Jail

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, March 31.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll is back in Eberbach.

The young Philadelphian and his companions, the Stecher boys, are not returning to the United States at this time.

Bergdoll charged that a "quartet of newspapermen" who have been working to induce him to return, in the interest of an American newspaper concern, offered him American passports under the name of "Bryant" as well as other spurious documents asking consuls in Germany to extend him courtesies.

The draft avoider said he had not made himself liable under the law:

"I believe I was illegally convicted of desertion," he said.

"I never took oath as a soldier, nor wore a uniform."

He said the newspapermen offered him annulment or quashing of the desertion charge if he would return with them, but that he was skeptical.

WILSON WISHED GERMAN VICTORY BEFORE HE DIED

Said France Should Be "Cleaned Up"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 31—"To the zero hour, Woodrow Wilson regarded himself as the spiritual leader of a cause only temporarily lost," writes James Kearney, publisher of the Trenton, N. J., Times, in an intimate copyrighted article appearing this week in the Saturday Evening Post.

Kerney says in his article that Wilson thought his radio speech delivered on Armistice day brought a reaction which showed the pendulum swinging back in his direction. The writer then reveals the bitter feeling Wilson had accumulated toward the attitude of France.

Furor Over Radio Speech.

"When I reminded him that there was quite an international furor over his radio reference to the 'sinister climax' of France and Italy having 'made waste paper of the treaty of Versailles,'" Kerney writes, "he fired back in a spirited voice, 'I should like to see Germany clean up France and I should like to meet Jusserand and tell him that to his face.'"

Revealing Wilson's idea of his place in world opinion, Kearney quoted the former president further:

"I am going to try to look at myself as tho I did not exist—to consider the whole thing in an impersonal way. From the messages I get I realize that I am everywhere regarded as the foremost leader of the liberal thought of the world, and the hopes and aspirations of that liberal thought should find some better place of expression than in the senate."

And at this point the writer quotes Wilson's estimate of the senate:

"Outside of the United States, the senate does not amount to a damn, and inside the United States, the senate is mostly despised; they haven't had a thought down there in fifty years."

Did Not Support Cox.

"You know I have a temper and if I was to go to the senate I should get into a row with that old Lodge, who no longer counts for anything. As I have remarked before of him, I'd rather be a dead dead man than a dead live man. The senate would hardly provide the place for liberal leadership that the world is seeking so sadly."

Kerney revealed Wilson as not supporting the presidential aspirations of James M. Cox, tho regarding his stand in the last election as a "brave one."

"'His master's voice has spoken,' was his breezy comment on President Coolidge's message to congress," Kerney writes, and "of the administration world court idea," he said, 'they don't know where they're drifting; Hughes is at sea and they have no program.'"

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?
PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.
Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.
Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.
A large tube of Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents; at your druggist's.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., Saint Louis, U. S. A.

MACDONALD IN CRISIS OVER HIS BLACKLEG PLAN

Strikebreaking Threat Is Resented

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 31.—The Labor government of Great Britain is faced with a serious crisis today, following the decidedly hostile reception accorded by organized labor to the strike-breaking activities of the MacDonald government.

Premier MacDonald, faced with a street car strike, the sympathetic strike of the bus workers, and the threatened walkout of the subway workers, instead of backing up the workers which he is supposed to represent, publicly declared his plans to maintain as far as he could, the traffic of the city.

Cabinet Strikebreakers.

As a result, Premier MacDonald and his cabinet, regardless of the outcome of the present traction strikes, is exposed to the workers as a tool of the capitalists, even going to the extreme of threatening to call out the military forces to break the strikes. Workers in all trades are today renouncing the "Labor" government as a strike-breaking agency which has betrayed labor.

The present crisis follows on the heels of the action of the miners a couple of days ago, in forcing MacDonald against his will to introduce a miners' minimum wage bill into parliament. Premier MacDonald, at that time, lost much of his labor support when he tried to dodge the miners' demand by saying that the bill could not pass at any rate, because it would be opposed by the liberals as well as the tories.

The miners, however, forced their pseudo-leader to yield, declaring that the "Labor government is there to pass labor legislation, and if it can't do that it might as well quit."

Opposition Growing.

In the face of the growing opposition to him within the ranks of organized labor, Premier MacDonald is making frantic efforts to settle the various strikes that are coming upon him one after the other. Today (Monday) the striking street car workers will ballot on whether or not to accept the final compromise agreed to by representatives of the employers and the strikers, last week. The bus workers, who were striking in sympathy with the traction employes, will not ballot, but will await the decision of the traction workers.

But no matter what the outcome of the present traction strike, it is evident that, due to MacDonald's betrayal of his supporters, an increasing number of Laborites will voice their opposition by voting in their councils, against his government.

Philadelphia Will Celebrate Second Freiheit Birthday

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—The second anniversary of the only Communist daily in America in the Jewish language, the "Freiheit," will be celebrated on Saturday evening, April 12, at Moose Hall, Broad and Master.

The celebration will start with an unusually fine concert and wind up with a "Freiheit" banquet.

Mina Dolores, Philadelphia's best lyric soprano; Alfred Seyden, distinguished Russian violinist; Maurice B. Katz, a well-known pianist, and Cermel Kazanova, a recently arrived young Russian dancer, will participate in the concert.

Besides, and to crown it all, the Philadelphia "Freiheit" Gesangs Verein, the first Jewish labor singing society, will make its initial appearance with a number of workingmen's revolutionary songs.

Comrade S. Epstein of New York will speak on behalf of the editorial department of the "Freiheit."

M. L. Olken, Philadelphia, manager of the "Freiheit," will preside.

Tickets are 55 to 83 cents. They can be gotten in the office of the "Freiheit," 340 S. Fifth street, or at Party Headquarters, 521 York avenue.

Chicago Children Growing Up In Insanitary, Tuberculosis Breeding Homes, Says Civics School Report

Many sections of the city adjacent to railroads, industries, and cheap commercial centers, house thousands of workers in insanitary, ill-repaired homes, which the landlords, waiting to sell their property at a profit to the incoming factories, make no effort to make livable.

In the Jewish and Italian districts of the West Side, factories and business houses have been moving across Canal Street and into the heart of the rooming house district from more obviously commercial streets like Halsted, Twelfth, and Jefferson.

The whole territory, between Halsted and the river, from the South to the North branch, has been awaiting the invasion. The Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy, which some time ago published ten pamphlets on housing in Chicago, says of this district, "In the meantime, while landlords and dealers wait, poor people continue to live in insanitary houses, tuberculosis breeding there, and children growing up in dark, ill-ventilated rooms, without proper place to play.

Alley Houses.

"Unfortunately, the clearing of areas where improvements were made, has not meant the destruction of the old frame houses which occupied them .They have been sold at a very low rate and the enterprising neighborhood landlords who bought them moved their old houses to the rear and placed the new ones in the front spaces thus vacated."

It might be incidentally remarked that Chicago is about the only city in America which would let the landlords get away with such a practice, which is so obviously a menace to the health of her workers. These houses which have been moved back to make room for another in front have caused the menace of the alley or rear tenement, which all housing investigators agree is one of the most characteristic of the bad features of Chicago's housing. Hardly another city in the world would allow these old rear shacks to go uncondemned.

"The alley houses," says an expert investigator, "are not only objectionable because the windows look out on the dirty, ill-smelling alley, but because they are old, in poor repair, and in general without adequate sanitary provisions. The alley house is much more frequently dependent upon a yard water closet or privy than is the newly built house."

"Little Sicily" Disease Hot-Bed.

In the district known as "Little Sicily 30 per cent of all the houses are fronting on alleys. The majority are frame houses, dark and in poor repair. Because of these rear tenements, according to the University survey, "Hundreds of people in the lower North side are living in houses where the conditions not only cause great discomfort, but are frequently dangerous to the health of the tenants. One of the worst features of the condition of the houses is the damp walls. Frequently the roofs leak, destroying the ceiling and flooding the floors. In numerous cases the sinks are frozen and the water supply entirely cut off. The landlords refused to make even the most necessary repairs. Some of the cellars are so damp they cannot be used. Often they are in a condition which makes them not only dangerous to those living in the cellar apartment, but to the other occupants of the house. With the dilapidation of the buildings goes a general lack of cleanliness in the yards and alleys."

Speaking of the region south of Polk street, a Hull House writer says, "Rear tenements and alleys form the core of this district, and it is there that the densest crowds of the most wretched and destitute congregrate. Little idea can be given of the filthy and rotten tenements, the dingy courts and tumble-down sheds, the dilapidated outhouses, the broken sewer pipes, the piles of garbage fairly alive with diseased odors, and of the numbers of children filling every nook, working and playing in every room, eating and sleeping in every window sill, pouring in and out of every door, and seeming to pave every scrap of yard."

1,200 In 4 Chicago Blocks.

"In the Slovak district of the Twentieth Ward," a student of the Research Department of the School of Philanthropy and Civics tells us, "a house set on the rear of the lot means invariably two houses on the lot, and between them a small court or yard, sometimes only the width of a narrow passage. This becomes an abiding place for rubbish, even for scraps of rotten garbage. Water seeps down from the higher level of the street or alley and stands here often in stagnant pools. Twenty-two per cent of the houses of this district are rear or alley tenements, and over 1,200 little children live in four blocks in this neighborhood."

"Not only are the houses old, and therefore EXEMPT FROM COMPLIANCE WITH OUR PRESENT LEGAL STANDARD but most of them are wooden, and hence greatly affected by age." They are, therefore, almost uniformly dilapidated. The cellars are almost universally damp, and the walls are often white with mold, and so damp as to be musty."

"The alley tenement is a conspicuous feature of Chicago's housing problem" another of the Russell Sage foundation pamphlets tells us. "The alley houses back of the stock-yards are almost uniformly old houses, and for sanitary provisions they are frequently entirely dependent upon a water closet or privy."

Chicago Densest Population.

The menace of these old houses, built before even the present inadequate housing laws were passed, moved to the back of the lot to make room for a newer nouse, or another old one in front, is one of the most glaring of Chicago's housing evils. Even in New York, the municipal government would not allow the profiteering landlords to get away with such an obvious crime as this. Chicago, unlike New York, is a city of 2, 3, 4 and 5-story tenements. In proportion to the height of the buildings, Chicago has the densest and most overcrowded population in America.

Add to this overcrowding, the many tenements fronting on alleys, and the age of the houses—very many of them being over forty year old—and it is seen why Chicago has the reputation, among even the most superficial social investigators, of being the unkindest and cruelest in housing its working population.

Pennsylvania Rail Workers Hit by a Series of Layoffs

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Workers engaged in the manufacture and repair of railroad cars in Pennsylvania have been hit by a successions of layoffs, according to the monthly employment reports of the federal reserve bank of Philadelphia. Reductions in force between January and February amounting to 12.8 per cent followed a layoff of over one-third of the forces between December and January. Altogether since October the number employed in these establishments has been reduced by one-half.

The February report covering all manufacturing in the state shows employment for that month lagging far behind the normal seasonal gain Employers added less than 1 per cent to their working forces and the total number employed was still 2.5 per cent below the December level.

An increase of 6 per cent in the total amount paid each week in wages is considered the most hopeful feature of the report because it indicates that some of the industries were resuming fuller operating schedules.

Impeachment for Theft Confronting Friend of Walton

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 31.—Oklahoma's extraordinary session of the legislature has adjourned but the senate still sits as a court of impeachment in the case of John Whitehurst, president, state board of agriculture. Departure of Fred Parkinson, state examiner and inspector, for California on "official business" at a time when he was to be called to testify as to an alleged shortage of $130,000 at the Agricultural and Mechanical College, has thrown a monkey wrench temporarily into the proceedings. Whitehurst as chairman of the college board is charged with knowledge and with failure to have a report of it published for several years.

Whitehurst was a bosom friend of Gov. Jack Walton until Walton's farmer-labor support forced the appointment of George Wilson to the college. Whitehurst then turned on Wilson and Walton was forced, this time by the other crowd to fire Wilson as an alleged red from college.

But Wilson was at the college long enough to learn something of the sad state of its past conduct. With leads thus obtained Wilson and former associates of Whitehurst have brought Whitehurst to trial.

Swiss Defeat 54-Hour Week.

BERNE, March 31.—By a popular vote of 431,342 to 317,746, the amendment to the factory law, which proposed to establish a 54-hour week instead of the present 52-hour week, in times of national economic crises, was defeated.

MASSACRE OF HINDOO REBELS IS PROTESTED

Lansbury Denounces the Jaito Killing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 31.—A big demonstration in Bombay, of persons applying for relief and protesting against the inaction of the British "Labor" government in face of the strike of 160,000 cotton-mill workers, has been reported here. Pitiable scenes of starvation and distress are being enacted, and over fifty-thousand workers have fled from Bombay in their quest for food.

Mr. Lansbury called to the attention of the Under Secretary for India, Professor Richards, that the government should meet representatives of India to discuss how more self-government might be given them, and so preserve the peace of India. Mr. Lansbury protested against the massacre at Jaito, where 21 persons were killed and 33 wounded, when police and soldiers fired into crowds. Many more are now in prison.

Attack MacDonald Imperialist.

The Under-Secretary replied that the "Government was full of sympathy for the ultimate ideal of self-goverment for India, but it is difficult to keep the peace among different religious sects. We are attempting to settle these difficulties by setting up a joint board."

The Communist Party of Great Britain, backed by thousands of workers who realize that the industries of India are British owned and British controlled, has issued this proclamation to the workers of India: "Workers and peasants of India: The British Communist Workers hold out their hands to you in comradeship and declare: Do not mistake the countenances of a Haldane or an Olivier for the British working class. Our struggle and your struggle is one against the bloody British militarists and imperialists. The British Communist Party, which is winning to its influence larger and larger sections of the British working class, stands for the complete liberation of the independent Workers' and Peasants' Republic of India."

Workers Protest Massacre.

Large numbers of British workers are protesting against the Jaito massacre and the earlier MacDonald message threatening the Indian forces of revolt, which they point out, was a brandishing of the sword of conquest which was triumphantly acclaimed by Mussolini.

Olivier, the autocratic secretary for India, in the MacDonald government, has now closed the doors on even the mild proposal of a round-table conference, proclaiming instead the "right of the British to rule India."

MacDonald has broken his January pledge to India that "No party in Great Britain will be cowed by threats of force; and if any sections in India are under that delusion that this is not so, events will very sadly disappoint him." One month after making this pledge, came the great massacre of unarmed Indians at Jaito, and for that reason, the militant laborites are withdrawing support from the MacDonald government.

New Poincare Cabinet Decides to Continue Militarist Policy

PARIS, March 31.—"Continuance of previous foreign and domestic policies" was decided upon today by the new French cabinet at its first meeting.

Premier Poincare's ministry held a cabinet council at the Quai D' Orsay to discuss drafting of the Ministerial Declaration which the Premier will make before the chambers Monday.

Selection of a cabinet which is a coalition, including leaders of the left, is considered a clever piece of political maneuvering on the part of Poincare in view of the approaching elections which will be held in May. The premier brings under his hand elements which would otherwise have opposed the bloc national and, in the opinion of political observers, assures his own re-election.

Moreover, three of the new ministers opposed and criticized the previous government's fiscal measures. They now are charged with enforcing them.

Considerable criticism is levelled against the new cabinet, however, by the press, except those papers that are subsidized by the Comite Des Forges.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Daily Worker Exposes the Chicago Real Estate Board

THE CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD IS BREAKING THE HOUSING ORDINANCES. In the next three articles the DAILY WORKER will expose the lease drawn up by the Real Estate Board, Lease No. Ten, which is used by almost every landlord in the city. By means of this lease, the Board has FORCED THE RENTERS TO WAIVE ALL LEGAL RIGHTS, and has PLACED THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR REPAIRING OLD HOUSES, and for SECURING HEAT AND HOT WATER, UPON THE TENANTS. The state and city housing laws are used by the landlord as a boomerang to injure the tenant, who does not know legal procedure and hence is easily tricked by the Chicago Real Estate Board.

THE POWER COLUMN

Some of the Cities Just Won't Stay Down

A DOZEN or more of towns have sent in their complaints to our office that they were not entered officially into THE DAILY WORKER subscription drive for 10,000 new readers by June 15th and were not assigned quotas. We are, with no reluctance, listing them here.

Menanga, Minn.	15
International Falls, Minn.	15
San Bernardino, Calif.	15
Marshfield, Ore.	15
Neffs, Ohio	25
Ely, Minn.	25
Monesson, Pa.	15
Daisytown, Pa.	15
Turtle Creek, Pa.	25
Denver, Colo.	25
W. Concord, N. H.	15
Miles City, Mont.	25
Providence, R. I.	15

Many of these towns have already sent in subs covering a large percentage of their quota, and all enthusiastically promise to go over the top of quotas assigned, ask for more sub blanks and sample copies of THE DAILY WORKER so that they can systematically canvass the town for subscribers. The results achieved, in some cases thru efforts of one or two active comrades can be seen from the Honor Roll, for instance Turtle Creek and Miles City, Montana. "We have no difficulty," they say, even tho many of them cannot speak English well, "in getting subscribers on the special offer of two months for one dollar. We are keeping track of all the trial subs we get and when the new subscriber's two months are almost up, we will make it our business to secure renewals from from each one of them for a year at least!" And from our experience in dealing with these comrades, we know this is no idle boast.

* * * *

PARTICULARLY good work for THE DAILY WORKER is being carried on in Kansas City, Mo. In addition to the city agent, Nelson Sorenson, whose name accompanied by a few subs always appears on the Honor Roll, who supervises all the work in both Kansas Cities and now also in Independence, Mo., (a town of some 10,000, fifteen miles away from Kansas City) they have appointed a comrade who is active and well-known in the trade union movement in Kansas City to take care of the sale of DAILY WORKERS and getting of subscriptions in and thru the trade unions in these cities. Of course they are encountering some very bitter opposition from the reactionaries, (being forbidden to solicit subscriptions in the meeting hall), who are afraid that the rank and file may learn some truth about them from THE DAILY WORKER. But our comrades in Kansas City have these dignitaries beat. They distribute sample copies of THE DAILY WORKER as the members of the union come into and come out of the hall and solicit subs at their homes, when the workers have had time to read the DAILY. Solicitors say that in this way they find it much easier to sell the subs. They also have one comrade in charge of distribution and sale of subs in Jewish communities and Comrade Massey in charge of news stands and regular delivery route distribution. They have put out very effectively 1,000 TEAPOT SPECIALS in workers' residence districts, every copy going into the hands where it did most good. This systematic organization accounts for the growth of our Kansas City mailing list.

* * * *

IN TOLEDO, Ohio, the second Saturday in April has been set aside for a street selling campaign, all the party members and other militants will be out on the streets of Toledo, at entrances to the factories, etc. selling THE DAILY WORKER. Our agent there is preparing an interesting advertising stunt full details of which will be published later.

When properly organized, street selling has proven quite successful. Detroit has tried it and over 80 copies were sold in two hours on a downtown street there.

Organization for the DAILY WORKER distribution and systematic soliciting of subscriptions has not been perfected in many of the cities. Subs received from those cities are merely efforts of some of the most active comrades. However, this organization is being rapidly established, and effects of it can already be felt.

It is with confidence in the comrades in charge of DAILY WORKER activities, whether they be in the city, within the branch, in the shop and T. U. E. L. units, it is with the feeling of assurance that every militant realizes the full significance of the press in the minds of workers, that we say by June the 15th we will have on our mailing list 10,000 new readers. THINK! 10,000 workers to whom we can interpret events in terms of Communism!

Are you doing YOUR SHARE to reach this goal? Is your name on the Honor Roll? Will it be on next time this column is published? YES! We have no use or place for "no."

GERMAN PLUTES WINE AND DINE CORRESPONDENTS

Then Beg Writers fo Sympathy

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Pre

BERLIN, March 31.—The incred ble thing has happened. The junke of Germany, the big landholde who have been holding their annu convention in Berlin these days, i vited the foreign correspondents, e pecially from the United State Great Britain and Holland, to a te at which they solicited the sympath of the outside world for their sit ation, which they describe as despe ate.

To understand this maneuver on must remember that these are th simon-pure 100 per cent nationalis who only half a year ago disdaine asking for foreign publicity. "Ge many for the Germans" was thei motto; they had no use for foreign ers, Jews, or for any policy of in ternational understanding.

Wined, Dined Scribes.

The reason for now calling in for eign correspondents, who were re galed with delicious pork an ham and egg sandwiches, expensiv liquors and genuine tea and coffe while being harangued on the "grav distress of our fatherland," was evidently to solicit foreign credits, to complain of the labor policy, and to maintain that the latest taxes upon the big agrarian estates were prohibitive.

The big landlords want foreign credits thru the rentenbank, bu complain that they must pay to much into that rentenbank since th 6 per cent mortgage levied upo their property is based on the pre war assessments. An inquisitive Br tish correspondent interposed, how ever, to say that the junkers we not telling how their fixed propert had increased in value during the i flation period.

8-Hour Day Got Their Goat.

The junkers are furious becau the farm workers secured the eigh hour day during the revolution an got rid of feudalism.

The biggest squeal emitted b the junkers was taxes. By erectin houses, barns and other improv ments which increased the value their estates tremendously, they e caped paying taxes on a large pa of their fortunes, while the city wa earner and the government offici had his income tax deducted reg larly every payday. The new tax under the state-of-emergency la will if drastically administere make the junker come across. Bu he is finding little sympathy in th rest of Germany.

Peace League Gave Wilson Some Points, Says Jane Addam

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 31.—The fac that the Women's Internation League for Peace and Freedom ga Wilson a few ideas for his hyp critical 14 points was the outstan ing feature in the Jane Addam speech to several hundred membe at 99 Park Ave.

Miss Addams recounted the wo of the League during and after t World War. She had practicall nothing to point to except a few loc attempts by the league to ease t execution of the onerous pea treaties. Her program for the futu was disappointing. Despite her rep tation as a pacifist, she omitted reference to a program for stoppin the next war or for removing t deepseated causes of war. Her avow purpose went no further than t creation of an atmosphere of go feeling which might put off the w of to-morrow until the day after t morrow. Altho there were ma wealthy people in the audience, t chair could not raise the propos sum of $1,000. This money is to he defray the expenses of foreign del gates to the fourth biennial conf ence of the league to be held in Was ington during the week of May 1.

In the evening there was a publ meeting at Mrs. Sargent Cram Peace House, 109th St. and 5th Av Two German Women delegates fro Munich spoke. They emphasized t uselessness of violence in the clas war and urged the workingmen to "heroic" and submit. Miss Addam also spoke. Half the audience several hundred got up and left the beginning of the collection.

It was stated the Mme. Kollont had been interested in having t women in Soviet Russia send a del gate to present their viewpoint peace to the International conferen at Washington.

GOMPERS TOOL FEELS TIP OF LABORS' BOOT

Fails to Wreck Farmer-Labor Party, W. Va.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLARKSBURG, March 31.—The efforts of W. T. Harris, president of the West Virginia Federation of Labor, a disciple of Gompers, and his cohorts to wreck the Farmer-Labor Party of this state was decisively defeated at the convention held here recently when his resolution calling for non-partisan political action was turned down almost unanimously and its author driven from the platform.

Following the convention the Kanawha Valley Central Labor Union, enraged over this attempted betrayal unanimously passed a resolution demanding the immediate resignation of Harris and the other officials of the federation who participated with him in the plot. The Central body charged that since the organization of the Farmer-Labor party it was sabotaged by the heads of the federation.

Lackey Harris Foiled.

The attempt to steal the convention and subvert the purpose of the organization was made in a roundabout way by the slick lackey Harris. He objected to the call sent out by the duly elected officers of the party but the call was endorsed by an almost unanimous vote. Next, aided by a majority of his executive board he introduced a resolution favoring the non-partisan plan. After a bitter debate during which Harris insulted the convention for not following him, a vote was taken with only four in favor of the resolution.

He then left the convention in a rage, but on his way out he was informed that charges were preferred against him for pernicious political activities in the interests of the capitalists. He stopped to hear the document read and left without saying a word in his defense.

The convention reaffirmed its declaration of principles adopted in Clarksburg last July when the party was formed, elected a permanent chairman and secretary, an executive committee, nominated a state ticket and adopted plans for congressional, senatorial and county organizations.

State Ticket.

The State ticket as unanimously ratified by the convention is as follows:

Governor—Dr. A. S. Bosworth, Elkins, Randolph county.

Secretary of State—W. F. Naylor, McMechen, Marshall county.

Superintendent of Schools—Mrs. Della Tetrick Franklin, Huntington, Cabell county.

Auditor—Joseph R. Diggs, Fairmont, Marion county.

Treasurer—Dr. John S. Thayer, Grafton, Taylor county.

Attorney General—G. H. Duthie, Clarksburg, Harrison county.

Commissioner of Agriculture—J. B. West, Mannington, Marion county.

U. S. Senate—Dr. M. S. Holt, Weston, Lewis county.

Noah Zinn of Clarksburg, was elected chairman by unanimous vote and Joseph R. Diggs was elected secretary-treasurer on the second ballot.

The executive board consists of A. F. Boyd, Fairmont, first district; S. W. Perchon, Century, second district; L. F. Farley, Mt. Clare, third district; Mrs. D. N. Franklin, Huntington, fourth district; A. C. Williams, Matewan and E. H. Hartwicke, Charleston, fifth district.

Against Capitalist System.

The convention adopted a platform which declared the capitalist system responsible for the great ills from which modern society suffers and declared that the workers should organize to establish a form of society where the wealth of the nation would be accessible to all and not as now in the control of a few.

Economic Chaos and Unemployment Are Raging In Germany

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, March 31.—Some idea of the terrible economic chaos brought on by the socialist government in co-operation with the industrialists is obtained from the unemployment figures for December, 1923. For every 100 positions open for men, there were 1,282 applicants; for every 100 positions open for women, there were 495 applicants, and of every 100 applicants of both sexes only nine were placed in positions, in this one month thruout Germany.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

The Struggle Within the Russian Party

Being the continuation of the report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organization.

* * *

V. The Majority of the Central Committee and Our Opposition.

THIS is the reason, comrades, why we, the majority of the Central Committee—the overwhelming majority if I am not mistaken: 55 to 3 (including candidates)—hold fast to our position. You may believe us, and I know that the majority of those present in this hall believe us (applause), that we are not clinging to the epaulettes of the Central Committee.

It is well known to you that a few years ago some of us sat together with the Mensheviki in united Central Committees.

Cannot Tolerate Fractions.

We shall do our work in whatever place the Party sends us. But so long as the Party does not dismiss us, we shall do as Comrade Lenin taught us to do, we shall fight energetically and passionately against the tolerance of the freedom to form fractions. (Applause.)

We are prepared for the severe accusations which will be brought against us, for savage attacks against the representatives of the present majority of the Central Committee. But we have a thick skin, we have gone thru a lot already, and we have managed to fight for our views under the most difficult circumstances. I tell you in advance: you will hear many lamentations, you will be told that we act ruthlessly, etc.

But we shall fight to the end.

You comrades of the opposition believe that you will now conquer the freedom of group formation, but we say to you: No. We are convinced that when the question is put to our Party generally with regard to this question, the unanimous anwer will be: that our Party, pursuing its activity under the conditions of the new economic policy, surrounded on all sides by the bourgeoisie, and showing to the whole world an example of discipline, cannot tolerate any freedom to form fractions and groups.

"Fraction of Loudest Shouters."

We do not doubt but that the Party will answer again, this time as at the time of the Tenth Party Congress, with the same reply.

Comrades, at the present time our debate has reached a somewhat difficult zone, just as in the year 1921. For me it is especially disagreeable to have to polemize against Comrade Trotzky in his absence, but unfortunately Comrade Trotzky was unable to come. The core of the present opposition is the fraction of "democratic centralism."

We of Petrograd, poor provincials that we are, are little acquainted with this fraction, but in other organizations it caused enough commotion at the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Party Congresses (it was not for nothing that Comrade Lenin named it the "fraction of the loudest shouters")—its adherents were Sapronov, Ossinsky, Rafael, and some other Ukrainians, in part really old Bolsheviki, in part old Mensheviki.

These comrades hang out the attractive sign of "democratic centralism" as a designation for their fraction. It is written in our statutes that the Party works on the basis of democratic centralism. But as you are well aware, it is often possible to draw wrong conclusions from the best of premises.

Lenin's Advice.

As early as the Tenth Party Congress, these comrades adopted their present line. Their motions were rejected by the Tenth and Eleventh Party Congresses.

Comrade Lenin said that this fraction was more lacking in principle than any other which he had ever encountered in the course of his long struggles (the fraction of the "loudest shouters"). And a fresh question can scarcely be raised in the Party, before this flighty group appears on the surface again. "Aha! democracy?" they cry, "this is where we come in again."

And now the old song begins again to a new tune: Allow fractions, etc. And now important members of the Central Committees have joined them—Preobrazensky, Smirnov, Serebryakov, comrades who on the motion of Comrade Lenin were not re-elected to the Central Committees at the Tenth Party Congress of the Russian Communist Party.

All these are comparatively prominent workers; the Party has tried them, and proclaimed thru Lenin's mouth: You are of no use as leaders for the Party. At the Tenth Congress this group was let drop collectively on the motion of Comrade Lenin, who spoke openly to the Congress as follows: "These comrades are of no use as leaders of the Party, and I advise the Congress not to elect them."

Congress Follows Advice.

The Congress followed his advice and did not elect this group. Now these one-time members of the Central Committee have joined the group of "democratic centralism."

Comrade Trotzky has not expressed himself clearly. When the resolution was drawn up, he was opposed to any formulation containing severe condemnation of groups and fractions. But after he had convinced himself that we were really severe in our judgment of his present allies of the "democratic central," and had politically almost annihilated them in the public opinion of the Party, then he abandoned his reserve and spoke the words to which so much weight is attached.

(To Be Continued Wednesday.)

Los Angeles Reader Likes O'Flaherty's Column the Best

"The DAILY WORKER has more truth and philosophy to the square inch than the capitalist papers have to the square mile," writes a subscriber from Los Angeles.

The writer goes on to suggest that perhaps the intellectual diet offered by the DAILY WORKER is too rich and adds:

"The best articles, that is, the ones that will appeal to the ordinary uninitiated reader, are by Comrade O'Flaherty in 'As We See It.'"

Bursted Canadian Bank Hit Union, Says Shopmen's Head

(By The Federated Press)

MONTREAL, Mar. 31.—Welcoming the biennial convention of Division No. 4, railway employes' department, American Federation of Labor, in session here, Mayor Martin urged the beneficial results of unions in protecting the weak. Labor, he argued, has just as much right to organize as bankers, lawyers or merchants.

R. J. Tallon, president of the division, in his report characterized the last two years as a period of hard pulling against the current of returning "normalcy," whose general sweep had a tendency to bring to an end many of the advantages of labor won during the war. "We were never in better shape numerically," he said, "but our membership is suffering from that general feeling of apathy which prevails in the ranks of labor on this continent."

Charles Dickie, secretary treasurer, said the organization had been involved to the extent of $16,405 by the failure of the Home Bank. Twenty-five per cent had been received but it was uncertain how much more the union would get or when.

"Birds of a Feather"--Expose Them Both

Strike-buster Robert E. Crowe was exposed in the columns of the DAILY WORKER, Monday morning, when we made public the complete report of the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The DAILY WORKER now urges the "Committee of 15" to fearlessly expose the strike-busting record of Mayor William E. Dever's police as well.

Uniformed city policemen are beating up girls on the picket line. Uniformed city policemen are arresting them and aiding the state's attorney's men in arresting them. Even where an arrest has technically been made by a plainclothesman attached to the state's attorney's office it is the city policeman who shoves her into Lowenthal's doorway and acts as the willing assistant to the Crowe dick.

Sophie Altschuler was technically arrested by William Schroeder, a detective assigned to Crowe's office, but Officer O'Rorke, No. 3181, took her off the detective's hands and beat her up.

Officers 5159 and 3609 beat up Ethel Spink. Officer 3401 beat up Olga Levin. Many more such cases of brutality to strike pickets are on our files.

The DAILY WORKER demands that the "Committee of 15" present the workingclass public with as full an indictment of the mayor's strike-breaking activities as it has given of Robert E. Crowe.

The Committee has the facts of police brutality in this strike. They submitted these facts to the mayor. Let them broadcast these facts as they are broadcasting the expose of Robert E. Crowe. Otherwise one capitalist politician will merely gain at the expense of his political rival.

Dever and Crowe are birds of a feather as far as the workers are concerned. Pick their feathers and expose them both.

Recognizing Soviet Russia

The latest government to signify its intention to recognize the Russian Soviet Republic is Canada. There is a Soviet Trade delegation in Canada already and the country as a whole is jubilant over the prospect of getting down to business and brushing aside the legal obstacles that have so far prevented free commercial intercourse—between the people of the Dominion government and Soviet Russia.

Foreign Minister Benes of Czecho-Slavia predicted that this year would be remembered by the establishment of complete diplomatic relations between most of the European and Asiatic countries and Soviet Russia.

This prediction is being borne out by the developments in Europe since the opening of the New Year. Two of the most powerful nations in the world, the mighty British Empire and Italy, have granted de jure recognition to the first Workers Republic in history and this action was followed by Norway and Greece and the extension of de facto recognition by other countries. Canada, a powerful influence on the American continent, is the first country on this hemisphere to signify its intention to recognize Russia.

This is a testimony to the growing power and stability of the Soviet Republic. The capitalist nations have come to the conclusion that they cannot defeat the Workers Republic so they decide to make the best of a bad situation. In the meantime the Teapot Dome government of the United States raises its hands in horror over the state of affairs in Russia and refuses to have anything to do with the wicked Communists. It is only fair to say, however, that the present administration has been quite busy peddling the country to various hucksters and had to depend on the old fossil Gompers and the Jewish Daily Forward for most of its Russian information. Once the cabinet is de-oiled perhaps what is left of it—if there is any—might step in line and follow the example of Britain in its foreign relations.

Meanwhile the workers of Russia are proceeding nicely with the work of laying the groundwork for the establishment of a Communist society.

A skull of a more primitive shape than that of the Neanderthal man has been discovered in California. The find is puzzling scientists as no California senator has been reported missing.

The French navy, with five capital ships, has sixty-seven admirals. This is reported to be causing great unrest in the Honduran army which has only forty-two generals.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

Small and Smaller

The workingclass are constantly told during election periods that its future welfare depends on its choice of a candidate from the ranks of the capitalist parties. They always make a choice. But their condition does not show any improvement. In fact it grows worse. Its friends turn out to be enemies and its enemies never change for the better; they cannot change for the worse.

Here in the state of Illinois two rival groups in the republican party are at each other's throats over the spoils of office. Governor Small, with as unsavory a record as any public official who ever held office in this state is opposed by another gang of blackhearted crooks and anti-labor open shoppers. Both factions are controlled by the enemies of labor.

Until quite recently the American Federation of Labor in this state was committed to independent political action. The leaders of the movement sponsored a Farmer-Labor Party which attempted to rally the workers under its banner on the political field against all the parties of capitalism, alleged friends and open foes.

The workers were slowly gaining confidence in themselves. The capitalist parties could see the day approaching when grafting labor officials could no longer barter the labor vote at election time.—But a change has taken place. Those who in the recent past sponsored the Farmer-Labor Party movement have now betrayed it and are eating from the capitalist trough along with the consistent reactionaries who have always looked on the labor movement as their legitimate prey.

The executive committee of the Illinois Federation of Labor has endorsed Small and now the leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor, John Fitzpatrick and Edward N. Nockels, respectively president and secretary, have issued a public statement calling on the members of organized labor to support Small in the primaries on April 8.

The only ray of light in this discreditible situation is the resolution that was passed by the Cook County branch of the Farmer-Labor Party urging the workers to stay away from the republican and democratic primaries next week, and severely criticising the purchaseable labor leaders who have espoused the Small candidacy.

Governor Small has a record that fits exactly with his name but he is a moral giant compared with those leaders who have betrayed their principles and turned their backs on the movement for Farmer-Labor political action, which they helped to bring into existence. They are a million times smaller than Small.

Lewis Changes His Mind

John L. Lewis is International President of the United Mine Workers of America. His brother George is a member of the Legislative Committee of the union. The political atmospheric current generated by brother John is as agreeable to the sense of smell as that caused by the presence of a skunk. His brother did not follow in the footsteps of Caesar's wife. Suspicion sticks to him like the smell of a raw onion. But that has nothing to do with the story except by way of introduction.

Recently Mr. George Lewis appeared at the White House to inform President Coolidge that the United Mine Workers of America would not look with favor on the appointment of Judge A. B. Anderson, of Indianapolis, to succeed Judge Francis E. Baker as judge of the United States Circuit Court. Judge Anderson was the author of one of the most vicious injunctions in the history of the American labor movement directed against the United Mine Workers Union in the year of 1919, restraining the union and its officials from using the funds of the organization to aid the great coal strike that was then going on.

It was then John L. Lewis made the declaration that "we cannot fight the government" and was branded a coward by Samuel Gompers for declining the fight.

Something happened after Mr. George Lewis visited Coolidge. It was authoritatively stated in Washington that Lewis was slated to be the Coolidge running mate on the republican ticket in the next election. Hardly had the rumor time to filter out when John L. Lewis appeared in Washington and announced that the United Mine Workers of America has no opposition to the appointment of Mr. Anderson the strikebreaker. It seems that further comment would be superfluous. But this gives a nice picture of Mr. John L. Lewis.

The Y. M. C. A. is planning to erect a building in South Chicago. Judge Elbert H. Gary has contributed $300,000 to the fund of $750,000 which is being raised. He knows what he is doing. A Y. M. C. A. dope factory in the vicinity of his steel mills will help to keep the slaves gazing in the general direction of where Jesus is supposed to live. While they are looking upwards the Judge, aided by experts from the Coolidge administration, can go thru their pockets.

William Randolph Hearst says that Daugherty got the gate because of his vigor in prosecuting Standard Oil. At the same time Mr. Hearst's literary monkey, Arthur Brisbane, uses up half his daily column singing the praises of the Rockefellers. How the pair must laugh!

Frank A. Vanderlip wants a housecleaning in the republican and democratic parties. We are in favor of that and after some degree of sanitation is attained, the process should be topped off with a successful surgical operation, with both patients waking up in heaven.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

* * * *

The Liberty Guards.

ONE of these companies was the Liberty Guards, as commander of which John Brown first received his historic title of Captain. Besides four of Brown's stalwart sons, there were fourteen other Free State settlers, and they were present at the first attempted raid on Lawrence, which had resulted in a compromise and an abortive "treaty."

Captain John Brown had gathered his men, and was on the way to Lawrance for the second time when they were informed by a messenger that Lawrence had already been destroyed. The Border Ruffians had captured the town without meeting any resistance, and razed it to the ground, the breathless courier reported. This startling news was received in a bitter silence by the little company. They pushed in, nevertheless, and encamped near Prairie City, hearing from passing stragglers further reports of burnings, killings and drunken threats of the Southern invaders.

Border Ruffians Active.

It was a period of great excitement. The Kansans felt as if war had commenced in earnest on them, and that they were to be wiped out. Some of the men who lived on the Pottawatomie Creek, near Dutch's Crossing, heard reports that their women had been threatened by a group of the toughest pro-slavery ruffians who lived there.

"We expect to be butchered, every Free State settler in our region," one of these men told John Brown.

Here was a story John Brown heard a few days before from the lips of a pretty young girl named Mary Grant, a settler's daughter in the region:

"Dutch Bill arrived at our house, horribly drunk, with a whisky bottle with a corncob stopper, and with an immense butcher knife in his belt. Mr. Grant, my father, was sick in bed, but when they told him that Bill Sherman was coming, he had a shot gun put by his side. 'Old woman,' said the ruffian to my mother, 'you and I are pretty good friends, but damn your daughter, I'll drink her heart's blood.' My little brother Charley succeeded in cajoling the drunken man away."

Reprisals Begin.

An old settler named Morse was hung and let down again by this same group of ruffians. Then they threatened to kill him with an axe, but his little boys set up a terrible wailing, and begged for his life. The ruffians spared him, but gave him until sundown to leave the community. He wandered in the brush for two or three days with his children, frightened to death, and finally died of the excitement.

There were other such tales, including one horrible story of a similar attack on a woman in childbirth. The ruffians had also put up a notice, advising every Free State settler to leave the community in thirty days or have his throat cut.

John Brown and his men discussed this matter, and grimly decided to "do something to show these barbarians we have some rights." They moved down that night on the Pottawatomie, and calling out the five men who had done most of the killing, threatening and burning down of houses in the region, executed them as a measure of self-defense.

John Brown Guerilla Captain.

It was a bloody, stern act, but it proceeded out of the same inflamed spirit with which the miners at Herrin recently shot down the armed strikebreakers who had had been brought into their section. Many, including some sympathetic historians like Oswald Garrison Villard, have condemned this brutal deed, and have called it a stain on John Brown's life. Murder is murder, and it cannot be defended on ethical or logical grounds. But when a thug assails one with a gun, or threatens one's wife and children, is one to practice non-resistance on him? Is his life more valuable than one's own? In such moments men do not think, they act as nature tells them to; even a Villard would refuse to yield up his life to a thug; he would forget logic and ethics, and defend himself. And that is what John Brown did; his act was a stern and immediate answer to the long-continued murders and threats against the Free State men of Kansas. It shook the territory to its foundations, and it made of John Brown a hunted outlaw. Thereafter he grew no more corn and built no more cabins for his family; he was a guerilla captain in the field.

Oriental Peoples Grieved For Lenin's Death; Soviet Policy Forges Bonds of Unity In East

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW (by mail).—The following is an excerpt from Leo Kameneff's speech, of January 30, at the Second All-Union Congress of Soviets, being a part of the Soviet Government's report to the Congress. Referring to the Soviet Union's Oriental policy, the Acting President of the Council of People's Commissaries said, in part:

"You know that our Oriental policy may be put in a very few words: constant friendship with the oppressed nations of the East was and still is immutably the slogan of the Soviet Government Friendship with Oriental peoples, striving at an independent national development, is not the result of such or other policy of the day: it is one of the fundamentals of the general policy of the Soviet power, it is its token.

Don't Barter Friendship.

"Brotherly sympathy with the Eastern nations, fraternal assistance to them in the cause of the powerful movement which is bound to bring about the era of national independence and emancipation of these nations—are laid out at the very base of the policy of the Soviet Power. (Loud applause). Differently from all the other governments, we do not bargain this friendship, we do not barter or sell it, we transact no deals with it.

"On the occasion of the terrible grief that has befallen us and all toiling masses we have received thousands of messages of every description. However, those received from the Orient are especially in grief.

"The following words were said, among other speeches made in the Turkish Parliament: 'Lenin's death has grieved us all. This great man has stood by us, assisted us, in our blackest hours and ever wished us success in our fight for independence. Lenin never missed an opportunity to welcome our National Assembly.' The speaker concluded by moving the despatch of a condolence telegram, most warmly worded. One of the next speakers, Deputy Djelal Nurim, added that 'when our people were living thru their hardest days, Lenin stretched out his hand to us. His letters and telegrams were ever a source of encouragement for us.'

Straightforward Oriental Policy.

"Such utterances," continues Mr. Kameneff, "are the prize of an open and straightforward policy of assistance rendered to and friendship with the peoples of the East, and this tribute surely is the best token of the correctness and far-sightedness of our policy. The history will forever record that, in the black days of the liberative struggle of the Oriental people, Lenin stretched out a brotherly hand to them, and this shall also be a precept for our further policy." (Applause).

The acting president of the Council of P. O. of the U. S. S. R. then reports that "from far-off China, we have received, over the signature of Sun Yat Sen, the leader of the democratic forces of China, a telegram whose contents are characteristic, I would say, of a new historic era introducing new facts into history, which at the same time serve as precepts of our policy Dr. Sun Yat Sen's message reads.

"'Resolved that the Kuomintang, assembled in National Congress, record its profound sorrow at the death of Comrade Lenin, whose work as chief architect of New Russia is at this moment inspiring the minds and purpose of the Congress in its principal task of making the Party a national instrument for the unification of China and for the advancement and welfare of the Chinese People under democratic institutions; and as a mark of respect the Congress stands adjourned for three days.'

Russia's Program.

"We are proud, declares Mr. Kameneff, "that our leader inspires, in remote China the forces of a democratic nation onto a new liberative work. This precept we shall never abandon. And so again do I repeat: the tenor of our policy is, friendship with all the nations of the world, brotherly sympathy for the oppressed peoples, business and peaceful relations with all the governments." (Loud applause).

Argentina Workers Pensioned on Full Pay After 25 Years

BUENOS AIRES, March 31.—All persons in Argentina who have labored for 25 years are pensioned to the extent of their present salaries, as the result of a new pension law, President Marcelo T. De Alvear has officially announced.

The workers themselves, however, must supply half of the pension fund by donating to it 5 per cent of their salaries, the other half being supplied by the employers, who also donate 5 per cent of the amount of their payrolls. The law, which was bitterly opposed by the employers, is to take effect in two months.

18 WORKERS LOST LIVES WHEN BOSS VIOLATED LAWS

Criminal Negligence by Explosive Firm Bared

(By The Federated Press.)

TRENTON, N. J.—March 31.—Eighteen workers killed and 200 injured by explosion! Oh, no, the company was not to blame, it was much more interested in protecting its employes than in piling up profits—at least according to the company officials and capitalist newspapers. The workers who escaped say the company was responsible, do they? Well, that's only red propaganda. . . . That was the story at the Nixon plant of the Ammonite Company, on March 8.

Law Was Violated.

Now comes the report of Dr. Martin Szamatolski, consulting chemist New Jersey department of labor, declaring that the company was carrying on dangerous operations just before the explosion which were very different from those in progress when the plant was inspected and approved on Jan. 1. "It would be idle to speculate on the true causes of the explosion," the expert reports, "beyond the fact that it was due to gross negligence and violation of the law."

The report of State Labor Commissioner Andrew F. McBride which includes the Szamatolski report, has forced Prosecutor Joseph E. Stricker, of Middlesex county, to summon the grand jury in special session to fix responsibility. Gov. Silzer may have to act upon Commissioner McBride's recommendations and call a special session of the state legislature to revise the laws governing manufacture and storage of explosives.

MOVEMENT FOR SHORT WORKDAY AT STANDSTILL

Workday Outside New York Lengthens

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Generally speaking the movement for a shorter week in New York state stands today almost exactly where it stood in December, 1921, altho outside New York City the number of men on an eight-hour day has been reduced from somewhat over a half in 1921 to less than a half in 1923.

More than 60 per cent of the factory workers of New York state have a working week of 48 hours or less, according to the chief statistician of the state department of labor. He bases his report on information from 1,300 manufacturing establishment employing over 400,000 workers.

Workers in New York City.

Wage earners in New York City where organized labor is strong have made the greatest progress toward the shorter working week while the detailed figures indicate that many employers by moving to small upstate towns have succeeded in putting off the day when they must conform to union conditions. The report says:

"Over 80 per cent of the factory workers in New York City have a basic working week of 4 hours or less, and one-third have a 44-hour week. Up state the working week is longer. Not quite half the men and somewhat fewer of the women worked 48 hours a week and the 44-hour week was almost unknown. A substantial proportion of the men upstate work over 54 hours as compared with almost none in New York City. Two-thirds of the women upstate work 49, 50 and 51 hours a week."

The figures shows that 31,785 men in factories outside New York City are still working more than 54 hours a week and that 59,455 out of 207,844 or 28 1-2 per cent work more than 52 hours a week.

Figures Tell Tale.

The following table shows for the state as a whole the proportion of workers in different industries working the various basic weeks:

INDUSTRY—	—Hours— 48 or less	49 to 54	Over 54
Stone, Clay and glass....	18.1%	54.7%	27.2%
Metals, machinery, etc....	54.9	33.1	12.0
Wood manufactures	45.3	42.8	11.9
Fur, leather and rubber..	76.6	20.7	2.7
Chems., oils, paints, etc.	65.1	31.9	3.0
Paper	75.1	18.7	6.2
Printing and paper goods	79.3	20.6	0.1
Textiles	48.0	46.8	5.2
Clothing, millinery, etc.	65.2	33.9	0.9
Food, bever. and tobacco	45.4	37.8	16.8
Water, light and power..	46.4	27.0	26.6
Total	61.7%	30.9%	7.4%

The iron and steel industry in New York proves to be still very much in the reactionary class with 86 1-2 per cent of its employes working over 54 hours a week. According to the report a large proportion of them worked 60 and 72 hours a week. Only 5.7 per cent have secured a week of 48 hours or less.

Hours of Labor.

In the manufacture of machinery approximately 69 per cent of the workers are on a week of 48 hours or less. In the automobile industry 43 per cent work 48 hours or less and 33.5 per cent work from 49 to 51 hours per week. In the manufacture and repair of railroad rolling stock approximately 60 per cent of the workers have a basic 48-hour week.

The shoe industry in New York appears particularly progressive with 93.1 per cent of its employes working a basic week of 48 hours or less. In the manufacture of paper 75.1 per cent of the employes work a straight 48-hour week.

In textile industry 72 per cent of the silk workers and 80.8 per cent of the cotton mill workers on a 48-hour week basis as compared with only 16.5 per cent of the employes of woolen mills working the shorter week. Approximately 56 per cent of the employes of the woolen industry still work from 52 to 54 hours a week.

Workers who have led in establishing the 44-hour week include the fur workers with 100 per cent of their number on that basis, printing and bookmaking with 54.6 per cent, mens' clothing with 77.1 per cent and women's clothing with 75.1 per cent.

Prison-Made Reliance Shirts.

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 31.—Tho defeated in the senate the resolution cancelling the prison contract of the Reliance Shirt Factory with the Oklahoma state penitentiary has apparently agitated the members of the state board of affairs. The chairman of the board has declared that the shirt factory proposition will be investigated thoroly. The house resolution charged that the state was losing $70,000 annually on the contract and cited the fact that $10,000 had been donated to the campaign funds of the governor and attorney general by the prison contract people.

PLAN PROVING HARDING ELECTION CONSPIRACY

State's Attorney's Kidnaping Stunt Blows Up

BEALIS FREED WHEN CROWE PLOT FAILS

Witnesses Spoiled Frame-Up Against Strike Official

The state's attorney's office admitted yesterday that it had no evidence on which to either hold or prefer a charge against Morris Bealis, manager of the Chicago Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in connection with the alleged shooting at the home of Nicholas Kovler, garment manufacturer, last Saturday.

When Judge Frederick De Young ordered the state's attorney's men to bring Bealis into court on a writ of habeas corpus, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe's dicks admitted they could not connect him in any way with the shooting and the judge ordered his release.

Witnesses Refused to Frame Bealis.

The detectives said that they had arrested Bealis in order to question him and that they were unable to get any evidence from him. They said they also wanted to have him looked over by persons who claim to have seen the men who are alleged to have done the shooting. Two persons who came to identify Bealis were certain he was not the man they saw.

Bealis was arrested Monday noon in his office on West Van Buren St., and taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning. When the lawyers for Bealis went to Judge De Young to ask for a writ, the state's attorney's men agreed to let him go within an hour. They failed to keep their promise and the union attorney went to Judge Voight and demanded a habeus corpus writ. Voight made the writ returnable yesterday at 9:00 a. m., and when the hearing was held Bealis was ordered released.

Bealis was held in the East Chicago Ave., police station from Monday evening till Tuesday morning.

Fear to "Gold Fish" Bealis.

Detectives who began with browbeating tactics changed their tune for the joint board head refused to answer their questions while he was illegally held without any criminal charge against him. Detectives gave up and did not attempt to use the usual tactics of the "gold fish" room where prisoners are beaten and tortured by applying lighted cigar ends to the most sensitive parts of their bodies.

When Bealis was first arrested Attorney W. G. Rickert, for the union, served notice on the state's attorney's office that no "sweatbox" tactics would be tolerated.

8 More Injunction Arrests.

Eight more strikers were arrested on attachments for contempt of Judge "Dennis" Sullivan's order not to picket. They were: Rose Onofrio, Wanda Kaletta, Rose Printz, Mary Siegel, Anna Berenbaum, Lillian Greenberg, Eva Jacobs and Jennie Miller.

Alma Jones, the first colored girl striker tried for contempt of court because she picketed was tried, found

Prosecution Pleads For More Time In Ruthenberg's Trial

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 1.—Charles E. White, Justice of the Court of Appeals, today granted further extension of time in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, convicted in connection with the Bridgman convention for "assembling with" the Communist Party.

The defense attorneys have had papers on appeal ready for six months but the prosecution has asked for delay from month to month on the ground that other cases had interfered with their examination of the record of the Ruthenberg case submitted by the defense.

The present indications are that the court of appeals will not get the case before next fall.

C. E. Ruthenberg, when interviewed by the DAILY WORKER on the status of the case remarked "Daugherty who initiated the 'Red Raid' in Bridgman, has lost his job and I am not in prison yet."

LET LUDENDORFF GO BUT CONVICT HIS FOLLOWERS

8 Sentenced for Munich Beer Cellar Plot

MUNICH, April 1.—General Ludendorff was acquitted today on a charge of treason for his share in embryonic beer cellar putsch of November 1923.

Troops and special police kept people moving on the streets and broke up all gatherings of two or more, fearful of a nationalist demonstration.

Reichswehr, marching with rifles on their shoulders and "potato masher" hand grenades stuffed in their belts, prevented any outburst, however.

Of the defendants, Ludendorff was the only one completely exonerated Hitler, together with Weber, Kriebel and Poehner, was found guilty of high treason. They were fined 200 gold marks and sentenced to five years in the fortress.

The remaining defendants, Bruckner, Roehm, Parnet, Wagner and Frick, were found guilty of aiding high treason. They were fined 100 gold marks each and sentenced to 15 months imprisonment. These latter sentences were immediately commuted and the defendants will be released on probation.

Approximately 40,000 men are affected, according to union heads.

MANY ELECTIONS HELD THRUOUT U. S. YESTERDAY

Hot Municipal Fight In Milwaukee

Several elections took place thruout the country yesterday. The contest that held most interest for the workers is that which took place in Milwaukee between the present Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, Socialist, and David S. Rose, so-called nonpartisan, but actually candidate of the open shop and big business elements.

Fight On In Milwaukee.

While the Workers Party of Milwaukee severely criticised the Socialists there for their sins of commission and omission againt the working class, it at the same time upports Hoan againt the out and out anti-labor reactionary Rose. The DAILY WORKER goes to press too early to be in a position to give the returns but we publish for our readers' information the centers in which the main political battles are being waged.

The State of Wisconsin is balloting today in the primary elections with all indications pointing to an overwhelming victory for La Follette over Coolidge in the Republican contest.

Civil War In Cicero.

A small civil war raged in Cicero, Illinois, over the town elections, between the democrats and republicans. The democrats are running on a free speech platform which the present office holders have treated with contempt. The radical elements among the foreign population are siding with the democrats. The republicans have unlimbered their heavy artillery and are trying to shoot their way to victory at the polls. It is also reported that the Poles, the majority of whom are conservative, are lined up behind the republicans while the Lithuanians are the democrats.

Last night gunmen climaxed a day of beatings by attacking William K. Pflaunt, democratic candidate for town clerk; his wife and Clem Kopstein, a printer. Other depredations were committed.

In one precinct, judges and election clerks, together with fifty voters, were driven into the streets and, according to reports to John Rush, chief clerk to the election commissioner, the gangsters tampered with the ballots. The gangsters are making a systematic patrol of the voting precincts in four automobiles.

Carl M. Garver was re-elected mayor of Des Moines, Iowa, by a margin of 2,000 over his opponent; both republicans.

SMALL BACKERS FACE EXPULSION FROM F.-L. PARTY

Fitzpatrick Is Placed in Unhappy Position

Contradictory statements, charges and counter-charges are flying around in the utmost confusion as the result of the indorsement of Governor Small for the April 8th primaries, by the leading trades union officials and some of the executives of the Farmer-Labor Party. Those implicated in the inconsistent situation are trying to squirm to cover with denials and voluminous explanations. All are agreed, however, that the predicament of John Fitzpatrick, who violated the constitution of the Farmer-Labor Party by indorsing Small, is far from a happy one.

May Mean Expulsion.

Two members of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party, Cook County branch, have allowed their names to be used in circulars issued by the Len Small for Governor Wage Farmers' Campaign Committee. Thus we have the contradiction of John G. Clay and Chas. F. Wills, members of the executive board of a party whose constitution prohibits alliance with any other capitalist politicians or parties, acting on a committee with other "labor leaders," which is in charge of the "Len Small for Governor Wage Earners League."

Arthur Olsen, also a member of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party, admitted, when interviewed by the DAILY WORKER, that this situation will have to be thrashed out at the next executive board meeting, and may lead to the expulsion of some of those acting for Small.

"I don't see how a member of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party can indorse Small or any other candidate," said Olsen. "Our constitution expressly states that no member may indorse a candidate affiliated with another party. Certainly those endorsing Small are inconsistent and are violating the Farmer-Labor Party constitution."

Why Use A Goat, Fitz?

By common consent, Thomas McCabe, secretary of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party, seems to have been made the goat in the frantic efforts to save the face of John Fitzpatrick, E. Nockels, and the others who have allowed their names to be linked with Small in the primary campaign.

Despite the fact that John Fitzpatrick admitted to the DAILY WORKER that a newspaper clipping mentioning him as a signer of a communication endorsing Small, was correct, those who are trying to save the situation declare Fitzpatrick has not violated the ruling of the Farmer-Labor Party against participation in the primary.

But it was definitely stated at the Small campaign headquarters, 30 North Wells street, by Ike Volz, secretary of the campaign that, "John Fitzpatrick, Nockels, and all the labor leaders of the city have come out for the governor."

Gifford Ernst, of the Rodriguez-Ernst,, Illinois Farmer-Labor Party, gave the DAILY WORKER the following written statement: "The Farmer-Labor Party of Illinois is not responsible for the statement of Thomas McCabe, who pretends to speak as secretary of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party. His efforts to impugn the motives of all the leading trade unionists who have warned the people against the possible nomination of Essington in the Republican primaries and who are therefore

DAUGHERTY SHIELDED MILLER BROTHERS IN $500,000 LAND FRAUD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 1.—Charges that former Attorney-General Daugherty hampered him in the prosecution of a conspiracy case were made to the senate investigating committee today by H. M. Peck of Oklahoma City.

Peck, who was formerly a United States District Attorney in Oklahoma, said he was charged with failure to prosecute the Miller Brothers, owners of the famous "101 ranch," for conspiracy to defraud the government of 10,000 acres of Indian lands.

Altho he telegraphed to Daugherty that Zack and Joe Miller were going to plead guilty to obtaining the lands fraudulently, Peck said the attorney general wired back instructing him to make no recommendation to the court.

After the case of the Miller Brothers had been continued from time to time on instructions of Daugherty, Peck said both Zack and Joe Miller pleaded guilty to the charges and paid fines amounting to $7,000.

Despite the plea of guilty to obtaining the 10,000 acres of Indian land by fraud, Peck said no suits have been instituted to recover them. The land, he said, was valued at $50 an acre.

Rush D. Simmons, chief postal inspector, will be placed on the stand to explain to the committee why he removed Inspector Donaldson from probing land operations of Creager.

Joint Board Head Tells Daily Worker Of Jail Experience

After Morris Bealis, chairman of the Chicago Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, had deloused himself from the effects of the night in a filthy cell of the East Chicago Avenue police station, he returned to his duties at the offices of the Union at 328 W. Van Buren street.

He told a DAILY WORKER reporter that Assistant State's Attorney John Sbarbro began questioning him roughly but that he refused to answer any question unless his attorney was present. Sbarbro refused admittance to the attorney, W. G. Rickert, who had gotten on the job immediately.

When Sbarbro heard Rickert was asking for a habeas corpus writ he went before Judge Voight and had the writ returnable the following morning on the pretext that he wanted to question Bealis during the night. The insincerity of this excuse is seen by the fact that Bealis was shoved into a cell and the door locked without the detectives attempting to question him further.

On Bealis' release in court yesterday morning Crowe's man began to bluster, saying that the state's attorney would hold him (Bealis) personally responsible for any union slugging. Bealis retorted that the only slugging in this strike is by the police and employers' agents.

DAUGHERTY'S SHARE HAMON FUND $25,000

Committee to Get Proof of 1920 Conspiracy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The late Jake Hamon gave former Att'y General Daugherty $25,000 at the 1920 republican national convention, R. H. Wilson, of Oklahoma City, today declared in testifying before the senate oil committee that Hamon told him.

The money was paid over because the republican national committee was "broke," Wilson said Hamon explained.

Buying Secretaryship.

Wilson's testimony purported to bear out the charge of Al Jennings, reformed bandit, that Hamon spent a large sum to nominate the late President Harding in the hope of getting the secretaryship of the nation.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh declared at the senate oil committee hearing he expected to prove that a conspiracy led to appointment of "a secretary of interior" and subsequent lease of the government naval oil reserves thru that appointment.

Walsh, during a discussion in the committee, told Standfield, Oregon republican, that he intended to produce witnesses to bear out his charge.

It was the first time Walsh had pledged himself to furnish such proof and came after republican senators Stanfield and Spencer had declared that up to this time only rumors have been brought forward to substantiate any such charge.

$5,000 Bail For Sinclair.

Bail for Harry F. Sinclair, indicted for contempt of the senate oil committee, was set today at $5,000 by Justice Hitz of the district supreme court.

Sinclair has not yet appeared. If he does not present himself shortly a warrant for his arrest will be issued.

While bail arrangements were being made for Harry F. Sinclair, the senate oil committee again took up its inquiry today.

Two witnesses who were presumed to know something of the reported dealings of oil interests for the secretaryship of interior at the 1920 republican national convention were scheduled to take the stand.

R. H. Wilson, once a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Oklahoma, and W. L. Kistler, oil promoter of Tulsa, were called.

No Word From Sinclair.

Meantime, Payton Gordon, district attorney, awaited some official word from Sinclair, indicted yesterday on ten counts charging contempt of the senate in his refusal to answer questions put to him by the investigating committee.

Both the government and the Sinclair attorneys want a speedy trial and it is possible that it may be begun before criminal proceedings against the principals in the oil scandal are begun before a grand jury here a week from Thursday.

Process servers have as yet been unable to locate William Boyce Thompson, who had charge of finances in the last republican campaign.

"I would, of course, consider it should it be offered me, but I believe that is highly improbable."

two weeks after the convention as follows:

"I met Mr. Hamon in the lobby of a hotel in Oklahoma City. We were all interested in his work. I just told him 'I see you put it over.' He said 'Yes, I had good luck, I got what I went after.' I asked him how he did it. He said the committee was broke and he made it up."

Senator Walsh asked Wilson if Hamon referred to Harding's campaign fund.

"Yes, he said he gave $25,000 to the fund thru Harry Daugherty. He didn't say, however, just what he expected to gain by it."

Cross questioning by senators Spencer, Missouri, republican, and Stanfield, Oregon, republican, failed to shake the witness' story. He was then excused.

J. E. Dyche, of Oklahoma City, campaign manager for Hamon when Hamon was fighting Jim McGraw for a place on the Republican National Committee, was then called to the stand by Senator Stanfield.

Dyche said he is now a prohibition agent.

Was Hamon's Manager.

"Hamon came to me in 1920 and asked me to manage his campaign," Dyche said. "I was a delegate and chairman of the Oklahoma delegation later at the republican national convention.

"We started to elect a joint General Wood-Hamon delegation, but Wood broke away from Hamon early in the fight. We then asked for selection of the delegates personally for Hamon.

"We pledged ourselves to Lowden of Illinois," he said.

"Did you read Al Jennings' story in which he said that Hamon asked him to run for governor in 1920?" Senator Stanfield asked.

"Yes, that's all bunk."

Spencer then asked him what he thought of Jennings' statement that Hamon had given $250,000 to the late Senator Boise Penrose of Pennsylvania and sums to other politicians, including Harry Daugherty.

"It is not true. Jake didn't like to spend his own money and he couldn't have done it very well without me knowing about it."

Says He Spent Hamon Funds.

"What do you think of Jennings' story that Hamon paid a million dollars to Daugherty, Penrose and Will Hays?" Stanfield asked.

"I don't think there is anything to it. If he could have done it he would not have done it because he wasn't in the habit of giving money away."

Dyche said he himself had spent Hamon's money in the campaign over the delegation "and I'll say we didn't spend very much."

Walsh asked Dyche about Wilson's testimony.

"Wilson is a reputable citizen whom I would believe but I think Hamon must have been kidding him," Dyche said. "Sometimes Jake's conversation got rather loose when he was talking to democrats."

"How much money was spent in Hamon's campaign against McGraw?" Walsh asked.

"I'll pull the cover off and tell if you want me to, but I think [illegible] was Jake's personal affair.

"Jake spent about $20,[illegible] I spent about $80,000—of course it was all his money," Dyche said.

"Was any of that $105,000 spent for corruption and fraud?" Spencer asked.

"Absolutely not."

The committee then adjourned until tomorrow.

Chairman Ladd today issued a new subpoena for William Boyce Thompson, finance chairman for the republican national committee in 1920. It calls for him to appear "forthwith."

A prior subpoena issued for Thompson several weeks ago has not been served, due to inability to locate the politician.

Free Sinclair on $5,000 Bail.

WASHINGTON, April 1—Harry F. Sinclair, accompanied by three lawyers, appeared before Justice Hitz of the district supreme court here today and pleaded "not guilty" of contempt of the senate, as charged in indictments returned against him.

Sinclair asked the court, however, for permission to withdraw the plea within ten days and institute whatever proceedings his lawyers advise. It is understood a demurrer may be filed.

Sinclair gave bond of $5,000 for his appearance at trial.

Paterson Unions To Back Showing Of "Polikushka"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PATERSON, N. J., April 1.—At a conference of representatives of many workers organizations held here to consider plans for the relief of German workers, it was arranged to show the Russian film "Polikushka" at the Paterson High School Auditorium on May 2nd. The campaign for the relief of German workers is in full swing in Paterson. Last week a concert and mass meeting in Carpenter Hall was addressed by Comrade Herman Nuding from Germany.

Those co-operating in the German relief work include Associated Silk Workers, Butchers Union 454, Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Workers Party, and several German organizations.

Washington, D. C.--A Walled City Whose Stench of Corruption Is Enough to Overwhelm Nation

By JULIAN STREET

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Like Jericho of old, Washington is a walled city, but the hosts of Israel have only begun to march around it and the wall still stands.

Thru the city gates travellers pass freely, with the eyes of sleuths upon them; the mails come and go, tho letters are in some cases mysteriously opened and re-sealed before delivery; the telegraph and telephone connect the city with the world outside, tho both are said to leak at times.

Some truth, to be sure, does escape thru the wall, but truth outside of Washington does not look the same as truth inside. The Washington eye is not constructed like the ordinary human eye, but sees as normal many things which to the eye of an outsider appear grotesquely improbable.

I have been here two weeks and in that time have undergone a disillusionment profound and painful. I have been disillusioned about many things, but most of all I am staggered by the knowledge that every hotel bell boy and every taxi driver in Washington knew on March 4, 1921, what I have only lately learned, namely, that to the affairs of federal government, the morals and methods of a corrupt town council have been applied.

To what extent does the public outside the wall realize this? I am inside the wall and do not know. I judge that confidence has been shaken by the Daugherty disclosures, but I gravely doubt that the public is prepared for the further disclosures that are inevitable.

There have, of course, been partisan attacks upon the Republican party and some of these have not been justified; nevertheless prominent Republicans of the more progressive type say the party needs purging as it never needed it before and feel it is incumbent upon the Republican party to take the bitter dose voluntarily rather than have the dose forced down its throat by a democratic doctor who hopes the medicine will kill the patient.

Truth Stronger than Fiction.

One lesson certain to be learned by the innocent outlander visiting Washington, brought into the slightest contact with the official world, is that in Washington the incredible is sometimes true. He will discover for instance, as I did, that there is truth in the highly colorful tales one hears of spying and counter-spying by detectives.

Senators, congressmen, newspapermen and secret service agents will assure you that "the hill," as the Capitol is called, has been thoroly investigated.

Offices of Senator La Follette and others are said to have been broken into and rifled, the object of the game being to "get something on" the men chiefly concerned in the investigations. Sleuths have also been sent to the home towns of some of the more active foes of official principals and it is freely reported that in at least one instance a woman was used for the purpose of compromising a gentleman of tendencies too critical.

One member of the cabinet complained to the President some time ago that he was being shadowed and otherwise molested.

Espionage in its more rough and Russian forms evolved during the war, doubtless because of urgent necessity, developed practices unheard of in the old time secret service. These practices have been continued and a notable feature of them is to be found in the fact that honest men seem lately to have received more attention than lawbreakers. It is, of course, comparatively easy to "get something on" a lawbreaker, but not so easy to "get something" on honest men.

"Shadows" In Abundance.

If honest men were as timid as groundhogs, few of them would be here, for many honest men in Washington see their shadows every day. Thus, for example, the Washington residence of Frank A. Vanderlip, who has been of such great assistance to the senatorial committee investigating Mr. Daugherty, is continually under surveillance and Mr. Vanderlip is shadowed in all his goings and comings. He has even spoken to his shadow once or twice.

To those contemplating a trip to Washington in the interests of clean government, I am able to give these helpful hints:

Bring your talking machine with you and play it in your hotel room while holding confidential conversations. It nullifies the operation of the dictaphone.

If you have three telephone bells on one line wire, tappers cannot operate.

Have confidential letters addressed to some one other than yourself, who will turn them over to you.

Do not try to hide important papers in your room when you go out. They look under the mattress too.

Do not be deceived because you thought your papers have not apparently been disturbed. They photostated them.

NEGRO AUDIENCE JOINS TENANTS LEAGUE IN BODY

Race Equality Demand Voiced by Speakers

A large and enthusiastic audience Monday night, unanimously joined the Negro Tenant's Protective League, at the first mass meeting held by the league at 3335 South State St. It was announced that the next meeting will be held in a large church which has been donated by a South Side minister. The time and place of the next meeting will be announced later.

Robert Minor, editor of the Liberator, and greatly beloved of the Black Race, provoked continuous outbursts of applause by his plea for social and economic equality of the Negro. "You are supposed to have social equality in Chicago," Minor told his Negro audience, "But try to eat dinner in the Blackstone Hotel and see how quickly they throw you out."

Seeds of Murder.

"Those who are discriminating socially are planting the seeds of murder and race hatred. Segregation of the Negro in prescribed districts is a political power. The czar of Russia did the same thing to the Jews before the Russian revolution, telling them where they could and where they could not live. Now the Chicago landlords are trying to exercise that power over the Negroes.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman, of the Chicago Defender, pointed out that the Tenant's League is a purely working class organization.

"The Negro not only pays the highest rent, but he receives the lowest wages. The best way to curb the rent hog is for the league to organize the tenants of the South Side to go out on a rent strike, and refuse to pay high rents and refuse to move," said Otto Huiswood of New York.

Praise Daily Worker.

D. E. Early said he hoped the time would come when the slums of Federal St., could be burned down, and all the Negroes of the South Side could move over to Michigan Blvd.

The speakers praised the DAILY WORKER for their activity in reporting Negro news and advertising the Negro Tenant's League.

BEALIS IS FREED WHEN CROWE'S PLOT BLOWS UP

Frameup Against Strike Official Fails

guilty, and sentenced to 15 days in jail and $200 fine.

Hot Air From "Dennie."

The judge in delivering the sentence made a speech in which he got off some of his venom against workers who strike against their employers.

It has been the regular court practice in all other contempt cases up till this one to permit the defense and the prosecution to sum up the evidence presented, before the judge passes sentence. This time Judge Sullivan beat both sides to it—denied the defendants their rights—and imposed the sentence and delivered his lecture before anyone had a chance to say anything.

William Seiden of the firm of Stein and Seiden, dress manufacturers at 212 S. Market street, said that he had seen Miss Jones in front of his place of business every day. I. W. Stokes, a police officer who was one on the street all the time, said that he only saw Miss Jones picket twice.

Colored Striker's Fine Story.

Then Miss Jones was called to the stand to defend herself. She said that she had picketed and that she had spoken to colored scabs. She said that she spoke to them in order to try to show them they were their own enemies and were dragging down the standard of living of all garment workers by refusing to strike.

Miss Jones told her story in a simple, straightforward, earnest fashion. Then Leo LeBosky cross-examined her. He was intent on finding who had told Miss Jones to picket and who had told her where to picket. Miss Jones told him she had brains enough to know where to picket.

"Why did you picket at 212 S. Market street?" LeBosky asked.

Had Message for Colored Girls

"Because there were a lot of colored girls working there. I am a colored girl and I wanted to talk with them," Miss Jones told him.

"Yeh, we can see you are colored, but who told you to go there?"

For five minutes LeBosky kept at that question of who sent her to picket.

"Do you believe in God? Do you know you are under oath? Do you know what that means?" LeBosky shot at her.

LeBosky's attempts to rattle Miss Jones failed and she told him simply that she did believe in God, knew what an oath meant and was telling the truth.

"Dennie" Feeds His Face.

Then LeBosky gave up his examination, the judge passed sentence and delivered his speech. The speech was cut off when it came time to recess for lunch. No overtime in "Dennie's" court.

Miss Jones' sentence will be appealed, if necessary, to the state supreme court.

Pasty Faced Dick on Stand.

Frank Fuller, a pasty faced private dick employed by the Soule Secret Service at 139 N. Clark street, and Sergeant Patrick Collins of the state's attorney's office, were the principal witnesses against girl garment striker in Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's court yesterday afternoon.

Fuller, who brazenly swore that he was sold by his firm to the C. H Lowenthal Company at 224 S. Market street, which is trying to crush the strike, took the stand against Freda Reicher, Lena Moritz and Jennie Lieberman, and testified that he had seen them frequently walking the pavement in front of the Lowenthal shop.

Slugger's Eyes Drop.

The "slugger's" eyes dropped when Miss Lieberman faced him. It is only a few days ago that Fuller beat up Miss Lieberman under the protection of some of Mayor Dever's policemen. Miss Lieberman afterwards obtained a warrant against her assailant from Magistrate Trude.

Judge Sullivan gladly accepted the "slugger's" testimony—the beating up of the girl being an incident in the line of the same strike-breaking duty that is engaging Sullivan himself.

Freedom For Ireland Only.

Pat Collins, brother of the late Michael Collins, former president of the Irish Free State and himself an ardent advocate of freedom—for Ireland—also did his bit towards crushing freedom in America. Collins swore that each of the three girls had picketed in front of the Lowenthal shop. (Collins, by the way, boasts of having made more than 70 arrests in this strike.)

Sullivan sentenced Miss Reicher to 30 days and a $200 fine, Miss Lieberman to 30 days and Miss Moritz to 20 days and $200.

The cases are being appealed and execution of sentence is delayed.

Decision was reserved in the case of Bessie Katz, Olga Garich, Joe Kravitz, Isador Kregger and Sarah Dorf whose cases came before Sullivan in the afternoon in contempt proceedings. The case of the eight strikers taken on injunction attachments in the morning was set for today.

Seven more pickets were arrested by the police late in the afternoon. The arrested pickets are: Anna Jaffon, Alice Grooze, Esther Friedman, Helen Weiss, Ann Harvey, Arthur Ryback and Louise Hughin.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Grand Lodge Officials Active In Aiding War on Militants In Toledo Local 105, I. A. of M.

By ANDREW OVERGAARD.

TOLEDO, O., April 1.—By a vote of 59 to 46 seven members of Local 105 of the International Association of Machinists were fined $50.00 and disfranchised for one year for membership in the Workers Party and T. U. E. L. The vote occurred on the report of the trial committee appointed to hear the evidence and defense of the following members: T. F. Chapman, Clarence Buhler, Joe Willnecker, Walter Harris, T. Cook, Chas. Weber, and Chas. Stevenson.

A motion made to give the writer, who defended the accused in the trial, the floor as a member of the I. A. of M. was ruled out of order by the chairman. Appeal from his decision was also overruled by this same tool of reactionary officials, who stated "No damn appeals goes here!"

Gauthier Assails Negroes.

Grand Lodge Organizer Gauthier spoke for some time and assailed the left wing. He especially attacked one section of the program of the Workers Party on the Negro question, calling to the members, "Do any of you Fellows want to have social equality with the niggers?" Some one in the local interrupted by stating that the Declaration of Independence says that all men are equal. He was, however, called to order by the chairman. Mr. Gauthier also assailed the DAILY WORKER for carrying a report on the trial, which in his opinion proved that this party was in opposition to the International Association of Machinists.

Brothers Willnecker and Chapman spoke in behalf of the defendants and also defended the position of the party and the Trades Union Educational League. In the closing remarks they stated, "You may separate us at this time from Local 105 and prevent us from participating in this work, but you cannot and will never separate us, as Communists, from the working class. We shall keep on the work until the ideas for which we stand have been realized by the workers of this country. We shall keep on our work in organizing machinists for Local 105, proving that we are loyal Union men, no matter what action you take tonight."

Numerous questions in regard to this case were hurled at the chair, who was at all times very nervous, and stated that the members were there to vote, that it was their privilege, but that no disturbance would be allowed.

Grand Lodge Runs Meeting.

Mr. Griffith, another organizer for the Grand Lodge, then took the floor and after having made a lengthy speech against the militants, moved the previous question, which was carried by a vote of 61 to 43. An amendment was offered for the same fine and expulsion from the Local, but was voted down by a large majority. The vote was then taken on the report of the committee in spite of the fact that the rank and file was still clamoring for the floor and for the opportunity to listen to the story of the defense.

There is no doubt that these seven members will carry on a consistent fight for their reinstatement and carry it to the convention of the International Association of Machinists, which is to be held this year. They feel that they have the right to belong to any political party they see fit without violating any section of the constitution and that this struggle is nothing but a deliberate attempt on the part of the International Organizers to check the progressive development of Local 105.

Reasons for Action.

It is well to state some of the reasons for the action and what led up to it. The action of the Local in electing the militants to a number of offices was no doubt only one of the reasons for the charges. The election was held on December 9, 1923, at which time the militants captured the following offices by an overwhelming majority: Buehler for treasurer, Harris for vice president and Chapman was only defeated by six votes as candidate for Business Agent. All important committees were practically filled by the militants, such as delegates to Labor Congresses, Central Labor Committees and Committee on Education, etc.

It is interesting to note that the Business Agent, Ebright, only received 34 votes as candidate to the Labor Congress and that Chapman received 66 votes. At this time Mr. Ebright is president of the Labor Congress. The militants were obligated to office on January 4 by International Organizer Griffith. On January 10 a meeting was called by all the members of the Local whom the reactionary officialdom were sure of controlling for the purpose of ousting the militants from office. The letters sent out were signed by Gotheir, Ebright, Griffith, Rogge and Conrad, but none of the militants were invited.

All Militants Unseated.

On January 11 a resolution was introduced calling for the unseating of all officers who are members of the Workers Party and the Trades Union Educational League. The resolution carried by a vote of 48 for and 38 against after the chairman had refused the militants more than five minutes to state their case.

On the same evening the local proceeded to elect new officers and after they were elected they were immediately obligated.

The attitude of the rank and file of Local 105 when told to participate in affairs of the local is that it is no use, because if they elect men they want to office, immediately the International Officials step in here and throw them out.

The more dangerous situation is that many members are threatening to drop their cards in the organization and it becomes one of the problems of the militants to get them to stay in the International Association of Machinists. The men involved are determined to wage a national struggle against these expulsions and suspenions and are confident that the rank and file of the International Association of Machinists will put a stop to these tactics in the coming convention. Other locals of the Machinists Union should immediately adopt resolutions protesting against these tactics of discriminating against members who hold different political opinions than the Grand Lodge officials and forward them to the Grand Lodge in Local 105, Toledo.

It has been proven in the Ladies' Garment Workers' struggle that the militants are the most loyal members when it comes to a real struggle against the bosses.

It has also been proved that by expelling the revolutionary element that the organization is in danger of being completely destroyed.

Small Backers Are Facing Expulsion From Farmer-Labor Party

urging the nomination of Governor Small, is a crude attempt to give comfort to the enemies of labor. The fact that labor leaders support Governor Small in the primaries, indicates that they desire to be consistent in matters that involve trade union principles."

Repudiates Farmer-Labor Party.

The trade union officials backing the Small for governor campaign, evidently underestimate the intelligence of the workers of Chicago. They have allowed the use of their name time and again in the public press, they have passed resolutions indorsing Governor Small, they have acted on committees and in an advisory capacity to aid the Small campaign. All this goes for John Fitzpatrick, member of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party. John Fitzpatrick has violated the constitution of the Farmer-Labor Party. He repeatedly refuses to deny that he is in favor of participation in the primaries in aid of Governor Small.

David McVey, John Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Clay, Wills and the others, were given the choice as to whether to stand loyal to the constitution of the Farmer-Labor Party, and the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party, and repudiate the Small campaign, or to repudiate the Farmer-Labor Party and indorse the notoriously disreputable Small. They chose to repudiate the Farmer-Labor Party and indorse the crooked politician.

"The expressions of Mr. McCabe were his own personal expressions," said David McVey, chairman of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party. "The Farmer-Labor Party has made no comment on persons active in the labor movement, and disclaims any responsibility for the personal comment of any individual."

McVey tried to deny that members of the executive board had indorsed Small, but the DAILY WORKER reporter showed him the proof, and he lamely said, "Well, you will have to see them."

In Solid With Gompers.

"John Fitzpatrick is between two fires," said Arthur Olsen to the DAILY WORKER. "He must be for Small because the Gompers machine is for Small. Fitzpatrick must go along with the Gompers machine or they will dump him over at the next election. He has his job to look after. Oscar Nelson and the old guard of the A. F. of L. are for Small. Fitzpatrick must stay back with them."

Fitzpatrick and Nockels are trying to ride two horses at the same time and are falling between them. The time has come when Fitzpatrick can no longer pose as a progressive. If the Farmer-Labor Party continues to carry these men along after they have violated a fundamental principle of the Farmer-Labor constitution the party will be tarring itself with the same reactionary brush and will also be aligned with disreputable politicians.

Another prominent official of the Farmer-Labor Party, who did not want his name mentioned, for fear of incurring animosity of the Fitzpatrick-Gompers machine, said laughingly, "I am sorry for John Fitzpatrick. He has muddled in his usual muddling way into a difficult situation. Now let's see how he can muddle out of it."

Supreme Court Opens.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 1.—The April term of the Illinois supreme court convened this afternoon. A number of important cases are on the advisement docket and opinions may be handed down at adjournment.

BURNS MUST GO!

Many Elections Are Being Held Truout the United States

as returns from the municipal elections showed a landslide for most of the candidates said to have the backing of the Klan. The republicans won nearly every office.

The Illinois primary elections have been the hottest in the history of the state. Three republican factions are tearing the hide off each other. The big fight for nomination for governor on the republican ticket is between Small and Essington. The Chicago Tribune and Daily News are for Essington. Small is posing as a "friend of labor" and has the endorsement of the labor fakers, tho the governor was placed on the unfair list by the Central Labor Council of Kankakee and is as contemptible a grafter as ever disgraced public office. Essington is equally bad if not worse. He is openly on the side of the Chamber of Commerce, while Small is secretly with the Big Interests tho pretending to be a man "of the people."

Labor Fakers Endorse Small.

The endorsement of Small by John Fitzpatrick has caused a division in the local Farmer-Labor Party. Fitzpatrick is now lined up politically with "Umbrella" Mike Boyle and the gangster elements in the labor movement he replaced when he was elected to his present position.

Ex-Governor Deneen is running for the senatorial nomination against Senator Medill McCormick. Deneen has the backing of Hearst and the rival gangs of grafters tell the truth about each other.

President Coolidge is expected to receive the endorsement of the republican organization for president tho Hiram Johnson will have some votes in the Illinois delegation. As first published in the DAILY WORKER about six weeks ago it is now officially stated that the chewing gum king, William Wrigley, Jr., has withdrawn financial support from Johnson.

Designation Conventions On.

Delegates to the spring designating convention of the republican and democratic parties were elected in New York today. The conventions will be held this month and will elect delegates to the national conventions. In the first district Ruth Lett, an independent, is fighting the designation of Theodore Roosevelt, as a delegate to the republican convention.

The present month will show whether Calvin Coolidge will be nominated for president on an early ballot in the republican national convention in June.

Beginning with the Wisconsin primary today, the month will be crowded with primaries and conventions for selection of delegates to that convention.

April is the biggest month in selection of convention delegates.

President Coolidge himself will get into action when on April 22 he addresses an assemblage of editors in New York.

Month of Primaries.

Connecticut will hold its convention today, and the Menry Lincoln Johnson faction in Georgia will meet. Other conventions during the month include Maine, April 3; Washington, 5; Rhode Island, 7; Illinois, 16 (following a primary on April 8); Florida, 17; Delaware, 22; Oklahoma, 23; Arizona, 28; Missouri, 29, and the Phillips faction in Georgia on April 30.

In the meantime these states will hold primaries:

Michigan, 7; Illinois, 8; Nebraska, 8; New Jersey, 22; Pennsylvania, 22; Massachusetts, 29; Ohio, 29.

Argentine Giving Retired Workers Their Full Wages

BUEANOS AIRES, April 1.—Salaries without work—a momentary millenium—came true in the Argentine today.

Under the new pensions law, effective this morning, everyone who has worked for 25 years for anyone in any capacity is entitled to toil no more and to receive the full salary he was earning at the time as a life pension.

Avery Firm Goes Broke.

PEORIA, Ill., April 1.—The Avery Company, one of the oldest and largest implement manufacturing concerns in the country, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court before Judge Fitzhenry in Bloomington this afternoon.

Liabilities are over $6,000,000 and assets over $8,000,000. Liabilities listed do not include stock and other obligations.

John W. McDowell of the Title and Trust Company, Peoria, is named receiver.

Firetrap Claims More Lives.

NEGAUNEE, Mich., April 1.—Two hospital patients and an employe lost their lives in a blaze which destroyed the City Hospital, a two-story frame structure, here late last night. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Homeless Thru Flood.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 1.—Three thousand persons in the town of Kitzmiller, Garrett county, Maryland, about 40 miles from Cumberland, were reported homeless today without food and heat and cut off from communication as a result of the Potomac River flood.

Worker Instantly Killed.

PEORIA, Ill., April 1.—George Wright, aged 35, was instantly killed at the Great Western Distillery this morning when he fell 35 feet from a scaffolding onto a pile of brick.

LABOR LEADER DENOUNCED FOR BIG BETRAYAL

Small Branded a Scab Governor

The Workers Party of District 8 (Illinois) has issued the following statement, declaring that the time is "rotten ripe for the formation of a real Farmer-Labor Party," and denouncing John Fitzpatrick and John Nockels, members of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States, for endorsing the anti-union, crooked and disreputable old party politician Len Small. The statement follows:

That the Executive Board of the Illinois State Federation of Labor in a resolution adopted, endorsed the candidacy of Governor Small for another term as Governor of the State of Illinois, and called upon the workers to vote for Governor Small in the primaries election April 8th, is no surprise to anyone. Most of the members of that executive board frankly endorse the political policy of Samuel Gompers. John H. Walker, President of the Illinois State Federation, has made himself conspicuous by his renegade policy from the socialist party to the Farmer-Labor Party, and from the Farmer-Labor Party to the tail end of the capitalist politicians. To some, however, it may appear rather shocking that John Fitzpatrick and Edward Nockels who, in the past, have posed as progressives, sponsoring a policy of independent political action of the workers, with other prominent labor men, take the same position as the State Federation of Labor, that is, to urge the workers to vote for Len Small in the April 8th primaries.

John Endorses Scab.

In this manner John Fitzpatrick has completed the swing to the capitalist parties which he began at the July 3rd Convention, at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was formed, and which further was strengthened by his action as a member of the Chicago Labor Committee on Injunctions, in endorsing the judicial candidates of the capitalists. The endorsement of Len Small for Governor, aside from the fact that he, while being a public official, was put on the unfair list by the Trades Council of his home town, Kankakee, Ill., and also aside from the fact that he, in his much praised road building program, awarded contracts of construction to non-union builders and thus helped to reduce the wages of the workers, constitutes a complete betrayal of the principles of independent political action by the workers.

Embraces Disreputable Politicians.

To the workers of the State of Illinois it should now have become clear that there can be no hope for real leadership from such labor officials, despite their progressive phrases. John Fitzpatrick has many times, in the past, within the Chicago Federation of Labor and as the spokesman for the Farmer-Labor Party stated that the workers can hope for no relief from the injustice and encroachments of capitalism before they realize the necessity of, thru their own instrument, placing their own men in public positions. Now he himself deliberately betrays this principle, severs his connections with the working masses in their struggles, not only to find a way toward their emancipation but even to gain their immediate needs. He has become entangled with the disreputable capitalist state officials and sponsored the maintenance of such a regime.

Real Labor Party Needed.

The majority of the members of the Executive Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party disagree with Fitzpatrick in that action, which only substantiates the contention repeatedly made by the Workers Party, that the workers must organize their own political party, that is, their own political instrument, and place its own candidates in the field and control the action of such candidates when elected. The need for a real class Farmer-Labor Party in the State of Illinois, which can become an integral part of the farmer-labor forces which will gather at St. Paul on June 17th for the formation of a national class Farmer-Labor Party, has become perfectly clear.

Boycott Fitzpatrick and Small.

The workers should stay away from the primaries of the democratic and republican parties. It is only a fight as to which one of the capitalist candidates shall run away with the spoils. It takes no cognizance whatever of the interests of the workers. Nothing can be expected; however, from the existing Farmer-Labor Parties while their leaders pursue such a course. The rank and file workers of the State of Illinois should compel these parties to unite with all the existing labor forces under a leadership which will pursue a class political policy. The time is rotten ripe for the formation of a real class Farmer-Labor Party.

ARNE SWABECK,
District Organizer, Workers Party.

Fink Agency Offers Its Stool Pigeons To Big Employers

(By The Federated Press)

MILWAUKEE, April 1.—Industrial espionage is sold to Milwaukee employers in the following sales letter sent out by the Howard W. Russell, Inc., secret service with offices in the Caswell block:

"Dear Mr.——: Wouldn't you like to slip into an old suit of clothes, change your entire appearance, step out and take a job right among your own employes and find out what is going on among them—learn what they say—what they do—how they think and act—how they feel about their jobs and pay—and a thousand and one other things?

"Of course you would—and when you got thru I'll wager you'd have obtained some mighty valuable information.

"Every executive I've ever met would like to do this very thing but, as you can appreciate, it is out of the question and it wouldn't pay you to do this any more than to typewrite your own letters or do your own bookkeeping. How then can it be done?—you ask. Russell Service is the answer.

"Our trained representatives, with their diversified experience will furnish you with unbiased information, suggestions and criticisms such as no one else in your organization can or will give you. They will serve as your eyes and ears out in the shop, around town—or wherever they may be—gathering any and all information of possible value to you, enabling you to best protect your interests. Unless yours is an exceptional situation, you can use Russell Service profitably.

"We will be glad to have one of our field managers call to discuss your particular situation with you and explain our service if you just draw a circle around this word 'YES' and return this letter. No obligation —and he will not 'Urge to buy.'

"Very truly yours,
"HOWARD W. RUSSELL, INC.

MELLON MAY BE NEXT BIG THIEF TO LOSE SCALP

Unless They Get Hoover First

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Now that Denby and Daugherty have been dismissed from the cabinet Washington is asking whether Mellon, Weeks or Wallace is to be the next one forced out because of his record. Mellon is already in a serious situation, due to disclosures made by Senator Couzens' committee as to the wholesale reduction of taxes to big corporations and to persons and companies with which Mellon and his friends are connected.

Weeks Indifferent to War Frauds.

Weeks has been as indifferent as Daugherty to the prosecution of war frauds, and Wallace has ignored the plain letter of the law with reference to stockyards and meat packer control. A house committee is now investigating Wallace's acts. Senator McKellar of Tennessee has renewed the fight begun by the late Senator Watson of Georgia to remove Mellon from office on the ground that as a business magnate he is constitutionally barred from being secretary of the treasury.

McLean's Washington Post, which bashfully refrained from editorial comment on the downfall of Daugherty, has proposed that Senator Sterling of South Dakota be appointed in his stead. Sterling would be an ideal spokesman of the anti-labor and anti-progressive program of the administration.

* * * *

Senator Borah's latest resolution calling for an international conference for the economic restoration of a war-impoverished world, shows all of the limitations placed upon any appeal to the Coolidge administration. Not only does the resolution leave the program to the president but it also leaves to the discretion of Coolidge the essential matter of invitations.

Recognize Russia.

Borah says that while he leaves to the president the option of inviting or excluding any country, it is obvious that such a conference can achieve no important success unless Russia and Germany take part. To accomplish anything, it must be a world conference, yet just because he knows that Secretary Hughes and the president are hostile to Russia he can go no further than suggest the matter in a speech.

* * * *

Secretary Hughes is busy with the Latin-American diplomats just now, assuring them that his recent sending of a company of marines 100 miles inland to occupy the capital of Honduras is in no sense an innovation in the political affairs of that republic. Senator Shipstead, however, is of the opinion that Hughes would have gone much further in his military campaign on behalf of the United Fruit Co.'s dictatorship in Honduras had the progressives in congress not voiced a vigorous protest.

U. S. Sticks In Nose.

President Coolidge seeks to calm the fears of the people of Latin-America by announcing that he favors the election of the governor of Porto Rico by the people of Porto Rico—a measure demanded by a commission representing all of the political parties of the island and formally indorsed by the house committee on insular affairs. Secretary of War Weeks recently sent a telegram to Porto Rico declaring that he opposed this plan of popular election of the governor because the Socialists might soon became strong enough to win the election.

Workers' School and N. Y. T. U. E. L. Hold Spring Festival

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Workers' School and the Trade Union Educational League will, under jojint auspices, give a Spring Festival and Ball at Tammany Hall, New York City, April 4, 1924.

This will be a gala affair and will definitely establish a close relation between genuine labor education and the trade union movement.

Education is becoming an ever greater factor among the revolutionary workers.

The Spring Festival and Ball will give all the comrades and sympathizers an opportunity to help realize a close co-ordination between education and the unions.

All are urged to come and bring their friends along and have a good time in the bargain.

Do not forget the date—April 4th, and the place, Tammany Hall, New York City.

Haskell for Russ Recognition.

CINCINNATI.—"While America wraps herself in an antiseptic robe and refuses to touch the bloody hand of Russia, the good will created by America's food and relief expeditions is going to England," says Col. William N. Haskell, director, America Relief Administration in Russia. His statement follows close on the recognition just granted to Russia by the Dominion of Canada.

America has little to lose and much to gain by granting the conference asked by the Russians in order to establish friendly relations with America, according to Haskell.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

SILBY BARRETT, TOOL OF LEWIS, RESIGNS NOVA SCOTIA JOB

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, April 1.—Silby Barrett, provisional president of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, has handed in his resignation to Wm. Dalrymple, representative of John L. Lewis in the District.

Barrett, as a result of his subservience to Lewis, and his assistance to Besco in keeping down the wages of the miners, was overwhelmingly defeated in the last District elections, but the miners could not get rid of him, for he was kept upon the payroll by Lewis, altho his presence in the mining area was exceedingly obnoxious to the workers.

His resignation is welcomed by the miners, as their patience with him and his fellow Lewis appointees was almost exhausted.

The overwhelming vote of the miners rejecting the last Barrett-Lewis iniquity, the Montreal contract, was the immediate cause of the resignation.

G. O. P. National Committee Favors Lynching, Says Report

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Republican national committee is "condoning lynching and mob violence," says the American Civil Liberties union here in replying to the committee's attack on Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana who is investigating the ousted attorney general, Harry M. Daugherty.

The Republican committee issued a statement attacking Wheeler on the ground that "treason ran riot in Montana while he was U. S. district attorney," and that "finally the decent patriotic Americans of Butte took the matter in hand, hanged one of the leaders, and ran the others out of Butte."

The reference is to the hanging of Frank Little, July 31, 1917. The Liberties union reminds the Republicans that this was one of "many outrages committed by representatives of the Anaconda Copper Co. against their employes, and was due solely to Little's activities as a strike leader. No charges of sedition or treason were made against him or any of the strikers.

"The state of Montana, politically and industrially, has been long dominated by the Anaconda Copper Co., controlled from New York. The company's record is one of lawlessness, bloodshed, bribery and corruption. . . . Mr Wheeler should be commended for his activities in behalf of American rights of free speech, freedom of the press and freedom of assemblage for the people of his state."

Penn Operators Will Attempt to Force Wage Cut on Miners

(By The Federated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 1.—A wage reduction will be demanded by the operators in the negotiations which have begun here between the mine owners and miners of the central Pennsylvania bituminous field, according to B. M. Clark, spokesman for the operators. The men are understood to be asking the renewal of the present contract and scale for three years, in accordance with the Jacksonville agreement between the United Mine Workers and representative operators.

Put Shopmen On Part Time.

JOLIET, Ill., April 1.—Over five hundred shopmen employed in this town by the E. J. & E. railroad have been threatened with a prolonged lay-off unless they agree to work only four days a week. The shopmen have been working on a five day per week schedule since Dec. 28.

April Liberator Takes Peep Into Teapot; Sees Wall St.

(By The Federated Press)

Looking beyond mysterious satchels filled with liberty bonds, Robert Minor in the leading article in the April Liberator declares "Jake Hamon and Jess Smith and Harry Daugherty were not the general staff, but the camp followers of the real army of loot. It doesn't seem credible that a three-years-rich millionarie from the Oklahoma oil camps and a third-rate pardon attorney from Ohio had the deciding power over the presidency of the United States. It is more probable that the giants of Wall Street, who were also there, attended to their business.

"The prominence in government control and the spectacular recklessness of Sinclair and Doheny in getting what they want is due to the feverish struggle now going on all over the world for the control of the sea, the land and the air, which only oil monopoly can give.

"And after (or before) we go to war with Mexico, what will we do in Persia, and China, and Mesopotamia and Africa?"

Doings in the Bronx.

NEW YORK CITY, April 1.—Saturday, April 5, the Bronx English Branch of the Workers Party will hold their annual Entertainment and Dance at Workers Hall, 1347 Boston road. A novel program is being arranged and the music will be furnished by Fred Lilienstein and his Orchestra. Admission will be only 35 cents.

OTHER CROOKS MAY SQUEAL ON COOLIDGE

His Cowardice Ires Big Grafters

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—President Coolidge, with evident reluctance, kicks Attorney General Daugherty overboard, to follow Secretary Denby, and once more the old guard is divided between those who rejoice in Coolidge's "courageous performance of duty," and those who privately denounce him for "caving in" when his friends come under too hot a fire. Denby's assistant, young Roosevelt, is still in office, and the capitol waits to see whether Detective Burns will not likewise be retained in favor and power.

It was on the morning of Daugherty's dismissal that Senator Wheeler's committee investigating crookedness in the department of justice heard the testimony of Allen J. Pickering, former auditor in the aircraft war fraud cases, that all attempts to prosecute Mitsui & Co. in the Standard Aircraft case, and other grafters, were stopped by the department itself. The Wright-Martin case, the Lincoln Motors case and other big cases involving almost $20,000,000 which should have been recovered by Daugherty for the government, were covered in his testimony.

Free Pork.

How Harry Sinclair, J. Ogden Armour, Will Hays, Thos. B. Felder and W. J. Burns, among others, frequented the Daugherty-Smith apartment, and how Daugherty played cards with Fall, Sinclair, Zevely and Jess Smith, while "plenty of whisky" was supplied from the wall safe at the McLean house on H st., occupied by Daugherty and Smith, was told by Daugherty's colored valet, Walter Miller. He said that Armour's local agent supplied the house with hams and other meats, and sent no bills. (The packers' "consent decree" was at that time being studied by Daugherty on behalf of the American public.)

A choice bit in this testimony was the statement that Richard Washburn Child, rabid anti-labor publicity man, called on Daugherty and Smith at this house of mystery and conviviality before getting his appointment as ambassador to Italy. Child served in Italy, and told Mussolini that America liked his methods.

The third witness on this memorable day was former Congressman Olcott of New York, who said he was approached, when he became a candidate for appointment to the federal bench, by one Wayne Wilson, who told him "the boys" would require $10,000 when he was appointed and $25,000 when he was confirmed. The old guard look upon Coolidge's surrender to public indignation against Denby and Daugherty as showing that he will continue to use them in fair weather and let them shift for themselves when the winds begin to blow. Some of them may decide to turn state's evidence—unless Coolidge appoints one of their crowd in Daugherty's place.

Class War Prisoner Rejoices at Getting The Daily Worker

"The DAILY WORKER comes regularly to me now, and I will have to thank you again for your subscription," writes No. 38125, an I. W. W. class war prisoner in San Quentin penitentiary, California, to a friend

"There is lots of good news in it; we (the I. W. W.) are not totally ignored as I imagined we would be.

"It sure has the Milwaukee Leader skinned a mile for news of labor activities.

"I saw in the magazine section of the Leader how one man was experimenting to do away with sleep, so that the workers could put in an eternal shift. How would you like that?

"Things look good for our organization right now, altho they are trying petty persecution for a change.

"As you say Washington is being hauled over the coals, but it is only a matter of months until those who think they are AWAKE will be as the Dutchman in Rip Van Winkle."

Subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER are given class war prisoners at half rate, $3.00 a year.

Labor Party Not Third Party, Says Amalgamated Organ

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Advance, official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, in its issue of March 27, has the following editorial comment on the political ferment now taking place inside the two old capitalist parties and on the movement for a labor party of workers and exploited farmers:

"Labor Party Not a Third Party.

"Let it be clearly understood that a third party and a labor party are not the same. The former may be a progressive or reform party, rebelling against the corruption of the two old reactionary parties of Capitalism, but it can only be a capitalist party, not a labor party. By a labor party is meant a party that is not only opposed to the Republican and Democratic parties but stands openly, squarely and finally for labor. A third party, as it is popularly understood today, is not expected to do that. It is only expected to make capitalist party politics cleaner and return some of the early virtues of capitalism, such as freedom of speech, of the press, etc. Labor welcomes everything that makes for a cleaner and freer social and political life. But labor's grievances are not, primarily, against capitalist corruption. They are against the economic and other evils inherent in our industrial system. To cope with those evils the workers must have their own labor party. No other party could or would do it."

Robbers Make Hay While Cops Continue To Arrest Strikers

Aroused by a week-end "crime wave" that included a score of robberies, Chief of Police Collins today turned a veritable swarm of flivver squads loose on the city. Many arrests have been made, the prisoners including a woman who acted as a lookout for a gang of criminals.

Safe blowers tunneled their way into a department store and escaped with $3,000 in cash. Mortimer Rosenthal, real estate man, was held up and robbed of jewelry valued at $1,600 and $60 in cash. A dozen men were held up in a pool room and robbed of $500. Mrs. Max Kaplan's screams frightened off two burglars who entered her apartment and demanded her jewelry. The jewels, in a small safe, are valued at $6,000.

Many lesser robberies and hold-ups occurred in all parts of the city.

Dutch Militarists Build Navy at Children's Expense

By PAUL HOYER
Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press

THE HAGUE, Holland, April 1.—Militarism is to paid paid for at the expense of education, in Holland, according to the plans of the government to increase the Dutch navy.

The money for the increase is to be found by reducing the educational apparatus of the country. Seven years of school are required for every Dutch child. The government proposes to reduce the number to five or even four years. While at present children are required to enter school at 6, they would hereafter enter at 7, and quit at 11 years, while formerly they were obliged to go until their 13th year.

TOM MYERSCOUGH DARES LEWIS T DEBATE ISSUES

Progressive Gives Lie t U. M. W. of A. Czar

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 1.—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, has been spreading many slanders about Thomas Myerscough, the fighting progressive of the Pittsburgh district who was expelled, like Alex Howat and Jim MacLachlan, for his loyalty to the rank and file of the coal diggers.

In the following open letter from Pittsburgh Myerscough challenges Lewis to debate and defend some of these slanders:

Mr. John L. Lewis,
Merchants Bank Bldg.,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Sir—I have been informed that a meeting was recently held in the Pittsburgh district at which an effort was made to arrange a debate between a representative of the International or District Union and myself. The effort was launched, so as to enable the miners of District No. 5 to determine whether or not I am guilty, as charged by you and other officials of the Miners Union, attempting to bring about a reduction in wages in 1921.

I have also been informed that sabotage was practised to prevent the calling of such a meeting, because you do not want the miners to hear the truth. Now, however, inasmuch as Philip Murray, P. T. Fagan and yourself are collaborating in the spreading of the lie that I did make such an attempt, I hereby challenge you, Murray or Fagan to a debate on the following subject, yourself preferred:

Resolved, That John L. Lewis lied when he charged that I tried to bring about a reduction in wages, to the 1917 schedule, in the year 1921 at Monongahela, City, Pa.

I will take the affirmative and you, or the one you choose, the negative. The date and place of such a meeting to be agreed to by allowing you to select three dates in the second half of April or the first half of May. Also three principal towns in District No. 5, from which I will make the final selection.

If you think you can make your lies stick in this district, this is your chance. An early reply will be appreciated by

THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

It will be remembered that Lewis spread the same slander about MacLachlan.

Laws Mean Nothing To This Capitalist Business Governor

INDIANAPOLIS, April 1.—Details of the formation of the "Goodrich pool" of $350,000 to "save McCray from the gravest personal consequences" were related today by James P. Goodrich, former governor, in the trial of Gov. McCray on charges of larceny and embezzlement.

Goodrich was on the stand for two hours telling of the efforts he made to raise the pool, which went to repay the $155,000 of the board of agriculture money that had been turned over to McCray and to pay back $155,000 to the Discount and Deposit Bank at Kentland.

In answer to McCray's declaration that he had done no wrong, Goodrich testified he told the governor he had violated nearly all the federal banking laws is existence.

Fitzpatrick Flays Crowe, Servile Tool Of Labor's Enemies

(By The Federated Press)

Browbeating and intimidating of workers by the state's attorney's office of Cook county "in favor of labor-skinning employers" is charged by John Fitzpatrick, president Chicago Federation of Labor in a letter to the president of the county board.

"The chief officer in the state's attorney's office," Fitzpatrick reminds the official, "has declared publicly that he will send officials of labor unions to the penitentiary or the poorhouse. He has permitted the employers' associations to install their attorneys in the state's attorney's office under the guise of special state's attorneys, thereby enabling the employers' associations to pay the enormous fees of their private attorneys out of the public funds, and this for strikebreaking purposes and general intimidation of workers in favor of employers. Our offices have been raided time without number. Our officers and members have been dragged over to the state's attorney's office and submitted to third degree methods."

Honest Man Gets Axe.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Andrew J. Gallagher, labor man, has been dropped from the board of governors of the Civic League of Improvement Clubs, as punishment for his advocacy of the people's water and power act last election and for his activities in exposing the bribery by the power corporations of George Skaller, the league's president. Gallagher had been a member of the board for three years.

WORKERS PARTY URGES ALDERMEN TO PROBE POLICE

Brutalities in Strike Are Cited In Statement.

Calling attention to the aldermanic investigation of police brutality during the great garment strike of 1915 the district organization of the Workers Party asked the 50 aldermen now sitting in the city council to get busy and probe the brutalities now taking place on S. Market street.

The call was sent to every one of the 50 members of the city council and is accompanied by a citation of acts of violence committed by uniformed city policemen against members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Police Probe Demanded.

The city council has another regular session tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the city hall. The Workers Party's statement to the council members follows:

TO ALL CHICAGO ALDERMEN.

Sir: We are enclosing herewith a statement of brutalities committed by Chicago police and hired sluggers, during the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, for your attention and consideration. We believe that such actions are a disgrace to the city and should not be allowed to continue unchallenged.

We wish to call your attention to the fact that during the strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in 1915 in this city, an aldermanic investigation into the abuses of police authority conducted thru public hearings, took place, with the result that the city council adopted a resolution condemning the police for considering the strikers as their enemies, and Chief Schleuter was compelled to remove the special police from the strike zone. During these pubic hearings, which resulted in great service to the public, the police administration admitted using spies within the union ranks.

We are of the belief that the present situation constitutes one similar to that of the strike of 1915. We further believe that the city council should conduct a real investigation with a view of taking proper action against those who are violating their oath of office, and we urge you to use your office for this purpose.

Sincerely yours,
Arne Swabeck,
District Organizer,
Workers Party Dist. No. 8.

LIST OF BRUTALITIES

Strike busting police brutality is cited in the following statement which accompanies the letter:

The assault committed by Police Officer O'Rorke, whose number is 3181, on Sophie Altschuler, on the evening of March 14th stands out as one of the most brutal assaults on record. Sophie Altschuler was picketing along South Market street when arrested by Officers Patrick Collins and Schroeder, both of whom are attached to the office of the state's attorney. Miss Altschuler was taken into the hallway of the building at 237 S. Market street, and placed in charge of Officer O'Rorke.

What O'Rorke Did.

While awaiting the arrival of the patrol wagon, Officer O'Rorke treated Miss Altschuler with abusive language, struck her and began twisting her wrists and fingers. Miss Altschuler lost consciousness for a few minutes and was later picked up from the floor by O'Rorke and dragged to the rear of the hall, with a threat that he would throw her down the flight of stairs into the cellar.

Officer O'Rorke actually attempted throwing her into the cellar and was stopped only by the fact that Miss Altschuler again lost consciousness. None of the officers or plain clothes men who witnessed this disgraceful treatment attempted to interfere. Miss Altschuler and Miss Siever were loaded into the patrol wagon and the officer in charge told those of the patrol to instruct the matron in the South Clark street station not to book the two girls till after 6 o'clock. It was then about 4:30 p. m.

Matron Lets Her Suffer.

The matron of the police station upon being called to her attention, the critical condition of Miss Altschuler, replied that nothing need be done for her because the skin on her head was not broken.

Miss Altschuler, after being bailed out, was taken to the Morrison Hotel and examined by Dr. James Maltman who reported: "I attended this afternoon Miss Sophie Altschuler who had been seriously beaten about the head and face. Her wrists were twisted and badly swollen."

On the same day Fannie Yannes, 2229 Iowa street, was struck in the mouth by Officer William Hankin in front of 228 S. Market street. She was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. As a result of the blow she received her mouth bled and her teeth are still loose.

Another Girl Attacked.

Tuesday, March 18th, Officer 5159 and 3609 assaulted Ethel Spink who was not at that time a striker. She was on her way to work and because she looked like one of the striking garment workers she was assaulted by Officer 5159 and Officer 3609 then stepped in and assisted. Miss Spink was not hit but shaken by the police officers. A reporter for the DAILY WORKER was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct for getting the numbers of the officers. Miss Spink was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

The same day Officers Collins and Schroeder referred to above in connection with the arrest of Sophie Altschuler arrested Gussie Cohen, 1413 N. Larkin street. After they placed her under arrest they amused themselves by taking hold of Miss Cohen's hands and hitting her in the face with them. This happened about 4:30 or 5 o'clock p. m. when Miss Cohen came from work. She is not on strike as her boss has settled with the union. After hitting Miss Cohen with her own hands Collins and Schroeder dragged her to the patrol wagon.

Cop and Thug Beat Girl.

On Saturday morning, March 22, Olga Levin, 365 E. 59th street, was assaulted by a man named Sam Goldin, who is employed by Lipson Bros., at 325 W. Adams street, in the presence of Officer 3401. Officer 3401 not only refused to arrest Goldin but assisted him in assailing Miss Levin.

More than 700 arrests have been made of men and women peacefully walking the streets in the strike zone, while the officers mentioned above have become a danger not only to the striking workers but to the community as a whole, continue to be detailed to the strike zone.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

THE PARTY AT WORK

Two Organization Tasks of Our Party

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party

WHAT kind of a party have we?

There is no doubt as to the answer to that question from the standpont of principles and tactics. Our tactics, our principles, our program are Communist.

But that does not answer the question fully. What sort of a party are we organizationally? Can we answer that question as proudly, we are a Communist Party?

There are many facts which go to show that organizationally we are still far below the standard of a Communist Party. Our members do yet fully realize what Communist dicipline is and the standard of work which is expected from the members of a Communist Party.

Take the question of dues payments: In a party fully impregnated with a Communist spirit and discipline the question of regular payment of dues by all members should not require special organizational action. Yet it seems that such is the case in our party.

Payment of Dues.

We have counted the number of members in our party as 20,000 during the past year. The actual dues payments during the last quarter of the year were about 18,000 per month. The first indication that these figures as to dues payments did not actually show the membership of the party came in the industrial registration taken in November. The reports from the branches showed 25,000 members on the rolls in place of 18,000 who were paying dues.

Since that time the National Office has secured more facts about the situation. A new system of monthly reports from the branches to the District Organizers was established.

The way in which the organization has responded to the call for these reports is itself a sad commentary on the necessity for efficiency within the party organizations. All party branches have been sent report cards on the first of each month. Out of the thirteen hundred party branches which were sent report cards on March 1, reports from 156 branches have reached the National Office. We do not know how many branches actually sent in their cards to the district offices for it seems that even the District Organizers cannot fill out a simple report on the 20th of the month, eight of them having failed to send in the tabulated statement of branches reporting which the National Office requires of them.

Reports Delinquent.

The reports which have been received, however, throw some light upon the question of membership and dues payments. Here is a table showing the facts:

District	Total Branches	Total Reporting	Total Members	Members With Dues Paid to Date
2	120	50	2,241	1,479
3	57	20	287	183
5	97	16	338	290
6	65	45	1,172	816
7	38	22	622	306
15	40	3	22	19
	417	156	4,682	3,093

Here are 156 out of 1,300 branches which report 4,682 members on their rolls. If the same ratio of membership held good for the remaining branches it would mean that we have 35,000 members on our rolls. That is probably an exaggeration as the average membership per branch is lower than in the branches reporting above. Suppose we take in place of this method of computing the membership the ratio between dues payment and members on rolls. The table shows that one-third of the members of the party do not pay their dues regularly. They are from one to three months behind in their dues payments. If this ratio holds good for the whole party then, since our dues payments show 18,000 members paying dues monthly, we have over 27,000 members on our rolls.

Is it the best we can do to collect dues from only 18,000 out of 27,000 members monthly

Certainly we cannot proclaim ourself a Communist party in our organizational work so long as such a condition exists. We must find ways and means to remedy this situation. We build up a stronger spirit of responsibility to the party organization and greater pride in seeing that our organization machinery functions well.

Every party unit should immediately investigate the status of the branch membership and take steps to see that dues are collected from each member monthly. City central committees and district organizers must watch the reports from the branches and take the necessary steps to tighten up the organization machinery in those branches which lag in handling their work efficiently.

Building the Party Membership.

Not only does our party not function well in collecting dues from the members of the party, which means that the members on our rolls do not all function effectively in the party (for a member who does not pay dues regularly is a member who does not work effectively for the party), but we are not making full use of our opportunity to build up our party membership.

There are thousands of workers just outside of our party who should become members of our party organization. We have educated them thru our press and public meetings and our party work so that they are ripe for membership.

We have no machinery, however, for bringing these workers into the party. Their is no organized, consistent effort to reach them and to induce them to join the party.

We cannot wait for these workers to come into the party of their own accord. We create the means of bringing them into the party. We must have in every party unit an instrument which will reach out and make these workers members of the party.

It is vital for us that our party increase its membership. Our lines are so extended, our responsibilities so great, that the present membership cannot carry the burden much farther. We cannot spread our influence into still wider fields unless we increase our membership thru gathering into the party those workers who stand just outside, ready to join in our work if we take the proper steps to bring them into the party.

Membership Committee Needed.

To meet the situation which has been outlined above each party branch should immediately create a membership committee. This committee should consist of three members and should be charged with the task of making our party a real Communist organization as well as a Communist Party in principles and tactics.

The membership committees in the branches should be held responsible for seeing that every member pays his dues regularly. The membership committee should also be charged with the work of bringing new members into the branch. They should plan organized campaigns to bring the workers who are ripe into the party.

The City Central committees should also elect such membership committees and charge them with the work of seeing that every branch has a properly functioning membership committee.

The City Central Committee Membership Committee must keep in close touch with each branch and when a branch fails to do its work should visit that branch and take the necessary steps to remedy the weaknesses.

There are other tasks than the work of seeing that dues are collected and new members brought into the party which the membership committee should undertake. These will be left for another article. Let us make a beginning in strengthening our organization. Let us create the machinery to remedy the scandalous conditions shown in the figures quoted above. Let us create the means of a persistent campaign for the upbuilding of the membership of the party. The creation of the membership committee should be the beginning of that work.

Russian Petroleum Production Gains In Baku District

MOSCOW, April 1.—It is reported that the output of oil in the Baku fields during the first quarter of the current working year (October-December, 1923) reaches 63,588,000 poods. Those returns compare favorably with last year's 51,244,000 poods and 41,853,000 poods in 1921, for the same months. The improvement is partly due to the considerable amount of technical work done, but mainly to intense drilling in 1923.

REACTION IS FIRMLY IN THE GERMAN SADDLE

Saddler Ebert's Socialist Party to Go

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 1.—Unless all signs mistake, the next government of Germany will be a reactionary government. The German Nationalists openly boast of this and go on making their plants just as tho they were already in the saddle. Their only problem seems to be whether the German People's party, who are even more extreme nationalists, will carry off a dangerously large number of seats and then refuse to play with the German Nationalist party.

It is pretty generally conceded that the moderate parties are in for a drubbing. The Center, backed by a constant Catholic constituency, will probably suffer least. But the Socialists and the Democrats are in for it. The Socialist party is hopelessly divided and carries the odium of having sanctioned, at least tacitly, the military dictatorship and of having voted for the state-of-emergency regulations. It is being sharply attacked all along the line by the Communists. The Democrats are neither fish nor fowl.

The reichstag has been ordered dissolved. In fact, the reichstag was really hanging on chiefly because the representatives can enjoy free first-class travel anywhere in Germany on the state-owned railways for a while longer and draw their pay; and second, the president of the Reichsbank, Schacht, has obtained permission of the reparations commission for a bank of issue backed by gold. For this he needs the authority of the reichstag.

Ludendorff Runs Court.

As tho to enliven this drab existence, Ludendorff and his henchmen are providing a tragic sort of comic opera at Munich. The pot is calling the kettle black, and a nasty picture is revealed of doublecrossing and treachery on the part of the would-be saviors of Germany. From a juridical standpoint the whole thing is a joke. It is not the presiding judge, but the men accused of high treason—Hitler, Ludendorff, etc.—who are running the proceedings.

As the witnesses are summoned, they invariably bow first to "Exzellenz" Ludendorff and to Hitler, and only later they remember that there is also a court to which respect is due.

The spectators, who are mostly Hitler men, noisily vent their approval or disapproval of what is happening. The court is either unwilling or unable to maintain order.

Such is justice in the Law'n Order state of Bavaria!

Russian Agricultural Workers Pledge to Forward Lenin's Work

The following communication was received by the Third Group of the "German Agricoltur Kommune Echo" from their Russian comrades of the "First Russian and American Agricultural Commune." They also appealed for mechanics, millers, carpenters, bricklayers and blacksmiths who are willing to go over to Russia and help build up a commune. Information can be secured from Joseph Holz, secretary, 1756 N. Bodine St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Resolution.

A special general meeting of the comrades of the "First Russian and American Agriculture Commune." "The Third International," (formerly the "Echo") was held on the 23rd day of January 1924, and after learning by telegram and thru the speeches made by Comrades Mileshko and Kowatz of the unexpected and sudden death of our great teacher and guide, "Vladimer Ilyitch Ulianov" (Lenin), who on the 21st day of January 1924, at 6:50 p. m., in Hogie, near Moscow, passed away. The commune mourns together with the world proletariat this heavy loss.

The commune pledges before his fresh grave to continue his work with renewed vigor and energy to break the way towards Communism. On the 19th day of July, 1923, Comrade Lenin was honorably accepted as a member of our commune, and altho he is dead, his ideas live in the hearts of all Communists and honest workers.

Our commune resolves: To donate three days income (60 pood of grain) from our mill for the "Lenin Institute" to help further the progress of his ideals and periodically one day's income each month for the help and maintainance of the "Children Orphan Home."

LONDON LABOR IN DEMAND FOR RELEASE OF TOM MOONEY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 1.—The London Trades Council at a delegate meeting unanimously passed a resolution requesting the governor of the State of California to release Tom Mooney. The resolution follows:

"This delegate meeting of the London Trades Council believes that the continued imprisonment of Tom Mooney is not justified, and is creating an anti-American spirit amongst British workers. It therefore urges the Governor of California to release this prisoner, and thereby assist in bringing about complete harmony between the peoples of Britain and the United States."

On behalf of the Council, yours truly, D. CARMICHAEL, Sec'y.

Labor Faker Keating Fears Radicals May Frighten LaFollette

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Quoting an editorial in the local Scripps paper entitled "LaFollette's Fool Friends," the current issue of "Labor," organ of the rail labor unions, endorses the suggestion that the St. Paul convention set for June 17 may prove embarrassing and even dangerous to the LaFollette candidacy before the country.

"Some of LaFollette's friends," says Labor, "are seriously disturbed over the premature third party movements which are springing up thruout the country.

"In the circumstances it would be the easiest thing in the world for the old guard to pack the gathering with its henchmen disguised as radicals, then they could nominate La Follette on an impossible platform to the accompaniment of a series of 'red speeches.'

"That is exactly what happened at the Farmer-Labor convention at Chicago in 1920. At that time the reactionaries feared LaFollette would run as a third party candidate, so they packed the convention and arranged for a number of wild eyed speeches and forced the adoption of a platform, which they knew LaFollette would not accept. La Follette refused to run."

Pan-American Labor Probes Weeks' Rule Over Porto Ricans

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Inquiry is being made by the Pan-American Federation of Labor, as to whether Secretary of War Weeks deliberately intruded into the political and industrial situation of Porto Rico by sending a telegram to San Juan declaring that he opposed granting the island the right to elect a governor because of the socialist party there and the possibility of the election of a socialist governor.

Santiago Iglesias, president Porto Rican Federation of Labor and leader of the socialist party in the islands, returned to San Juan from Washington March 12 to discover that a tremendous public controversy had arisen, due to a joint manifesto by Barcelo, leader of the reactionary unionist party, and Tous Soto, head of the republican party, urging coalition against the socialists. This joint manifesto, based in part upon the alleged telegrams from Weeks, called for an abandonment of the statehood idea which the republicans had always upheld.

Iglesias charges that the men who secured the cablegram from Secretary Weeks made a catspaw of that official and that the congressional committees dealing with Porto Rico would disregard his hostile recommendations.

Read This and Weep for Poverty Of Coal Operators

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 1.—It looks pretty good to me, said the Island Creek Coal Co. stockholder as he picked up the annual report of his company and found that his profit for the year amounted to $20.39 a share after payment of preferred dividends. Probably he chuckled when he thought of what he had put into that stock.

Its par value is just $1, according to The Wall Street Journal. That makes the $3,692,569 profits made this year at the expense of coal diggers and coal users equivalent to just 2,039 per cent return.

Can you beat it? Incidentally the company the previous year paid cash dividends amounting to $17 a share, 1,700 per cent on the par value of the stock.

U. S. WORKERS ARE RICH BUT DON'T KNOW IT

Nation's Wealth Over 300 Billions

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The American nation, reputed to be the richest in the world, is worth $320,803,862,000, the Department of Commerce reported today.

In ten years, between December 31, 1912, and December 31, 1922, when the last survey was made, the national wealth increased 72.2 per cent. On December 31, 1912, it was placed at $189,299,664,000.

Per capita wealth increased from $1,950 in 1912 to $2,918 in 1922, an increase of 49.6 per cent.

The huge increase in the money value of the nation's wealth, the department said, is due principally to the rise in prices in recent years and not entirely to a corresponding increase in the quantity of wealth, as economists figure it.

All classes of property, except livestock, increased in value in the ten years period, the department reported.

The estimated value of taxed real property and improvements increased from $96,923,406,000 to $155,908,625,000 or 60.9 per cent.

Exempt real property, exclusive of national parks and monuments, rose from $12,313,520,000 to $20,505,819,000 or 66.5 per cent.

Stocks of goods, vehicles, other than motor, furniture and clothing rose from $34,334,291,000 to $75,983,607,000 or 121.3 per cent.

Railroads and their equipment rose from $16,148,532,000 to $19,950,800,000, or 23.5 per cent.

Privately owned telephone and transmission enterprises other than railroads increased from $9,572,855,000 to $13,607,570,000 or 42.1 per cent.

Manufacturing machinery, tools and implements rose from $6,091,451,000 to $15,753,260,000 or 159.1 per cent, an indication of the industrial expansion of the country.

Farm implements and machinery increased from $1,368,225,000 to $2,604,638,000 or 90.4 per cent.

Heavenly Spooks Are Sure Getting Very Bloodthirsty

ANDERSON, Texas., April 1.—Commodore Bullock, 33, who confessed to the murder of Sheriff L. E. Morehead during a community entertainment at Steep Hollow school house will probably be sent to an asylum. Bullock told authorities his "dead sister in heaven sent me word to do it."

Sheriff Morehead was taking the part of a country constable in a play when, as he stalked across the stage the report of a shot gun was heard and he crumbled to the floor. The audience thought it was part of the play and applauded.

The Robots Are Coming!

COMMUNISTS NOT PACIFISTS; ARE FOR CLASS WAR

Case Explained by Y. W. Leaguer

By HARRY GANNES.
(Member of National Executive Council of Young Workers League)

Compulsory military training is the object of the present anti-pacifist campaign. The failure of the citizen's military training camps for the past two years, and the probable miscarriage of the plan this coming season, is goading the Chicago Daily Tribune, the National Security League and a horde of other pro-imperialist organizations to an attack on all pacifist and communist elements.

The war department of the United States government has issued orders for a mobilization of 400,000 troops for war training. The present incumbent in the navy department announces his aim to be a large and ship-shape navy commensurate with the Washington armament conference provisions. Just what this means, how ineffective it is for a curtailment of war forces is shown by the action of the British Labor Government in sanctioning the building of destroyers of 9,800 tons, when the Washington agreement limits the nations involved to destroyers of 10,000 tonnage.

Coolidge's War Plans.

The president has urged a combining of the war and navy department for more efficiency than is at present possible. Another of the great problems facing the imperialist government of the United States is the mobilization of an army of eight to nine million in case of war, and the plan of the war department is to train a large enough officers' corps in the universities and high schools to be able to throw a trained body into action at the call of war.

These vast war preparations are the basis of the hatred evinced from the militarists in the United States when the imperialist form of the American government is pointed out by the young Communist as well as by the pacifist students. In the universities propaganda carried on against the students military training corps has aroused the United States army officers who are paid to carry on the murder-training. The Communist anti-military work conducted by the Young Workers League in the factories mines, mills, offices, in the grammar and high schools, designed as it is to arouse the working class youth to militant action against wars, has especially met with the hatred of the militarist backers of American capitalism.

In order to frighten the student pacifists, the charge is being made by the Tribune, the News, the Herald and Examiner, as well as by the officers at the head of the Reserve Officers Training Corps that all anti-military propaganda emanates from Moscow and is under the direct supervision of William Z. Foster.

Communists Not Pacifists.

It is true the entire Communist movement of the world is definitely anti-military in so far as capitalist wars are concerned. But there is not the least taint of pacifism in the Communist anti-military program. As Trotzky has said, "In the Wars of the Capitalists we are pacifists, but in the wars of the working class we fight unto the death." It is this kind of anti-military activity that is driving fear into the hearts of the junker gang now trying to stampede the American working class into preparation for a new war.

That the present anti-pacfist and red-baiting exertions undertaken by the combined capitalist press with the official sauction of the United States army and naval department has a deeper significance that the limited agitation of the university students and the Young Workers League of America is strikingly shown by an examination of the dominant imperialist position the United States has assumed in the past decade.

U. S. a Jingo-Imperialist.

Beginning with the Spanish-American war the United States entered the world arena as a jingo-miiltarist and imperialist nation. Since then it has assumed the master hand. The close of the world war found it on the pinnacle of finance imperialism. As has been pointed out repeatedly by communists the world over, the military forces of a nation develop in the ratio that it grows imperialistically. Where, for some reason or other, this military growth is retarded, frantic efforts are made by the capitalists to speed up their fortifications and to incerase armaments of every kind.

Dragging the American youth into the world war in reality against the will of the majority of people in this country has left a profound reaction in the minds especially of the working class and a large section of the students to any new war ventures. The desire and need for an army, at the same time, becomes ever more pressing and the delicate world situation becomes ever more aggravated. Right at this moment, any demonstrations against the growing militarization of the youth in the United States meets with the sternest rebuke.

Attempts at inciting violence against the pacifist and Communist elements are made daily by the capitalist press, but so far their assaults have not culminated in action.

War Plutes Run Church.

The most despicable spectacle in the great melodrama of Communist and pacifist hunting is the militarist leaning of the so-called Christain church in the United States. To every minister that sticks to a pacifist attitude, ten thousand spring up to justify the recent world carnage and to proclaim the house of God ready for another go at any enemy, so long as as American capitalism beckons and proclaims it in its interest.

The Y. M. C. A. stands ready to repeat its Judas role, and the boy and girl scouts are being fired into a blind passion for war and arming.

War Against Capitalism.

Remembering that the present national mobilization campaign ordered by the war department is to extend over a period of a few months, that Congress has permitted the army to remain at 137,000, that the citizen's military training camps are starting their boosting for recruits (this to last for about five months), the present anti-Communist and anti-pacifist campaign can be expected to intensify. The greater the failure of the military plans of the Kaiser-like Tribune, the American Security League and the rest of the jingoists, the higher will spring the flames of abuse and prosecution against those who demand "No War," or if war, "War Against Capitalism."

In face of this situation it is hopeful to find the young workers and students organized in the Young Workers League taking a resolute stand to continue their anti-military activities in every effective manner.

The Struggle Within the Russian Party

VI. Comrade Trotzky's "New Course."

WE HAVE before us an article by Comrade Trotzky, one which has been published in our newspapers under the title of "The New Course." Unfortunately, this article is not expressed clearly either, and it is not possible for everyone to understand it immediately. I have even come across individuals who maintain that Comrade Trotzky supports the resolution of the Central Committee in this article. Of course it is nothing new that the rope "supports" the man being hanged.

Comrade Trotzky's authority is as undoubted as the services he has rendered to the Party. Among ourselves there is no use to waste words upon this. But mistakes are mistakes, and remain so. When I made a mistake, I was pulled up sharp by the Party; Bucharin, too, had to undergo the same experience. When Comrade Trotzky committed grave errors in 1921, Comrade Lenin published two pamphlets on Trotzky's errors. Discussions were held all over Russia, and Comrade Trotzky was slightly in the minority at the Party Congress.

In Contradiction to Central.

And now we must go into this question in its essentials, without regard for the former services of those who commit errors.

I repeat, that Comrade Trotzky's article is most unclearly expressed. But we, the majority of the Central Committee, distinctly see in it no support, but a thwarting of the line followed by the Central Committee and its unanimous decisions. We worked in collaboration with Comrade Trotzky for a whole week on the resolution, in commissions and sub-commissions. It need not be said that every possible concession was made in order to arrive at an agreement with Comrade Trotzky, for we lay very great value on his agreement.

Who can fail to appreciate Comrade Trotzky's authority in the Party?

We reached an agreement. And what happened The unanimously passed resolution was published, and the next day this article by Comrade Trotzky appeared, undoubtedly violating this unanimity.

You are naturally entitled to demand from me proofs in confirmation of my assertion that Comrade Trotzky's article is in contradiction to the resolution of the Central Committee. I therefore pass to these proofs.

VII. What Is the Party?

It will be known to you that "Trotzkyism" represents a certain trend in the Russian labor movement. What was the essential character of the old "Trotzkyism?" I shall not go here into the peasant question, but shall deal with the questions occupying us in the immediate present. For instance, the question of what the Party is, the question of what inner Party democracy is, the question of what attitude we are to adopt towards fractions.

Before entering our Party, Comrade Trotzky fought with the whole of his characteristic passionateness for the idea that the labor party has to represent a conglomeration of various tendencies, various fractions, various groups, and various currents.

At that time we even employed a special term, invented by Vladimir Ilyitsch: "currenters," as a designation for those who pursued special "currents." In the liquidation question, Comrade Trotzky repeatedly asserted that he fundamentally supported the liquidation idea. At first he admitted that it was wrong in many points, but still he held the liquidation idea to be a "permissible gradation" in the labor party.

Cannot Be a Noah's Ark.

Many old comrades will recollect these words on the "permissible gradation," which I here adduce exactly as they were spoken: "In a word, let us live and let live. The Party is a conglomeration of separate fractions and currents."

Even at that time we replied: No, we cannot adopt this formula of "live and let live" as a rule of conduct. We said: "If the working class is to be victorious, there must be one united and steeled Bolshevist party, and we cannot allow the liquidators, the Mensheviki, to go on working as they think best." They must be wiped out. (Applause.)

This was the reason of the strife at the time when Comrade Trotzky issued the newspaper named "Pravda" in Vienna. At that time we published the labor paper, "Pravda," in Petragrad, with the aid of the workers' pence.

Is it possible for us to adopt the "live and let live" standpoint in the question of the "currents?" Now, as then we reply: No, for the Party cannot become a Noah's ark, where there are two of each kind; the Party must not become a conglomeration of separate groups and currents. The Party, working under the conditions created by the new economic policy, that is, under fairly variegated conditions, must be a united Bolshevist party of the old Leninian type. Otherwise we are condemned to decay.

Leninian Bolshevism.

The chief error committed by Comrade Trotzky in his article, "The New Course," consists of the fact that it contains a certain revival, a certain renaissance of the old views which recognized the "permissibility" of separate currents and gradations. "Let us live and let live"; it does not matter if varying opinions exist, we shall all manage together in the end. Of course this sounds very democratic.

We may represent the matter somewhat as follows: On one side there stand the bloodthirsty old Bolsheviki, who will not allow other people to "live," and on the other side stand the good people with their motto of "live and let live." To be sure there are many people who appreciate this angelic goodness.

But Bolshevism is not founded on angelic goodness, it was formed by the proletarian distrust of everything not belonging to Bolshevism, of everything which was not Leninism.

Why did the Mensheviki go so miserably bankrupt?

In the first place, of course, for the reason that they were opportunists, but also for the reason that under their rule the Party was formed on the mosaic work principle: two of every kind, their whole party a conglomeration of currents. You will remember that Tschernov boasted that they had right socialists and left socialists in their ranks, that they enjoyed an extraordinary "freedom of speech;" but where are they now and what has become of their party? The same would have happened to us, had we not opposed ourselves irreconcilably to everything which was not Leninian Bolshevism.

BILL BOLSHIE'S DREAM OR THE MACHINES THAT TALKED

The clock had barely struck the first note of twelve when "Too-oo-oot" went the factory whistle, and almost in a second the whole of the machinery in the factory came to a standstill. Then hundreds of men were to be seen making their way hurriedly towards the gates, putting on their coats as they went, or rubbing their hands with pieces of rag.

So they all rushed away as quickly as they could, all except Bill Bolshie, a young boy who had to stay in the factory while the others went for their dinners, and when one o'clock came he had to pull the factory whistle string.

But Bill was only a little boy, not at all strong, and not used to the stuffy air in the factory, so after all had gone he sat down on a bench and fell off to sleep. While asleep Bill had a most amusing dream.

Billie's Dream.

Hardly had he closed his eyes when the big factory dynamo walked out between the benches. It was ever such a proud looking dynamo. It looked around boastingly and said in a loud voice: "Now look here all you factory tools. I want you all to understand that I am the most important thing here. How do you think you would get along without me? It is I who provide you with the energy that makes the wheels go round." He stretched out his arms and looked around as important as if the world belonged to him.

But a monkey wrench jumped down from one of the benches and going up to him said, "Here—don't you be too big. Just remember that if it weren't for me going round all day and tightening up the nuts everything would fall to pieces. Even you, Mr. Dynamo, couldn't stick together."

Just then a smaller voice joined in and an oil can started arguing. "Now it's no use any of you talking. It is I who am the most important thing here. Even you, Mr. Monkey Wrench, could not tighten a nut unless I came along to oil it for you."

Co-operation A Necessity.

The other two looked very indignant. Fancy being talked to like that by a mere "oil can." And all the other things in the factory heard it too and round they all came running, each protesting in its loudest voice that it was the thing that counted most, even a piece of cotton rag said that as he wiped the grit and dirt off everything he stopped them from breaking down, and, therefore, he counted most." So busy were they arguing that they did not hear a heavy slow step which came down from the office at the other end. Suddenly they were pushed on one side, and a ledger, its pages turning backwards and forwards to show how angry he was, stepped amongst them and said "Stop all this chatter. Who are any of you to talk about being important in this factory? I am the brains here. It is I who direct you all. Without me you would be like lost sheep."

But the others would not have that. They still kept arguing until a wee mouse ran out and stood on its hind legs and laughed at them. "What!" shouted all together. "Are you laughing at us?" "Yes," said the mouse. "Listen to me. None of you are more important than the other. You all depend upon one another. look at Mr. Ledger there. Turn his pages over. Only a few are concerned with work. the rest are full of numbers figuring up the boss's profit and those that deal with the work have been told you by others. And you, Mr. Dynamo, where do you get your energy? That comes from the boilers under which there is coal, and the coal comes from many miles away. And you, Mr. Oil Can. Where do you get your oil? That comes from all over the world, and is boiled and refined before it reaches you. And so with all of you. Don't argue like babies and quarrel like little sparrows. Remember this, that you can't do without one another, but there is one man, a man who seldom comes here; and then only to look around and bully Mr. Dynamo as much as Mr. Ledger or Mr. Oil Can. And this man who owns you all, lives better than any of you. You've forgotten that whilst you quarreled. Now jump back to work, it is nearly one o'clock."

Jump back they did, and made such a noise that Bill Bolshie woke up and saw the time and ran to pull the whistle string for the men to come back.

Boss Exploits—Workers Brag.

The men came in from dinner, and as they came in they too, were arguing. The funny thing was that they were saying the same thing as the dynamo and tools had said. A laborer was telling an engineer that he was most important and an electrician was arguing with a clerk.

Bill Bolshie looked astonished and wished that he had as much courage as the mouse and could tell them that they all depended one on the other. Then instead of quarreling amongst one another they should work together. Because whilst they argued against one another, the boss, who never worked, was robbing them.

LUMBERJACKS SENTENCED ON BOYCOTT CHARGE

Pulp Interests Railroad 3 Maine Workers

(By Defense News Service)

BANGOR, Maine, April 1.—Are business men to have legal right to boycott union men in Maine, while the unionists go to prison for boycotting the same business men in return? This question is involved in an appeal now being prepared by counsel for three I. W. W. members recently convicted at Dover-Foxcroft for alleged conspiracy to injure the business and reputation of three Greenville merchants and the Lumbermen's Y. M. C. A. there.

Two-Year Sentence.

The convicted men are Robert Pease, sentenced to serve one and one-half to two years in prison, and John Lucelle and Willard Parent, who are to serve from one year to fifteen months. They were arrested following the appearance of red stickers signed by the Greenville Junction branch of the Lumber Workers Industrial Union, a component part of the Industrial Workers of the World. These stickers contained the names of the Lumbermen's Y. M. C. A., Crafts' General Merchandise Store, Moosehead Clothing Store, and D. M. Ward, drugs and soft drinks. With the names were the words: "They have discriminated against members of the I. W. W. and advocated violence to drive workingmen out of town. Workers, spend your money elsewhere."

Lumberjacks Were Organizing.

For several months the I. W. W. has been actively organizing the workers in the pulp wood forests centering around Bangor and Greenville, which is 65 miles northwest of here. As the organization grew in strength obstacles put in its path by the pulpwood interests were multiplied. Lately there was an attempt to drive the industrial unionists out of Greenville. The "Wobblies" were ousted from many lodging houses, and local stores began to discriminate against them. And violence was openly threatened by some of the business men.

When the three industrialists were placed on trial before Supreme Judge Morrill, the court allowed the prosecution to call numerous witnesses, but would not permit Defense Atoorney B. W. Blanchard to show that I. W. W. members had been refused lodgings in Greenville, tho they had ample money and were law-abiding. There was no evidence that the defendants were at the meeting which authorized the boycott. Lucelle and Parent were alleged to have sold copies of the Industrial Worker containing an appeal to workers to avoid the Y. M. C. A. and the three firms mentioned in the boycott.

Other Unionists Arrested.

John Berg and William J. Turner, I. W. W. members, also have been arrested on the same charge.

Conditions in the logging camps of Maine are almost invariably bad. Wages are low, food poor, and sleeping quarters and toilet accommodations are unsanitary and a menace to the health of the workers.

CANADIAN WHEAT FARMERS FACING DESPERATE YEAR

Fruit Growers Are Just As Badly Off

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 1.—Canadian wheat farmers and fruit growers are fighting with their backs against the wall for existence and to many of them the next 12 months will tell the tale.

British Columbia fruit growers are today faced with the prospect of almost inevitable ruin within the next year unless immediate steps are taken to handle the surplus fruit grown.

More than one thousand tons of berries were produced in excess of the amount consumed by the prairie provinces and provincial canneries and, as the freezing and processing of the fruit is too costly to take care of the surplus raised, the growers are being forced to consider co-operative methods of canning and market control. It is estimated that the cost of cans would have been more than repaid by the saving of mold losses last season alone.

Co-operative Canneries.

The berry growers are now taking steps to forestall the complete collapse of their industry by organizing co-operative canneries and have asked the provincial government for assistance in financing.

The Canadian wheat farmers on the prairies are facing a similar crisis. For several years the crops have been good but the returns did not enable the growers to meet their obligations and maintain a standard of living. It has been the old story of grain speculators skillfully manipulating the grain market by creating a selling market that would enable them to buy up the crop for the season and hold it to resell at a profitable figure.

$200,000,000 Financing Plan.

To cope with this, Canadian grain growers plan the creation of three wheat pools in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, with a central dominion pool. The pools together are planned to handle at least one-half of the wheat raised in Canada and will be operated by grain growers only. Financing of the scheme which involves a large outlay of capital is under way and it is stated that $200,000,000 is available.

Hoover Exposed

That Herbert Hoover, now Secretary of Commerce in the Coolidge cabinet, while head of the American Relief Administration, which had several millions of dollars at its disposal intended for the starving people of Russia during the period of the great famine in 1919, diverted a million dollars from that fund to the notorious brigand and counter-revolutionist Admiral Kolchak, for the purpose of creating civil war in Russia is the startling testimony given by Captain H. L. Scaife, former Department of Justice agent, before the senate committee investigating Daugherty, in Washington.

When Hoover was appointed director of the American Relief Administration, the Communists pointed out that Hoover would do the very thing he has now been charged with by a government agent, who is not a Communist or a radical of any school. The Communists pointed to Mr. Hoover's record in Hungary, where, his agent Gregory, a Hoover tool, used the funds of the relief organization to overthrow the Soviet Republic under Bela Kun and place the dictator Admiral Horthy in power. The bloodthirsty admiral murdered thousands of workers and the blood of every mother's son of them is on the head of Herbert Hoover.

So Hoover tried the same game in Russia! The Communists warned the American workers that behind the cloak of humanitarianism, with which the designs of the American capitalists were hidden, was the sinister intention to take advantage of the frightful calamity which visited the workers of Russia, to sabotage their government and turn the country over to the tender mercies of the Czarist general who would consent to sell its resources to the American plunderers for whom Hoover was acting.

The American workers, to their eternal glory he said, heeded the warning of the Communists and sent hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Russian workers without any conditions, to save millions of Russian workers and peasants from a lingering death by hunger and, more important still, to save the revolution. Thanks to the aid of the workers of all lands the Soviet Government was able to foil Mr. Hoover's plots, and the workers of this country feel proud that thru the Friends of Soviet Russia they did their share in saving the Workers Republic in its most critical hour.

Now, the entire country knows what the Communists knew four years ago. Hoover is charged with a crime compared to which the direliction of Fall is trivial. He misappropriated at least one million dollars of the fund consigned to his care for the relief of distress. He attempted to overthrow a government with which the people of the United States were at peace, which they were in fact saving from the curse of famine. Crimes greater than these no man could commit.

Hoover's crime is but another example of the treachery of capitalist governments and their unrelenting determination to crush the rule of the workers. This further proof should increase the determination of the workers and exploited farmers of America to get rid of the capitalist class and establish a Soviet government.

The DAILY WORKER published the complete report of the "Committee of 15," of the Chicago Federation of Labor, attacking the conduct of the state's attorney's office in the garment strike, in our Monday morning editions. The Herald and Examiner trailed along with a paragraph about the report in its Tuesday's issue. Better read the DAILY WORKER and get the news while it is news.

Among those who have mourned the death of Barney Bernard, is Bernard McFadden, owner of several health and beauty magazines. Barney's picture was featured in one of the health magazines as a typical example of what a person can do for his body by following the advice of McFadden and subscribing to his literature. Everybody must die, of course, but it is rather hard on McFadden.

The Shah of Persia got his name in the papers about six months ago when he contributed a new wrinkle to the terpsicorean art in a Casino at Deauville, France. Again he got a little publicity not so much on the occasion of losing his throne.

The poor Shah now sheds salt tears over his misfortune. Like a weeping Jerry he sits in his apartment near the Bois de Boulogne. Cheer up, prince. The worst is yet to come. A prince with a head these days has something to be thankful for.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

A Fit Defender

If the American workers need any further proof of the moral turpitude of ex-attorney general Harry M. Daugherty, and his eminent unfitness for holding any public office higher than superintendent of a public convenience station, they are referred to the March 31st issue of the Herald and Examiner of Chicago.

William Randolph Hearst, the champion journalistic prostitute of America, if not of the world, has written over his own signature a lengthy editorial scoring the committee which is investigating Daugherty and his deeds, declaring that to date they have not produced any evidence of an incriminating character against the ex-attorney general and charging that the attack on him is due to the alleged fact that he was a "friend of the people" and not a corporation lawyer.

The readers of the American mess have long ago ceased to place any credence in the declarations of William Randolph Hearst. They are interested in his defense of Daugherty only to the extent of having their curiosity aroused over the secret back of the yellow journalist's defense of the notorious grafter and strikebreaker.

Not so very long ago it was whispered around the Capitol that the publisher and Mr. Daugherty were bitter enemies. One of Mr. Hearst's champion muckrakers was put to work "getting the goods" on the then attorney general. A[illegible] the story goes Arthur Brisbane, Hearst's "Good Man Friday," visited Washington, had a conference with Mr. Daugherty and the expose, partly set up in type, was killed and never appeared.

What is the deal between Hearst and Daugherty? Mr. Hearst has extensive interests in Mexico. Did he secure the aid of the Department of Justice in rivetting the chains of bondage on the Mexican peons?

Mr. Hearst saw nothing heinous in Daugherty's strikebreaking activities. He saw nothing heinous in his setting the machinery of his spy agency in motion to smash up the shopmen's strike. There was nothing offensive to the sensitive nostrils of Hearst in Daugherty's association with the scourings of the underworld, the grafter Jess Smith, the immoral debaucher Jake Hamon, and the hundreds of others who hovered around the Capitol since he got into office, like buzzards around a battlefield.

William Randolph Hearst is a very fitting defender for the disgraced ex-attorney general. Much tho we despise Daugherty we cannot help extending our condolences to him for his new-found friend. To have lost a comparatively companion like the burglars' "fence" Jess Smith only to be obliged to lean on William Randolph Hearst is a punishment that would melt the heart of even a plundered bootlegger.

The Booze Secretary

Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury and one of the wealthiest men in the United States, is charged with getting a share of the graft of several unsavory bootlegging deals thru his power to grant permits for liquor removals, under the Volstead Act, the enforcement of which the Treasury Department is charged with.

Several witnesses testifying before the committee to investigate Harry M. Daugherty, stated that Mellon owns a big distillery in Pittsburgh and that one of the first big pieces of graft that came the way of the new booze aristocracy had its origin in the whiskey factory of our very respectable Secretary of the Treasury.

It is an axiom that crooks never trust each other. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that shortly after Mellon accepted his present post, President Harding sent a corps of spies on his trail to get the "goods on him." They failed the first time. Mellon slipped thru the lines. The second time, the sleuths got on his track, they nabbed him. Harding kept the "goods" in his safe, no doubt, for use, in an emergency. The workers and farmers of the country did not know anything about this until Gaston B. Means delivered the "goods" on the witness stand in Washington.

The capitalists who run this country were quite disturbed over the exposure of Mellon as a common booze-running grafter. It hurt the dignity of the office. Fancy a man who had charge of the nation's money being mixed up in booze peddling! Violating the rules he actually made himself, for a few hundred thousand dollars or a few millions! This was striking pretty near the roots of capitalist government. It must be stopped. The workers would lose confidence in the "respectability" of their rulers.

After Daugherty was handed his hat and told to take his burglar's tools along with him, Mellon was slated for the skids. But immediately the capitalist press, democrat and republican, began to lay down a heavy barrage behind the Booze Secretary of the Treasury. Cartoonists and hack writers were called into play and it looks as if millionaire Mellon's dough will choke off the moral indignation of the democratic snipers.

After all this reign of terror against the republican grafters could be carried so far that it might threaten the existence of both capitalist parties. A united front of capitalists to save Mellon is being formed. The men who own this country do not like to see their political lap dogs in Washington getting out of hand. It spoils their game. So they are now cracking their whips over the heads of the noisy democrats and goading the frightened republicans into a more aggressive attitude.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

• • • •

After Pottawatomie.

JOHN BROWN, JR., and Jason, Brown, two of the fighter's sons, were captured by Missourians and suffered incredible tortures after the Pottawatomie affair. Both men were burning with fever, but they were dragged at the ends of ropes for two or three days, beaten, hung up and let down, and then chained to ox carts in the wind and rain. John, Jr., always of a nervous temperament, went temporarily insane under this treatment, but his captors had no mercy. Tho he shrieked wildly, and tho his brother Jason begged that the Southerners have pity, their hearts were hard as flint.

The following scene is described by Jason:

Brutality of Stockholders.

"Captain Wood said to me: 'Keep that man still.' 'I can't keep an insane man still,' said I. 'He is no more insane than you are. If you don't keep him still, we'll do it for you.' I tried my best, but John had not a glimmer of reason and could not understand anything. He went on yelling. Three troopers came in. One struck him a terrible blow on the jaw with his fist, throwing him on his side. A second knelt on him and pounded him with his fist. The third stood off and kicked him with all his force on the back of the neck. 'Don't kill a crazy man!' cried I. 'No more crazy than you are, but we'll fetch it out of him.' After that John lay unconscious for three or four hours. We camped about one and a half miles southeast of the Adairs. There we stayed about two weeks. Then we were ordered to move again. They drove us on foot, all the prisoners chained two and two. At Ottawa ford young Kilbourne dropped of a sun stroke."

The men were later released, for they had done nothing that could be prosecuted in the court where the pro-slavery government "troops" had driven them. This was the sort of thing John Brown was fighting; it was life and death, and no mercy could be expected from the Southerners. Mr. Villard and other timorous friends of John Brown do not seem to understand the nature of the battle; and they do not understand what giant faith and courage it must have taken for an old farmer of fifty-five to continue fighting in such an atmosphere.

John Brown did not flinch. Another son, Frederick, was shot down in cold blood on the steps of the family home at Osawatomie, but the old fighter, shedding a silent tear for the loss, for he deeply loved his children, went on his stern path.

Reward Offered for Brown.

The spuriously elected slavery governor offered a reward of $3,000 for John Brown, and the President of the United States a reward of $250. Federal troops scoured the territory for him. For months he and his men slept out in the fields, flitting from place to place, and fighting in many battles.

With only nine men he fought off a troop of twenty-three Southerners at the "battle of Black Jack," and forced them to surrender. In August, 250 men moved on Osawatomie. John Brown gathered about forty men to resist the Southerners, and a hot battle was fought, in which, of course, Brown had to retreat. The town was thoroly wiped out, and also granted "Southern rights."

There were many other skirmishers; the name of Captain John Brown, old Brown of Osawatomie, became a legend in Kansas. He became a sort of Pancho Villa figure to the South; a hundred times he was reported dead or captured; a hundred times he was blamed for wild deeds he had never done.

Here are two contemporary pictures of John Borwn in the field. The first is written by August Bondi, a brave and able young Austrian Jew, who put himself under Brown's leadership after the Pottawatomie affair:

"We stayed here up to the morning of Sunday, June 1st, and during those few days I fully succeeded in understanding the exalted character of my old friend, John Brown. He exhibited at all times the most affectionate care for each of us. He also attended to the cooking. We had two meals daily, consisting of bread, baked in skillets; this was washed down with creek water, mixed with a little ginger and a spoon of molasses to each pint. Nevertheless, we kept in excellent spirits; we considered ourselves as one family, allied to one another by the consciousness that it was our duty to undergo all these privations for the good cause. We were determined to share any danger with one another, that victory or death might find us together; and we were united, as a band of brothers, by the love and affection toward the man who with tender words and wise counsel, in the depth of the wilderness of Ottawa creek, prepared a handful of young men for the work of laying the foundation of a free commonwealth.

His Philosophy.

"His words have ever remained firmly engraved in my mind. Many and various were the instructions he gave during the days of our compulsory leisure in this camp. He expressed himself to us that we should never allow ourselves to be tempted by any consideration to acknowledge laws and institutions to exist if our conscience and reason condemned them.

"He admonished us not to care whether a majority, no matter how large, opposed our principles and opinions. The largest majorities were sometimes only organized mobs, whose howlings never changed black to white or night into day. A minority convinced of its rights, based on moral principles, would, under a republican government, sooner or later become the majority."

The other description is that of William A. Phillips, then a correspondent of the New York Tribune, and later a Colonel in the Civil War. Brown, still an outlaw, was on his way to Topeka, to be on hand at whatever crisis might arise at the opening of the legislature elected by the Free State settlers. Phillips met him on the way.

Prophet of New Day.

His account is important, for it shows that John Brown saw much farther than his own times. He knew that there were many other things wrong with the social system in America besides slavery. There are plain indications here, as in other accounts, that John Brown was one of those early American Socialists, such as Horace Greeley, Albert Brisbane, father of Arthur Brisbane, Bronson Alcott, Ralph Waldo Emerson and others, who felt that the abolition of slavery was only the first step toward a free America. Wendell Phillips, for instance, one of this abolitionist band, became after the Civil War one of the leading champions of the rights of workingmen in their battle against the capitalists.

But here is Colonel Phillips giving his charming picture, in the Atlantic Monthly for December, 1879, of that night ride and the conversation he had with Brown as they lay bivouacking in the open beneath the stars:

"He seemed as little disposed to sleep as I was, and we talked; or rather, he did, for I said little. I found that he was a thoro astronomer; he pointed out the different constellations and their movements. 'Now,' he said, 'it is midnight,' as he pointed to the finger marks of his great clock in the sky. The whispering of the wind in the prairies was full of voices to him, and the stars as they shone in the firmament of God seemed to inspire him. 'How admirable is the symmetry of the heavens; how grand and beautiful! Everything moves in sublime harmony in the government of God. Not so with us poor creatures. If one star is more brilliant than others, it is continually shooting in some erratic way into space.'

"He criticized both parties in Kansas. Of the pro-slavery men he said that slavery besotted everything, and made men more brutal and coarse; nor did the Free State men escape his sharp censure. He said we had many true and noble men, but too many broken down politicians from the older states, who would rather pass resolutions than act, and who criticized all who did real work.

Did Not Trust Politicians.

"A professional politician, he went on, you could never trust; for even if he had convictions, he was always ready to sacrifice his principles for his advantage.

"One of the most interesting things in Captain Brown's conversation that night, and one that marked him as a thinker, was his treatment of our forms of social and political life. He thought society ought to be reorganized on a less selfish basis; for while material interests gained by competition for bread, men and women lost much by it. He condemned the sale of land as a chattel, and thought there was an infinite number of wrongs to right before society would be what it should be, but that in our country slavery was the sum of all villainies, and its abolition the first essential work."

Chicago Real Estate Board Frames Leases Leaving Landlord Nothing To Do But Accept Rent

Landlords, under the leadership of the Chicago Real Estate Board, have imposed leases on the tenants of the city, which give the real estate companies absolute control of subsequent legal conflicts, and which place all responsibility of upkeep, repairs, damages and heating upon the shoulders of the tenants.

Lease No. 10, composed by the Chicago Real Estate Board, which is used by the large majority of Chicago landlords, leaves openings for a good many sharp and unethical practices, which are often taken advantage of by the lessor, not only to dodge his own responsibility, but to cheat the lessee of money in addition to his legitimate rent.

The city has no uniform lease, and there is no Rent Commission which would, in some measure, force the landlords to use a fair lease form. On the other hand, the landlord gets up all the leases. There is a mass of matter printed in small type in all Chicago's leases which the tenant finds impossible to understand unless he takes the lease to a lawyer, which he generally cannot afford to do. The prospective tenant is told that it is merely a matter of form, and in most cases signs the lease, only to find later that he has absolutely no rights, and the landlord can and does take advantage of him in countless ways.

Numerous Complaints.

Numerous complaints come to the United Charities and other welfare groups every month that the landlord is breaking the city ordnances by refusing to keep the plumbing, or the walls and ceilings in repair. These agencies examine the tenant's lease and because they find in a majority of cases, the following quoted paragraph, they can not only do nothing to force the landlord to act, but they find that, according to city law, the tenant must make and pay for his own repairs.

The majority of the leases to apartments and flats in Chicago include a paragraph declaring; "Lessee shall keep the said premises and the walls, ceilings, floors, woodwork, paint, plastering, plumbing, pipes, fixtures, kitchen ranges, globes and glassware, and appurtenances thereto in said demised premises in a clean, sightly and healthy condition, and in good repairs, all according to the statutes and ordinances in such cases made and provided, and the directions of public officers duly authorized, all at his own expense.

Under this clause, if a tenant has lived for 13 or more years in the same house, he must still make and pay for all repairs. This clause is frequently enforced by landlords when plaster falls off the walls, when, due to age, the ceilings fall in, or when the plumbing wears out.

If thru the inveterate neglect of the landlord, the house has become a danger to the tenant, and if, thru an accident caused by this neglect the tenant is injured, the tenant, in this widely used lease, is forced to agree that the landlord is in no way responsible. "Lessor shall not be liable to Lessee for any damage or injury to him or his property occasioned by the failure of the lessor (landlord) to keep said places in repairs," says article seven of the most frequently used apartment lease in the city. "Nor shall the Lessor be liable for any injury done or occasioned by wind, or by or from any defect in plumbing, or electric wiring, gas pipes, water pipes, or from broken stairs, porches, railings, or walks nor for any damage from water, ice or snow bearing upon or coming thru the roof nor for any damage caused from any act of negligence, or omission of co-tenants or other persons or of the lessor's agents or of the lessor himself, all claims for any such damages being hereby expressly waived by lessee."

Will Not Furnish Heat.

Another clause in the lease concocted by the Chicago Real Estate Board which is frequently taken advantage of by the landlord to decrease his expenses, seems rather harmless, but it is really an agreement of the tenant, if the landlord fails to furnish heat, that he must furnish his own heat for an apartment rented as a heated apartment.

"Lessor shall not be held liable for any injury or damage whatsoever which may arise or accrue from his failure to furnish cold or hot water, regardless of the cause of such failure, all claims for such injury or damage hereby being expressly waived by lessee."

The Tenants' League of Chicago and several charity organizations have in their files numerous records of tenants, who, renting a flat as a heated flat, have been forced, by the above clause to pay out an additional ten or twenty dollars a month to heat the apartment themselves.

It might be asked, "Why does a tenant in a sane state of mind sign away all his rights, and agree to take all responsibility himself?" The answer is that ninety-two per cent of the people of Chicago, if they want to live in the city at all, are forced to sign the above lease or one just as bad or worse.

The Chicago Real Estate Board, which has just come before the people of the city in a benevolent, altruistic guise, with an "Own your own home" exhibit at the Coliseum, absolutely controls the leasing of all the apartments and flats in Chicago.

Must Leave Improvements.

If you rent a home in Chicago at all, you must agree in addition to the above, to leave all improvements you have made on your apartment at the disposal of the landlord, or if he desires to move the improvements, such as locks, doors, cupboards, shelves, partitions, bathroom fixtures, lighting fixtures, "The Lessor (landlord) may remove and store same, and lessee agrees to pay for removal and storage of same."

In the next article we shall further expose the sharp practices of landlords, bordering on the illegal, which grow directly out of the unscrupulous leases which the tenants of Chicago must sign, or else leave the city.

LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLICS ARE DOLLAR RULED

Four Billions Are Sunk There

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Your share of our American investment in Canada and Latin-America would be $150 if ownership of the rapidly developing American financial empire were equally distributed among the 41,600,000 gainfully employed persons in the country. Authoritative reports place the total grip which United States capitalists have secured on the productive enterprise of the remainder of the two continents at $6,260,000,000.

Investment of United States dollars in Latin-America, according to a statement by the department of commerce, amounts to nearly four billions—$610,000,000 in pubic securities and $3,150,000,000 in Latin-American industries. That means, it says, nearly $35 for every man, woman and child in the United States without counting almost two billion dollars in trade which affects directly and indirectly a great number of Americans engaged in producing, transporting and marketing merchandise. This ought to prove, of course, that even the humblest inhabitant of the country has a stake in the expansion of empire.

The department discusses the growth of imperialist interest: "Our great interest in Latin-America," it says, "is largely a growth of the last ten years, almost entirely of the 20 years which have elapsed since the beginning of work on the Panama canal. Latin-America prior to 1904 was terra incognita to many Americans; now manufacturers and merchants, farmers, bankers and investors, shipowners and operators, travelers, educators and students are looking for all the information they can get on Latin-American affairs. Colleges are giving special Latin-American courses."

The department of commerce is publishing a series of financial studies of Latin-American countries. These can be secured for 15 cents each from the superintendent of documents at Washington and should be of interest if only as an indication of the attempt to educate the people of the country into supporting financial aggression.

Consolidation of American foreign investment is to be secured thru such institutions as the recently organized International Securities Trust of America which is starting under the wing of the great Morgan Guaranty Trust with a capitalization of $65,000,000. This corporation is modelled after similar investment combines which have for years supervised much of the overseas investment of the British empire. It is known as the group system of investing. The selection of securities to be purchased by this trust is rigidly circumscribed by conditions which insure international diversification. Among the conditions laid down is that "investments may be made only in those countries where the financial history shows stability and the protection of private property assured."

A recent instance of the expansion of American investment in Latin-America is the purchase of control of the International Railways of Central America from British interests. This means American control of almost 600 miles of railroad across the backbone of Central America. The road has a contract for carrying all the United Fruit Co.'s products in Guatemala so that the transaction really means a consolidation of American control in that region.

Tribune Begs Lady's Pardon for Calling Her Working Woman

(By The Federated Press)

A horrible stain on the character of a real lady has been hastily removed by that most chivalrous of character assassins, the Chicago Tribune. The assassination in this instance was unintentional and the lady's reputation was revived a few days later by formal printed apology. She was not a radical and was therefore entitled to decent consideration.

The moral lapse unintentionally attributed to the gentlewoman was not the familiar fleshy one to which even our toniest ladies are susceptible. It was apparently far worse. It was a downright denial of aristocracy, of gentility, of our democracy's highest social standards.

The Trib had called her a "governess," basely implying that she had earned her living by her own efforts, drawing a beggarly wage in exchange for actual service instead of clipping it from gilt-edged bonds.

The Federated Press will do what it can to rectify the Trib's mistake by reprinting the apology which appeared in the Tribune of March 27:

Mrs. Williams was a highly educated woman and, instructed her daughter Mary and some of her young friends in Latin and the higher studies. She took up this work because she was left lonely after the death of the three younger children of the family. She did not at any time act as a hired governess.

Nothing vulgar, you see—own daughter and some friends—the higher studies—above all, not at any time common hired governess. Dear no.

BIG FINANCIAL AID ASSURED TO STRIKERS

Amalgamated's Treasury To Help I. L. G. W. U.

The powerful Amalgamated Clothing Worker of Chicago is coming to the aid of the striking dressmakers of the International Ladies Garment Workers with a large sum of money, it was learned yesterday after the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Joint Board of the "Amalgamated" which authorized the donation.

All that remains now to put the money into the hands of the striking union is the formal sanction of the Joint Board at its meeting today.

"Dennie" Railroads Eight.

"Dennie" Sullivan was hard at work all yesterday, acting as judge and jury, railroading garment strikers haled before him on injunction counts.

Eight workers received prison sentences and fines and five others were fined without prison sentences. The strikers are still free and the fines are unpaid while appeal is being taken.

Judge Enjoys Work.

Victoria Seslakwitz received most of Sullivan's attention. He sentenced her with evident pleasure to 45 days in jail and a $200 fine.

Thirty days and a $150 fine was given Eva Dorenfeld and Oscar Seims, each. Twenty days and $150 fine was inflicted on Clara Zazarn. Rose Harris, Fannie Goldberg, Rose Goodman and Sarah Schneider all got ten day sentences and $125 fines.

Mrs. Rosenstein was the only striker discharged.

Mamie Kuntz and Marie Bergstrom were each fined $50 and Clara Miller and Carrie Siever were each fined $150.

This sanction will come as a matter of course, it was stated at the Amalgamated, because the Joint Board had referred the matter of strike aid to the Board of Directors.

Amount Named Today.

Until the meeting today the DAILY WORKER is not at liberty to make public the sum, but it can be stated that it is a substantial amount which will be of very considerable aid to the workers who have been putting up such a gallant battle against the sweatshop system for five weeks.

This support from the Amalgamated, an organization unconnected with the American Federation of Labor, is expected to spur unions affiliated with the Chicago Federation into concrete action in behalf of the strikers.

Have Aided Many Struggles.

The Amalgamated has extended aid to striking workers ever since its inception. It has given not only to its sister organization in the A. F. of L. but has contributed generously to miners, railroad workers and to struggles in many industries and trades.

Its own historic struggles in 1915 and 1910 got considerable support from other Chicago unions.

The Board of Directors of the Joint Board of Chicago is officered by Philip Chelemer, as president; M. C. Fisch, as secretary. Charles Sweatall, president of the Joint Board, is also a member of the board of directors which numbers 11.

"Dennie" Fines Five More.

Judge "Dennie" Sullivan began the day in his court yesterday by soaking fines on five strikers for picketing. The persons fined were: Bessie Katz, $200; Olga Galitch, Sam Dorf, Joe Kravitz, and Isadore Kreeger, $175 each. The sentences will all be appealed.

Immediately after "Dennie" had sentenced these five strikers, five others who had been arrested on attachments were brought before him for preliminary hearing. They were: Meyer Kranz, Ida Rubnow, Esther Richman, Sarah Seidel, Jennie Chanin and Caroline Witlowska. Their cases were all set to be heard sometime next week.

Then James P. Hyde, appearing for the Francine Frock Co. and other complainants, had 23 strikers brought out and began trying them. The method employed was to get a general

COLUMBIA LAW DEAN FILLS POST DAUGHERTY HELD

Harlan Fiske Stone Is Coolidge Choice

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Harlan Fiske Stone, New York, former Dean of Columbia Law School, has been selected as attorney-general of the United States by President Coolidge.

Official announcement of the selection was made today and Stone's nomination was sent to the Senate for confirmation.

Opposed Palmer's Raids.

He will take office as successor to Harry M. Daugherty as soon as the Senate confirms him.

He was President Coolidge's guest at breakfast at the White House this morning. Several senators were there also and tho Mr. Coolidge did not tell any of them that Stone had been selected, they got the impression he was to be the new attorney-general. This belief was confirmed somewhat later.

Stone was a classmate of President Coolidge at Amherst College and the two are old friends.

Stone's nomination is expected to be approved by the Senate immediately. Stone will return to Washington after putting his personal affairs in New York in shape and take over the duties of the Department of Justice.

Stone is known as a liberal in his views. He opposed the "red raids" conducted against radicals in this country by A. Mitchell Palmer, attorney-general under the Wilson administration.

Refused To Comment.

President Coolidge's decision to appoint Stone came after a long study of many "possibilities."

Stone was born in New Hampshire October 11, 1872. He was admitted to the bar in 1898 and ever since he has been a lecturer on the law. In September, 1920, he became Dean of the Columbia University school of law.

His firm is Canfield, Satterle and Stone and he is a director in a number of enterprises.

Stone lives in Englewood, N. J.

He married Agnes Harvey of Chesterfield, N. H., in 1890.

President Coolidge's appointment of Harlan Fiske Stone as attorney general means that the Department of Justice is to be taken out of politics during the Coolidge administration, it was said at the White House after Stone's nomination was sent to the senate today.

After Stone's name had been presented to the senate, most Democrats refused comment on the appointment.

"I don't know him and never heard of him," Democratic Leader Robinson said.

PARIS, April 2.—Speaking in the chamber of deputies this afternoon, Premier Poincare indicated that France will not accept the findings of the commissions of experts investigating Germany's capacity to pay reparations, if it involves abandoning the Ruhr.

TRADE UNIONS IN STEEL DISTRICT FIGHT DAVIS LAWS

Kluxers and Royal Riders Standing Alone

By WALLACE METCALFE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 2.—The Mahoning County Labor Congress went on record opposing the selective immigration laws sponsored by Secretary Davis now before the powers that rule in Washington, D. C.

Resolutions were adopted and published in both of the daily papers as well as in the Labor Record, official organ of the labor movement in this section, condemning the passage of the immigration laws.

Seated By Labor Body.

Three delegates from the Council for the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers were seated by the Mahoning County Labor Congress as fraternal delegates and will co-operate with the labor movement in combatting passage of the laws.

About the only organization favoring passage of the immigration laws in this section of the steel district is the Ku Klux Klan and its suckling called the "Royal Riders of the Red Robes" whose members lately were attendants at a meeting of the Knights of Lincoln, the colored Klan, who's imperial wizard, known as Rev. Russell, departed for parts unknown after his record in a N. Y. state prison was made known and after he had victimized several score members of his race.

The only thing left behind by the very Reverend Russell was a photo of Lincoln and a bad taste in the mouth of his dupes.

Negroes Are Invited.

Negro organizations have been invited to send delegates to the Council for the Protection of Foreign-Born and at the next meeting several organizations will be represented.

BULLETS NOT BALLOTS MARK CICERO ELECTION

Capitalist Politicians Shoot It Out

Force and violence and other unlawful means meant more than a dry legal document stating reasons why Communists should be sent to jail for several years for trying to overthrow the government with typewriters, mimeographs and buried barrels of literature, when democrats and republicans buckled on their armor, took out their shooting irons and turned the little town of Cicero into a miniature Mexico, while the voters of that Chicago suburb were trying to decide who should collect the graft from the bootleggers for the next few years.

Republicans To Get the Graft.

When the smoke of battle cleared away and the dead and wounded taken to the undertaking parlors and hospitals, the republicans were victorious. Thomas J. Buckley was elected collector. If there ever was anything in a name, it is in the collector's in Cicero. It is stated that a man who cannot save $200,000 in four years as collector in Cicero should be in a home for the feeble-minded.

The republicans have ruled Cicero for years and are running it as a wide open town. In the past they have divided the spoils with the democrats. This year the democrats decided to place an independent ticket in the field and the shooting began.

The democrats ran on a more liberal ticket than that of their opponents. They promised a reduction on the protection rate per bar-

McCray Wanted Money in Batches, Bankers Testify

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 2.—Efforts of Governor McCray to secure a $600,000 loan from Indianapolis bankers last summer to pay back $155,000 of the funds of the state board of agriculture were to be aired today at the trial of McCray on charges of larceny and embezzlement for his use of the board of agriculture's money.

Frank D. Stalnacker, president of the Indiana National Bank, and Elmer W. Stout, president of the Fletcher American National Bank, told of rejecting McCray's urgent plea for a loan last summer to "meet pressing obligations." They said McCray mentioned the $155,000 of the board of agriculture as one of the sums he must have. They said they told him that the Indianapolis banks could no longer extend him credit because of the precarious condition of his finances.

WEEKS, DAUGHERTY, GOFF, HAYDEN IN $5,000,000 AIR PLANE DEAL, SAYS SCAIFE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 2.—Declaring that Secretary of War John Weeks, head of the United States Army, still a member of the Coolidge cabinet, ought to be indicted for conspiracy, Captain H. L. Scaife today told the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee that Weeks "called off" a suit against the Wright-Martin Airplane Corporation for recovery of an overpayment of $5,000,000.

Captain Scaife included among the conspirators, in addition to Secretary of War Weeks, former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, Guy D. Goff, one of Daugherty's assistants, and Charles Hayden, President of the Wright-Martin Airplane Corporation. Scaife also charged that Daugherty, tho he had all the facts in the case, failed to bring suit. No suit has ever been filed, Scaife said.

This is the same Captain Scaife who, on Saturday, charged that Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover had diverted $1,000,000 of Soviet Russian Relief funds to the white counter-revolutionary armies, in an effort to overthrow the Russian Soviet Republic, as he had successfully overthrown the Hungarian Soviet Republic.

The exposure of Secretary of War Weeks shows that the effort to knock out additional members of Coolidge's cabinet of grafters has not yet come to a complete halt.

NEW LIGHT ON DAUGHERTY'S MITSUI DEAL

Agent Says Jess Smith and Daugherty Knew Facts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Charges that the Standard Aircraft Corporation, a Japanese financed firm which built airplanes for the United States during the war, communicated American aviation secrets to Japan were made before the senate Daugherty investigating committee today by Captain H. L. Scaife, former Department of Justice agent.

Scaife submitted reports by naval intelligence officers purporting to corroborate his charges.

Scaife Investigates Fraud.

Scaife's charge was made during his testimony alleging that the government had overpaid Mitsui & Company and the Standard Aircraft Company more than $6,500,000 for airplane construction and that Daugherty had failed to recover the money.

Gaston B. Means recently told the committee that he received 100 $1,000 bills from a representative of Mitsui & Company for Jess Smith, Daugherty's close personal friend.

The committee examined Scaife in detail concerning his investigation of the aircraft corporation, which he previously charged were blocked by officials of the Department of Justice.

Senator Wheeler, Montana, read into the record impeachment charges against Daugherty in the House in 1922 relating to his alleged failure to prosecute the Standard Aircraft Company.

Daugherty Got Report.

Scaife said that Daugherty was given a personal report on the alleged fraudulent transaction of the Standard Aircraft Company.

"Who was present?" asked Wheeler

"Jess Smith."

"The same Jess Smith who got the $100,000?"

Paul Howland, counsel for Daugherty, objected to the remark and Wheeler withdrew his statement.

Taking up the Roma disaster at Norfolk, Va., Scaife said he considered this accident a good field for investigation by the Department of Justice.

Scaife then read an audit which he said showed an overpayment of $5,000,000 to the Wright-Martin corporation.

"I think that we should have these men indicted by a grand jury," said Scaife.

"What men?" asked Moses.

"John W. Weeks, secretary of war; Charles Hayden, president of the Wright-Martin company; Harry M. Daugherty, ex-attorney-general, and Guy D. Goff, his assistant," said Scaife.

Daugherty Refused to Prosecute

Replying to questions by Senator Wheeler, Scaife said that he had laid all of his reports and charges before Daugherty who promised to prosecute

It Goes Badly With Cal's Crooked Gang

DISCLOSURES that Secretary of War John M. Weeks is involved in a $5,000,000 airplane scandal, creates interest in the present status of Cal Coolidge's cabinet of political crooks. The standing is as follows:

GONE!

Edwin Denby, former Secretary of the Navy, who turned over the navy's oil reserves to the oil robbers.

Harry M. Daugherty whose crimes are too numerous to mention.

GOING!

Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, who got caught in the million dollar booze scandal. He is a big whisky distiller and chief prohibition enforcement officer. One of his many jobs is helping rich dodge their taxes.

John W. Weeks, Secretary of War and banker who purchased the stock of the Bosch Magneto Company, a German concern, for over three millions less than the stock was worth. Now caught in $5,000,000 airplane scandal.

TO GO!

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, who diverted one million dollars of the American relief funds to aid Czarist war on Soviet Rule.

Charles E. Hughes, agent of the Standard Oil Company, in plot to prevent the recognition of Russia and to grab oil fields in the Near East.

Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, Wall Street tool and enemy of the farmers.

Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, who succeeded Albert B. Fall, and hid the criminal acts of his predecessor.

James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, also Pittsburgh banker, author of the scheme to finger-print the foreign born workers.

Calvin Coolidge, President, champion strikebreaker of America and ringleader of the cabinet of crooks.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 2.—Instructions for all coal miners in the southwest to remain on strike were sent out by union leaders here today following failure to reach an agreement on wages in negotiations with mine operators. About 35,000 men are affected. SAGE OF EMPORIA IS URGING CANNING OF TAX DODGER MELLON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EMPORIA, Kans., April 2.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will be the next cabinet officer to "walk the plank" William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, said in his paper today.

"If he stays aboard he will sink the ship," White said.

"The roar that forced Daugherty and Denby will be a whisper compared with what Mellon will get when the country knows what he has done, following his personal attitude, toward the laws which are entrusted to him."

White said that Mellon belonged to that wing of the party which did not believe in the prohibition law and "time and again he has scoffed at the law, ignored the law and bent it to uses which were questionable."

Mellon also belongs to that wing of the party which believes that taxes should be paid largely as possible by a per capita average, and that the rich should not be taxed according to their great debt to the government for protecting their wealth and aiding them in its accumulation, the editorial said.

"Five Lonely Scabs"---A Story of the Garment Strike---On Page Three

LIE IS PASSED TO E. L. DOHENY BY WITNESS

Democratic Chairman Says He Lied $40,000 Worth

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—George White, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, today told the senate oil committee that E. L. Doheny contributed $34,900 to the democratic party funds in 1920 and 1921.

White, when questioned about Doheny's testimony that he had contributed $75,000 said Doheny would have to account for the difference. White said he recalled no contributions from Harry F. Sinclair. Doheny gave him three checks aggregating $9,900, during the campaign in 1920 and in April 1921 contributed $25,000 toward the party's deficit, White said.

New Investigating Agency.

An improvised national investigating agency has been built up to run down evidence for the senate oil scandal committee.

It is thru this agency that Senator Walsh expects to produce proof that there was a conspiracy to lease the naval oil reserves as far back as the 1920 Republican national convention.

Here is the way the new investigating agency works, as Walsh described it today to the DAILY WORKER reporter.

"We receive scores of letters each day—some from inmates of insane asylums and some from patriotic citizens who have evidence bearing upon our inquiry. Heretofore we have had no method of finding out just what these witnesses would testify.

Correspondence Sleuthing.

"A man writes that some prominent man told him there was a conspiracy at the last Republican convention. We have to subpoena both men, sometimes half way across the continent and bear the expense of their visit. And when they get to the stand sometimes they do not tell the story I expect or after consultation I learn that they have no direct evidence, only rumors.

"Thru this new arrangement I can obtain some one in practically every city in the United States to go to see the man who writes me and find out just exactly what is to be testified."

After hearing White the committee adjourned until Monday to give Walsh an opportunity to work over, thru his new investigating agency, additional information which has come to him concerning the story of rumored bribery at the last Republican national convention.

Bacchus, Wounded In Cicero, Will Miss Time of His Life

Pan, the God of music, will have his innings at the Cabaret Dance which will be held tonight in the Folkets Hus, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard. Most of the other Gods will be there too, with the exception of Bacchus who was severely wounded in the Cicero elections and does not want to appear among the goddesses in a battered condition.

The God of music, however, has promised to make up with sound what may be missed in the way of spiritual exhiliration thru the absence of Bacchus. The Northwest Side branch of the Workers Party in conjunction with the Maplewood branch of the Young Yorkers League are staging this affair in a joint effort to introduce a new innovation to Chicago radicals. It is reported that the idea was imported from New York, which makes it fashionable right off the reel.

There will be singing, dancing and eats. Just like a cabaret. It is even rumored that the R. U. R. robots will be there, tho perhaps incognito, their manager being averse to allowing the public to gaze on them until they make their official debut in that famous play. But if you are sufficiently curious a member of the Northwest Side branch may introduce you to them. Yes, they can talk—sometimes too much.

But the funniest part of the show will be the announcer. Who he is, what he is, remains to be seen. It will cost you exactly 35 cents to see everything including the announcer. Russians playing mandolins. Others reciting. Two pretty girls, Mabel Neemai and Emma Blechsmidt performing a special dance. What more do you want? Come!

New Light On Daugherty's Deals

the Wright-Martin company, but Daugherty never kept his promise.

Crooks Dictated Policy.

Scaife wandered into an account of aircraft disasters during and after the war, which he said he considered a good field for investigation.

Burns had disagreed with his suggestion, thus betraying—Scaife said—that the department of justice policy resulted in "crooks not being investigated unless they were willing to be investigated."

On the day of the disaster to the army airship Roma at Norfolk, Va., in February, 1921, the witness said, he had prepared a telegram to the department's agent at Norfolk instructing him to start an investigation, but when it was submitted for Burns' signature the latter refused to sanction it because the war department had not asked for an investigation.

Huge Profits.

Taking up the Wright-Martin company case, Scaife said that the company's "minutes" showed that it had been agreed by the directors that 8 per cent would be a fair profit on war contracts for planes, while the audit of the company's books showed that 270 per cent net profit" had been taken. He added that the audit also disclosed an overpayment by the government to the company of $5,267,000.

Thomas L. Chadbourne, an attorney, got the Wright-Martin Aircraft company its cost-plus contract, Scaife said, as a substitute for an original fixed price contract.

"The fees paid Chadbourne for turning the contract into a cost-plus affair," Scaife went on, "were added to the costs of the company as presented to the government under the cost-plus system."

Expenses Included Everything.

The committee identified Chadbourne as a democrat, and Scaife added "he was a large campaign fund contributor."

Scaife read items from the audit to show that cigars, laundry and similar charges for company officers had been included in what the government was required to pay for. The cigar item was for $900, and included a special box for the company president.

The witness said he had reported the facts to Mr. Daugherty, and that a promise had been made in behalf of the department of justice to institute prosecutions.

"This case had gone thru every process of audit and review in the war department before it came to the department of justice," he said.

Letters exchanged between Secretary Weeks, Hayden and others, in 1922, were read by the witness. Mr. Weeks told Hayden, in one of the letters, that an appeal from air service officers to himself was possible in the case of overpayments.

Another letter from Assistant Attorney General Lovett to William Hayward, United States attorney in New York, dated Nov. 15, 1921, transmitted war department records on the Wright-Martin overpayment case and directed that recovery proceedings be started.

Weeks Stopped Prosecution.

In a letter dated Nov. 23, 1921, Weeks told Hayden he would request the department of justice to take no further action in the case until Weeks had talked with General Manager Hoyt of the Wright-Martin company.

On Aug. 8, 1922, Scaife went on, Guy D. Goff wrote to the attorney for the Wright-Martin company, saying that suit was to be instituted. "The department of justice was switching the case around from attorney to attorney," Scaife said. It was taken back from District Attorney Hayward in New York, he said, and tendered to Leon B. Duer, a New York attorney.

Meanwhile, Scaife asserted, "witnesses were disappearing and the men who made the audits were leaving the service."

Senator Wheeler, the committee prosecutor, suggested that "the volunteer remarks that Mr. Scaife made as to indictments have no particular place in the record," but Senator Moses said it was too late to withdraw the testimony, as it had "already gone over the wires."

George B. Chamberlain, counsel for Daugherty, asked the witness why he had no advised also the indictment of "the people who made these allowances to the companies in the first place."

Scaife agreed that both groups "ought to be prosecuted." The committee then took a recess until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

More Daugherty Frauds.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 2.—Telegrams sent to former Attorney-General Daugherty were brought to the attention of the senate committee investigating alleged land frauds in the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas today by Senator Heflin (democrat, Alaska), who with the aid of James R. Page of Kansas City, Mo., is prosecuting the inquiry.

The committee also went further into complaints from purchasers of the property on file in the postoffice department, having ordered Page and George A. Hill, Jr., of Houston, Texas, attorney for R. B. Creager of Brownsville, republican national committeeman from Texas, to make a summary of these letters not already read into the record. Rush D. Simmons, chief of the division of postal inspectors, who has been on the stand since the inquiry began, remained for further questioning.

The telegrams to Daugherty were brought out by Senator Heflin as indicating an effort to influence the former attorney-general to have cases against Rio Grande valley land companies dropped. Creager has been accused by Senator Heflin of being a party to the alleged frauds and also of using influence in Washington in an effort to stop investigations.

Bullets, Not Ballots, Election Story

rel of real beer. The beer runners were kicking against the price of $5 on every barrel that passed thru Cicero as well as what was sold there. The democrats would bring booze graft within the reach of the humblest citizen. The republicans were maintaining a sort of alcoholic Wall Street in the town.

Republicans Have Re-inforcements.

The republicans, believing in the Napoleonic adage that "God is on the side of the heaviest battalions," called out their armies and made alliance with neighboring war lords in South Chicago, who sent in reinforcements. The democrats called in the democratic administration of Chicago, and that powerful ally sent as many spare cops as were not engaged in arresting strikers, to aid their beleaguered friends in Cicero.

A squad from the detective bureau in an automobile, opened fire careless-like on three men who were seen walking out of a hotel. The three got out their pistols. All the weapons talked simultaneously. The music was pretty for awhile. Then one of the three threw up his hands. A democratic bullet had found his heart. Another was arrested. The third escaped.

Where Are the Medals?

There were no deaths on the democratic side but there were several wounded. Gangsters used a garage for a prison, where hostile precinct captains were held until the balloting and the bulleting was over. The Cicero voters are rather glad that elections don't happen every day. Most of them smelled powder for the first time and do not like it. It takes as much courage to vote for a democrat in Cicero as it does to vote for a Catholic in Atlanta, Ga.

Had Comfortable Lead.

The Chicago Tribune has not yet blamed the sanguinary conflict on the Communists but no doubt as Mr. Burns is looking for another appropriation for his investigation bureau he will swear on the bible that Moscow financed the gangsters.

The majorities of the republicans were around eight or nine hundred. They would have been higher but for the intrusion of Mayor Dever's army. It was a great victory for democracy.

In other sections of the United States the elections were comparatively free from bloodshed, but the stakes were not always as high as in Cicero.

Klux Helped Socialists.

Daniel W. Hoan, socialist mayor of Milwaukee, was reelected with a majority of about 8,000 votes over the so-called non-partisan candidate David S. Rose. A La Follette-Socialist united front was evident. The Ku Klux Klan also declared for Hoan tho this support was repudiated by the socialists and branded as a ruse on the part of the enemy. As the Klan is supposed to be "dry" and Rose is an avowed "wet" the night shirt brigade may have been in earnest.

It is also stated that a goodly percentage of the former membership of the Socialist Party in Milwaukee is now in the Klan. This is true of Indiana and Ohio.

LaFollette is leading in the Badger State for the delegation to the republican convention and Governor Al Smith of New York is ahead in the democrat primaries. Smith has a comfortable lead over McAdoo.

In Peoria, Ill., it is reported that the democrat victory was a defeat for the Ku Klux Klan.

Young Teddy Elected.

Theodore Roosevelt was elected preferential delegate to the New York State Republican convention, defeating his independent opponent.

Unqualified endorsement of Jonathan M. Davis as Kansas' choice for the democratic presidential nomination was assured today as the state party convention went into session to choose delegates to the New York convention.

Browder Speaking Tonight.

BURNS MUST GO!

Burns Indulges In Annual Lie Orgy In Seeking Graft

WASHINGTON, April 2.—William J. Burns wants another appropriation for his Investigation Bureau, which is a feeding ground for the William J. Burns International Detective Agency. He appeared before a house sub-committee on appropriations recently and part of his testimony was made public here thru the New York Tribune bureau which is an annex to the American Defense Society. The noted "defective" is reported to have informed the committee that there are 557 radical papers in the United States published in 26 languages. The Soviet government was responsible for strikes in the United States, said Burns. Asked if the Third International was responsible for the Herrin affair, Burns stated that they were connected with it. He was not positive of this, however, as Mr. Ellis Searles.

Burns digs up the same old arguments every year when going after the money required to keep his stool pigeon agency in good condition. He did not tell the committee that the Communists were responsible for giving away the Teapot Dome, buying the presidency, or accepting bribes from the Japanese government. But Burns may get his appropriation unless he is kicked out like his criminal superior, Daugherty.

Warren Workers Hold Big Meeting On Teapot Dome

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARREN, Ohio, April 2.—At a big mass meeting here called by the Workers Party to consider the Teapot Dome situation John Hamilton, Comrade Lerner, of Cleveland; Kranilovich, of the South Slavic Branch, and Fred Merrick, Pittsburgh district organizer, emphasized the hopeless corruption of capitalistic government and the importance of the Farmer-Labor Party movement.

Merrick urged on the workers the need of unity between foreign born and American workers and brought out the fact that the American born workers has made gallant fights against oppression and can be rallied to a program for solidarity with the foreign born.

Chicago's Retail Clerk's Union Wins $4 Raise

A flat raise of four dollars a week is granted organized retail clerks of Chicago in an agreement signed by officials of Retail Clerks Local No. 195 of Chicago at a conference with the Merchants' Association of Cook County and the Maxwell Street Business Men's Association.

The agreement will run for two years. Business Agent Harry Winnick and Samuel R. Cooper, president of the local, represented the union at the conference.

Eight-Hour Day Celebrated By United Mine Workers

The United Mine Workers of America celebrated the anniversary of the winning of the eight-hour day thruout the jurisdiction of the organization. In some districts they celebrated it by a strike, their contracts with the coal owners having terminated and the bosses refusing to sign a new wage pact.

One hundred and fifty-five thousand miners in the anthracite regions quit work, only the engineers, firemen, pump runners and others remaining at work.

The miners of Illinois celebrated the day as a holiday.

Forty thousand miners in the Southwestern states were on strike, the 1923 contract having expired.

Eight thousand miners in Western Canada struck when the coal operators refused to sign a new contract. The strike promises to be the hardest fought in the history of the union.

Balloting at Nelson British Columbia, showed an overwhelming vote for a walkout.

Boom for Ralston Begun by Hoosier Democratic Chiefs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, April 2—The first organized effort to bring about the nomination of Senator Samuel M. Ralston for the presidency was started today at a meeting of the democratic state committee, and leaders of the party in Indiana.

A committee was named at a meeting of the state committee to present the name of Ralston to the nation as a presidential possibility.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Why Not Third Degree Taylor?

WHY DOESN'T the state's attorney's office kidnap Dudley Taylor? Why doesn't State's Attorney Crowe put Dudley Taylor thru the third degree? Why isn't Dudley Taylor stuck in a stinking police station cell overnight?

These are serious questions. They should have an answer.

* * * *

It is charged that the "assassination plot" at the home of the struck garment manufacturer, Nicholas Kovler, was a frame-up of the state's attorney's office and its bloodhounds.

Lawyer Dudley Taylor, legal light of Chicago's biggest open shop bosses, works hand in glove with the courts and the state's attorney's office against the workers.

It is charged that in every labor struggle, Lawyer Taylor is connected with some such shooting event as occurred at the Kovler home. Lawyer Taylor can be connected with these provocateur acts in every strike.

Yet, Dudley Taylor is not third degreed.

* * * *

But it is Morris Bealis, the head of the strikers' joint board, who is kidnaped, who is questioned, who is thrown into a foul police station cell, who is kept all night incommunicado, who is only released the next day with the sleuths of capitalist justice confessing they do not have an iota of evidence against him.

* * * *

Nothing during the garment workers' strike has so clearly exposed the close alliance between the open shop interests and their political tools in public office as the kidnaping of Bealis. Every kept sheet in town is silent about it.

First, as it charged, the state's attorney's office enters into a frame-up against striking workers, and then, of course, it must protect its pals in crimes against the workers.

Taylor will not be arrested and third degreed. Instead his suave arguments will get a respectable hearing from the "honorable" courts.

The heads of the private detective agencies furnishing thugs and gunmen for the struck garment bosses will not be troubled.

While Dudley Taylor and his legal allies in the capitalist courts continually yell "conspiracy" before the judges against the strikers, no mention is made of the actual conspiracy of the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers against the welfare of the workers.

* * * *

This garment strike, like all previous strikes, has shown that the bosses are solidly united. They stand together. They fight together. They win together.

Let the workers profit by this garment strike by developing a little more solidarity, a little more unity.

Let them learn to stand together a little closer, fight together a little better, and win some bigger and ever bigger victories.

IF THEY WILL DO THIS THEN THE SACRIFICES OF THIS STRIKE WILL NOT HAVE BEEN IN VAIN.

Financial Aid Assured Strikers

statement from several witnesses about conditions in the strike area and then try each case separately by calling witnesses to testify against certain strikers.

23 Real Unionists.

The 23 strikers put on trial in one batch were: Sophie Yoong, Victoria Seslakiz, Fannie Goldberg, Rose Harris, Mrs. Rosenstein, Emma Rosenberg, Rose Goodman, Sarah Schneider, Mammie Kuntz, Clara Miller, Carrie Siever, Clara Zazaon, Evelyn Dorenfield, William Wentworth, Oscar Simon, Victor Powerman, John Swiekoski, Matthew Argadskas, Albert Dobie, Ben Stein, Alphonse Graham, Albert Ferguson and Morris Ulitzky.

William Leonard, manager of the General Service Co., a detective agency that hides behind a harmless sounding name, was the first witness called to tell of conditions in the strike district. He said he was hired by several dress manufacturers to guard their workers and "for other services."

Fink Saw 52 Pickets.

Leonard said that yesterday morning he had seen 52 pickets on two blocks in the Loop strike district, thus unwittingly paying a compliment to the solidarity of the strikers who picket in spite of injunctions, policemen, private sluggers and spies.

Leonard said that his men had served more than 100 pickets with copies of the injunction and told them to stay away from the strike district. He did not refer even once to any of the 23 strikers on trial.

Fink Is Asinine Witness.

Under cross examination by Peter Sissman, lawyer for the strikers, he said he was employed by the Francine Frock Co., Mitchell Bros., Arthur Weiss and Co., and Katz and Dolinsky. He would not tell on what basis he was paid. Leonard seemed a little vague as to just where the guards assigned under him worked. He had testified that some of them worked in the shops guarding the scabs and the bosses and then said that some of them had served copies of the injunction on pickets. His testimony was liberally sprinkled with long drawn out Ahs! He was constantly playing for time in which to frame his answers. When he stepped off the stand he was nervous and walked out of the court room at once.

Patrick J. Collins of the state's attorney's office was the next witness called. He was called to testify against Sophie Young. He said that he had seen her around the strike district often and had arrested her March 17th for assault. Then William Schroeder, another Crowe dick, was called. He said that he, too, had arrested Sophie Young on March 17th for assault.

Dicks Quarrel for Credit.

On cross examination it developed that Sophie Young had only been arrested once on that day and that the apparent difficulty was that Schroeder didn't want Collins to walk off with all the credit. Collins on the other hand didn't want Schroeder to get any of the credit for the glorious work of arresting little girls. When the matter of the proper distributing of credit had been settled Schroeder said, "We are partners. If he arrests them or I do its all the same."

"Dennie" Plays Cat.

It was now 12:20. Before passing sentence Judge Sullivan amused himself by discussing with the lawyers the proper sort of punishment for Miss Young. He tried to play the cat, with Miss Young as the mouse.

"I pity any man who gets that young lady for a wife," hizoner observed. He didn't explain what that had to do with the case on trial. The judge continued his gentle sport with one eye on the clock. Promptly at 12.30 he sentenced Miss Young to 25 days in the county jail and $200 fine. Then he adjourned court for lunch.

Poor Comfort for Bosses.

The Journal of Commerce, in a signed story in yesterday's issue, tries to cheer up the manufacturers by telling them the strike is on its last legs. The basis for the assumption seems to be that since the bosses are still refusing to concede the union demands; therefore, the strike is being lost. In the course of the story the Journal of Commerce says that Sullivan's "Injunction halts picketing," and in the next paragraph they say, "Thruout its course the union pickets have constantly patrolled the streets of the clothing district."

The worthy Journal admits that if the strike is called off by the union that there will still be a good union spirit among the workers.

These self contradictory statements are the sort of thing that the bosses are using to keep their spirits up, union officials said yesterday.

Peoria Klansmen Fail to Reward Republican Friends

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., April 2.—Republicans elected seven out of nine aldermen here yesterday but lost on supervisors, the Democratic candidate for supervisor and 11 out of 15 assistant supervisors winning. The Ku Klux Klan endorsed the Republican candidates for supervisor and roused an opposition that wiped out party lines and carried candidates to defeat.

Cuban Rail Strike Ends.

HAVANA, April 2.—The strike of union workers on the Santiago division of the Cuba railroad was ended today and train service was resumed, according to a dispatch to La Prensa. No details were given.

FITZPATRICK NOW UNITED TO WORST POLITICAL CROOKS

Deneen-Lundin in Small Machine He O. K.'d

Not only have prominent members of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party come out for the nomination of Governor Small in the April 8th primary, but in so doing, the very founders of that movement have aligned themselves with Deneen and Lundin, the most reactionary and crooked bosses in Chicago politics.

The latest move of Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Clay, Wills, Harry Scheck, McVey and other Farmer-Labor Party leaders in affiliating with this reactionary combination, means a complete shake-up in the leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party, and in the trade union circles of Chicago. Fitzpatrick, Nockels and the others, as the result of their latest move have rejected the McCabe type of Farmer-Laborite and definitely climbed on the band wagon of Gompers, as represented by Oscar Nelson and Victor Olander.

With Nelson and Gompers.

At the same time, these men, executive board members of the Farmer-Labor Party, have formed a new front with the Farmer-Labor Party of Illinois, which is reported to be backed by Nelson and the Gompers machine as a dual organization formed for the express purpose of disrupting the original Farmer-Labor Party.

The new line-up is Fitzpatrick; the Gompers machine; the Illinois Farmer-Labor Party backed by Oscar Nelson; Len Small, the disreputable old party politician; Fred Lundin, Chicago's boss, who has so often been implicated in graft charges; Charles S. Deneen, who has made a dicker with Lundin in the coming primary; Newton Jenkins and Kent Kellar, democratic politicians.

Thus Fitzpatrick, Nockels, and the other founders of the Farmer-Labor movement in Chicago, have shifted from supposedly progressive advocates of independent political action to the clan of the Gompers machine and the unscrupulous politicians with which it is associated.

May Throw Fitzpatrick Out.

It is doubtful whether or not the progressive element of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party will let the Fitzpatrick group remain in their organization in the face of this betrayal. The McCabe faction, despite the enormous pressure brought to bear from Fitzpatrick and the other reactionaries, is determined to take some action against the Farmer-Labor Party leaders who have violated the constitution of the Party and also disobeyed the instructions of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party, advising the members to keep out of the primary fight.

C. F. Lowrie, secretary of the Farmer-Labor Exchange of the Farmer-Labor Party, declared to the DAILY WORKER that "Some action will undoubtedly be taken by the executive board of the party, which will lead to independent political action in the future. The party membership will undoubtedly take action and it will be in the interest of a united third party."

When asked if he did not think the Farmer-Labor officials are violating their party platform, which declares against alliance with any other political parties, by endorsing Small, Lundin, Deneen, Jenkins and Kellar, Lowrie answered, "What's a constitution more or less between friends. You know inconsistency is a beacon to wise men and a scarecrow to fools." Lowrie admitted, however, that the direct violation of the Farmer-Labor platform would cause some decisive action on the part of the rank and file advocates of independent political action..

Small Machine's Dicker.

The Small machine, endorsed by Fitzpatrick and other original founders of the Farmer-Labor Party, has made a dicker with the old city hall faction led by Fred Lundin, who has been so particularly odious to labor and presumably to the labor officials who have now jumped into his camp. Deneen and Lundin have united in issuing a joint ballot with men of both factions. The marked ballot, which advises the voters, "Mark your ballots for the men listed below," contains the names of both Deneen and Lundin followers. For state's attorney, George B. Holmes, a Deneen man, is recommended and for circuit clerk, William E. Deffler, Lundin man.

So it goes down the ballot, Lundin and Deneen men combining to complete the new combination comprising Fitzpatrick, Gompers machine, Deneen and Small and Lundin.

Fitzpatrick Won't Comment.

John Fitzpatrick refused today to make any statement as to whether or not he would resign voluntarily from the Farmer-Labor Party, or wait for the action of the executive board. He refused to comment on his violation of the party platform, making him ineligible to belong to the Farmer-Labor Party, because he has entered the primary endorsing disreputable politicians. He still thinks the situation a logical one.

It was stated by the Newton-Jenkins campaign committee, 237 South Dearborn street, that Fitzpatrick and Nockels are active in supporting Jenkins in the republican party primary.

OIL THIEVES DO NOT HONOR OLD ROBBER CODE

Standard Steals March On Little Ones

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 2.—Lawless oil capitalists recognize one law—or, are supposed to. It is an unwritten law, based on the ancient and respectable conviction that there should be honor among thieves. Gyp the government out if its lands, overcharge the consumer, underpay the workers and use the Burns detective agency (headquarters U. S., department of justice, Washington, D. C., to break the unions, and when business is bad sell a load of fake stocks. All the while try to keep the U. S. state department fixed so that it can throw a war for democracy whenever your Mexican oil profits are endangered or the British beat you to the grab in Persian petroleum.

Standard Breaks Rule.

But—lay off your oily fellows. That seems to be the rule.

There is a rumpus in Wall Street because some say that Standard Oil has broken the rule. W. C. Teagle, president, Standard of New Jersey, on the basis of U. S. geological survey figures showing a reduction of petroleum stocks at the end of January, forecast that consumption would soon pass production. On the supposition of a prospective oil shortage prices went up.

Now, however, the government issues revised figures showing that there were 2,246,000 barrels surplus of petroleum exclusive of producers' stocks east of the Rockies, which were not in the original government figures. No government explanation is given except a footnote explaining that the revised total includes 948,000 barrels not previously reported. Some time ago Herbert Hoover pulled a similar oversight in sugar figures and prices went up also.

Withheld Reports.

The little oil fellows here are saying among themselves that Standard withheld reports of its surplus stocks to the government to justify an increase in prices of crude oil, and got away with it. The honor among thieves rule having broken down, they now suggest "in the interests of the public" that regular and complete reports of surplus stocks be made compulsory by law. Tho the pessimistic ones point out that there are ways in which oil capitalists can break even written laws.

Big Strike on German Waterfront; Sailings Cancelled

HAMBURG, April 2.—The German water front is on strike. In Hamburg and Bremen, the chief ports, all harbor workers have downed tools to preserve the 48-hour week. The North German Lloyd Co. had invited the American correspondents resident in Berlin to take part in a two-day trial cruise of the gigantic new steamer Columbus, March 19 and 20. The invitations were recalled on account of the strike.

Since the beginning of the strike, 43 ocean going steamers and freighters have arrived at Hamburg, besides those in port when the strike began. These ships are lying idle, since there is practically nobody to unload or load them.

The "technical emergency help," an organization of strikebreakers, mobilized only 539 men, of whom 346 were employed on four steamers in Hamburg carrying perishable foodstuffs, and 193 on five steamers and three barges in Altoona, right outside of Hamburg.

City Walks Unshaved To Work as Barbers And Carmen Strike

SCRANTON, Pa., April 2.—Traction lines in and around Scranton were completely tied up after the walkout Tuesday of 600 employes of the Scranton Railway Company. Lines running from Forest City to Duryear, as well as the city lines, were not running a car, and over 100,000 people were walking today following the strike.

The strike tied up the Lackawanna Valley, almost all the industrial plants located there being tied up. The conductors and motormen demanded 17 cents an hour increase, and struck rather than accept mediation from federal and business interests who wanted to force the men to accept less.

The Journeymen Barbers' Union at the same time tied up all the barber shops in town, striking for higher pay and shorter hours.

Fur Workers To Meet.

BERLIN, April 2.—The seventh international furworkers' congress will be held in Berlin July 28 to 30. This will probably be the first time the furworkers of America will be represented by delegates. The Fur Workers' Union of the United States and Canada joined the international in 1922. One of the big questions is whether the furworkers' international shall be amalgamated with the clothing workers' international.

Over Five Billion Dollars Estimated Plunder of Poincare And Pals In Financial Scandal

PARIS, April 2.—Seventy billion francs—more than $5,500,000,000. That is the estimate by members of the chamber of deputies of the takings of grafters who have precipitated the most colossal scandal that the French republic has ever known, or the French nation for that matter, for even Louis Fourteenth, the Grand, the Magnificent, never made such a raid on the treasury.

The Teapot Dome grafters are pikers. They ought to come over to France and take a few lessons.

No wonder Poincare wasn't especially anxious to form another ministry to take the place of the one which resigned because of a defeat in parliament. There never was such a stinking mess to clean up.

Charged to Reparations.

Germany occupied during the war some fifteen thousand square miles of French territory. This was the so-called "devastated area" to which the French government turned its attention when the peace came. In order to push reconstruction, the government directed that everybody who had property in that area which suffered impairment or destruction should draw up a bill of damages, representing his losses, and present it to the ministry of reconstruction. The ministry, backed by the parliament, met these claims and charged them against Germany for reparations.

One year ago, a local paper exploded a bombshell by starting to print a series of articles revealing frauds in reconstruction claims put in by big business interests. The series was just started, and a gale began to sweep about political Paris when the paper quite mysteriously ceased publication of the articles.

Meantime, M. Poincare had sent his army into the Ruhr and Germany began her fiscal debacle. Still no one paid heed to the charges of scandal. Then the French franc began to tumble. Germany was paying little or nothing on her vast war bill. The French government had expended staggering sums on reconstruction, sums which were not being met by German payments. A fiscal crisis resulted.

The Bubble Bursts.

Then the storm broke. The opposition to Poincare in the French chamber went out and collected data on the reconstruction frauds. Case after case was cited of the swindling of the public treasury by powerful business interests domiciled in the devastated regions.

One figure emerged into the limelight as the fight went on. It was that of M. Inghels, deputy from the department of the North. M. Inghels proceeded to dig into the ministry of reconstruction. He put other investigators to work.

It was found that steel and iron interests, sugar barons, textile plant owners, large manufacturers mine owning industrialists and other big business men, whose property lay in the devastated regions had overestimated their damages by the scores of millions and collected.

Among the astounding claims, one of the most amazing has to do with a great metallurgical firm at Longwy. This firm owned a vast steel works in that town before the war. When the Germans took possession of the place they did not destroy the plant, as they often did in other cases. They decided to operate it and produce war materials for themselves. When the armistice came they withdrew, leaving the plant almost intact and leaving also, nearly 50 per cent of the materials. The business, estimated, was worth at the outbreak of the war about 250 million francs, or 20 million dollars. The company put in a claim for 447 million francs war damage to their plant, or about 37 million dollars. They were paid by the government 369 million francs, or in the vicinity of $30,700,000.

200 Convictions, He Says.

When the big business interests in some of the districts got wind of the intention of the government, records for taxes and property valuations in many of the ruined districts disappeared.

The Communist deputies are accusing the great metal trust of France, many of whose members have large business holdings in the devastated area, with trying to block publicity thru political pressure. One deputy a few days ago publicly declared that one of the biggest metallurgical men in the country is fighting against exposure. When he named this man as Louis Loucheur, the French chamber was transformed into a pandemonium.

In reply to the charges of the deputies that the "Ministry of Liberated Regions has become the grave of scandals," the minister who headed this government department in the Poincare cabinet that has just resigned announces that no less than five hundred prosecutions have been undertaken against the swindlers, and two hundred convictions have been obtained to date.

Removing Workers From Office.

WEIMAR, Germany, April 2.—The "law and order" forces of Thuringia, which with the aid of federal German troops secured an electoral victory over the Socialists and Communists in February, are rigorously firing working class representatives who held political jobs under the previous administration—all under the plea of reduction of expenses. They are scrapping social legislation that favored the unemployed, war victims, and widows and orphans.

I. L. G. W. Organizes Three Thousand More N. Y. Needle Workers

NEW YORK, April 2.—A new branch of the clothing industry in New York will operate under union conditions in the future following a two-weeks' strike carried on by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. Tuckers, pleaters, hemstitchers and ornamental workers on women's clothing who had been working from 45 to 60 hours a week, will get a reduction of hours to 42 and wage increases in 90 per cent of the shops.

The most important gain is union recognition for the 3,000 workers who have received a charter as local 41, I. L. G. W. The union began its organizing campaign two months ago. The work, formerly in the dress and waist shops, has developed during the last three years into a special industry. Improved working conditions are provided in the contract. Minimum wages are fixed at $35 a week for tuckers, $45 for pleaters, $30 for hemstitchers, and $30 for novelty workers.

Progressives Denounce Fusion.

OMAHA, Neb., April 2.—W. H. Green, secretary, and J. L. Beebe, chairman of the progressive party, have issued a call for a convention May 1st in Omaha. They denounce the small minority of the progressive party members who favor an alliance in the April 8th primary with the democratic party.

STRIKE TIES UP JOINTS ALONG THE GREAT WHITE WAY

Plutes' Eating Places Hit by Class Struggle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 2.—The gaiety has gone out of nine of the flashiest restaurants along the Great White Way as the waiters, cooks, dishwashers and bus boys have gone on strike to enforce union condtions.

The strike is called by the Amalgramated Food Workers in answer to the declaration of the Salvin & Thompson (Rector) Corporation that conducts the string of swell refreshment joints that the open shop was to rule hereafter. For six years the firm has been signed up with the union.

A. F. of L. Supports Strike.

Restaurants affected in New York are the Moulin Rouge, Palais Royal, Montmartre, Club Royal, Plantation, Club Gallant, Palmoral Club, 400 Club, Barn Club and Pavillion Royal. Another big restaurant is tied up at Valley Stream, N. Y.

Full solidarity in the struggle has been pledged by the A. F. of L. Waiters and Cooks' Locals and all the other New York branches of the Amalgamated will help win the fight. The Amalgamated is a powerful independent union, not affiliated with the A. F. of L.

More than 500 workers are affected. Strike meetings are held daily at 3 p. m., at the branch headquarters and the strikers are confident of winning.

Guns and Hootch.

One picket has been arrested in front of the Club Gallant restaurant. Four scabs drew revolvers on pickets in front of the Palais Royal and were themselves pinched. At the police station guns and bottles of hootch were found in the scabs' pockets and all four were held for the grand jury.

So the strike goes on: the strikers are happy and the bosses miserable as they see their bourgeoisie patrons dining and wining in other resorts of the Great White Way.

Norwegian Students Side with Strikers In Big Labor War

(By The Federated Press)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, April 1.—Students of the University of Christiana expressed themselves vigorously when they learned that certain of their comrades had enrolled as strikebreakers and were unloading cargo during the lockout and strike of 70,000 Norwegian workers. The students' federation called a general meeting and passed a resolution condemning every form of strikebreaking, and declaring the action of their fellow students "unworthy and a disgrace to the professional classes as a whole."

On the other hand the military has been called in again and again by the employers to aid the strikebreakers. This has incensed the workers and there have been skirmishes between soldiers and workers. In Drontheim a cruiser was sent to fire upon the workers in case they should try to start something.

Seventy thousand workers of Norway are either locked out or on strike as a result of the great offensive started by the bosses in January and carried out with systematic brutality in February. The country has only 2,500,000 inhabitants. The number of workers organized in trade unions is 95,000, of whom 70,000 are out.

Five Democrats Vote Against New Child Labor Amendment

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—By vote of 14 to 6, the house judiciary committee has favorably reported the resolution proposing a child labor amendment to the federal constitution. Representative George S. Graham of Philadelphia, republican, the chairman of the committee, voted against the resolution, as did five democrats. The democratic members of the Committee are Thomas of Kentucky, Sumners of Texas, Montague of Virginia, Wise of Georgia, Tillman of Arkansas, Dominick of South Carolina, Major of Missouri, Weller of New York, and O'Sullivan of Connecticut. The committee has kept secret the votes of all of its members.

Grace Abbot, chief of the children's bureau, in pleading for the measure, testified that more than 1,000,000 children between 10 and 16 years of age, or 1 in 12 of all children of these ages in the United States, were reported by the 1920 census as gainfully employed. Thirty-five states allow children to go to work without a common school education. Nineteen states have no requirement as to the physical fitness of children who go to work. In 11 states children under 16 years may work from 9 to 11 hours per day. Fourteen states do not protect children under 16 years from night work.

Fur Workers Meet May 12.

NEW YORK, April 2.—May 12 is fixed as the date of the sixth convention of the International Fur Workers' union in a call issued by officials here. The convention, which meets in Chicago, will consider organization of the remaining open shops of the industry in New Jersey and New York. Unemployment insurance in cooperation with employers will be put up to the delegates.

Five Lonely Scabs Work While Nicholas Kovler Tells the Daily Worker About Those Radicals

Nicholas Kovler, the garment manufacturer who leaped into the Tribune limelight by his stories of the two shots which were fired thru his dining room window Saturday night, is very, very much excited about the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The DAILY WORKER decided to investigate his state of mind so a reporter called on him yesterday, by appointment, at the plant of Gallin & Kovler, at 327 S. Market Street. There we found why Mr. Kovler is peeved at the union.

5 Left Out of 35.

Only five girls are manning the machines where 35 used to work, before the strike call and they are turning out very little work. And no one else will scab for them.

The DAILY WORKER wanted to know what stories Mr. Kovler would tell about his shop conditions. His yarns on the shooting, for which Morris Bealis was kidnapped by Crowe's police and later freed when witnesses failed to back the detectives up in the frame-up plot, had been several and contradictory. So our reporter asked him how he treated the girls in his shop.

Such a Lovely Place.

The non-union manufacturer talked eagerly. He told about high wages and perfect conditions,—in fact he pictured such a factory workers' Utopia that we almost forgot the hard facts of low wages and piece work discrimination and blacklisting that had been furnished us by some of his striking employes.

"My girls," said Mr. Kovler. "Why my girls make more than the city police, the firemen, or the postal workers." "The police get only $30 a week. I don't see how a man can live on it."

"Thirty-five dollars a week for women is better than they can do anywhere else. The garment industry pays the highest wages in the country. Why, American girls won't believe they can make so much." Most of the girls employed at Gavlin & Kovler's are Polish or Russian-Jewish.

A 100 Per Center.

"America is a great land of opportunity, for the foreigner," remarked Mr. Kovler. "But if you were an American girl in industry, you wouldn't want some foreigner telling you what to do," he added irrelevantly. "If you were foreign, that's different.

"We've always had an open shop: never discriminated against anyone," claimed Kovler and immediately contradicted himself with the statement. "We're not against organized labor, nor the federation; but we've got to fight these radicals. The law must be obeyed."

"There are 900 other good unions," continued Kovler, "the engineers and the builders," whom he does not oppose. It is only the "International Ladies Workers" (he doesn't get the union's name right) who lead his girls astray. "They pull out the girls in organized shops where even in this slack time the girls are making $60 to $70 a week," asserted Kovler, (union girls find that even the largest shops seldom give a girl as much as $50 a week and that the average thruout the year is not over $20.)

Likes 70 Hours Better.

"The girls want to work only 40 hours a week," said Kovler. "Grocery and butcher clerks have to work 70 hours a week. Why should these girls work only 40?" he demanded. "Is it fair, It isn't." "It's all the same work, isn't it?" But Kovler didn't know that he chose an illustration from an almost unorganized field that obviously is not "the same" as the garment industry.

Mr. Kovler showed the interviewer his plant, explaining that most of his trade is in silk dresses, retailed by Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.

Only Five Girls Working.

"We have only a small place," remarked Kovler. "Only five girls on the machines now. They don't look as tho they would fight anyone, do they?" (The DAILY WORKER reporter refrained from comment).

"Usually we have about 35 workers all told. Twenty went out on strike," Kovler stated at one time and at another. "You can't get our girls to go out. The union people come up here and pound on the table but our girls just laugh at them."

Kovler displayed a beautiful summer frock of silk and said that the girls were paid $2 for making such a dress and could make 4 or 5 in a day. "We sell the dress for $27.50 wholesale and the retailer must charge at least $45 to make anything at all."

Big Profits Off Girls' Labor.

Judging by the material and making, liberal allowance for other labor than the operator's and for overhead. Gavlin & Kovler must have at least a profit of $12 on each of these silk dresses. Multiply this sum by the usual number of operators, 12, and again by the number of dresses made each day and you will have a rough estimate of what the boss makes. If we assume that the boss' "four or five dresses per girl" is correct, say generously 50 dresses a day, the daily clear profit would be $600 a day or so.

Hazy About Shooting.

There was almost a sob scene when Mr. Kovler told us about the shooting at his home. He became very emotional as he told of the horrors of shooting innocent wives and children. It happened that Mr. Kovler had told another DAILY WORKER reporter that neither he, nor his wife or child were in the room which the shots entered. Yesterday he was very hazy on the details on the affair. He preferred rather to view his memories thru misty veils.

He picked up a mashed bullet which he keeps by him and treasures as a memento of the "assassination plot." Kovler lectured us on the course of this "dum-dum" bullet which had gone thru a wall into the dining room, he said.

When the DAILY WORKER reporter went to the home she could see no bullet holes in the wall. There are holes in the window, but no evidence was found of the ferocious course of the piece of lead which Kovler likes to talk of. The maid would make no statement.

Facts Show Tribune Lied.

The residents of the flat adjoining the Kovler heard the shots about nine o'clock Saturday evening, but did not concern themselves, according to the statement of Mrs. C. H. Miller, the neighbor. Mrs. Earle Luscomb of 737 Brompton Place, immediately in back of the Kovler apartment, also heard the shots but saw no one. The Miss Evans, according to the Tribune story, is supposed to reside at 744 Brompton Place, was not known to the inhabitants of the flat above. The "Tribune" story said that she had seen the "fugitives" on the street, but must have done some fence-jumping or run a circuitous route, for there is no alley or other runway by which they could have gone to run by the lady in such way as to convince her of their complicity. At her own dwelling the shots could not have been heard easily on account of the large apartment building between that house and the Kovler's. The name "Evans" was not on the mailbox at 744 Brompton Place.

Kovler assured the reporter that he never had trouble in his shop, but the girls who have worked there tell a different story. They say that the place has never been unionized, that working conditions are none too good, and that sanitary conditions are disgustingly unsanitary requiring action by the Health Department.

Parties and Yellow Dogs.

One of the striking employes of the firm said that a few days before the strike was called, the boss gave a party for the girls at the fore-lady's house. At first the union members were not asked, but at the last moment they were invited. They did not attend, however, and were not surprised when the bosses passed out the infamous "yellow-dog" contract papers the next morning. Three girls who would not sign were immediately laid off.

In the last week or two Gavlin & Kovler have been busy testifying against pickets taken under the injunction and succeeded in having a sentence of ten days in jail imposed upon one of the active girls.

Oilman Tells How Irishman Doheny Aided British Lion

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—A sidelight on the Washington revelations which showed that a large part of Doheny's oil holdings were pledged to the British navy, is shown by a person well known in labor circles, who in 1916 was an office employe of Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum Corporation in Los Angeles. In 1916 nearly every executive in the Doheny offices was a British subject.

Altho the United States was then officially neutral in the world war, the corporation's publications worked toward alliance with England; and when millions of Americans were voting for Wilson in the mistaken belief that he would "keep us out of war" most of Doheny's right hand men were actively working against Wilson for the very same reason.

Sabotage Stimulates Relief.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The militant sabotage campaign of the anti-labor American Defense society here against financial aid for starving German children is expected to increase the donations for German relief from labor organizations and individuals. In a letter of protest against the $10,000,000 appropriation for the purpose passed by the house in Washington it ridicules the idea that relief is needed. It called the action of the house of representatives "a betrayal of the American people," and the appropriation merely an attempt to win the German-American vote in the coming election.

Esthonia Jailing Workers.

REVAL, Esthonia, April 2.—Arrests of working class leaders are the order of the day in Esthonia. The government began a systematic hunting down of trade union and other working class leaders an January 21, and since then its work has been methodic and thoro along these lines. An economic and financial crisis is impending, and the government wants to put the leaders behind the bars in advance.

Many Fires in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 2.—Indiana's fire loss for the first three months of 1924 was nearly as great as the loss for the entire twelve months of 1923, figures compiled in the office of Newton T. Miller, state fire marshal, revealed recently.

Tikhon Had A Fit.

MOSCOW, April 2.—It is learned that ex-Patriarch Tikhon has had a fit and is suffering from an attack of sclerosis.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

KELLY'S SOUL BEING CLEANSED BY DOLLARS

Tho His Daughter May Starve

JERSEY CITY, N. J., April 2.—Those pillars of society, the law and the church, will rob a little girl of support unless the decision of Vice Chancellor Lewis in chancery court here can be reversed on appeal. Lewis has sustained the will of William J. Kelly, former clerk in the criminal court, that $11,000 of his estate go to pay for masses in the Catholic church for the repose of said Kelly's soul. The priests have already reposed his soul to the tune of $7,450. If they get the additional $11,000, then $20,400 masses will be provided for. The Catholic church allows a busy city priest to farm out to country priests his surplus masses for gone but not forgotten benefactors.

This religious man Kelly forgot to tell his church or his friends that he had a child. They thought he was a bachelor. Now Mrs. Margaret Moran, of Ridgewood, N. J., who has the custody of Kelly's 9-year-old daughter is contesting the claim of the church of the estate. A clause in the will provides for forfeiture by beneficiaries who contest it, but the court has ruled that this does not affect the child as the custodian is in bringing action. But the judge wouldn't let the girl have the money. If the church will say those masses on credit, then it is said the church can sue the estate for unpaid service if the higher court reverses the decision.

Let Germans Die, American Defense Society's Policy

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 2.—The militant campaign of the anti-labor American Defense Society here against financial aid for starving German children is expected to increase the donations for German relief from labor organizations and individuals. In a letter of protest against the $10,000,000 appropriation for the purpose passed by the house in Washington ridicules the American Defense Society idea that relief is needed. It called the action of the House of Representatives "a betrayal of the American people," and the appropriation merely an attempt to win the German-American vote in the coming election.

The relief committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America here has issued a warning to individual contributors that congressional action will not be sufficient and that private donations are still needed. It points out that $10,000,000 will be inadequate, that the appropriation will not be immediately available, and that the bill has not yet been voted by the Senate or signed by the president.

World Solidarity of Actors.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Growing international solidarity among the actors of the world is the interpretation of officials of the Actors' Equity Association here in explaining to the Federated Press assurances of support cabled by the Actors' Association of England. "This action by the British union will effectively kill any move by members of the Protective Managers' Association to fill the places left vacant by their proposed June 1 lockout by importing entire foreign companies," said Secretary Frank Gillmore of the Equity.

HANDS OFF--SUN YAT SEN WARNS WHITE LOOTERS

Clash May Come With White Soldiery

(By The Federated Press)

HONGKONG, China, April 2.—Southern Chinese ports are overrun with trained fighting men. Sailors and marines of British, French, Italian and Japanese nationalities predominate, with a sprinkling of American and smaller fry.

The reason for this display of force is a threat by Dr. Sun Yat Sen to take control of the Chinese maritime customs in the province and to apply any surplus which may be left, after some demands of the foreign financiers have been met, to the needs of the people of the province.

Hands With Russia.

But he also threatened to introduce a bolshevist regime into the province of Kwangtung, and talked of joining hands with Russia.

Here more trouble arose. The Italians without any warning announced to the other international birds of prey thru the Italian legation at Pekin that they had got their claws well into the prize by occupying the Canton customs premises.

Immediately all the foreign gunboats at Hongkong that could navigate the Pearl river, sped to Canton to keep an eye on the business and the actions of the other international "comrades."

Unions With Sun Yat Sen.

Meanwhile, Sun Yat Sen courageously took up the cudgels against the oppressors of the people. Under the guns of the foreign war vessels at Canton, the workers and business people have arranged huge protests against foreign intervention. No fewer than 250 guilds and unions have announced their determination to support Sun Yat Sen.

On top of this, the Association of Chambers of Commerce in the Kwantung province decided to throw in their lot with guilds and unions and, if necessary, to organize a general strike and boycott against all foreigners in South China. If such an anti-foreign campaign starts in the south it may extend to the whole of China.

Publisher Damns "Prussianism" of U. S. Book Censors

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 2nd.—Major George Haven Putnam, dean of American publishers, who is 80 years old tomorrow, launched an energetic attack on the censorship which enables the post office to put books on the blacklist at will.

"It's nobody's business what a grown up man or woman wants to read," said the major.

He related how a book seller came to him for counsel when an important shipment of "Casanova" was recently seized in Boston.

"Custom officers confiscated the classic on order from the treasury department," stormed the old soldier. "That sort of thing is downright Prussianism. In fact it's damn impertinence.

"What do Washington officials know about classics anyway? They seize Boccaccio, Rabelais and even Shakespeare. These literary gems might not be good for young girls or children, but who are these officials to decide for you or me our morality or reading matter? I do not know anything about their critical qualifications."

Daugherty Grafting Aids From Chicago On Way to Testify

Three Chicagoans have been subpoenaed to appear before the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee in connection with the showing of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures. The men are William S. Barbee, former loop theater owner, at whose place the pictures were shown; J. A. Bates, associate of Barbee, and Charles Weingeld, lawyer, who was consulted by Tex Rickard, fight promoter, in connection with the showing of the pictures.

It was also disclosed that the committee had summoned M. P. Kraffmiller, of the American Tank Car Company, and secretary to Secretary of States Hughes when the latter was governor of New York. Kraffmiller is said to have known Howard Mannington, involved in other phases of the Daugherty investigation.

Enemies of Class Farmer-Labor Party In Open Fight Against June 17th Convention

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary, Workers Party

WHAT is evidently the opening gun in the fight of the opponents of a class Farmer-Labor Party against the formation of such a party has been fired by "Labor," which is the organ of the railroad unions and endorses the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

The Conference for Progressive Political Action want the workers and farmers to stay away from the June 17th Farmer-Labor convention. It wants them to put their hopes upon the July 4th C. P. P. A. convention, so that the latter if the ruling group so decides can again endorse one of the old party tickets and kill any opposition pledged to independent political action thru a Farmer-Labor Party.

"Labor" in discussing the June 17th convention makes this clear. It says:

"Some of La Follette's friends are seriously disturbed over the premature third party movements which are springing up throuout the country.

"They are particularly suspicious of a call for a third party convention to be held in St. Paul on June 17th. According to reports reaching Washington, a majority of the members of the committee on arrangements for this gathering are members of the so-called "Workers Party," a recognized Communistic organization.

"Only 13 names were attached to the call and no attempt has been made to insure a representative attendance.

"La Follette is in no sense responsible for this call, and the men who are recognized as the leaders of the La Follette movement had nothing to do with it.

"In these circumstances it would be the easiest thing in the world for the Old Guard to pack the gathering with its henchmen disguised as radicals.

"Then they could nominate La Follette on an impossible platform to the accompaniment of a series of 'red' speeches.

All this is, of course, nonsense. The call for the St. Paul convention was signed by representatives of every state Farmer-Labor Party in the United States which amounts to anything. It is true the June 17th convention is not purely a convention built up around the personality of La Follette and subject to any whim he may express.

It is a convention called by those groups which are in earnest in their desire to create a Farmer-Labor Party which will represent the interests of the exploited farmers and workers on the political field.

Line of Attack Indicated.

The article in "Labor" indicates that the hesitating, vacillating group behind the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which sometimes is for a "Third Party" and sometimes for rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies of labor in the republican and democratic parties are going to make the effort to kill the real convention of the farmers and workers.

The opening of this attack means that the forces behind the June 17th convention must wage a more aggressive fight. For the Workers Party it means that all its strength must be thrown into the balance in order to prevent the C. P. P. A. from deceiving and frightening the workers and farmers thru such propaganda.

Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund Needed.

It was because the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party foresaw this situation that it asked the members of the party and sympathizers to raise a $15,000 campaign fund in support of the class Farmer-Labor Party. This fund is required in order to carry on a country-wide campaign of publicity in support of the June 17th convention. Organization work must be done to create local and state Farmer-Labor parties and to secure delegates from all organizations invited to attend the June 17th convention.

Every party branch has been asked to raise from $10.00 to $25.00 according to its size. If the party is not to fail in its work in support of the June 17th convention and a class Farmer-Labor Party it must raise at least $15,000. Not only branches must support this fund, but every individual who has received the subscription list should give his aid.

These branches have sent in their quota since the last report:

Detroit English Branch	$20.00
Newark Greek Branch	8.00
Harlem Finnish Branch	17.00
Bronx English Branch	15.00
Massillon South Slavic Branch	6.00
San Francisco Lettish Branch	10.00
W. Frankfort Lithuanian Branch	12.00
Elm Grove Russian Branch	10.00
Philadelphia Ukrainian Branch	2.00
Yorkville Ukrainian Branch	2.00
St. Paul Russian Branch	5.00
Minneapolis Scandinavian Branch	15.00
San Francisco English Branch	14.00
Northwest Chicago English Branch	3.00
Revere Jewish Branch	4.00
South Chicago South Slavic Branch	6.00
Boston Lettish Branch	32.20
Yonkers Ukrainian Branch	4.00
Bickaville L. I. Ukrainian Branch	10.00
Yorkville Greek Branch	8.00
North Bessemer South Slavic	25.00
Raymond Finnish Branch	5.00
San Francisco Greek Branch	10.00

What is your answer to this attack? Will you help the fight for the June 17th convention and a class Farmer-Labor Party?

BISHOP SAYS HE'S FIRST IN ASKING OTHERS TO FIGHT

Willing to Be in Oratorical Trenches

Disciplinary action may be taken by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, head of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church, against pacifist students of Northwestern University, and Northwestern College at Naperville, Ill., it was indicated today. The university and the college are endowed by the Methodist church.

Approximately 150 theological students of the university have signed pledges dedicating their lives to the abolition of war by means of "my personal refusal to sanction any future war, or to any form of military service." The pledge cards were signed at a meeting in a class room at the university.

During the meeting a telegram said to be from a pacifist group at Yale arrived, pledging support to the "world movement for peace."

Want Miltarism Canned.

Students at the college favor the stand taken by the university men and a movement is under way to discontinue the reserve officers training corps system at the school.

Bishop Nicholson declared emphatically that the stand of the students was not the stand of the church.

Makes Quiet Investigation.

"If the flag is fired on I will be in the forefront of those demanding its defense," the bishop declared.

Bishop Nicholson is making a quiet investigation of pacifist activities at both schools, it was learned, and strong steps are anticipated.

The present agitation started on Sunday night when an Epworth league meeting in a Methodist church in Evanston was turned into a pacifist demonstration.

Rail Brotherhoods Demand Western Roads Raise Wages

Wage scales and working rules for trainmen on Western railroads were considered at a meeting here today by operators and representatives of the rail brotherhoods.

Eastern lines recently granted rail workers an increase approximating five per cent. There is some speculation as to whether the employes on Western lines will settle on that figure.

Miners' Local Gives Financial Boost to Farmer-Labor Cause

The response to the call of the Workers Party for a campaign fund to be used in the fight for organization of a mass Farmer-Labor Party thru the June 17th Convention at St. Paul is increasing in volume from day to day. The biggest boost given the fund comes from Local Union No. 5302 of the United Mine Workers of America in a remittance of $44.85 collected among the members of that organization.

This amount was collected by S. M. Shulth and John Telawake by circulating the subscription list among the members of the organization mentioned. Dollars, half dollars and quarters subscribed by these miners, who realize the importance of the struggle for a mass political party which will fight the battles of industrial workers and farmers, brought up the total to close to $50.

There are tens of thousands of workers who will welcome the opportunity to make a contribution to the campaign fund for a mass Farmer-Labor Party. The money which is given to this fund means aid in making the campaign to awaken the masses of workers and farmers reach tens of thousands who are not yet supporters of the farmer-labor party movement and the organization of new groups in support of the movement.

Threat to Draft Labor in Next War Rouses Sam Gompers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—In a formal statement of its current legislative program of the American Federation of Labor denounces the proposal for conscription of labor in case of national emergency as being "a more inimical piece of legislation than was ever before considered by congress." It demands exclusion of Japanese by law rather than by the gentlemen's agreement, and appeals for the soldier bonus.

Discussing the proposed conscription of labor, the report says it is being advocated in radio propaganda talks, and its essence is the plan of paying to conscripted labor the same pittance allowed to soldiers. The A. F. of L. would be willing, it says, to agree to this if the members of the U. S. supreme court, of congress, the cabinet and the president would take the same $33-a-month allowance as salary, and would put all military officers likewise on this rate of pay.

The labor conscription radio speech of Major General Hanson E. Ely, commandant of the war college, sent out March 13 from here, said that this draft would dispose of labor troubles in time of war. The labor elements that were disposed to make trouble would simply be transferred to the trenches!

On the other hand, the owners of resources would be "requested," merely, to furnish at a fair profit the things the government might need. If shipments were refused, the government could decline priority in freight movements to the business of the unwilling firms.

Rifles Shoot Sense Of Unity Into Vera Cruz Workers

(By The Federated Press)

VERA CRUZ, April 2.—The misery and suffering of the workers of Vera Cruz, divided into several hostile camps, has taught them a much needed lesson. All last year was marked by strikes in which one group scabbed on the other. Then the rebellion of reaction came. The workers were all mistreated, and their leaders killed regardless of which group they belonged to.

Twelve thousand workers, bakers, bricklayers, masons, millers, electricians, cigar workers, railroad workers, workers of the oil fields, firemen, fishermen, checkers, carpenters and longshoremen have just gotten together. They have elected a commission to draw up a platform for a united front in the economic struggle against their exploiters.

Jap Militarists Plan Capture of Government Jobs

TOKIO, April 2.—Retired admirals of the navy and generals of the army met here to launch what may prove the foundation for a military group in Japanese politics.

The announced purpose of the meeting was to found a society to be called the "Kofukukai." Its object will be to render assistance to army and navy candidates running for seats in the Diet and to foster military education in Japan. A number of officers are candidates for the Diet.

Approximately 150 retired officers have expressed their intentions of joining the "Kofukukai" movement.

U. S. CONCESSION HUNTERS MAKING MEXICO LOUSY

Sinclair and Other Yank Freebooters on Job

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—Hundreds of concession hunters have come to Mexico in flocks like crows. In return for the support the American government gave Obregon during the recent rebellion, plans are afoot to get control of government owned railroads, telephones and telegraphs.

Captain Wolvine, of the Wolvine lines, in return for a loan of from 25 to 40 million pesos (1 peso, 50 cents), wants the concession of a tract in southern Mexico the size of Minnesota. On this land he would raise tobacco, rice and sugar. He is willing to charge no interest on the loan if the Mexican government permits him to export all his products duty free for ten years after production begins.

Yankees Get Tobacco Trust.

The house of Speyer, New York, is also making secret negotiations for a loan of 10,000,000 pesos. Rumors are afloat that the large tobacco trust Buen Tono, has fallen into American hands. Americans are making many other propositions to the Mexican government—propositions of ports and railroad lines, and even of a canal thru the Tehuantepec peninsula, which would greatly shorten the transcontinental distance as compared with the Panama canal.

Big Sinclair Deal.

B. Ross Jones, representative of the Oklahoma oil interests, is trying to lease oil lands in the northern part of Tamaulipas. The Humble Petroleum Company is starting work on its newly acquired oil lands near Guerrero. The Sinclair Oil Company has just leased 4,000 acres of rich oil land in northern Mexico. The Placeres Oil Company, of Tampico, has recently acquired 50,000 acres of lands, only a few miles from Sinclair lands.

Milk Producers Go On Strike When the Buyers Break Bargain

ELGIN, Ill., April 2.—One hundred and eight farmers delivering milk to the Olson plant at Woodstock, owned by the Weiland Dairy Company, went on strike this morning, cutting off a daily supply of 30,000 pounds. The strike resulted from failure of the Olson company to pay the full association price for all milk taken. Practically all of the farmers' milk is being dumped.

German Bayonets Are Running Only Against Workers

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 2.—Some weeks ago differences arose between the Berlin flour mill workers and the owners. When the mill workers obeyed the ministry of labor and sent a delegation to deal with the ministry, they were suddenly arrested by the military forces and held until they promised that in so essential an industry as milling there would be no strike pending the settlement.

Now a new situation has developed. Again there are differences between the bosses and the workers, and the ministry of labor has put into play its machinery of arbitration. The mill owners refuse to come. They declare they have fired all their workers and there is nothing to arbitrate.

In other words, the "essential" industry of milling has stopped by action of the mill owners. But no military is at hand to arrest these gentlemen and to compel them to run their mills. Germany bayonets run one way only.

Military Spain Breaks Promise.

MADRID, April 2.—Spain's military directorate confesses that they cannot meet their promises. The Spanish directorate has been so busy conducting costly military operations in Morocco, that they have not met the budget promised the people in the last three months.

POLITICALS DIE SLOW DEATHS IN GERMAN CAMPS

Gen. Seeckt's Barbed Wire Prisons Described

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, April 2.—The following protest, describing the conditions in the German concentration camps for political prisoners, was addressed to General Seeckt by Ivan Katz, a member of the Prussian Landtag. He describes the camp at Munster, particularly:

"The prisoners are confined behind barbed wire and twice a day for an hour are allowed to take a walk between the wire fences. Since their shoes are not in wearable condition, and the ground around the barracks is soaked with slush and snow, the prisoners are exposed to colds, typhus, and certain death.

"The French themselves have never treated German prisoners so infamously as the German military are treating German citizens.

"Since neither the Reischwehr, the security police, nor the Department of Justice provide for the prisoners, and their maintenance is left to their relatives, who themselves are absolutely without means in every case, the prisoners have no soap, no tooth brushes, no tooth powder, no underwear, no clothing, and no footwear. The prisoners are certain to succumb helplessly thru cold, dampness, and dirt. It is scandalous that an administration ventures to arrest citizens who have committed no punishable crime and drag them to an uninhabitable wilderness, without at least providing the necessities of life for these innocent prisoners.

"The fact that Germany has sent her political prisoners to concentration camps has aroused the attention of the whole civilized world and has exposed Germany to contempt. But when it is known that the military power does not even provide for these prisoners, but is consciously allowing them to perish, the scorn of the world will doubtless increase in the face of such barbarous methods, the desires of other countries to help Germany in its distress will subside, and the return of the Ruhr prisoners from France will be made impossible."

CHARITIES HEAD LAUDS WORKERS' HOUSING PROBE

Articles Inspire Big Investigation

Additional evidence that the vigorous campaign the DAILY WORKER has been carrying on for better housing conditions in the Negro quarter of the city is brought out in the announcement of the United Charities of Chicago, that, inspired by the DAILY WORKER INVESTIGATION, they are instituting an investigation of their own.

"I have been following the articles in the DAILY WORKER about Negro housing conditions with great interest," Edwin Jones, financial secretary of the United Charities, told the DAILY WORKER reporter. "I have clipped them all. They are thoro and I believe the statements of the miserable conditions of that district are true. I have started a housing investigation of the Englewood district and we are going to use the articles from the DAILY WORKER as a basis for our investigation of the southwestern portion of the city.

"I shall be glad to give the DAILY WORKER full access to the reports of our investigators."

Mr. Jones then discussed charity activities, saying possibly the Urban League caters so much to the large employers because they have to in order to get enough money to exist.

When told that the DAILY WORKER feels that there is something fundamentally wrong with a society which makes necessary such organizations as the United Charities—which in a small way cares for the victims of a faulty social system—instead of trying to change the system as a whole, Mr. Jones replied:

"The DAILY WORKER is trying to do socially what we are trying to do with individuals. We are careful how we spend our money on the individual—that is, we try to get him a job and permanently set him on his feet instead of just giving him a basket of food occasionally. I guess the DAILY WORKER is working on the same principles in the social field—trying to fundamentally better the government instead of instituting a few petty reforms."

Thirst for Blood Necessary Quality For Citizenship

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 2.—Tho the legal right of aliens to claim exemption from the draft was recognized during the war, hundred per cent judges who fought the war from a swivel chair are now taking out their spite on such foreign born residents applying for U. S. citizenship. Supreme Court Justice Joseph Aspinall here has denied citizenship to 11 applicants on the ground they claimed exemption from military service.

Can't Claim Exemption.

Aspinall is not the only judge who is prostituting his position to his prejudices in this manner, but he is one of the most notorious in the New York district. Federal judges usually have been less guilty than justices of the state court.

The 11 victims came up before Aspinall with 200 other applicants for citizenship. Justice of the warphobia brand was swift.

Judge: You claimed exemption in the draft?

Victims: Yes.

Judge, curtly: Dismissed! . . . Pass out! pass out! Next!

Nine applicants who were unlucky enough to have been born in the land of the czar were especially displeasing to his honor who sees red whenever Russia is mentioned. Four were turned down because of draft exemption and five whose reading did not please the embodiment of the law.

Americanism De Luxe.

One old Jewish resident got his reward because he bought a liberty bond. When he acknowledged that he could not read English, the judge was stumped, but only for a minute.

Judge: Did you buy bonds during the war?

Virtuous Patriot: Yeh, fifty dollars' worth.

Judge: M'm. Well—Try to learn a little more English. I'll let you in because you bought a bond.

Two applicants were rejected because in the judge's opinion they were "not well disposed."

The Struggle Within the Russian Party

Being the continuation of the report given by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, at the city meeting of the Collective Bureaus of the Leningrad Communist Party Organization.

VIII. Our Party Apparatus.

COMRADE TROTZKY brings the whole might of his argumentation to bear against our Party apparatus, and writes: "The new course does not by any means signify that the Party apparatus is set the task of decreeing, creating or establishing the regime of 'democracy' within any definite term." And we read further, in black: "The Party must subordinate itself to its apparatus." Then comes an exposition to the effect that a number of "Party workers" should be relieved of their posts and reduced to the ranks.

The Party Apparatus.

I am by no means an unconditional worshipper of the apparatus and Party workers at any price, I have never counted myself among them, and I have attacked them as often as any one else. I have attacked bureaucracy severely, both in our Soviet press and at the All-Russian Soviet Congress.

I know the weak sides of our Party apparatus very well, and know that this must be renewed and democratized from below; but when I have to look on and see that Preobrazensky, Sapranov and Raffel cry out against the "Party workers" at every turn, and that they employ the term almost as much as an invective as the term "Chekist" is used by the Mensheviki, then we step forward and beg the Party to count us among the ranks of the unhappy "Party workers." You may as well know, comrades, that when the term "Party workers" is used, the Central Committees of the Party is meant; the Central Committee of the Party stamps its mark upon everything.

When we turn to statistics, we see that in the whole of this, our terrible apparatus of the Union of Socialist Republics, which comprises one-sixth of the globe, there are 18,000 Party workers, the greater number of which are technical workers, including a large number of retiring and honest worker bees, who work on the spots where they have been placed by the Party. For indeed tho it be a disgrace to be an official and a Party worker in the the despicable Menshevist machine, it is no disgrace whatever to be a "Party worker" in the proletarian apparatus of the Communist Party.

Cannot Wholly Condemn Apparatus.

Comrade Lenin censured the state apparatus, the whole Soviet machine. He said that it was still in part the old Czarist apparatus, which we had not succeeded in remodeling, and he censured this apparatus so severely that there was no point left uncriticized.

And to whom did he appeal? To the Party apparatus.

He submitted a definite plan for the reorganization of the workers' and peasants' control, and of the Central Control Commission. And if there was anything rotten in the Soviet state, then all eyes always turned to the Party apparatus, for nowhere else was protection from bureaucracy to be found.

We must renew and reform our apparatus. Those comrades who maintain that our people remain too long in the apparatus are wrong. It is rather the contrary which is the case.

Even in the Central Committee, in which the qualified Party workers are gathered together, 90 out of 134 responsible workers have been working for less than a year. Thus the Party workers do not only not remain too long, but have not even time for the preparation required if they are to work fully into the great apparatus of the present day.

We, comrades, are "provincials." In Petrograd we have just begun with the re-election of the collective bureaus, of the secretaries; we are of the opinion that this is in accordance with the spirit of democracy, and that by this means the apparatus receives the necessary renewal from below. But it is utterly wrong to condemn the apparatus wholesale.

Bureaucracy Must Be Abolished.

A short time ago we conquered the Far East, and we had to form a new government. It was necessary to create a Soviet apparatus, a Party apparatus, and an economic apparatus, etc. At the beginning we naturally did this by appointing suitable persons thru the medium of our apparatus. And what else could we have done? How could we govern the state otherwise

We do not want to assert, comrades, that ideal conditions obtain amongst us. It goes without saying that we have our faults like every one else, and our apparatus is no more immune from rust than other machinery; it must be cleaned and polished, re-oiled, some few small parts replaced. But there is no need to throw the baby away with the bath water.

And it is here that Comrade Trotzky commits his greatest error, for he is beginning to support people who want to do away with the main core of the Party apparatus.

What is the meaning of the phrase: "The Party must subordinate itself to its apparatus?" Has the reverse been the case up to now?

Comrade Kalinin was indeed right when he said, during a discussion at Moscow: "A few years ago the Mensheviki called us 'committee workers,' and in the mouths of the Mensheviki this was severe invective; and now you are implying with 'Party workers' the same as the Mensheviki meant at that time with 'committee workers'."

Yes, comrades, there is much in our apparatus which must be improved, renewed and purified. Bureaucracy must be removed. But those who want to depose the apparatus wholesale must be put in their place, for our Party apparatus is the right hand of the Party.

(To Be Continued Friday.)

50,000 LESS ARE WORKING IN N. Y. THAN LAST YEAR

"Full Dinner Pail" Bad Bet Under Capitalism

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

NEW YORK, April 2.—No evidence of an upward swing in the job market in New York state similar to that of a year ago is seen in the February employment report of Industrial Commissioner Shientag of the state department of labor. His statement shows that factory employment in the state increased about 1 per cent between January and February but that the level is still more than 2½ per cent below that of February, 1923, and 5 per cent below the high level of last March.

This means there are at least 50,000 more factory workers out of a job in the state than a year ago.

Metal and Textiles.

The important group of metal industries, says Shientag, showed practically no net change this month. Shop making and repairing railway rolling stock continued to reduce forces. Only the automobile industry contributed any forward movement within the metals group.

Employment in the textile industry showed considerable improvement over January but was less favorable than a year ago. Apparently the public is buying less clothing this year. Important reductions compared with a year ago are noted in manufacture of woolens for garments, in cotton goods and in the garment trades.

In the building supply industries employment made a sharp seasonal drop. Brick yards were closing down and cement mills laying off workers. Furniture factories reported a decline.

City Better Than State.

New York City employment, according to Shientag, advanced more than the rest of the state. In the cloak and suit trade additional shops were resuming operations and the reports indicate over 4,000 persons added to the pay rolls in the men's clothing shops while the women's shops took on a smaller number. An unusual falling off in employment in the printing trades was reported.

Outside New York the only improvement noted was occasioned by the automobile industry and the gains in that less favorable than a year ago.

This report indicates that there are over 30,000 more unemployed factory workers in New York state than there were in February, 1923, without taking account of the normal increase in population which would add at least 20,000 more to the labor looking for jobs.

Party Membership, Attention!

THE PRESENT situation of the Workers Party in the struggle for the formation of a mass, class Farmer-Labor Party will be presented to the membership of the party in a series of membership mass meetings in the principal cities.

The development of the Farmer-Labor movement requires the mobilization of the entire party for an intensive campaign during the coming months. It is essential that every party member not only give the campaign the greatest support possible, but it is equally important that every member of the party know exactly what the party is trying to do. The whole party must understand the role which the united front movement for the Farmer-Labor Party plays in the struggle for the Proletarian Revolution, the Soviets and Proletarian Dictatorship.

In order to present the situation to the membership meetings have been arranged in the district headquarters city of eight districts, which will be attended by the members in these cities and also by comrades invited from the nearby cities. These meetings will be addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Party. His subject will be "The Decisive Stage of our Labor Party Policy".

The meetings arranged are:

Cleveland, Sunday, April 6, at 3 p. m., Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid Ave.

Pittsburg, Monday, April 7, 8 p. m., Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St

Philadelphia, Tuesday, April 8, 8 p. m., Amalgamated Centre, 431 Pine St.

New York City, Wednesday, April 9, 8 p. m., Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.

Boston, Thursday, April 10.

Buffalo, Saturday, April 12, Finnish Hall, 150 Grider St.

Detroit, Sunday, April 13, Finnish Hall, 5963 Fourteenth St.

Chicago, Tuesday, April 22.

Every party member in the cities mentioned should attend these meetings. Every party member within reach of these cities should come to the meetings.

The Party must know and understand the policies of the Central Executive Committee. The Party must mobilize all its strength for the campaign which the Party is now entering.

Workers' School Holds Celebration For Its New Home

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 2.—The Workers School recently held a gala celebration in honor of its removal to the more spacious and elaborate quarters at 125 Fourth avenue.

E. B. Jacobson, the chairman, stressed the necessity for all members of the Party and sympathizers to promote the scope and welfare of the Workers' School. He urged all Comrades to attend the following three most essential courses now given at the School: Marxism, given by Herman Simpson; History of the Three Internationales, by Ludwig Lore, and History of the Trade Union Movement, by Solon de Leon.

Charles Krumbein, the District Organizer, praised the New York comrades who started the organization of a School on their direct initiative. He urged that the comrades "boost the School all the time."

Greetings were also presented by Clarence Miller, representing the Young Workers League, and by Jack Jampolsky, representing the Trade Union Educational League.

Herman Simpson, the School's lecturer on Marxism, spoke on Teapot Dome.

The last speaker was Juliet Stuart Poyntz, who gave a clear presentation of the educational conditions in Soviet Russia at present.

The School must aim to raise the level of the rank and file to intelligent and responsible thinking action along political and industrial lines, she said.

$20,000 Raised for Starving Germans By N. Y. Workers

NEW YORK, April 2.—The New York committee of the International Workers Aid announces that its fund for German Relief has reached the $20,000 mark. The committee has arranged with the National Office of the International Workers Aid in Chicago for a good kitchen called "New York," to be maintained by the local committee. It has been advised by the National Office that such arrangements will be made possible and that a New York kitchen will be opened in Berlin which will provide 1,500 meals a week.

Ten thousand as the initial fund for maintaining this food kitchen has already been forwarded to Germany. The committee has planned widespread activities in New York and New Jersey for the month of April in order that the fund already collected may be doubled.

Dancers and singers have been engaged for the ball and the Clef Club Orchestra will furnish music. The entire radical movement is awaiting the affair.

DE LA HUERTA A 'RED,' ANNOUNCED HIS PRESS AGENT

Thot This Would Please Gompers, Ha! Ha!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—No wonder de la Huerta lost out. He had such a dumbbell press agent. This press agent, Jorge Prieto Laurens, bid for Sammy Gompers' support by telling him that de la Huerta was a "red."

Jorge, as Jorge Prieto Laurens is familiarly called, is the ambitious young politician who wrapped de la Huerta around his scheming finger and persuaded him to "run" for president with Jorge as the king-maker or power behind the throne. When they got their rebellion started, young George, for that's the English of it, became publicity man to the rebels.

Tried to Win Sammy.

With rare tact he set out to persuade Samuel Gompers that he ought to support the rebels because they were "reds" and "Communists" and were fighting for Socialism. Just the thing to win over Sammy Gompers! He loves red worse than a bull.

"Come and see for yourself," cabled Jorge to Sammy. "We've established Socialism here and we're gonna confiscate all the big estates of Obregon and Calles, and without compensation." "I won't come," cabled Sammy.

Prieto sent the same stuff to Canuto Vargas of the Pan-American Federation. Vargas' answer was a lecture on Socialism. This is part of it:

Just Like Mussolini.

"Adolfo de la Huerta a Socialist? It may be? Mussolini was also a Socialist, and not of the parlor variety. . . . Today he drinks with Primo de Rivera a toast to the armies and fleets of Alfonso XIII and Victor Emanuel.

"A movement whose supreme general is Guadelupe Sanchez is "socialist" and "libertarian" and already "dividing" lands? Ask the peasants of the State of Vera Cruz, Mr. Prieto Laurens, to which side Gen. Sanchez leans.

"If you are looking for Socialists . . . . look for them in the Casa del Obrero Mundial and in the Mexican Confederation of Labor and you'll find them there in their post.

"Before coming to seek the sympathy of the workers' movements of the U. S. . . . . it is necessary, indispensable, that you go to seek the sympathy of the Casa del Obrero Mundial and the Mexican Confederation of Labor. . . . . . ."

France Wants Her Workers to Breed Kids Like Rabbits

PARIS, April 2.—Faced by the fact that France with her 40,000,000 inhabitants and a declining birth rate is living next door to Germany with her 60,000,000 inhabitants and an increasing birthrate, the French government is making frantic effort to encourage large families. Among the measures adopted by way of "encouragement" are the following: Large families enjoy special cheap rates when traveling; fathers of large families are excused from military service. A proposal is now on foot for giving heads of large families more than one vote at elections.

The one thing, however, that the government does not do is to solve the problem of where such a large family is to live. The landlords of Paris and other larger cities are quite as inexorable as in America. They don't want large families in their houses.

Leave It to the Courts

"Leave it to the courts" has become the eleventh commandment of our capitalist class.

There is no other country in the world where the courts wield as much governmental power as in the United States. The courts are the very heart of the government machinery of oppression used by our capitalists to defend their class interests and to crush the working and farming masses. Whenever the employers are in serious danger they can always count on their courts, their intricate judicial system, to stand by their class interests.

Several months ago Coolidge was compelled to call upon the Federal Trade Commission to look into the gasoline price situation. The sacred capitalist law of supply and demand was then being knocked into a cocked hat. Prices of gasoline were rising swiftly, altho the visible supply was abnormally large and the current demand was unusually small.

Scarcely had the Federal Trade Commission gotten on the job to explore this wilderness, this puzzling situation, when the Supreme Court cried "Halt!" and put an end to its work.

This is not an isolated case but a typical, normal example of the services rendered to the bosses by the courts in protecting capitalist interests against even the feeblest questioning.

In a recent tobacco case the court decreed that the commission could not examine the records of a corporation, unless it could tell in advance precisely which financial papers it wanted. This, of course, was a clever, but dishonest, method of making all investigation of capitalist profits impossible.

The capitalist dictatorial powers of the Supreme Court and the lower courts is best seen by the workings of our employing class judicial system. A decade ago, Congress empowered the Federal Trade Commission to examine the papers and books of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. The president's signature then made this enactment of Congress law. Dozens upon dozens of occasions, the House and Senate voted the commission money to proceed with such investigations. Along comes the Supreme Court, that collection of most menial lackeys of the employing class, and kills the law made by Congress, the supposedly revered representative of the masses. Forthwith this capitalist agency makes its own law based upon the thin ridiculous abstraction that a corporation is a legal person whose sacred rights would be violated by such an investigation.

The pirates of old would have to learn the A-B-C of pillage and cunning from our capitalist exploiters and their governmental protectors of today. Yes, "Leave it to the courts" is an excellent slogan for our bosses. It is exactly for this reason that it would be suicide for the workers and farmers to put the slightest faith in the capitalist judges and employing class justice.

A Significant Omission

Coupled with the propaganda for the discontinuance of the Daugherty investigation, the fact that in all the reams of testimony before the committee there has been not one word of the greatest outrage perpetrated by the discredited attorney-general—his securing of an injunction effectively breaking the strike of 400,000 underpaid railway shopmen in 1922.

The reformist and partisan nature of the whole proceeding, partaking of the nature of a quarrel between two groups of henchmen of big capital, is effectively shown by the omission of this outstanding incident in the whole criminal career of Daugherty as a representative of the employers and financiers of the United States.

In this connection it is of further interest to note that none of the officialdom of the railway labor unions or of the American Federation of Labor took advantage of the Daugherty investigation to request the right to appear before the committee or issued any public statement in which the role of Daugherty as a strike breaker was featured.

The reason for this apparent lack of interest in the discrediting of Daugherty is found in the fact that other union officials besides John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers intend to support the republican party nominees.

It is a great game that is played in Washington and up to their ears in the mess of corruption and betrayals are the "practical" men who are the labor leaders of America.

It is little wonder that they hate venomously the rising Farmer-Labor movement and are cooperating with the capitalist party politicians to hamper it in every way. They have no wish to see political treason placed in the same category as scabbery.

The Roosevelt Name

None of the male heirs to the Roosevelt name appear to be endowed with the business ability of the late Mr. Jess Smith or the courage of Edward Lockhart, the famous war hero and patriot who was just killed in action—while staging a holdup.

Theodore is Assistant Secretary of the Navy. In that capacity he has proved his right to the first syllable in his title. There is nothing to him but a name. His brother Archie, after escaping from the World War in as good condition as he entered it, was given a job as Vice-President of one of Harry Sinclair's oil companies. It happened this way. Sinclair wanted the Teapot Dome lease. It belonged to the Navy. Theodore was Assistant Secretary. Denby was Secretary. The latter had no brains. The former had less. But his father's reputation counted for something. So if he threw his influence in favor of a lease to a friendly oil man it would be worth something.

When Theodore asked Sinclair to give his brother Archie a job, the oil man made a vice-president out of him. His function was to wheel the baby carriage for Sinclair's wife and take her to the movies once in a while. He was such a handy vice-president that his salary was increased from $5,000 to $15,000 a year. Then something burst. In fact everything was exploding. Even revolvers. It looked as if the entire Coolidge cabinet would be shot before sunrise.

The noise of the Teapot explosion scared vice-president Archie Roosevelt stiff so he went and squealed on Sinclair. Then Sinclair squealed on the Roosevelt family and said the darned lot of them weren't worth an empty oil can. Archie was a dumbell says the oil magnate. He gave him a job out of sympathy.

The Roosevelts tried to crawl out of the Teapot scandal but were got while making a getaway. "Dumb and dishonest" is the popular verdict on the family of the late "Terrible Teddy" exemplar of 100 per cent Americanism.

A resolution is now up in the Senate calling on the president to demand the resignation of Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy. The capitalist press is horrified. "Lese Majeste" they intimate. The Roosevelts are supposed to have inherited the right to public office. But they seem to be better qualified for doing the chores around a penitentiary.

Slippery Path to Fame

The Duplex Printing Press Company of Battle Creek, Michigan, is sending out a calendar carrying the "office creed" of the Marion Star, owned by the late President Harding. The calendar is accompanied by an effusive eulogy of the deceased president which is credited to the chairman of the board of directors of the Duplex Company and is similar in tone to the flood of literature, halted somewhat by the Teapot Dome exposures, that was designed to establish a Harding cult in the United States.

The eulogy ends with this ecstatic note:

> A personal and somewhat intimate acquaintance with him (Harding) of more than thirty years enables the writer to testify of his own knowledge that the basic elements of character which were the foundation of Harding's career were faith and conscience with the ultimate purpose of benefiting mankind. The achievement of this purpose was his constant aim and the crowning glory of his life.

The glorification of dead rulers has been going on for thousands of years and the truth is deliberately obscured for the reason that the masses must not be allowed to know the real nature of the individuals who represent from time to time the interests of the privileged minority.

Upon what a frail basis the myth of Harding as a great good man rests is shown by the following extract from a recent article by Julian Street:

> I have been disillusioned about many things, but most of all I am staggered by the knowledge that every hotel bellboy and taxi driver in Washington knew on March 4, 1921, what I have only lately learned, namely, that to the affairs of federal government, the morals and methods of a curupt small town council have been applied.

When Harding died the press of American capitalism organized for him a funeral befitting a genius and a hero. He was neither but the reverse and in the light of the recent revelations—not one-tenth of which have been allowed to reach the public—the psycho-analysts can study the Harding funeral rites as an example of mass over-correction and an interesting psychopathic social phenomenon.

To be entirely successful the canonization of Harding should have been completed before the investigations got under way. Oil has made his path to fame somewhat slippery even for a spirit whose surefootedness is proverbial.

The Naive MacDonaldites.

"The keynote of fascism is the realization that capital is the friend of the people," says Mussolini. All of which is the cause of much rejoicing among the British capitalists to whom the prediction of a fascist dictatorship in Great Britain was brought by a British banker recently after an interview with the Italian dictator.

The MacDonaldites, scorning the revolutionary doctrine of the class struggle and believing implicitly in the democratic pretensions of Britain's capitalists, leave the control of the army and navy in the hands of capital's agents.

Having completed his work of framing the terms on which the German workers shall be anslaved to international capital, General Dawes is going to visit the ruins of Pompeii. It is a long time since they have been viewed by such an accomplished expert on ruins

"The Story of John Brown"

* * * *

The Great Plan Evolves.

MUCH more can be written of of this Kansas period in John Brown's life; a large bibliography of Robin Hood literature has gathered about it. John Brown, and other men like him, hastened the solution of the slavery question by their firm stand in Kansas. If the South had been allowed to add Kansas to the roster of slave states, it would have crept further north, until perhaps there would have been slavery up to Canada. It is seary for any institution to become permanent; man is a creature of conventions. Slavery, like cannibalism among savages, would have in time become a matter-of-fact doctrine with all America, had not the Kansas abolitionists challenged it.

John Brown left Kansas in 1857, and made a trip thru New England, gathering friends, money, arms and recruits for a new great plan that was working in his mind.

Brown Gathers Recruits.

He saw that the abolitionists would be successful in making Kansas a free state. The job was already half done; but when it was completed, what next? There would still be the vast groaning empire of slavery in the South; there would still be five million black folk bought and sold like cattle; beaten, raped, murdered as if they were lower than cattle. The South would still be in the saddle at the White House; the fugitive slave law would still be enforced; and churches, business men, newspapers, mobs, and United States troops, all would join in upholding the devil's doctrine that slavery was respectable, the law of the land.

The Abolitionists, with their few journals, were ever agitating against this infamy that was being protected by the United States flag. But John Brown knew that only a bold deed could shake the union; could make men see clearly what slavery was.

Slavery had become so firmly settled into the national life that the few thousand abolitionists only seemed like gadflies biting at the hide of a rhinocerous. John Brown saw that a pick-axe was needed to draw the blood. The pocketbooks of the slave holders must be attacked. Slavery must be sabotaged, and made unprofitable. It was such a safe and sane business now; it must be made dangerous. John Brown planned to go boldly into Virginia, with a band of men, and start there a large movement of runaway slaves. When slaves were no longer meek and submissive, when every slave became a potential runaway and rebel, slavery would cease to be a paying business. Thus reasoned John Brown.

Carries Off Slaves.

In December, 1858, with things at last peaceful in Kansas Territory, and a Free State almost assured, John Brown made a last stirring raid into Missour. Negro slave named Jim Daniels had come to one of Brown's men with a pathetic tale. He and his wife and babies were to be sold at auction in a few weeks, and perhaps separated forever. He was a fine looking, intelligent mulatto, and he wept as he told the story. John Brown and ten of his men rescued Daniels' little family and carried off to freedom eleven other slaves of the vicinity. At early dawn the next day the caravan of freedom set forth on its long journey to the Northern Star—to Canada, where slaves were free. It was a perilous and arduous undertaking. The party had to sleep by stealth in barns and icy fields, with armed sentinels posted all night. The Governor of Missouri wired to Washington; money rewards were offered for Brown, armed possee were sent searching for him, the Federal troops combed the state. There were prairie snow storms, and there were little provisions. But the old lion brought his charges thru to Canada.

One incident of the trip is worth repeating. It shows what a terror the mere name of John Brown had become in Kansas.

At one place, the ford of a river, Brown's party learned there was a posse of 80 armed slavery ruffians waiting to capture him. The old man did not turn back, tho he had only 22 men, black and white. He marched down on the ruffians. "They had as good a position as 80 men could wish," wrote one of Brown's men, "they could have defeated a thousand opponents, but the closer we got to the ford, the farther they got from it. We found some of their horses, for they were in such haste to fly that some of them mounted two on a saddle, and we gave chase and took three or four prisoners, whom he later released. The marshal who led them went so fast one would think he feared the fate of Lots wife."

Not To Be Taken By Boys.

"Old Captain Brown is not to be taken by boys," said the Leavenworth Times, now Free State, "and he invites cordially all pro-slavery men to try their hands at arresting him."

On March 12th the slaves were safe in Canada, rejoicing in their happy fortune, after having been brought in the dead of winter, thru hostile country, some 1,100 miles in 82 days. One of the slave women had had six masters, and four of the party had served sixteen owners in all. Now they were free. And their little children were free, and would never be whipped by a Southern gentleman or stood on the auction block like a horse or cow. The outlaw John Brown had done what was forbidden by the Supreme Court and the President of the United States; and now he was planning greater deeds.

(The Eve of the Tragedy.)

City Ordinance Passed to Aid Tenant; Is Twisted by Greedy Landlords to Extort More Money

City ordinances recently passed as a supposed protection of the rights of the tenant, have been taken advantage of by Chicago's landlords to cheat their tenants of additional money.

The average tenant, knowing little about the housing ordinances, is required by law to follow a strict line of procedure. The landlord, on his part, backed up by the Chicago Real Estate Board and his own lawyer, knows just what procedure to follow to place the tenant at a disadvantage.

The housing law has in many cases acted as a boomerang to the favor of the landlords.

The real estate dealer has inserted in his lease, whether it is the Number 10, which is the most widely used, or Number 7, or Number 3, several jokers which can be used at various times to extract more money from the tenant.

Tenant Prosecutes Himself.

If the tenant is one day late in the payment of rent, the landlord can institute legal proceedings against his tenant, and according to the lease the tenant is forced to sign, he waives all trials and defenses, and agrees to pay the landlord whatever he asks for legal fees. Article Fifteen of lease Number 10, which the Real Estate Board declares to be "The Best Lease," says,

"If default be made in the payment of the rent hereinabove reserved, or of any installment thereof as herein provided, Lessee does hereby irrevocably constitute any attorney of any Court of Record in this State, attorney for him and in his name, from time to time, to waive the issuance of process and service thereof, to waive trial by jury, to confess judgment in favor of Lessor, his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, and against Lessee, for the amount of rent which may be then due, by virtue of the terms hereof, or of any extensions or renewals hereof, or by virtue of any holdover after the termination hereof, and which may be in default, as foresaid, together with the costs of such proceedings, and a reasonable sum, but at no time less than Ten Dollars, for plaintiff's attorney's fees in or about the entry of said judgment, and for said purposes to file in said cause his cognovit thereof, and to make an agreement in said cognovit, or elsewhere, waiving and releasing all errors which may intervene in any such proceeding, and waiving and releasing all right of appeal and right to writ of error, and consenting to an immediate execution upon such judgment; and Lessee hereby confirms all that said attorney may lawfully do by virtue hereof. Lessors shall have a first lien on Lessee's interest hereunder, and on Lessee's property now or hereafter located in said premises, or elsewhere, to secure the payment of all moneys due hereunder, which lien may be foreclosed in equity, and in case of any such foreclosure proceeding, a receiver shall be appointed to take possession of said premises and property and relet the premises under order of court."

Tenant Pays Costs.

Landlords have many times in the past executed judgment on the tenant for rent which is only a few days overdue, and then, in accordance with the above clause, have charged the tenant fifty dollars or more for costs, the tenant having waived in the lease all rights to defend himself.

It is a well-known fact, both to the tenant and the landlord, that a large proportion of renters in Chicago, because of the high rents, keep lodgers and roomers, subletting one or more rooms of a four or five room flat, in order to meet the rent. The real estate men have taken advantage of this general practice, prompted by stern necessity, to gain another hold on their teannts, thru another clause inserted in most of Chicago's leases.

The procedure is to insist, in the lease, that the tenant must get the consent of the landlord in writing, before he sublets the rooms. The landlord tells the tenant this is just a matter of form, gives his verbal consent, and the unsuspecting tenant goes ahead and lets his rooms. But he has broken his lease, as the landlord has not given his written consent, and the landlord does not hesitate to break the lease in his turn, using the sub-letting clause as a club over the tenants head.

Double Crossing Landlord.

The clause which so often later causes the renter embarrassment, states that—

"SECOND:—Said premises shall not be occupied in whole or in part by any person other than Lessee, and Lessee shall not sublet the same or any part thereof, nor assign this lease without, in each case, the consent in writing of Lessor first had and obtained; nor permit to take place by any act or default of himself or any person within his control, any transfer by operation of Law of Lessee's interest created hereby; nor offer for lease or sublease the said premises, nor any portion thereof, by placing notices or signs of "To Let," "Furnished Room" or "Rooms to Rent," or any other similar sign or notice in any place, nor by advertising the same in any newspaper or place or manner whatsoever without, in each case, the consent in writing of Lessor first had and obtained."

Lease Voids Ordinances.

By means of a bitter propaganda campaign, and by means of much lobbying and wire pulling, various Tenant organizations have succeeded, in the past three years, in getting a few feeble laws passed by the city and state, which to a very limited extent protect the tenant from the unscrupulous landlord. But the CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD HAS NULLIFIED THE EFFECT OF THESE ORDINANCES BY DEMANDING THAT THE TENANT WAIVE ALL PROTECTION FROM THESE ORDINANCES. "THE LESSEE HEREBY WAIVES all notice of any election made by Lessor hereunder, demand for rent, notice to quit, demand for possession, and any and all notices and demands whatsoever, OF ANY AND EVERY NATURE, WHICH MAY AND SHALL BE REQUIRED BY ANY STATUTE OF THIS STATE RELATING TO FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER OR TO LANDLORD AND TENANT OR ANY OTHER STATUTE OR BY COMMON LAW DURING THE TERM OF THIS LEASE OR ANY EXTENSION THEREOF."

"Lessee shall pay and discharge all costs, expenses and attorneys fees, which shall be incurred and expended by Lessor in enforcing the covenants and agreements of this lease, whether by the institution of litigation, or in taking the advice of counsel, or otherwise."

Real Estate Board Controls.

In other words, the Chicago Real Estate Board masquerading as a benevolent and public spirited body, claiming to further the public good, HAS FOISTED UPON THE PUBLIC AN ILLEGAL LEASE, IN WHICH THE TENANT MUST AGREE TO WAIVE ALL RIGHTS GRANTED HIM UNDER STATE AND CITY LAW, and if the tenant does have the courage to bring the landlord to justice, the Chicago Real Estate Board has forced THE RENTER TO AGREE TO PAY ALL LEGAL COSTS.

Under this lease, the Chicago Real Estate Board, taking advantage of the unorganized renters, has squirmed out of the responsibility for making repairs, for giving heat and hot water, and in addition has forced the tenant to sign away all the rights grudgingly given him by law.

The Chicago Real Estate Board realizes the value of organization.

Landlords Hog Rights In Illegal R. E. Board Lease

BY MEANS of the lease concocted by the Chicago Real Estate Board, which is used more than any other apartment house lease in the city, the tenant must sign over all his rights to the landlord. If a tenant has lived in a house for fifteen years, he is forced by the "benevolent" Chicago Real Estate Board Lease No. Ten to MAKE ALL HIS OWN REPAIRS. If the roof falls in, and the tenant is injured, THE CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD FORCES THE TENANT TO REPAIR THE ROOF HIMSELF, AND THE LANDLORD, ACCORDING TO THE LEASE, IS EXEMPT FROM ALL CLAIM FOR DAMAGES BY THE INJURED TENANT. Tenants, learn a lesson from the Real Estate Board—they are organized to force you into signing an illegal lease. Organize, and REFUSE TO SIGN THE CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD'S NUMBER TEN LEASE.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Coolidge does not fear the Daugherty wrath we are told by a United Press correspondent, because the ex-attorney general is properly "sewed up" and if he squeals on Coolidge that wily gentleman will unlock the political Pandora Box and turn loose enough evil spirits to make Harry feel like purchasing a one way ticket across the river Styx. We thought so much. Coolidge withheld the axe which he dangled in the vicinity of Daugherty's neck until his sleuths had Daugherty hog tied. Then the fearless strikebreaker lopped off Harry's political head with as little fear as if he were only denouncing the growth of Bolshevism in the columns of the Ladies Home Journal.

* * * *

Coolidge dropped Daugherty because he was considered a crook by everybody who reads the papers outside of William Randolph Hearst. At the same time he has placed the seal of his approval on him as a Coolidge delegate to the Republican convention. There is no doubt but Daugherty is as mad as a dozen mad hatters, but what can he do? Unless he wishes to play the role of Samson and pull the political structure down over his own head he had better keep that head from uttering any words that might endanger its future.

* * * *

There is a very bright prospect of having a complete set of strikebreakers appealing to the voters in the next presidential election for White House honors on the Democrat and Republican tickets. Coolidge stands a good chance of being the Republican standard bearer. Strikebreaker number 1. As a running mate he may have John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. Strikebreaker number 2. Major George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, is a candidate for the vice presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket. Strikebreaker number 3. The list is not yet complete. Mr. Berry is a major, you will notice. He got the honor by being a good boy during the war, and, like a good many preachers who were ferocious patriots in those hectic days, but remain at a respectable distance from the firing line, George stayed in Washington and expended his vocal energies in hustling others across the pond to meet the bullets, until the armistice was signed.

* * * *

Berry, we are informed on reliable authority, had designs on a job which would bring him into proximity to the nation's gold supply during the war. Sam Gompers recommended him for the position. But at that time the members of Mr. Berry's union, thought they had reasons to believe that their president was rather careless with funds and the government being obliged to give several billion dollars away to needy and embattled European nations and to Czarist anti-Bolshevists, did not want to place any further temptations in a good man's way. Instead Berry was turned into a major which is worth some money to him nowadays.

* * * *

We are anxiously waiting for the Democrats to produce a ticket leader whose principal qualification is that of strikebreaker. In the event of the foursome being knocked into a deep hole by some Third Party golf expert, the vaudeville stage would have the opportunity of presenting a new feature, to patrons who are weary listening to the same old jokes and looking at the same old actors year after year. How would this sign look on the theatre billboards: "Silent Cal" and "His Strikebreaking Four"? We believe it would make a hit.

* * * *

This column has aroused the wrath of several Jewish workers who have sniffed a suspicion of Ford popaganda in the statement that Samuel Gompers can trace his ancestry back to Moses. The protest reflects credit on our readers who feel a certain guilty responsibility for not having fed Sam's medieval ancestors on some nourishment such as Paris Green or cyanide of potassium, which of course would save the American workers a lot of trouble, Whitechapel, London, from the dishonor of being his birthplace and our Jewish readers from a dizzy feeling every time his name is mentioned. They should feel comforted, however, in the thought that tho they have inflicted Gompers on the American workers and David Goldstein on the Irish workers, the latter weep salt tears whenever a Doheny or a "Dennie Sullivan" buys an administration or issues an injunction. Keep your underwear on, fellow workers. There is no offense meant, but we don't blame you in the least for regretting the existence of Gompers. Anyhow, one Karl Marx covers a multitude of Gompers and one James Connolly makes up for a cellar full of "Dennie" Sullivans. Let us be calm.

BURNS MUST GO!

Just a Question of Distance.

"You say," quizzed the lawyer, "that the defendant fired three shots at you in rapid succession? Now, how far were you from him when he fired?"

"The fust shot, or the last one, sah?"

"Why? What difference does make?"

"'Bout a quatah ob a mile, sah."

Tries To Hide War Frauds In Aircraft Case

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler of the Daugherty Investigating Committee today ordered a subpoena issued for certain papers "seized" by Secretary of War Weeks, when new testimony was given involving the War Department in the war frauds case.

The subpoena also calls for Weeks' personal appearance.

Wheeler called to the stand Captain William F. Volandt of the air service and demanded that he hand over records of Thomas F. Lane, former legal adviser in the War Department.

Fired For Aiding Probe.

Because he refused to obey orders to "keep away from the Brookhart committee," Thomas L. Lane, legal adviser to the chief of the army air service, today told the senate Daugherty investigating committee that he was dismissed by Captain Volandt, chief of the audit section of the air service.

Subsequently, Lane testified, files of private investigations he made of the Standard Aircraft Corporation were removed from his desk by Volandt.

"After I had attended a session of the committee when Allen J. Pickering, department auditor, testified, Volandt called me on the phone and ordered me to keep away from the committee and the capitol," Lane said.

"I told Volandt he couldn't tell me when and where I could go. He said they were orders and I would have to abide by them. I didn't and was let out."

"Has Volandt these files now?"

"Yes. He said he would return them to me after he had used them in preparing a statement for this committee."

The committee summoned Volandt by phone to appear immediately.

The committee also instructed Chairman Brookhart to inform Secretary of War Weeks of Volandt's reported action.

Weeks In On Graft.

Going back to the sale of $2,000,000 of government securities by the Bosch Magneto Corporation, Lane said, "They were sold thru the brokerage firm of Hornblower and Weeks." Secretary of War Weeks was a member of that firm. He was not, however, secretary of war at that time, according to Lane.

Lane was then excused and Captain Volandt called to the stand. He is assistant chief of the air service.

Volandt said the records he got from Lane were "official records of the war department."

Call Weeks' Bluff.

"Secretary Weeks has taken those papers and he told me to inform you that if you want them you will have to subpoena them from him," Volandt said.

"Well, the subpoena will be issued immediately," Wheeler said.

Lane testified that Volandt "took the papers away from me."

Lane claimed they were his personal records showing irregularities

LEGION HEAD WITH WAR GOD AGAINST WOMEN AND CHILDREN

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 3.—A warning that Bolshevism and Radicalism are gaining strength in the United States thru activity among "Pacifist" organizations of women and children was sent today to all departments of the American Legion by Garland W. Powell, director of the Legion's Americanization Commission.

The message warned Legionnaires against a national anti-war campaign directed by the Women's Peace Society and other organizations which, Powell said, is "finding fertile field among women and children" and showing the seed for un-American propaganda.

COMMUNIST PLOT TO OUST CAL'S CABINET BARED

Two Out, Says Marvin; Worst Yet to Come

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 3.—With two cabinet ministers out and several more kept busy picking the tacks off their official chairs, Fred Marvin, editor of the Searchlight Department of the New York Commercial, declared in a speech delivered under the auspices of the Indianapolis branch of the National Metal Trades Association that the Communist movement was on the road to success with their plot to destroy the Coolidge cabinet, discredit the republican party and open the floodgates to a wave of Bolshevist propaganda that would overthrow the United States government.

Denby First.

Marvin charged that the Teapot Dome scandal was an invention of the Communists, who started the investigation with the object of weakening faith in our institutions and dragging officials before the public morally and politically naked so to speak.

Denby was the first victim marked for slaughter by the Communists, declared Marvin. He occupied the important position of secretary of the navy. Being a "big navy man" Mr. Denby immediately on taking office proceeded to build up the fleet and place it on a war footing. This seemed to make the Communists very angry. So they met in secret session (he did not say they wore masks) and decided to get Denby. The rest was easy. A few instructions to their agents in the senate and Denby was seen saying good bye to his friends and dodging the photographers on his way to the political scrub brush. Such is the power of the Communists.

Skids Greased for Others.

Having disposed of Denby, they next turned their guns on Harry M. Daugherty. He committed the crime of "preventing mass action on the American railroads during the shopmen's strike." His doom was sealed. The Communists deliberately and with malice aforethought brought so much evidence of his "patriotism" in the form of "assembling with" divers grafters and evil doers that the American people had to wear gas masks while his conduct was under scrutiny. Coolidge was finally obliged to drive Daugherty out but not before the people were beginning to become convinced that Coolidge was as big a crook as Daugherty.

Fred Marvin revealed an amazing story of Communist propaganda.

Bloody Capitalism Sees Its Finish.

DEMOCRACY SAFE SAYS DAVIS AFTER HIS NOMINATION

McAdoo Second Choice Of His Delegation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Kas., April 3.—"Democracy is marching toward its greatest triumph," Jonathan M. Davis, dirt farmer-governor of Kansas, declared today after he had been given the endorsement of the state democratic convention for the presidential nomination.

The governor wept as the endorsement was voted without dissent.

"I wish my old democratic father and mother were so that they could witness the victory the party will score next November," he said.

Delegates chosen to the national convention in New York were instructed to vote for Davis "until a majority decide it is no longer advisable." William G. McAdoo will get the support after that as most of the delegates are McAdoo men.

The convention delivered a direct blow to Governor Al Smith, of New York, in declaring that the delegates should support no one who is not wholeheartedly in favor of complete enforcement of the prohibition law.

Supporters of Gov. Davis expect to line up delegates from several other midwestern states before the convention. The keynote of the governor's appeal for nomination by the national convention will be restoration of confidence in government.

Recent disclosures, in the oil lease and department of justice investigations in Washington indicate that the "sacred fires of freedom are about extinguished," the governor declared.

"We must re-establish the faith of the people, which has been shaken to its foundation in our government.

"Champions of freedom and liberty must make their greatest effort during this presidential election."

Strikers Don't Worry Bosses While Police Protect Strike Scabs, Says John M. Glenn, Labor Foe

John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, mouthpiece of the biggest open shoppers, admitted to a reporter for the DAILY WORKER that the enemies of labor in Chicago, among the biggest employers, are not worrying overmuch about the present strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Not that they do not fear the plucky spirit of the strike pickets. Not that they do not fear the growing spirit of solidarity among the workers in the needle trades.

But thru their megaphone, Glenn, who has played an infamous part in every labor struggle in this city and state, openly states that all is safe at the city hall, nothing is doing in the city council, as in previous struggles, with the result that boss dressmakers feel they are sitting pretty.

"There is not a Chinaman's chance for a strike to succeed when there is proper police protection," declares this sworn foe of labor, John M. Glenn, who led the fight against the United Mine Workers' Union in the attempted frame-up at Herrin.

Labor Hater Talks.

Mr. Glenn was in his spacious offices in the loop when seen by the DAILY WORKER reporter. He admitted that in previous strikes, the Manufacturers' Association had been compelled to put up a hard fight in order to keep things straight, for the open shoppers in the city council. But they had succeeded in preventing any interference with police protection for the bosses.

"We got the police protection we wanted," he said, "and so far there has been no interference from the city council, with police protection in this garment strike."

This "sitting pretty" of the arch strike breaker, John M. Glenn and his pals, because of the failure of the city council to act, is probably the greatest indictment that has yet been brought against the so-called "labor" aldermen in the city council. The DAILY WORKER today publishes this list of "labor" aldermen, as complete as could be obtained, as follows:

Here is the List.

Capitalist Solon Fears Publicity; He Frames Drastic Bill

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Newspapers and other publications would be barred from the mails unless they publish all demanded retractions with explanations in precisely the same prominence as the original article under a bill introduced in the senate today by Senator Owen, democrat, of Oklahoma.

Owen's bill provides that a publication shall be barred by the postmaster general if it "refuses to publish upon receipt and in precisely the same page and position on the page as that in which it shall previously have published, a specific reference by name to any person or persons whether natural or artificial, a sworn or affirmed statement or correction, explanation or denial of said reference,, reasonably proportionate as to length."

SHIP CAPTAIN TO TELL THE DAUGHERTY PROBERS ABOUT ATTACK ON WORKERS' RULE

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Documents and a gold-and-red medal conferred upon him by General Yudenitch for distinguished service in helping that counter-revolutionary to start on his drive to capture Petrograd in the summer of 1919, are displayed by Captain James V. Martin, awaiting his turn to testify in the Daugherty investigation.

Martin proposes to show that Herbert Hoover entered into a conspiracy to overthrow the Soviet government of Russia, by furnishing food, motor trucks and gasoline to the Yudenitch expedition, while Winston Churchill, British war minister, promised war equipment including tanks and airplanes, and the French furnished ammunition, uniforms and technical experts.

He has copies of the bills of lading of the Shipping Board vessel, Lake Fray, which he commanded when she carried a cargo of food, motor trucks, truck parts and gasoline to Reval in August, 1919, and delivered them to the "Supply Committee, Russian Armies"—which was Yudenitch.

Fight Aircraft Combine.

Martin is a veteran inventor, pilot and producer of airplanes, who has assisted the various committees of Congress that have tried to get justice for the government against the aircraft combine that has robbed it of some $250,000,000.

During the war he was sent abroad as an expert on aircraft engineering, but was deprived of his credentials while there and finally took command of a ship, since he was an experienced navigator.

This ship was in War Department service and was loading for a return to America from Brodeaux, in July 1919, when he was notified that he had been transferred with his ship to the service of the American Relief Administration. Hoover cabled him orders to take on a cargo of food and motor trucks and proceed to Hamburg and Reval. He believes his enemies in the aircraft combine conspired to get him sent into mined and dangerous waters in this way.

He sailed to Reval, taking as a passenger a General Wall, who represented the Kolchak, Denikin and Yudenitch joint military movement, which had a directing office in Paris.

The Goods on Hoover.

"I have cables and letters," said Martin to The Federated Press, "that prove that Hoover first requested me to carry this Gen. Wall to Reval, and then, when I insisted upon authorization from the Shipping Board for such an illegal act, Hoover brought pressure at London so that E. C. Tobey, representing the Board in London, advised me to take Wall aboard." He shows a letter, on Shipping Board stationery, signed by "Gen. Ernest N. Wall," acknowledging that he was accepting special conditions of passage on the ship.

Martin exhibits one of the bills of lading, which recites the amounts of gasoline, grease, motor trucks and truck parts consigned by his vessel to the "Russian Armies" at Reval—which was then Esthonia, where Yudenitch was harbored. He then shows the decoration given him by Wall on behalf of Yudenitch with its stamped certificate bearing, in white on a light blue background, the double-headed imperial Russian eagle.

The medal is of gold with red embellishment at the centre of its Greek cross design. The ribbon is light red, with white stripe at either edge. The certificate informs Wall, that he is made "an Ensign of the Order of St. Stanislaus, third class," in recognition of his services. The service, he declares, was the delivery of a shipload of food and trucks and fuel in time for its use in the advance on Petrograd.

The British Fail.

"Russian history would have been changed by that expedition if the British had kept their part of the agreement by sending tanks and airplanes in time," Martin said. "British labor was protesting, and the Churchill plans were stopped.

"The British fleet waited at Reval to steam up to Petrograd when it should be taken.

"The German forces of Von der Goltz and Bermont had contracted to help, but they started a private war in Latvia instead. Gen Goff of the British army, representing the American government up there, as adviser, asked me to buy airplanes from the Germans to sell to Yudenitch. A force of 160,000 Finnish troops, well equipped, waited to cross the Finnish border as soon as Petrograd should fall.

"I considered that I would be carrying out the American policy if I furnished the airplanes that were needed.

"I asked Special Commissioner Haynes at Helsingfors for advice. Before he replied, Yudenitch advanced, because the Von der Goltz outbreak had led to a blockade in the Baltic and he dared not wait any langer. Yudenitch got to the outskirts of Leningrad, but he lacked the munitions that would have carried him to victory."

Believes Story Is Accurate.

Hoover's representative in Reval, filed charges against Martin, for having agreed to buy airplanes in Germany, and recommended that he be relieved of his command at once. He cabled that Gen. Wall had advised that were Martin retained in command it would "be unsafe for him to return and give evidence."

Congressman Woodruff of Michigan, to whom Martin first disclosed this inforamtion, believes the documents are genuine and that Martin's story is substantially accurate.

What Do You Know About Labor Rule In England?

THE DAILY WORKER has secured an illuminating series of articles on recent developments in Great Britain. They are written by the prominent British Communist and trade unionist, J. T. Murphy. These articles cover the interesting questions growing out of the ascension to power of the so-called Ramsay MacDonald labor government. This series will be an education in itself in labor's struggle for power. These articles will start Monday morning and will run during the week. Get Monday's issue of the DAILY WORKER and follow this series from the beginning to the very end. The first article is entitled:

Three Weeks Gone in Drive For 10,000 New Subs-See Page Three

DAUGHERTY'S SUCCESSOR IS MORGAN AID

Stone Partner of Morgan's Brother-In-Law

(By The Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. is now intrenched in the U. S. Department of Justice. Thru the appointment by President Coolidge of Harlan Fiske Stone to succeed Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty who was run out of office by the senate, Wall Street has installed a principal lieutenant instead of a campfollower in this strategic office.

Does Morgan's Dirty Work.

Stone has been universally described by the press as dean of the Columbia university law school. His more important office is law partner of J. P. Morgan's brother-in-law, Herbert Livingston Satterlee. Satterlee has done a great deal of the higher-up dirty work for the Morgan firm. He married the old J. Pierpont Morgan's daughter, Louisa, 24 years ago. The Wall Street law firm is known as Satterlee, Canfield & Stone. Stone's law practice amounts to over $125,000 a year.

Stone's war service consisted principally in sitting on Secretary Newton D. Baker's board of inquiry into the war objectors who were held under more or less terrible conditions in the various camps. With Judge Julian W. Mack and Major Richard C. Stoddard, Stone had the objectors appear before him and decided whether they were to be given objector status or ordered into the ranks to be court-martialed.

"Irritated" by Objectors.

He is described in Norman Thomas' book, "The Conscientious Objector In America," as expressing "little but irritation" for the college pacifists. A victim of his board decisions is quoted in the same book as saying of him: "I believe his questions were more insinuating and less direct than those of Judge Mack." He became especially irritable when former Columbia law students of his appeared before him as objectors. In such cases Stone would urge that objectoring was in bad taste and would reflect on the college.

His Morgan affiliations are not expected to whet his desire to uncover the root of government corruption.

Look Askance at Stone.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—With its eyes sharpened to pin points as a result of the scandals investigations, the senate today began to take a long look at Harlan Fiske Stone, the new attorney general.

Stone's nomination was followed by the discovery that he was for years connected with the law firm of Canfield, Satterlee and Stone, the Satterlee being the son-in-law of the late J. P. Morgan.

That circumstance was enough to cause several progressive senators to say today a careful inquiry into Stone's qualifications and connections would be made.

The judiciary committee has the nomination. It will be taken up in a day or two and requests may be forthcoming that Stone be called before the committee. Administration leaders will resist any such step.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Lovestone Sees Alleged Radical Probers in Washington Getting Cold Feet in Daugherty Grill

By JAY LOVESTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 3.—The Daugherty investigation is proceeding without its early vim and vigor. Senator Wheeler, of Montana, has lost so much of his pep that he finds it necessary to announce publicly that he will go on with the investigation of the Department of Justice, "despite" the resignation of Daugherty.

Senator Dill, of Washington, who prides himself on being a progressive, has introduced a resolution demanding the resignation of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, because of his part in the Teapot leases, and because of his sending marines to clear the naval oil reserve area for Mr. Sinclair.

But, M. Dill has found it adviseable to desert Washington for a speaking trip in the West right after he introduced his resolution. Mr. Dill has permitted his resolution to be laid on the table.

Senator McKellar has proposed that Mellon's financial connections be investigated, in view of the charge that he is holding the office of the Secretaryship of the Treasury in violation of the law which incapacitates anyone who has interstate commerce financial interests from holding this cabinet post.

But, Mr. McKellar, who always prides himself on being one of the "vigorous" democrats in the capitol, has allowed his resolution to go the regular route of the Senatorial legislative calendar. This means that McKellar has signed the dead warrant of his newly born political babe.

Democrats and Progressives Quitting.

Why this right-about-face on the part of the democrats and such so-called progressive as Wheeler, Dill and Brookhart? Why are these men not fighting for the vigorous continuation of the investigations of big business control of government?

Why is Wheeler doing nothing to turn the searchlight on the criminal strike-breaking activities of the Department of Justice and the Burns Agency against the trade unions and working class political organizations?

The story of the high-handed conduct of Burns and Daugherty in the last railway shopmen's strike alone is sufficient to put them behind the bars for scores of years, even on the basis of the present capitalist law. Yet, Messrs. Brookhart and Wheeler have done nothing to bring this information before the country.

Why is it that the regular and irregular democrats of all stripes are showing signs of wearying of the investigations and falling for, what they know very well to be just plain rot and buncombe, the appeal for "getting down to business and legislating?"

Why are these democratic hawks and eagles of yesterday becoming owls so soon and refusing to go ahead with the charges against Mellon, Hoover, Hughes and other cabinet members?

All Serve Same Masters.

There is but one answer to all these questions. The progressives, democrats, republicans and capitalist politicians of all stripes regardless of how radical the phrases they mouth may be, are first and foremost concerned with the preservation of the fundamental interests of the employing class. The danger signal for the capitalist class is the sign for their stopping these investigations. The revelations have already gone too far in shaking the confidence of the masses in the government.

The big employers of labor have felt that these investigations are going just a bit too far. For sometime they have exercised heavy pressure to put an end to the senatorial exposures. Now they are beginning to get results. The worm is beginning to turn. The democrats are making common cause with the republicans in organizing for more laws, in organizing to get what their masters have denounced only yesterday in the most bitter terms. The so-called progressives, the jellyfish backboned radical wind-jammers are now giving into the demands of the big interests. of course, their surrender is not as openly abject and not as clumsily put over as the regular democratic party retreat, but, the more skillfully maneuvered, is is nevertheless as complete a betrayal of the interests of the masses as is the treacherous conduct of the Walshes, McKellars, and other democratic whips and dark horses.

This sudden dimning and cowardly action of the insurgent stars and democratic satellites in the Capitol should not surprise any worker or farmer. It should not even disgust any genuine progressive any real class enemy of the employers. This half-hearted wavering policy of the so-called progressives only adds further proof to the Communist contention that, regardless of what kidney or ilk he be, every capitalist politician must sooner, rather than later betray the working and farming class. The only point of distinction between the various schools of employing class politics is the degree of soonness with which they play the game of the biggest interests openly, one hundred per cent, and sabotage the needs and demands of the laboring masses.

The Lesson.

The way in which the sundry investigations are now being liquidated, drowned and sunk to the very bottom of the troubled political seas, by all shades of capitalist political panhandlers teaches the working and farming masses of the United States at least one worth while lesson. Out of the hasty retreat that the democrats are beating from the field of struggle and out of the weak-kneed, feint effort that the progressives are making in exposing the plunderers of the country's natural resources and the strike-breakers and union-smashers. There arises more painfully clear than ever the unquestionable urgent need for the organization of the workers and poor farmers into a national class farmer-labor party separate and distinct from the two old parties of capitalism and the plague of hybrid capitalist progressivism and employing class progressive-ifs.

Quaker City Trade Unionists Invited to Hear Communist Speak

SIGMAN TELLS DRESS STRIKERS UNION STRONG

Union Decides To Raise Benefits.

ation of Labor, of the Postal Clerks' Union.

SHELDON W. GOVIER, 9th ward, an alderman for seven years, a brass moulder 10 years ago, not now, but formerly a union man.

HARRY W. KLINKE, 47th ward, Chicago Photo Engravers' Union. Local No. 5. Member for past 20 years.

THOMAS S. BYRNE, 15th Ward, Local 241, Street Carmen's Union.

THOMAS J. BOWLER, 41st Ward, Street Carmen's Union.

PATRICK F. RYAN, 18th Ward, Horseshoers' Union.

JOSEPH H. SMITH, 32nd Ward, Blacksmiths' Union.

Demand Action.

These are only aldermen now in the city council who claim to have some sort of labor affiliations. Of course, during election campaigns, all candidates for aldermen, as for all political offices, claim to be labor's friends.

This is probably the greatest possible indictment that could be levelled against these so-called "friends of labor" in the city council, that they have remained silent during the five weeks of the garment strike, because, in the words of their spokesman, the garment bosses have not feared that the "police protection" given by Mayor William E. Dever's police force and State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe's dicks would be withdrawn.

Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in charge of the strike, has stated to the DAILY WORKER that he is planning to get Alderman Nelson, who is also an attorney for the union, to take some action in the city council. Nothing has been done, however, altho plans may be in preparation for the next meeting of the city council on next Wednesday.

May Be Issue at Meeting.

The matter, no doubt, will come up for discussion at the Sunday meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, when the "Committee of 15" and the "Injunction Committee" of the Federation will bring in the report of its activities in aid of the strike.

It was announced a week ago that plans were on foot to bring President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, to Chicago for a mass meeting in aid of the strike but so far no date has been set for the gathering. It was stated that Gompers' speech would deal especially with the use of the injunction in labor disputes.

Sigman Speaks to Strikers.

Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at a meeting of strikers held at 180 West Washington street yesterday announced that the union has decided to raise strike benefits from $7 and $10 a week to $9 and $12 a week.

In making the announcement Sigman pointed out that this decision to raise the strike benefits came at a time when the bosses are charging that the union is on its last legs. "I know that you will be glad to hear that the strike benefits will be raised. I also know that you will be glad not because it means a few dollars a week more to you, but because it effectively answers the statements that the unions is weak. We are able to make this raise in strike benefits without assistance from any other organization.

Amalgamated Helps.

"The Amalgamated will probably vote to give us a substantial sum at the next meeting of the Chicago Joint Board and that will be the first assistance we have been given by any organization not a part of the International.

"While the bosses are trying to tell the strikers that the union and the strike is on its last legs they are fighting like cats and dogs among themselves. The big bosses are being accused by the little bosses of trying to eliminate the smaller firms. The little fellows charge that the big bosses are trying to drive them into the poor house and thus gobble up their business.

"The big fellows who run the Association of Dress Manufacturers are afraid of calling a meeting of the association. They know only too well that the little fellows will be at their throats.

Scrap of Paper.

"The members of the association on joining were required to sign a note for $1,000 that would be collected if they settled with the union. That note is not worth the paper it is written on, but the big fellows are threatening to drag the small fry thru the courts if they settle.

"In the meantime the bosses are busy telling each other and trying to tell the strikers that the union is losing. It is not. We are as strong today as we ever were. We are as good fighters today as we were on the first day of the strike."

Arrangements have been made to have the National Security Co. go bonds for all strikers arrested for violation of Sullivan's injunction.

Shoe Workers Contribute.

Workers in the Monarch Shoe Co., a non-union shoe shop at 913 W. Roosevelt road, brought $25 to the union office yesterday. The committee which brought the money explained that it was collected in the shop for the benefit of the strike. Officials of the union explained that the union was well prepared to take care of the strike financially. But the committee protested so vigorously that the officials took the money so as not to offend the workers. "That little action of the workers in that shoe shop shows very effectively what the workers of Chicago think of the strike," Meyer Perlstein said. "It is not the money but the sentiment involved that means something."

Cop Beats Girl.

Gussie Kessel, a striker, was assaulted by police officer No. 2034 yesterday afternoon on S. Market street near Van Buren street.

A bunch of scabs were going from a shop and Miss Kessel and other strikers were standing nearby when someone shouted "scabs." The copper grabbed Miss Kessel and twisted her arm behind her back and dragged her into a doorway.

Even after the copper had Miss Kessel safely in a doorway he continued to twist her arm. Miss Kessel screamed from the pain and other strikers were attracted to the doorway where Miss Kessel was being held. Esther Lowell, a reporter for the DAILY WOKKER, went into the doorway and demanded to know why Miss Kessel was being arrested. She was shoved out of the doorway into the street with considerable violence and cursed at.

The union will bring the assault on Miss Nessel to the attention of Mayor Dever thru the sub-committee of the Committee of 15 of the Chicago Federation of Labor. The sub-committee will probably lay the matter of the assault before Mayor Dever this morning.

Jennie Lieberman who was assaulted last week by Frank Fuller, was very much surprised to see Fuller take the witness stand against her. Wednesday in Judge Sullivan's court. Miss Lieberman had sworn out a warrant charging assault against him the day following Fuller's attack on her. She thought that he had been arrested.

Arrest the Slugger-Cop!

Yesterday Miss Lieberman went to the S. Clark St. police court to see what happened to the warrant. She was told that the police had it. So Miss Lieberman went to the S. Clark St. police station and asked about the warrant. There she was told that the police in the first district probably had the warrant. So to the first district Miss Lieberman went. There she was told that they had never been sent a warrant to serve on Fuller. So back to the S. Slark St. court went Miss Lieberman. The old story, "Sorry, but we don't know what happened to that warrant. You'll have to get another, it seem to be lost."

Last night Miss Lieberman said that she will go before Judge Trude and swear out a second warrant against Fuller and see that it is served.

District No. 7 United Mine Workers Starts Ku Klux Klan Cleanup

HAZLETON, Pa., April 3.—Thirty-two miners, against whom charges of holding dual membership in the Ku Klux Klan have been made by Local Union Number 1704, at Nesquehoning, will be tried as provided for under the laws of the United Mine Workers of America, Thomas Kennedy, President of District No. 7, announced today.

Kennedy recently sent orders to all locals to investigate members alleged to belong to the Klan and purge the union of them in accordance with the constitution adopted at the last convention.

in repayment of claims in connection with the "war fraud cases."

Volandt admitted taking the papers and giving them to Weeks but claimed they "were official records of the department."

Volandt admitted he had ordered Lane to "stay away from the Daugherty investigating committee."

"I told him to wait until he was subpoenaed," Volandt said.

Volandt said Weeks ordered the Lane papers turned over to him.

Lane was suspended last Saturday.

"You suspended him the day he told you he was coming before the committee?" Wheeler asked.

"Yes," said Volandt.

Unprecedented Procedure.

The action in subpoenaing Weeks is unprecedented in congressional investigations. Usually a cabinet officer is merely "respectfully invited" to appear.

The papers were records in investigations by Lane in connection with Bosch Magneto, Standard Aircraft and Wright-Martin war fraud cases.

Lane in his testimony, assailed A. Mitchell Palmer, former alien property custodian, for sale of the Bosch Magneto property for $4,150,000.

"It should not have been sold for $12,000,000," said Lane.

Lane said he took records in the Bosch case to Assistant Attorney General John W. H. Crim and Crim said it was the "rottenest" case he ever saw. Crim, he said, promised immediate action on "this great fraud."

The witness said the department of justice had done nothing to this day so far as he knew.

His Bosch magneto records were among those taken from him by Captain Volandt, Lane said.

Daugherty's Troubles Not Over.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Further inquiry into the alleged failure of former Attorney General Daugherty to press prosecutions of Oklahoma Indian land fraud cases was to be made by the senate Daugherty investigating committee today.

Senator Wheeler planned to put witnesses on the stand to substantiate the story told the committee Tuesday by former U. S. District Attorney Peck of Oklahoma that Daugherty directed him to delay court action against the Miller Brothers, who were charged with having obtained $500,000 worth of Oklahoma Indian lands by fraudulent means.

If the committee cleans up this line of its investigation today it is planned to put Gaston B. Means on the stand again for further examination.

Daugherty "Studied" Case of Land Robbers; Fired Investigators

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Here is a fragment of evidence before the Wheeler committee, as to enforcement of law when the Miller brothers, operating the 101 Ranch, defrauded the Ponca Indians in Oklahoma out of 10,000 acres of land, worth $500,000, for agricultural purposes. Oil has been struck on this stolen land, in two places, since the Millers got it.

George L. Miller, his two brothers, an office man and a field operator were indicted for having caused Indians who traded at the Miller ranch store, and who ran into debt to the store, sign certain papers which were actually deeds to land which had not yet been allotted. The Indians thought these were merely notes or mortgages. An enemy alien, "farmed out" during the war to Miller, discovered the frauds and informed the government. District Attorney Peck, who secured the indictments, was ready to try the cases at Oklahoma City on criminal charges in May, 1921, when Daugherty called him off, pending "study" of the case by Daugherty. The letter informing Peck of this sudden change in plans was sent direct from Daugherty's own office, and not thru the regular channels.

George Washington a Piker.

The special agent who had investigated the case, was let out. Special Assistant Attorney General Bell, who had studied the case, was dismissed. Peck was asked for his resignation. Sen. Harreld forced Daugherty to re-employ him as a special prosecutor when the case finally approached trial. On the criminal indictments the three chief crooks pleaded guilty when promised that they would merely be fined; the federal judge saying that civil suits would restore the land to the Indians. On that assumption he made the fines very light.

Daugherty has never prosecuted the civil cases. The Millers still hold and enjoy the 10,000 acres and the oil wells, stolen from the Indians in return for a few hundred dollars in store goods.

England Is Torn With Big Strikes In Main Industries

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 3.—With one million and a quarter unemployed workers and strikes spreading like wildfire thruout the United Kingdom, the MacDonald government is facing the supreme test in its goal to harmonize the conflicting interests of capital and labor and abolish the class struggle.

All the main industries are facing upheavals In fact, there are so many strikes on now that only the very important ones receive any attention.

The government inaugurated a court of inquiry, but the workers were not satisfied with this flimsy arrangement which always favored the bosses. They prefer to rely on their own power to force concessions thru the strike weapon.

Work on the British Empire Exhibition was paralyzed thru a strike of seven thousand employes. A special police force was organized to protect scabs. The workers only demanded a measly four cents an hour increase but this the bosses would not grant

CROWE'S FINKS ARREST EIGHT UNION MEMBERS

Were Looking for Them Over Week

The dicks of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe have finally got some one they were looking for. Because of that they are breathing a little easier. Altho the persons arrested are not the persons who did the Daugherty killing or the boys who tried to kill Hirshie Miller or any well known criminals still the state's attorney's men have made a capture.

Page Mr. Freud.

Last week eight members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union were indicted for conspiracy and malicious mischief. Ever since then the dicks have been looking for them. The eight men did not try to hide. They went about their business as usual and the dicks looked for them. The dicks looked in vain. Maybe the dicks of the state's attorney had developed a fatalistic attitude and thought they could not find any one.

So someone at the state's attorney's office got a bright idea. Why not ask the lawyer for the union where these men were?

So yesterday morning, some one from the state's attorney's office called R. J. Rickert, lawyer for the union and asked where they could find, Sam Ross, Adolph Rodinowitz, Hyman Goldman, Bruno Bontwisky, Joe Galler, Dan Glassman, Harry Martin and Charles Roof, the men wanted.

Rickert after finding out what they were wanted for agreed to deliver them to the state's attorney's office within an hour. Rickert kept his promise and as soon as the men were taken to the Criminal Courts building had them bailed out.

Men Appear Voluntarily.

The men are all charged with entering the shop of Blum & Templer at 178 W. Adams St., on Feb. 27, and getting the workers there to go out on strike. Feb. 27, was the first day of the strike. It is understood that the indictment against the eight men, was returned on Thursday, March 27, and that the police have been looking for them ever since.

The seriousness with which the indicted men take the case against them can be gauged by the fact that they all agreed to go to answer the indictment when they were told they were wanted.

There is no indication when their case will be tried.

Yesterday the picket line on S. Market St., was as well filled as during the first week of the strike.

Twelve pickets were arrested on attachments, charging contempt of court. They were all taken to Judge Sullivan's court.

The girls arrested did not get a preliminary hearing before lunch and were held till afternoon by the sheriff.

Catherine Fisher Maltreated.

Catherine Fisher a member of the National Women's Party, who has been interested in the strike of the garment workers was on S. Market St., when some of the girls were arrested on attachments. After finding out where they were being taken she went to Judge Sullivan's court and asked a bailiff for permission to talk to the girls. Permission was granted and Miss Fisher went into the jury room where the girls were.

She had no sooner gone in than another bailiff told her to get out She was leaving when the bailiff grabbed her by the arm. The door to the court room was open and Miss Fisher cried out because of the pain. Sullivan ordered her brought before him and gave her a lecture on manners in court and ordered her to leave the court room and not come back.

Say Communist Plot To Oust Coolidge's Cabinet Is Bared

He recited the number of publications, organizations, and the financial resources with which the communists carry on their work. "There are 200 organizations carrying on Communist propaganda in the United States," he declared.

Get Out Checkbooks.

In a peroration which was designed to touch the check books of his hearers he appealed to them to come to the assistance of embattled democracy which was in deadly peril from the onslaughts of the Communists "directed by a system of interlocking directorates, leading into the Kremlin, at the head of which looms the sinister figure of Gregory Zinoviev, who pulls the strings, that make his puppets in every subversive American organization from the underground Communist party to the Conference for Progressive Political Action, dance to his tune." Marvin was almost out of breath when he concluded but he managed to save enough wind for emphasizing the importance of cash in meeting the Communist peril.

Wisconsin May Not Be Dry But It Has No Stomach for Oil.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 3.—Senator Robert M LaFollette today increased his lead over President Coolidge in the Wisconsin primary more than 80,000 in the returns from 1,192 of the 2,574 precincts. The count for each slate of delegates stood: LaFollette, 150,109; Coolidge, 69,983.

In the Democratic returns Governor Al Smith had a lead of approximately 13,000 over William Gibbs McAdoo in the count from 971 precincts. The count: Smith, 38,341; McAdoo, 24,932.

FITZPATRICK SAYS OLD PARTIES ARE DECAYED TO CORE

Yet He Tells Voters to Support Len Small

A resolution signed by John Fitzpatrick, Charles Wills and David A. McVey, chairman, vice-chairman and secretary, respectively, of the Illinois branch of the National Farmer-Labor Party, declares that "The two old parties are decayed to the core and that the only solution is for labor and the farmers to have a party of their own."

In face of this resolution, which calls for a state convention of the Farmer-Labor Party, the three men who sent out the declaration against the old parties, have all endorsed both democrat and republican candidates in the coming primaries.

Playing Two Games.

John Fitzpatrick, who is trying to play a two-faced game, endorsing Len Small at the demand of that politician, at the same time he sends out calls for independent political action and denounces the party which Small represents, has his office stacked high with Len Small For Governor campaign circulars, which the Chicago and Illinois Federation of Labor officials are sending out.

The circular signed by the Farmer-Labor Party officials follows:

The Farmer-Labor Call.

"The sixth convention of the Illinois Branch of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States will be held at 130 West Washington street, Chicago, April 19, 1924, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for state office at the November election, the election of delegates to the national convention in Cleveland, Ohio, July 4, the adoption of a state platform and other business of the party. Each county branch is entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every 200 individual dues-paying members in good standing. Each local union is entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every 1,000 members.

"The greatest opportunity for national Farmer-Labor Party development that has ever occurred is upon us. The Illinois branch of the party must do its full share toward crystallization of the sentiment that the two old parties, with their Teapot Dome and other scandals, are decayed to the core and that the only solution is for labor and the farmers to have their own party. Our convention will have, among other things, to consider the attitude our party should adopts toward the candidacy of Senator La Follette for president.

"Therefore, your organization is urged to send lelegates to the convention. Such delegates must be persons who will subscribe to the purposes of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States and who, therefore, are interested in the development of its policies, principles and tactics and the successful prosecution of its work.

"Fraternally yours, Illinois Branch Farmer-Labor Party of the U. S., D. A. McVey, Secretary-Treasurer; John Fitzpatrick, State Chairman; Chas. F. Wills, State Vice-Chairman."

FITZPATRICK SAYS THIS SITUATION IS QUITE LOGICAL

Motion unanimously passed by the executive board, Cook County branch, of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States—Fitzpatrick and Nockels being conspicuously absent—. "That all members and friends of the Cook County branch of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States be requested to remain away from the polls on primary day, April 8; as the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States is the political expression of the organized labor movement (rural and city workers) and it is to be hoped that they will not entangle themselves with any disreputable city or state officials."

Statement of Ike Volz, secretary Len Small Campaign Club:

"John Fitzpatrick, Nockels and all the other labor leaders of Chicago have definitely come out in favor of the governor."

Statement signed by Chas. Wills, and John Clay, both members of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Party of Cook County:

"The Len Small for Governor Wage-Earners League joins with the Illinois State Federation of Labor and many other civic bodies in urging the re-nomination of Governor Len Small in the Republican primaries, Tuesday, April 8th, next."

Teapot Fills German Papers.

BERLIN, April 3.—The Teapot Dome scandal in the United States is commanding a lot of space in German newspapers. While the first telegraphic news was scant, because the German press is holding down on cable tolls, steamers have brought extensive mail correspondence which fills the papers. The magnitude of the scandal is fully appreciated.

Three Weeks of the Drive for 10,000 New Readers Gone—Let's See What We Have Done

WITH LESS than three weeks of the drive passed, the figures given below make us feel more sure than ever that the goal of 10,000 new readers by June 15th will be reached and even surpassed. Most of the subscriptions thus far sent in are from present readers of THE DAILY WORKER and individual boosters of our DAILY. Take for instance, Miles City, Montana, in a few hours work our boosters there secured 15 new subscribers. This means much more than fifteen more names on our mailing list as most of these new subscribers will in turn become boosters of THE DAILY WORKER and will themselves bring new and fresh forces into our army of DAILY WORKER readers. This is not an exceptional case; determined efforts everywhere meet with the same results.

Detroit, Philadelphia, Seattle, Cleveland, Toledo, Los Angeles, Warren, O., Worcester, Mass., Milwaukee, Wis., Chicago, Kansas City, Rochester, Brooklyn, New York City, Reading, Pa., Duluth, Superior, Neffs, O., Minneapolis and dozens of other towns have acknowledged our call for the drive and in informing us of their plans of activities for it, told us in all cases that they felt positively assured from the enthusiasm with which the comrades are entering the drive, that the quotas assigned to them will not only be reached by the middle of June, but in many cases doubled.

As this goes to press Miles City, Mont., ranks highest in the percentage of quota raised, Superior second, W. Concord, N. H. and Turtle Creek third and fourth, Warren, O. and Monessen, Pa., fifth and sixth. Brooklyn, with a quota of 200 follows as seventh in the great race for 10,000 new subscribers by June 15th, and Kansas City, Mo., eight having sent in 15 new subscribers out of its quota of 50, others follow close behind.

PERSIAN BRIBES BY SINCLAIR AND STANDARD BARED

U. S. Corruption Told by Soviet News Service

(By Rosta News Service)

MOSCOW, April 3.—The papers give prominence to the disclosures of the system of briberies practised in Persia by the competing American oil interests, striving to get concessions in the Northern part of the country.

There was keen emulation as to which company should be the first to bribe one high official or another and which should give the largest sum.

Oil Creek Passes Buck.

True, the representative of the Sinclair Oil Co., in an interview with the correspondent of the Rosta News Agency at New York, denied the reports appeared in a part of the American press to the effect that this Company had bribed the competent Persian minister, asserting that the latter had indeed received a sum of 100,000 dollars as "squeeze" not from the Sinclair Co., but from a competing American firm. The correspondent of the New York American, who sent the report from Persia about the activities of Sinclair Co., in this conection, "made a mistake," according to this firm's representative, as to the person who actually gave the bribe and the concern the giver represented.

However, the Rosta learns that all the competing oil interests, namely the Sinclair Oil, the Standard Oil, and the Anglo-Persian South Oil. Companies have been largely engaging in a free competition of showering bribes upon the Persian high officials, who are in control of the granting of oil concession leases in the northern part of Persia. So that the particular question of one bribe or another cannot have any special importance as to the corruption of the entire system prevailing in oil concession hunting in Persia.

Italian Workers of Chicago and Vicinity Fight Anti-Alien Law

The Italian workers of Chicago and Cicero, Ill., are opposed to the various bills pending in congress, which aim to enslave the workers of this country.

Last February a temporary committee was organized by the Italian branches of the Workers Party. This committee called a conference of all the Italian sick and death benefit societies, unions, athletic clubs and political organizations.

The conference was held last Sunday. It was attended by 42 delegates representing 22 organizations. An executive committee of 11 members was elected to take charge of the work.

A resolution was approved unanimously putting the conference on record to constitute itself as a council for the protection of foreign born workers and to do everything in its power to oppose the passage of the proposed laws to oppress the foreign born workers.

A letter was read from the secretary of the international council of Chicago, E. Holt. He invited the Italian council to unite with the international council in the agitation against the proposed laws. The letter was greeted with great enthusiasm and the executive committee was instructed to work together with the international council.

Another important decision was, that the executive committee stands instructed to visit all the organizations, which were not represented in that conference, to send delegates in next meetings.

Before adjourning the executive committee was also instructed to organize within a short time a mass meeting of the Italian workers of Chicago and Cicero to protest against the pending laws.

Strike in Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 3.—Because the corporation refused their demands April 1, the 600 employes of the Scranton Railway Company, went on strike by vote of the rank and file of workers. They are asking a wage increase of 17 cents an hour and better working conditions. The company pleads poverty in an effort to win support of public opinion and it refuses to negotiate. Barbers, bricklayers, plasterers and butchers are also on strike.

Engineer Killed In Wreck.

Strikebreaker George L. Berry Wants to Hold Jackass' Tail

By MAX SHACHTMAN
(Editor of Young Worker)

Maybe you don't know it, but Major George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistant's Union, is out for the Democratic party nomination for vice-president, in an effort to give the Democratic ticket a "labor" tinge.

Dear Sir and Brother Berry has the backing of the American Legion, of which he is a past Vice-Commander and of Sam Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor.

And so, his campaign manager among the American Legionaires, a Mr. John A. McCormack, is sending out publicity buncombe about the immeasurable qualifications of Berry. Don't think that Berry has no qualifications! Indeed he has plenty and they are of no mean order.

A Great Soldier!

For example, the letterhead states that he is a "veteran of the World War," (he served in Washington until the war ended, then he went over to visit the battlefields) and American Trades Unionist, is respected by all the newspapers, one of the founders of the American Legion, founder of a Home for the Aged, and so forth. Besides, to quote the blurb, he "made a great fight in New York in September to uphold contracts and to oppose radicalism in organized labor."

This last is interesting. The fine language is intended to clothe the fact that he acted as a strikebreaker in New York against the members of his own organization. This act was surly enough to fit him for life membership in the association for the saving of the republic, first founded by Calvin Coolidge. Not that our anxious supporters of Major Berry's candidacy are opposed to labor! Naw! Of course there is the little matter of the leaflet which is sent along with the campaign letter which does not happen to have the union label on it. But that's of minor importance. Suffice it to say that many international unions have endorsed Berry's candidacy. What's a uinon label or two between good friends?

But don't imagine for a minute that we have exhausted friend Berry's qualifications. He is the owner of a newspaper, too. We have hurried to look it up and see to what extent it supports union labor and as we go to press we are still looking—hopefully.

Ha! Ha! He's a Bore—

George L. is also the director of a bank. You see we have here no ordinary labor leader. We do not hold this against him, understand. He is probably a director of the bank in order to bore from within, to supervise the savings of the workers—when they have any.

With all these excellent features we take a determined stand in favor of the Berry nomination on the Jackass ticket. He would make an excellent running mate for the presidential jackass, with the possible drawback that his ears are not long enough, but that deficiency in appearance is offset by a fine vocal equipment which reveals the donkey in human garb whenever Berry brays. To prove it we could go on quoting his abilities, especially in breaking strikes and opposing radicalism. But, as the campaign letter says, his actions "have created world wide attention and commendation;" and commendation from such sources should be recommendation enough to the workers of this country.

If we were to quarrel at all with the list of his qualifications, we would comment on the boost he is given because he is an "extensive farmer." But on second thought, we can see that after all Major Berry has undeniable ability in spreading manure.

Tenants!--Refuse to Sign ChicagoR. E. Board Lease; They're Illegal and Unfair

AFTER much trouble and expense, the tenants of Chicago succeeded in having passed a few feeble ordinances curbing the landlord to a limited extent, in his merry pastime of robbing the renters. But LEASES MADE UP BY THE CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD AND USED BY ALMOST EVERY LANDLORD IN THE CITY, NULLIFY THE EFFECT OF ALL EXISTING ORDINANCES BY FORCING THE TENANT TO WAIVE HIS RIGHTS UNDER THE LAW, BY FORCING HIM TO WAIVE ALL TRIAL OR DEFENSE IN LEGAL MIX-UPS WITH THE LANDLORD, AND BY FORCING HIM TO PAY THE EXPENSES OF ANY LEGAL TANGLE BETWEEN LANDLORD AND TENANT.

REFUSE TO SIGN ANY LEASE DRAWN UP BY THE CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD—IT IS PROBABLY ILLEGAL AND UNDOUBTEDLY UNFAIR.

Unfortunate Tenant Waives Everything Except Paying Rent In Landlords' Tricky Leases

State and City ordinances, supposedly passed to protect the renters against the rent-hog, have acted in most cases as a boomerang, aiding the landlord to place his tenant in further difficulties.

The tenants, understanding almost nothing about legal procedure and too poor to hire a lawyer. find themselves often tricked by the landlords to use the rent laws to screen their unethical practices.

The landlord is required by law to send a sixty-day advance notice to the tenant, if he wants him to move at the expiration of a lease, but the tenant must answer this notice, in a certain form supplied by law.

The tenant receives from the landlord the following notice: "You are hereby notified that I have elected to terminate your tenancy by virtue of which you now occupy, as my tenant, the following described premises. And you are hereby further notified to quit and deliver up the possession of said premises to me at the end of the present term, provided sixty days intervene, otherwise at the end of the sixty-day term, which commences next after the service of this notice.

"And I hereby demand of you, pursuant to Section 17 of 'An act in regard to forcible entry and detainer' as amended, that within ten days after the receipt of this demand, or within 30 or more days prior to the termination or expiration of your term of tenancy, you give me notice of your intention, if it be your intention, to apply for a stay of execution in case of judgment for possession of the above described premises rendered against you."

This notice must be answered by the tenant as follows: "Pursuant to your demand, under section 17a of 'An act relating to forcible entry and detainer,' as amended, notice is hereby given you that in the event of a judgment for possession against me for......apartment, it is my intention to apply for a stay of execution."

Many tenants do not answer these notices at all, failing to understand the legal phraseology of the demand for an answer from the tenant, or else they do not make their answer in the proper manner.

A notice to the tenant to vacate is much more important in the landlord-tenant battle than would appear on the surface, because it is the general practice for the landlord to send every tenant notice to vacate after the violation of the lease.

Due to the rent laws, after sending such notice, the landlord has his tenant "just where he wants him." If between the time of sending notice to his tenant, and the expiration of the lease, the landlord finds a new renter at a higher rent, according to law the tenant who has improperly answered the notice to vacate must move as soon as the lease expires. The notice to vacate, which the large majority of renters receive every year, is an advance notice that the tenant must pay a higher rent or get out.

Many landlords, even tho they send the notice, intend to let the present tenant remain, find after the notice is sent, a family which is willing to pay more, and the old tenant has to go.

Even if the tenant does apply, in answer to the notice to vacate, for a stay of execution, after the expiration of the lease, the tenant must pay the higher rent demanded or else take the case to the court. In that event it is up to the discretion of the judge sitting at the time on court cases whether or not the tenant must vacate.

The rent laws were passed at the urgent demand of the tenants, so that they would not suddenly be faced with the choice of either paying a high rent increase or of moving. The rent laws have been so wrapped in legal phraseology, and so indirect and feeble, that they are not only ineffective, but due to the leases since put into use by the Chicago Real Estate Board, they aid the landlord.

The tenant must waive, in the lease, all the benefits which were supposed to accrue to him from the rent laws. The only thing that the landlord permits to remain active is that part of the rent laws which binds the tenant to lengthy legal procedure and which serves to confuse and involve the tenant while the landlord is robbing him.

Chicago is said by housing investigators to have the feeblest rent laws, and to pay less attention to this problem than any other American city. The Chicago Real Estate Board has cleverly turned what little legislation we have on housing to the advantage of the real estate companies.

LENINGRAD PORT RETURNS TO OLD TIME EFFICIENCY

Ice-Breakers Make Way For Wheat Ships

(By Rosta News Agency)

LENINGRAD, April 3.—The port of Leningrad (Petrograd) is gradually becoming the best organized and busiest harbor of the Union of Soviet Republics. The 1923 shipping season was very successful. Its results exceed the total of the figures of the two preceding shipping seasons. After ten years of disorganization the port worked in 1923 without any interruptions. During this season 355 ships left the port—which is twice as much as during the two preceding seasons.

Grain Exports.

It was the first time since the revolution that millions of poods of Russian grain were exported abroad thru the port of Leningrad. Russian grain is now at the fore as a powerful economic factor on the foreign markets.

As regards imports 736 vesesls entered the port in 1923. During the first shipping year (1921) 312 ships entered the port, during the second year—644. The goods imported to Russia during the Summer in 1923 were mainly foreign coal (13,000,000 poods), technical material, locomotives, etc. Of foodstuffs only an insignificant quantity of sugar was imported. In 1922 foodstuffs formed a considerable part (17,000,000 poods) of the entire import figure, while in 1921 they formed almost half of all the imports.

In 1923 there were no delays in loading and unloading the ships. Mechanical devices have been introduced. Loading and unloading have been organized in such a way that during the whole season the time schedule of the ships has not been exceeded by even one hour. The port harbored at the same time up to 50 steamers and was successful in giving them all satisfactory service.

Dredging In Harbor.

The technical improvements of 1923 consisted in a full cleaning up of the land and water area of the port, and in extensive dredging operations which greatly extended the mooring possibilities of the harbor. The port has been brought back to its pre-war condition. It can accomodate every day 100 steamers, i. e., four times more than in the preceding seasons. A magnificent iron and concrete storehouse has been constructed. Nothing has remained now of the pitiful condition which the port presented between 1919 and 1921.

During the winter the port will receive and dispatch 350 steamers and will handle 84 million poods of export and import freight. As in the past year the giant ice-breakers "Lenin," "Yermak" and "Sviatoger" which have been completely repaired, are used for ice-breaking. They are aided by a squadron of small ice-breakers.

'Willie-Wah' Storm In Aleutian Islands Lays Up Aviators

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Washington, April 3.—Second unfavorable weather conditions in British Columbia, Alaska and the Aleutian islands continued today, making probable further postponement of the start of the second leg of the American army "round the world" flight.

A "Willie-wah" which is a violent form of wind storm frequent this season of the year, was reported in the Aleutian islands.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS
CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Young Workers Think Shop Nucleus Is New Kind of Food.

"SHOP NUCLEUS? What is that something to eat," That's about the way the average young fellow in the factory greets the name for the basic form of Communist organization.

No, shop nucleus is not something to eat, drink or wear. In reality it is a very simple term. It is new and that is why it is hard to understand and especially to recognize as important for workers, young and old.

"Nucleus" is the scientific name for the kernel or the life center of any living body. Shop nucleus would mean the "life center of the shop." The shop nucleus so far as Communists are concerned means that we should have our organizational units in the shop where they are to act as the centers of life and energy of the working class.

Accepted Form of Organization.

Since the last convention, the Young Workers League has been putting a lot of time and energy into this work of transferring the territorial branches into the shop. Even the Workers Party has once or twice winked favorably on the shop nuclei form of organization. Sooner or later this will be the all-absorbing task.

For the Young Workers League which moves a little faster and has the historic reputation of being "pure," the shop nucleus transformation becomes the pivot of all activity.

Just why is this so? The plan of the nucleus is to transfer all activities to the shop. Well, when considering anti-military work we must think of how to carry out our propaganda in this sphere. Naturally when we are organized on the basis of the shop, the first thought is: start your anti-military work among your fellow toilers—in the shop. And the same is true of all other league and party work.

Leadership of Masses.

Therefore, it is not surprising at all to find the Young Workers League glibly spouting about nuclei, nuclei and more nuclei. Too much cannot be said about nuclei. A day will come when the term Communist shop nuclei will mean leadership to the masses of American workers; and in its small but necessary way the Young Workers League is in all earnestness planning the success of its shop campaign.

Young Worker Is Out.

The latest number of the Young Worker, official organ of the Young Workers League of America, has just come off the press and can be obtained for 5c a copy, 3c in bundle orders, from the national office of the league, 1009 N. State street, Chicago, Ill.

Among the leading features of this excellent newspaper for the current issue are special stories of the activities of the league all over the country, articles on the situation and conditions of the young workers in the United States and other lands, an exposure of the forces behind the recent Mexican civil war, which may involve a conflict between this country and the British government, and articles dealing with the reorganization of the league on the basis of shop units. One of the most interesting features is the beginning of a serial story by Leon Trotzky, well-known leader of the Russian workers' revolution, describing his escape from Siberia after the revolution of 1905. There are the usual features, which include articles by well-known writers, editorials, and the inimitable humor column of Walt Carmon.

BANNER YEAR FOR LUMBER PLUTES OF NORTHWEST

Huge Profits as Workers Sleep with Rats

(By The Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 3.—British Columbia lumber barons get everything out of the timber but the knothole. The royal commission investigating the pulp and paper situation in Canada were informed by British Columbia lumber bosses here that in the cedar log exporting business, the tops of cedar trees, which were unprofitable for domestic selling, were sold to Japan at a good market price. So enticing have lumber profits become that within the last month considerable American capital has come into the province.

While the lumber business is undoubtedly profitable for the lumber bosses it is anything but lucrative for the lumber workers. During the rainy season many camps have reported leaky bunkhouses, inadequate bedding and poor quality food. A great number of camps have no dry rooms for the washing and drying of clothing and the result has been rheumatism and pneumonia.

At Stave Falls, Camp 3, owned by the Stave Falls Lumber Co., the camp has no bathhouse or dry room and the sleeping quarters are decrepit buildings overrun with rats and vermin. In this camp the workers are charged 15 cents a day for the privilege of using bedding that has never been changed in months. At another place, Theodosia Arm, B. C., owned by the Merrill & Ring Logging Co., the workers are forced to live in leaky tents, badly overcrowded and unsanitary, as many as 20 men sharing one tent with no washing or other sanitary conveniences.

Attempt to De-Oil Members of Congress Ends in Failure

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—When Senator Frazier, of North Dakota, asked for immediate consideration of his senate joint resolution 74, which calls upon all senators, congressmen and other federal officials drawing more than $3,000 a year to file a public statement of their holdings of oil stocks and other investments, Senator Curtis, of Kansas, objected. The resolution went to sleep in committee.

Frazier said that the disclosures made in the oil and other investigations had justified the suspicion of the people that this is a government "of, by and for the financial interests," and that public officials who are not afraid of being found out should be glad of an opportunity to publicly report their holdings of stocks, bonds and other ownership that might be favorably affected by their official acts.

Curtis, the republican whip, recently confessed to being in the circle of McLean's protectors, and was later discovered to have bought Sinclair oil stock just after the Teapot Dome lease was signed.

Chairman George Graham, of the house judiciary committee, is blocking the impeachment proceedings against Fall's son-in-law, C. C. Chase, collector of customs at San Antonio, which were started by a unanimous roll call vote in the senate. Graham is under the control of the republican party organization in the house.

Middlemen and Railroads Get Farmers' Money

ATKINS, Mont., April 3.—After paying exorbitant freight and brokerage charges, farmers in this territory have nothing left over to pay for other expenses, and are losing heavily on all hay and other farm products shipped. A farmer in this town shipped a carload of hay to Joliet, Ill., and the charges on 316 bales, weighing 34,200 pounds amounted to $312.25, which is nearly a dollar a bale. The market price of hay was $19.00 per ton of 20 bales

The farmer, found that he had lost heavily on the transaction, his receipts from the hay not quite covering the freight costs. The farmers' discontent over raising their crops merely to increase the profits of the railroads is naturally increasing in this section.

Our Musical Critic Defends Himself Against Californian

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Violent protest against the musical criticism of this writer has come to the DAILY WORKER offices in the form of a letter from Comrade Sam Milder, of San Pedro, California. Comrade Milder says: "He (Frankenstein) reveals himself as unintelligent and uniformed in music matters by granting approval only to the modern composers; the old masters without exception, receive surprisingly puerile sneers and unexplained abuse from him. This, I contend, is no adequate criterion for criticism, and I hope you will consider this matter for the sake of the music lovers who are enlightened enough, also, on more worldly matters to read the only working class daily in America."

We plead partly guilty to the indictment. What our comrade is trying to say is that he disagrees with our point of view. He likes old music, so do we, but we vastly prefer the moderns. There is nothing sneering in our attitude, and no unexplained abuse. If a Bach concerto puts us to sleep we say so.

1924 Versus 1624.

The criteria of criticism of this writer are his own views and likes in music, as developed by what training and experience he has had. In his view, the art of music has been gradually developing since early times. The music of the present is better than that of the past because of this development. Just as the orchestra of 1924 is capable of thousand fold richer and more beautiful effects than the primitive orchestra of 1624, so the music of the twentieth century is a finer product artistically and esthetically viewed than the music of the seventeenth century.

We are by no means alone in this view. For example, we quote from Rimsky-Korsakoff's autobiography: (Knopf edition, page 18), "Mozart and Haydn were considered out of date and naive; J. S. Bach was held to be petrified, yes, even a mere musico-mathematical, feelingless and dead nature, composing like a very machine. Handel was considered a strong nature, but he was mentioned very rarely. Chopin was likened by Balakireff to a nervous society lady." These are the opinions of what our comrade terms the "old masters" held by Balakireff, Cui, Borodin and Musorgski. These men were some of the greatest musical geniuses of Russia, a land fertile of genius. Are these "unintelligent and uninformed men, and are their opinions to be held as 'puerile sneers' and 'unexplained abuse?'"

Praised Bach Once.

The condemnation of the "old masters" quoted above, coming from men who knew beyond cavil whereof they thought and spoke is far stronger than anything this writer has published in the DAILY WORKER. Comrade Milder may remember that we praised highly J. S. Bach's "St. Matthew's Passion," and we should have given the stamp of our most important approval to Handel's oratorios and the symphonies of Mozart and Haydn had any been performed.

Yes, Comrade Milder, we are biased in favor of the moderns. We would much sooner hear Prokofieff's "Love For Three Oranges" over again than Gluck's "Orpheus." And Gustav Mahler's seventh symphony would attract us far more powerfully than the "Jupiter" of Mozart. Why preference for modern music should call on our head your wrath and vituperation passes the bounds of the understanding given to our unintelligent and puerile intellect, but it causes us great grief and anguish of soul.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Lunatics In California.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., April 3.—There are 782 more inmates of California prisons, reformatories and asylums this month than in the same month of 1922. Folsom and San Quentin now have the largest population in their history. Despite 25 recent paroles there are 2,900 at San Quentin, counting the road camp. In 1923, 844 women were arrested in California on felony charges as compared with 482 in 1922—an increase of nearly 100 per cent. Of these 128 were arrested for burglary and 96 for worthless checks. Nineteen women were charged with highway robbery.

Poultry Dressers Win.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Members of the Poultry Dressers' union in three local markets have returned to work after a week's lockout. The agreement includes recognition of union arbitration, a 48-hour week as against 57, a 12½ per cent wage increase, based on piecework, and a guaranteed minimum of $45 a week.

The following editorial is from the Wyoming Labor Journal, official organ of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor, James Buckley, editor.

Leading Law Official

The attorney general of the United States, thundering against striking shopmen in Federal Judge Wilkerson's court, is one picture.

The same official in the seclusion of a Florida hotel, while the Teapot Dome scandal rocks the nation, is another picture.

The attorney general threw the shopmen's case into an equity court because he said, he wanted "quick action." The shopmen's rights were not considered.

Their plea for justice fell on deaf ears. They were charged with conspiracy, condemned and enjoined. The government spent millions to break their strike and the attorney general proclaimed his allegiance to the anti-union shop.

But worse than all this, the attorney general caused government by injunction to be substituted for government by law.

In the Teapot Dome case the same individual is a different attorney general. He gives no interviews to newspaper men. He does no heroic pose about "government by law."

No injunction process is suggested, and out of the welter of corruption that oozes from the senate probe comes whispers that the law is shaped to permit escape.

It is whispered that the Teapot Dome oil lease in itself can not be proven criminal and that it will be hard to prove the money transactions were illegal, as these are alleged to be loans, payable on demand.

Tho the oil lease may be canceled, the lease holders have unloaded. They have sold stock to the public and have secured the cash, while others "hold the bag."

Individuals of small importance may be punished after being discredited in the public eye, but the "higher ups" will not be reached. The usual policy is to secure a few victims of little standing, or of temporary popularity, who will be used to appease popular wrath.

The "higher ups" are the inner circle, the respectable citizens who grease the political machine, suggest candidates, judges, or department heads, who shape policies and who "rig" the stock market when the trap is ready.

Various sums alleged to have passed between parties in the public eye is but cigarette money as compared with the $100,000,000 that Teapot Dome is claimed to be worth to its private exploiters.

It may be said that a public official can not apply the shopmen's procedure to the Teapot Dome case.

Labor does not ask this. Labor opposes government by injunction. It insists on the even distribution of justice—not government by courts for the workers and a law code filled with loopholes for the influential and rich.

Justice may be thwarted by legalistic hair splitting, but labor's higher consciousness repels tricky pleadings and unlawful attacks against the workers while natural resources are filched and public office is defiled.

To the workers, equity proceedings, chancery courts, criminal law and civil action are but other names for moral conduct between men.

Labor makes little distinction between law and the moral code.

When this code is violated they feel that the spirit of the law is ignored and that government is brought to debasing levels.

Australian Hughes Would Make Judas Hang His Head

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 3.—Since he was kicked out of the Labor movement W. M. Hughes, who is now touring America, has become the most dangerous reactionary Australia has ever known. He instituted a political censorship (apart from the ordinary military censorship) the like of which was never known before in Australia. In particular, he harassed the very Labor papers that, prior to the war, helped him to power as a Labor premier.

He broke strikes with the aid of the military, broke up unions, turned unionists out to starve, and instituted preference for company unions.

In September, 1922, at the behest of the British imperialists, he tried to rush Australia into war with Turkey. That exploit failed because the Australian people repudiated his offer of troops. He has been mixed up in a score of political scandals.

The employers handed him a donation of $125,000. And to this day he has refused to divulge the names of the donors.

Hasn't Decency of Judas.

Today Hughes as a political force is dead. Thrown out of the position of prime minister he is left to live on his political wits. He is posing before the American people as a genius of democracy, just as his fellow Welshman, Lloyd George, did. American workers must be warned that in Hughes they have a reactionary of the most dangerous type.

Those in Australia who knew him better than anybody else warn the American workers to assess him at his proper worth—as a political Judas who in the days when he was called upon to prove his loyalty to the Labor movement betrayed the workers basely and yet, unlike the Bible Judas, hadn't the decency to atone for his crime by suicide.

C. of C. Gives Farmers Judas Kiss.

At the last meeting of the Growers' Association at Fort Landerdale, Fla., writes Frank Voigt to the DAILY WORKER, farmers were urged to join the Chamber of Commerce and to send representatives to the monthly meetings of that body. Our correspondent believes this is an attempt to prevent the producing farmers from uniting in a class organization.

Workers Arrested In California on Slightest Excuse

By MAUD McCREERY

(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 3.—Local police officers are running amuck these days, arresting hundreds of men daily on the charge of vagrancy. The men are walking the streets hunting jobs that will prevent their becoming vagrants and public charges. They are arrested, thrown into jail, booked and finger printed and then released after a day or two without explanation or redress.

Typical "Law and Order."

The following letter written to The Los Angeles Record tells a typical story of the tactics of the police and serves as a warning to workers in the east and middle west who are fascinated by the advertisements and newspaper articles put out by the Los Angeles boosters and open shoppers to lure them to California:

"EDITOR RECORD: Could you give space for another horrible example of an unfortunate worker in these realms of sunny California? it happened this way: A friend asked me to sell some of the Farmer-Labor literature, The DAILY WORKER, etc., a few weeks ago at the same time that men and women were being arrested for selling the I. W. W. paper Solidarity and the Industrial Worker. 'Yes,' said the plain clothes cop on looking over the paper, 'this is all Wobbly—and in you go.' He kept me in jail two days and released me without a trial.

No Charges Made.

"I went to the Workers' party meeting at their next session to relate my hard luck story. A number of uniformed cops lined the audience up and hurried 39 of us off. We were taken to the Los Angeles' jail and finger printed. The last few getting to their cells about 2 a. m. found the remainder of their party sprawled on the cement floor without bed or blankets. The next night we got blankets which were damp and lousy. Most of the day was spent in taking our photos and finger prints, this latter in triplicate. We were finally let loose on Saturday without one word of explanation or warning."

To Strike May Day.

DETROIT, April 3.—May day is the date fixed by Local 58, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, for a stoppage of work in case contractors refuse to meet a demand for a scale of $1.25 instead of $1 an hour for journeymen.

OIL PROBE PLANS CRIMINAL ACTION IN 5 INDICTMENTS

No Legislative Action This Session

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Two witnesses have been subpoenaed to appear before the senat oil investigating committee Monday.

They are Robert J. Wolfe, publisher of the Columbus Dispatch and the Ohio State Journal of Columbus, Ohio, and J. B. French of Oklahoma City. Senator Walsh will question both in connection with reported political "deals" at the 1920 republican national convention at Chicago.

Wolfe was a member of the Ohio Wood delegation to the convention. French is said to have been a political associate of the late Jake Hamon.

With the end of their inquiry in sight, senate oil investigators prepared to translate the results of the scandal probe into definite results immediately.

Federal Jury Called.

The federal grand jury which meets here April 10 will be entrusted with criminal proceedings against at least five men whose names have figured in the oil inquiry. At the same time the committee will take steps to make apparent to the country the concrete results of its months of work. These are:

1. Preparation of a report which will sweepingly condemn policies followed with respect to the leasing of naval reserves.

2. Presentation of amendments to the leasing law and probably some original legislation to prevent future disposition of any part of the public resources, without a check by congress.

Senator Walsh, Montana, leading spirit in the investigation, is now at work on the proposed legislation. It will be impossible to get action on this at the present session of congress, but Walsh and his colleague want to have it introduced as soon as practicable as notice to the country that the committee intends to heed the lessons learned in the inquiry.

To Be Hot Document.

The report which will cover millions of words of testimony, will apply in the main to the period since Walsh went to Palm Beach in January to question E. B. McLean and is expected to be one of the most scathing documents ever presented to the senate. It will condemn the turning over of the naval oil lands from the navy to the interior department and the manner in which Teapot Dome and Elk Hills were leased to Sinclair and Doheny.

Walsh and the committee are cleaning up the loose ends of the inquiry by seeking further evidence concerning the reputed "bartering" at the 1920 republican national convention. Government counsel are in constant touch with the probers going over evidence for presentation to the grand jury.

At least five persons will be named in indictments to be sought on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, it was indicated.

Wilson's Widow Wins Watchmakers' Wad; Was Willing Worker

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Cutting off his relatives, Henry Bergheimer, Swiss watch-maker, who died here last October, left his estate valued at $6,000 to Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, widow of the late president.

Bergheimer's will, filed here for probate, conveyed life insurance and other property to Mrs. Wilson. Bergheimer once worked in the jewelry store of Galt Brothers here in which Mrs. Wilson has an interest, obtained thru her marriage to one of the former partners in the business. He was a very much attached to Mrs. Wilson and was considered a loyal worker.

Wanted For The Rock Pile.

NEW YORK, April 3.—A bird that breaks rock with his bill, swims, flys and walks will be sought by the University of Pennsylvania expedition which sails for the valley of the Amazon tomorrow. Specimens of this bird, called the Doatzin, are valued here at $50,000.

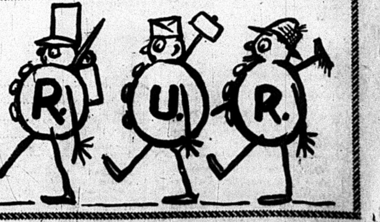
The Robots Are Coming!



TRACHTENBERG'S ROCHESTER TALK MUCH APPLAUDED

Lectures on Communist Movement in Europe

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 3.—Alexander Trachtenberg, who has recently returned from travels thru Soviet Russia and other parts of Europe where he made a careful study of the European labor and Communist movements, delivered a most instructive lecture on the "International World Situation." The speaker was greatly applauded.

The speaker gave special emphasis to the activities of the various European Communist sections of the Comintern. Of Russia, he said: "I left it from the back door but I entered it from the front door, this time welcomed by the representatives of the working class."

Feel the Revolution.

"One feels the revolution the moment he's there," continued the speaker. "The working class is actually in power and you cannot help feeling it everywhere."

Trachtenberg travelled extensively thru Russia, visiting factories, co-operatives and agricultural sections of the country, gathering statistics and studying the actual conditions from that basis.

Tells of German Communists.

Describing the revolutionary situation in Germany, Trachtenberg told of the activities of the German Communist Party and explained why the party did not want to call for an uprising in November last. One of the reasons given by the speaker was the betrayal of the left social-democrats. "In time of crisis," he said, "they prove to have no backbone." They refused to fight the fascisti movement.

Comrade Trachtenberg also discussed the situation in Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and France. He concluded the lecture by emphasizing the necessity of American labor building up the American labor movement and spoke in favor of the workers' independent political action.

In another lecture—this time to the Workers Party membership and sympathizers—he detailed the activities of our movement. To proletarian party members who participated in the discussion Trachtenberg said that they had no right to criticize the Communist Party from without as long as they considered themselves Communists.

He spoke in Binghamton and Utica also.

Oklahoma Farmer-Labor Convention Will Be Held in May

(By The Federated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 3.—Call for a state convention to be held May 9-10 in Oklahoma City to launch a Farmer-Labor Party in Oklahoma has been sent out from a committee of 50 farmers and city men and women which met March 27 at a Farmers' Union community house six miles from Oklahoma City.

The call adopted follows that issued by the National Farmer-Labor committee on arrangements and sets forth the aims of the movement to send delegates to the St. Paul convention June 17 and to put out a complete ticket in Oklahoma for the August primaries. A law recently passed in Oklahoma provides that a new party may be launched by the filing of petitions bearing 5,000 signatures.

X. The "Old Guard" and the Youth.

OUR next difference of opinion with Comrade Trotzky refers to that passage in his article in which he says: "A degeneration of the 'Old Guard' is to be observed several times in the development of history. Let us take the most recent and most striking historical example: The leaders and the parties of the Second International.

"We know perfectly well that Wilhelm Liebknecht, Bebel, Singer, Victor Adler, Kautsky, Bernstein, Lafargue, Guesde and others have been direct and immediate disciples of Marx and Engels. We know, however, that all these leaders—some partially, others totally—have, in the atmosphere of parliamentary reform and of the strong growth of the party and trade unions apparatus, degenerated towards opportunism."

Bebel, Lafargue and other dead leaders, who cannot defend themselves, are simply cited to point a moral; it was hardly possible to name the members of the Political Bureau, and therefore Bebel, Lafargue and others are adduced. This is clear to each and everyone. And which disciples are meant is equally clear.

Why This Attack?

Comrade Trotzky steps forwards and says: "You are the immediate disciples of Lenin; the disciples of Marx went over to the side of the bourgeoisie under the influence of parliamentary conditions, from which we may conclude that the same may happen to you." Of course we cannot take a patent preventative that nothing of the kind could ever happen to us. Should that which Comrade Trotzky is frightening us with really occur, the Party will turn us out ruthlessly enough.

But what has really happened to us? Of all the persons adduced by Comrade Trotzky, the only ones still living are Kautsky and Bernstein, and these too are mere political corpses adorning the very extreme right wing of the Scheidemann party, altho they are both disciples of Marx and Engels. It is with these that we are compared, and the comparison is drawn in the hope that a shadow will thus be cast on the political trend of the majority of the Central Committee.

The rule of the bourgeoisie and parliament spoils people. That is true. But fortunately these elements do not obtain amongst us, and our past is cleaner than that of Kautsky and Bernstein, and we are carved from another wood altogether . . .

The third passage in Comrade Trotzky's letter which calls for special objections on our part is that in which he speaks of the youth. This is an especially wide and delicate question, and cannot be passed over in silence.

The Youth.

Comrade Trotzky expresses himself as follows: "Since the Party apparatus is unavoidably constituted out of the most experienced and proved comrades, the worst consequences of the bureaucratism of the apparatus will be its influence on the ideological-political formation of the young generation of the Party. It is precisely owing to this circumstance that the youth—the surest barometer of the Party—reacts against the Party bureaucratism in the most energetic manner." In other words, the question dealt with is that of the Party generations, of the fundamental core—the old Bolshevist guard and the Youth.

I have already quoted the main figures referring to the various ages represented among Party members. We are fully convinced that there are no differences of opinion between us and our young guard, and that there cannot be any.

In no case must we permit the old Bolsheviki to hold the young in tutelage. This would be the most foolish thing which could be done. It is ridiculous to suppose that we could act in the manner of those people who say: the chicken must not try to teach the hen: listen to what your elders say, do as papa and mamma tell you; for we are the disciples of Comrade Lenin, and know that, given like conditions, the rule is valid which says: the younger the better.

Room for Marxian Knowledge.

We know that the day must come when we shall be relieved of our posts, that we old Communists will be followed by the coming generation. It is incumbent on us to help this younger generation, to transmit to it the political experience gained by the Party during long decades. It is the task of the Party to prepare the way for the coming generation, to give it the opportunity of learning, so that it may be able to render service to the country later on.

I recall to your minds the demagogic observation made by Preobrazensky, to the effect that the students who had passed thru the Sverdlov university gain culture and Marxian knowledge, but that this knowledge is of no use to them if they cannot apply it to real life.

We know that all the best of the Sverdlov scholars and students of our universities hold circles, and participate in Party work. And it is well that they do so!

But to assert that there is no room in our country for the application of Marxian knowledge, in a country where we have so many illiterates and politically untaught; to assert to the youthful members that they will never be able to apply their knowledge, for the Party prevents them—that is bad demogogy, comrades.

When Comrade Preobrazensky makes such assertions, it is at least incautious of Comrade Trotzky to make the observation which he does with regard to the youth, especially if we consider the circumstances under which he makes it.

Another Trotzky Mistake.

Comrade Trotzky makes another grave mistake here. It is not correct to regard this youth as a barometer which the Central Committee has to take as rule of conduct. The barometer according to which the Central Committee has to regulate its actions is—the workers in the workshops and factories. It is not our intention to depreciate the value of the other groups in the least.

But if we are speaking of who is the "weather maker" for the Party, then it is a matter of course that this role is played by the workers. We seek these workmen alike, in the nuclei and at their work.

The youth question has become particularly acute at the present time and we must come to a definite agreement. Should anyone succeed in erecting a partition between the main core of the Party and the youth, this partition would naturally be a great misfortune for us.

We are, therefore, convinced that the overwhelming majority of the really proletarian youth, now learning under the guidance of the Party, will discern the intrinsic character of our differences of opinion, and will say to the praisers of youth: Do not praise us too much, we are not going to allow ourselves to be divided from the old fundamental core of the Party. We want to learn from the old main core of the Bolshevist Party. I think that the great majority of the youthful members will speak thus, and they will be right.

X. Conclusion.

I have not touched upon every point of dispute which might arise from Comrade Trotzky's article. His article is one which is not easily forgotten. In the old Bolshevist days we should have placed every sentence under the magnifying glass, and not left one stone upon another, as Bolshevism was accustomed to treat wrong programmatic articles.

We regret that Comrade Trotzky should have violated the unanimity once arrived at by the unanimously accepted resolution of the Central Committee, and should have come forward with such an article. This article will be debated and re-debated everywhere.

A discussion has begun all over Russia. But everything has its good side. The whole Party, including our Petrograd organization, will consider the questions raised in this article. I hope that our organization will give a clear and definite reply to these questions.

The composition of the Central Committee of our Party is well known to you; you know that it is the pick of the Party, sifted out 25 years ago. The whole Central Committee is agreed now even more than in Lenin's time, that Comrade Trotzky is still committing a fundamental political error, as he did at the Tenth Party Congress, when Comrade Lenin was obliged to oppose him.

No Danger To Party.

But it need not be said that however much we may differ in opinion from Comrade Trotzky in a number of questions, Comrade Trotzky is and remains one of our most authoritative leaders. Whatever comes, Comrade Trotzky's co-operation in the Political Bureau and other organs is indispensable. And this is secured. Do not believe any rumors, legends, etc. There have been differences of opinion, and always will be. The Party will decide who is right, but we shall continue to work unanimously together.

We must make careful decisions on all questions raised, and pay no heed to the malicious joy of our enemies the social revolutionists, the white guards, the Mensheviki. We are fully convinced that the unity of our Party is secure. Naturally, we need more than mere external unity, we need unity on the basis of Lenin's views. I call upon our Petrograd organization—the oldest organization of the Bolsheviki to exercise this unity!

Reader Likes The Daily Worker and Offers Suggestions

To the DAILY WORKER: Since the appearance of the DAILY WORKER I have read every copy of it, and I like it very much. At last the working class of this country has succeeded in establishing a real English Communist paper. I went a little further and tried to find out what the other readers of the DAILY WORKER think about it, and so far I haves not met a single person who had not expressed complete approval of the paper.

In the DAILY WORKER the workers and poor farmers have their friend, their leader and their inspiration. Now it is up to the members of the Workers Party and their sympathizers to distribute it, to place it into the hands of the masses. The DAILY WORKER must be read by hundreds of thousands of workers and exploited farmers. It is their paper, and if they will not read it, we will be blamed because we didn't reach them with the DAILY WORKER. I am absolutely convinced that if we work with the same zeal in the distribution of the DAILY WORKER as we have worked in collecting money for its establishment, the DAILY WORKER will soon become a great factor in the class struggle of this country.

Tho in complete agreement with the position of the DAILY WORKER I would like, however, to make one suggestion as to its contents. I think it would be very beneficial to the paper and to its readers if the DAILY WORKER would have a "Press Review" section. I don't mean the kind of a review that is usually carried by the English papers, which contains only long extracts, quotations or reprints from the other papers and magazines. The "Press Review section should be a lively one and interesting and it is impossible to make it so by using long quotations or reprints. What we have to do in this section is to take fundamental ideas from editorials, or articles of more influential bourgeois papers or of official organs of the unions or political parties, if necessary by quoting a sentence or two, or even a paragraph, and either criticize them as briefly as possible or use them for emphasizing our point of view, if such editorials or articles agree with our position on some particular question. I did like the criticism of the "New Leader" of New York, which occurred in the DAILY WORKER sometime ago, and also Comrade Minor's criticism of "The Tribune," but I think that they are entirely too lengthy, too many unnecessary words. You cannot make the readers read such long articles, and the "Press Review" section must be read and liked by the majority.

In making this suggestion I am not sure whether it is in place. But having at heart the best interests of our DAILY, I thought I will mention the things that are on my mind.

With, Communist greetings, I remain.—A. Bimba, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Party Membership, Attention!

THE PRESENT situation of the Workers Party in the struggle for the formation of a mass, class Farmer-Labor Party will be presented to the membership of the party in a series of membership mass meetings in the principal cities.

The development of the Farmer-Labor movement requires the mobilization of the entire party for an intensive campaign during the coming months. It is essential that every party member not only give the campaign the greatest support possible, but it is equally important that every member of the party know exactly what the party is trying to do. The whole party must understand the role which the united front movement for the Farmer-Labor Party plays in the struggle for the Proletarian Revolution, the Soviets and Proletarian Dictatorship.

In order to present the situation to the membership meetings have been arranged in the district headquarters city of eight districts, which will be attended by the members in these cities and also by comrades invited from the nearby cities. These meetings will be addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Party. His subject will be "The Decisive Stage of our Labor Party Policy".

The meetings arranged are:

Cleveland, Sunday, April 6, at 3 p. m., Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid Ave.

Pittsburg, Monday, April 7, 8 p. m., Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St.

Philadelphia, Tuesday, April 8, 8 p. m., Amalgamated Centre, 431 Pine St.

New York City, Wednesday, April 9, 8 p. m., Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.

Boston, Thursday, April 10.

Buffalo, Saturday, April 12, Finnish Hall, 150 Grider St.

Detroit, Sunday, April 13, Finnish Hall, 5963 Fourteenth St.

Chicago, Tuesday, April 22.

Every party member in the cities mentioned should attend these meetings. Every party member within reach of these cities should come to the meetings.

The Party must know and understand the policies of the Central Executive Committee. The Party must mobilize all its strength for the campaign which the Party is now entering.

Reverse Decisions.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., April 3.—The third district court of appeals has reversed the convictions of Alfred Erickson and Lauri Mammi on criminal syndicalism charges, while affirming the convictions of Frank Cox, R. Kullman and C. E. McGrath. The court claims membership in the I. W. W. was "not proved" in the cases of Erickson and Mammi. Membership was freely admitted in all cases and the contradictory decisions are purely arbitrary. The decisions against Cox, Kullman, and McGrath will be appealed to the state supreme court.

German Mark May Take Another Crazy Fit Before Long

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 3.—From a psychological point of view, one of the most curious phenomena in Germany is the stabilization of the mark. A terrific drop is predicted, however, by experts. Where four months ago the least desired form of money in Germany was the mark, while foreign exchanges were at a premium, the reverse is true today. People actually prefer the rentenmark to the British pound, the Dutch florin, the Swiss franc. Only the dollar enjoys equal favor with the rentenmark.

How did this change come about? It is purely a question of psychology. The German people have been psychologized into believing that stabilization has taken place. That's all. "Balance your budget and stop the issuance of paper money," was the answer given by practically all foreign experts who tinkered with Germany, when asked how stabilization could be effected.

Becoming Expert Mathematicians.

But the budget has not been balanced and the presses have not stopped turning out paper money. The gap between income and expenditure of the national government is worse than at any time before the fall of 1922. During February the national treasury ran behind 138,500,000 gold marks (about $3,300,000). This is due to the fact that the return from the new tax laws is not as big as the government hoped. The rich fellows are, as usual, escaping some of the tax burdens. As for paper money, while on Nov. 15, just before the stabilization began, 92,884,721,000,000,000,000 paper marks were in circulation, there are now six times as many, namely 587,374,526,000,000,000,000, marks in circulation.

Richard Kuczynski, one of the ablest economists in Germany, warns that: "A stability that does not rest upon sound state finances but draws its chief sustenance from emotion, from the confidence of a people that has grown weary thru terrible suffering, cannot last long." Kuczynski urges a big foreign loan.

Retired Admiral Wants Airplane.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 3.—Declaring that "the airplane is the only military and naval weapon which is useful in peace times," and that therefore a few hundred million dollars spent on airplanes for war purposes would also aid peace development, Admiral W. F. Fullman, retired, proposed to organize a strong aeronautic association which will get the government to come thru with the coin. Inasmuch as these planes will not be used for war purposes until war comes, Admiral Fullman states that the pacifists in congress could not object to the cost of an "America first" air program.

ELECTRIC TRUST PROFIT FOR 1923 IS $189,379,050

Government In Fake Sherman Law Suit

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Existence of a giant electric light bulb trust which preys on the millions of electric light users in the country, is charged in a suit filed by the U. S. government in the Cleveland district court. The bill charges the General Electric Co. and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. with conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust law.

The profits of these two companies have been enormous. During 1923 General Electric made a net profit for dividends amounting to approximately $33,000,000 or at the rate of $18 on every $100 share of common stock.

$189,379,050 Profit.

Westinghouse will show net profit available for dividends approximately $16,000,000 or at a rate of $18.30 on each $100 worth of common stock. The combined profits of the two companies for the last five years total $189,379,050 after payment of all fixed charges, and are shown year by year as follows:

	Gen. Electric	Westinghouse
1919	$25,077,971	$14,886,445
1920	22,132,288	12,297,640
1921	21,652,812	5,837,389
1922	26,231,019	12,263,486
1923	33,000,000	16,000,000
Total..	$128,094,090	$61,284,960

Profits of General Electric, the principal in the electric light bulb conspiracy, show hardly any diminution during the depression of 1921.

General Electric, according to the government's suit, controls practically the entire sale of tungsten lamps in the United States. This means that a single great corporation is in a position to levy a monopoly profit on practically every user of electricity for lighting purposes in the country, for during 1923 approximately 99.8 per cent of the electric bulbs used were tungsten filaments.

Million Bulbs A Day.

The magnitude of the business is apparent when we find that during 1923, 341,000,000 electric light bulbs were manufactured in the United States or more than a million for every working day. And the fact that only 30 per cent of the nation's homes are yet equipped with electric lights leads these companies to predict a continuation of the rapid increase in the business which has characterized recent years.

The government's petition demands that a system of contracts existing between the General Electric and the several companies engaged in distribution of the lamps be adjudged a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and that they be annulled. It asserts this contract system has been created for defeating the law by preventing competition. The business probably amounts to $50,000,000 a year.

Capitalism Drives To Suicide, Show Insurance Records

(By The Federated Press)

Death claims paid for suicides during 1923 by one of the largest insurance companies in the country indicate that the present economic order is becoming increasingly intolerable to the human beings for whom it is supposed to exist. Suicide claims paid by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company amounted to $1,300,000 and exceeded by approximately $150,000 the payments by the company for deaths caused by automobile accidents during the same period.

"The prevention of self destruction," according to the statistical bulletin of the company, "is one of the major problems in the conservation of life." Such a sentence might have been written in Rome 2,000 years ago when the Mediterranean world was dominated by a small clique of very wealthy capitalists.

C. P. P. A. Fears June 17

Undaunted by the uncovering of McAdoo as a tool of big capital the Conference for Progressive Political Action continues the noble work of digging up Lincoln republicans and Jeffersonian democrats and offering them as candidates of labor following the Chicago endorsement of McAdoo by the Union heads who compose the C. P. P. A.

Its official organ, "Labor," is almost terrified by the possibility that the June 17 conference of Farmer-Labor parties and groups, to be held in St. Paul, will adopt a platform so radical that Senator LaFollette will be greatly hampered in his appeal to the electorate. It is doubtful if the C. P. P. A. would view the June 17 conference with such fear and trembling if it had a clear idea of the forces that are at work in this eventful period. Its admission that it believes that La Follette should be allowed to dictate a platform for the working masses of this country to support shows that despite its trade union complexion the C. P. P. A. is without any real workingclass character. It does not want a mass movement of workers and farmers established in the United States for the simple reason that sooner or later this kind of a movement would reject all middleclass leadership.

Labor officialdom of the United States can function only in a middleclass milieu; it cannot lead a class political movement and it knows it. It wants a quiet, respectable, timid movement that puts its trust in lawyers and liberal politicians with whom labor officialdom feels at home and with whom it can enter into those quiet little deals that bring so much pleasure, and sometimes profit, to a labor leader.

The increased possibility of the success of a LaFollette campaign has made the C. P. P. A. more reactionary; it scents the fleshpots and it wants no one antagonized but the reds who, of course, do not count in its scheme of things.

It is a little hard to understand the frame of mind of labor union officials who would sacrifice a mass political party of workers and farmers, carrying the struggle to American capitalism, in the interests of any politician or group of politicians, but this is what the C. P. P. A. intends to do and will do unless the advanced elements in organizations of the workers and farmers are on the job from now until June 17.

The number of votes cast for LaFollette will be at best only a barometer of the resentment against the parties of capitalism. Unless this sentiment is crystallized into a functioning organization, controlled by workers and farmers, so far as these two groups are concerned, no progress will have been made.

June 17 is a workingclass date and its decisions will be those of a workingclass gathering.

"Invisible Government"

Many liberty-loving liberals are now feeling a hot blush of shame at the testimony adduced regarding the extent of "invisible" government in "the land of the free and the home of the brave." Out of the welter of charges made by the best-trusted agents of our capitalist democracy, the grafters, corruptionists, crooks, felons, and hold-up men, there has arisen the clear proof that the democratic and republican parties are dominated by a clique, working under cover in behalf of the big business interests. The effort of the fur-thief, Senator Spencer of Missouri, to turn the searchlight on the shady side of democratic politico-business deals should bring welcome substantiation of the cardinal truth that service to the employing class by the government agents of all capitalist parties is rendered on a strictly non-partisan, and frankly class basis.

Communists refuse to get excited over this menace of "invisible" government. To us there is nothing invisible about a government which jails the bravest champions of the workingclass, which shoots down unarmed strikers and sets fire to the tent colonies of the helpless women and children of striking coal miners, which aids and abets the railroad corporations, bankers and grain gamblers in driving the farmers to ruin and despair, and which is dedicated solely to the perpetuation of the present capitalist system of exploiting the workers and farmers at home and of plundering the laboring masses in the colonies and dependencies. Every workingman, every exploited farmer sees altogether too much of this "invisible" government of the bosses. The only invisible feature of the present monarchical republic of ours is its much-vaunted democracy. This is invisible because it is not there and there is nothing to see of it.

Communists have always pointed out that capitalist democracy is a fraud. We have told the working masses that this so-called democratic form of our government is in substance an iron dictatorship over the workers and farmers by the bosses, the owners of the means of production and exchange. Time and again the Communists ripped off the mask, smashed the shibboleths, and dispelled the delusions behind which hides the brutal capitalist dictatorship: the government masquerading as the representative and servant of all the people.

The Teapot and Daugherty disclosures only tell the workingclass a thousand times more effectively this great truth that we have sought to bring to the masses. Moral revulsion, shame, and horror are not in order on this occasion. What we must do is to steel our spirits, call upon our iron class determination and get on the job to strike at the very roots of the painfully visible and employing class domination of the lives of the working masses.

A hot blush of shame is not the way out. There is but one way to end the visible and invisible capitalist tyranny and that is for the workers and farmers to send both capitalist parties to the scrap heap, organize their own farmer-labor party on a class basis, fight for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' republic in place of the present capitalist republic, and set up a proletarian dictatorship to take over the industries and natural resources of the country and operate them on a Communist basis, collectively in the interest of the working and farming masses, instead of as is being done now in the interests of the owning, exploiting class.

The Farmers' Plight

The hopeless condition of the wheat market is of two-fold inestimable significance. For one thing it reflects the international character of capitalist production. Furthermore, it shows the utter powerlessness of employing class government manipulation in all its half-hearted attempts to alleviate the distress of those farmers engaged in producing a world commodity.

Our wheat market is smashed. New lows are the features of the daily wheat price columns in the financial sheets. Every capitalist remedy has proved to be a flat failure. Tariff increase, bankers' junketing trips of investigation, and senatorial peace cruises in President Coolidge's royal yacht on the Potomac haven't helped the farmer an iota. Every one of these quack solutions is today anathema to the agricultural masses of the wheat belt.

Wheat is a world commodity. Its price is not determined by the wire-pullers of the White House but by the conditions of the world market. Wheat is not like cream, cheese or buttermilk which are commodities primarily of the local market and, therefore, often fit material for capitalist reform manipulations. Liverpool is the center of the world's wheat market. Here the pulse of wheat prices is found and controlled. The Chicago wheat pit, more or less, echoes the noise of the wheat dealers in Liverpool.

In the eight months since last July America exported 94,923,000 bushels of wheat compared with 207,978,000 bushels exported in the corresponding period of the preceding year. The reason for this sharp drop is obvious. Canada, Australia, Argentina, and the European countries outside of Soviet Russia have had a much larger crop available for the world market this year. The collapse of our domestic wheat market is brought about by this world condition.

It becomes plain that the salvation of the American wheat farmer, as well as the redemption of every suffering producer of other world commodities, depends on a complete, fundamental international reorganization of the world's system of production and exchange. Capitalism cannot achieve this necessary, basic reorganization, because that would mean its total obliteration in favor of a Communist system of industry. Hence, in order to save themselves from utter ruin, the poor wheat farmers must pitch in their lot with those forces of every country in the world fighting for a thorogoing overhauling of the present system of capitalist production and exchange. For the farmers and producers of basic commodities ever again to look for relief in the fraudulent legislation measures of capitalist government agents is the height of folly.

The source of the evil of the disaster is international in scope. The remedy against the distress must, therefore, be international in scope. From day to day it becomes plainer that there is but one way out of the present misery for the workers and farmers of the United States, as well as every other country in the world. That way is to line up in the international struggle against world capitalism, against the rule by the class of world bankers and manufacturers, led by the Communist International.

John Fitzpatrick sees no contradiction between the resolution of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party urging the workers to keep away from the democratic and republican primaries and his action in urging the workers to support Small. Fitzpatrick is a prominent member of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party. "The action is perfectly logical" declared Mr. Fitzpatrick to a DAILY WORKER reporter. Anybody who can see where the logic comes in is fully qualified for a rest in the Coolidge cabinet.

A legion commander speaking in California recently declared that in the years to come the American Legion would rule this country. If that day ever comes all roads to hell will be jammed with human traffic, on the road to comparative peace in the infernal regions.

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

• • • •

The Eve of the Tragedy.

JOHN BROWN was now fifty-nine years old, and in the last year of his life. He had been disciplined in a terrible school in Kansas, but what he was about to attempt seemed so mad, so reckless, and so suicidally brave that many men of the South claimed, after the attempt, that he was but an insane man, and many of his conservative friends chose to take this view of the case, also.

Brown's Program of Action.

Yet John Brown was not insane. Coolly, rationally, like a clear-headed strategist, he had figured out the situation. He was an Abolitionist, and was determined to do anything to end the brutal slave system. Peaceful agitation had been going on for decades, but the North was still apathetic, and the South was only more inflamed and settled in its ideas.

What John Brown felt was needed now, was to make the men of the North and the South realize that there would be no peace in the land while slavery endured. What they must see was that men like himself would rise to break that loathsome peace. He would go to the South, capture the arsenal at Harper's Ferry, in Virginia, and run off all the slaves he could find. He would take the hills about the Ferry, and with a guerilla band move thru the countryside, making slavery a shaky institution.

If he failed, he could but lose his life. He would at least stir the nation on the issue of slavery, and force men to take sides. There was too much neutrality and silence in the land on this issue, this institution that to him was a bloody crime against God and humanity. He could not fail, he felt; success or failure would achieve the same results. Events proved that he was right.

Lecturing in New England.

John Brown spent that winter and spring in New England, giving occasional lectures and meeting all the leading men of the Abolition movement, who collected money for him, tho he did not fully reveal his plans to anyone.

George L. Stearns, Gerrit Smith, the philanthropist; Frank B. Sanborn, the Concord school master and author; Thomas Wentworth Higginson, a brave, noble commander in the Civil War, and a charming man of letters afterward; Theodore Parker, one of the greatest and most sincere Christian clergymen produced in America; Samuel G. Howe, and others were among John Brown's supporters. Thoreau and Emerson he also met at various times, and both were passionate admirers of the stern, pure soldier of liberty.

While their Captain was gathering arms and money for the raid, some of Brown's men were quartered in a farmhouse near Harper's Ferry, while others were studying the region, and mapping out routes for the attack and the retreat to the hills.

"Men, Get Your Guns!"

It was a cool fall night, the 16th of October, 1859, when Captain John Brown gave the command his men had been impatiently awaiting for months: "Men, get your guns; we will proceed to the Ferry." Says Mr. Villard, at times an eloquent chronicler:

"It took but a minute to bring the horse and wagon to the door, to place in it some pikes, fagots, a sledge hammer and a crow bar. The men had been in readiness for hours; they had but to buckle on their arms and throw over their shoulders, like army blankets, the long gray shawls which served some for a few brief hours in lieu of overcoats, and then became their winding sheets. In a moment more, the commander-in-chief donned his old battle-worn Kansas cap, mounted the wagon, and began the solemn march thru the chill night to the bridge into Harper's Ferry, nearly six miles away.

"Tremendous as the relief of action was, there was no thought of cheering or demonstration. As the eighteen men with John Brown swung down the little lane to the road from the farm house that had been their prison for so many weary weeks, they bade farewell to Captain Owen Brown, and Privates Barclay Coppoc and F. J. Meriam, who remained as rear guard in charge of the arms and supplies. The brothers Coppod read the future correctly, for they embraced and parted as men do who know they are to meet no more on earth. The damp, lonely night, too, added to the solemnity of it all, as they passed thru its gloom. As if to intensify the sombreness, they met not a living soul on the road to question their purpose, or to start with fright at the sight of eighteen soldierly men coming two by two thru the darkness as tho risen from the grave.

Plans Well-Laid.

"There was not a sound but the tramping of the men and the creaking of the wagon, before which, in accordance with a general order, drawn up and carefully read to all, walked Captains Cook and Tidd, their Sharp's rifles hung from their shoulders, their commission, duly signed by John Brown, and officially sealed, in their pockets. They were detailed to destroy the telegraph wire on the Maryland side, and then on the Virginian, while Captains John H. Kagi and Aaron D. Stevens, bravest of the brave, were to take the bridge watchman and so strike the first blow for liberty. But as they and their comrades marched rapidly over the rough road, Death himself moved by their side."

The Rural Rebellion

By ALFRED KNUTSON

IT IS not very difficult to make the average farmer understand that we are living under a capitalist dictatorship. All that is necessary in order to make this perfectly clear to him is to point out how the small towns have been and are being governed. Maybe he did not understand the situation very well before, but now, when he cannot get much for his products and finds it impossible to pay the debts he owes, he is critically analyzing the conditions that obtain in his community and thruout the country.

The farmer will readily agree with you that every small town and the country surrounding it are dominated politically and economically by three outstanding types: the banker, the lawyer and the mayor. Whatever this dictatorship decides to do in the community becomes the rule and law for everybody else. To be sure, everything is done in the name of the "republic" and "the people," but since the farmer has begun to quit thinking the thoughts of town dictators and started to think independently, he realizes that such tactics are employed for the purpose of winning his confidence and support.

Main Street Potentates.

It is also very noticeable that the town dictatorship is not in the habit of asking the advice and the opinion of the farmers and the town workers as to what shall or shall not be done in the community. Instead it has become a well-known fact that the small town dictators are seeking the advice and approval of the bigger dictators in the larger industrial centers. All this the farmer can now see clearly when the situation is explained to him. Just at present he is not easily fooled by high-sounding phrases like "democracy" and "the will of the people."

The "Beneficient" Banker.

For several years these small town dictators have ruled in their respective communities without let or hindrance. They have bossed the job by means of the iron hand of economic pressure, conscientiously carrying out the orders of the big industrialists and financiers of the country, and the farmer has always tamely submitted to what he thought was the "inevitable." Whatever the banks and "the leading citizens" of the town told him to do, that he did. If he desired to improve his farm with new buildings, machinery and cattle, the banker had to be called upon for advice and such a thing as getting loans from the banks, even the smallest, without giving details as to what the money was to be used for, was absolutely unthinkable. It was considered a great effrontery to this supposedly unselfish "benefactor" of the farmer if the information asked for was not gladly and cheerfully given.

New Viewpoint.

But what is the situation today? Owing to the economic crisis in agriculture a great change has come about in the psychology of the farmer towards his small town dictators. To be sure, he is still dictated to by the same dictatorship, but what a collossal difference there is in his attitude towards his petty masters! No longer does he cringe and fawn at the feet of the banker and the lawyer every time he asks for a "favor." He has begun to assert his rights and independence and is convinced that he and not the banker or the lawyers is the useful member in society.

When it is suggested to the farmer that the town dictatorship ought to be composed of farmers and workers instead of lawyers and bankers, he nods his head approvingly.

Snubbing Our Civilization

By J. O. BENTALL.

THERE are two ways in which you can snub this petty civilization:

One is to commit suicide; the other is to create revolution.

Life insurance companies are in a bad way because of the great number of suicides. During 1923 claims of $1,300,000 were paid for people who had decided that hell could be no worse than this capitalist earth. This is $150,000 more than was paid for lives lost in automobile accidents for the same period.

One peculiar fact looms up on the horizon of civilization's drift. There has been a steady falling off in the rate of suicide since the beginning of August, 1914. This alleged decrease is laid at the door of the war. It has also become a forceful argument in favor of war.

Listen: Also weep a bit:

If you want to die and go to heaven before God decides that your time has come, the handiest thing in the world to have around is a good Christian war, and then you can go right into the front rank and be almost certain of a speedy death, accompanied by a secure cinch on a reserved seat at the angels' concert.

That beats the clumsy rope route all hollow, which nine times out of ten ends at the entrance to the coal shovelers' scab gang where there is no pay for overtime and where the devil is the boss, and where the Volsted Act covers everything from light wines to rain water, and where prohibition agents have had to go out of business because of a shortage in liquids.

And here people have called war sinful when as a matter of fact it has saved thousands of well-meaning prospective suicides from hell and landed them in the ranks of heroes that have come thru the beautiful valley of slaughter and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the slaves.

It appears of late, however, that there is a tendency toward an increase in the rate of suicides. But that can be explained.

If people want to die and can find no war to get killed in, what can they do? If they cannot get the profiteers to accommodate them by shooting them down on the battlefield, they are simply compelled to do the job in the less artistic manner, for to endure the blessings of present prosperity showered upon us by our benevolent capitalism seems to be out of the question.

Yet, you may be one of these ungodly blasphemers who think that if this earth was run right it would be a mighty nice place to live in. You have the effrontery to deny that poverty and hunger and slavery and suffering and dirty tenements and ragged clothes and child labor and woman's debasement and man's degradation are necessary to keep a sinful race humble before God. You come out in open rebellion against our most sacred institutions. You want to eliminate the very foundation of Christianity and make people happy in this world when it will clearly be seen that by so doing you rob them of the humble longing for the mansions in the sky.

You come along and take away from the people the very desire to die and give them an inspiration to live. By doing this you steal from the masses the thought of suicide and openly undermine the sacred mission of war which has proven so successful in claiming the loyal slaves from self-destruction, by letting them get killed in the proper patriotic way.

The workers are awfully ungrateful and uppish these days. They turn up their noses at our pretty civilization and snub it—some by committing suicide and others by starting a revolution.

Help For the Dolla Family

TO THE DAILY WORKER: I have just finished reading Jacob Dolla's letter to Tom Tippett, and I want to do a small part towards helping Dolla's family. I enclose herewith $1.00 and I will endeavor to send more within a week or so. It seems to me that you would be doing the right thing by keeping after this matter until his family is taken care of as they should be. The least any of us—who are on the outside—can do is to contribute a dollar or so. That only means doing without a couple of meals, and that surely is a small matter to most of us.—William M. Davy, Cleveland, Ohio.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

An Irish worker from California does not understand why we favor an Irish Republic and yet throw the hooks into the reign of the Catholic political machine in Ireland. If our correspondent had to choose between an Irish republic, which he favors, and the Catholic church, he would choose the latter, as life is only short at best and he does not want to run the risk of having to associate with Martin Luther, Robert G. Ingersoll, Charles Darwin and Lenin on the other side of eternity. Now, we feel just the other way about it. Wherever the above mentioned comrades are we want to be there; whether it be to hell, heaven or purgatory. But that does not answer the question why we are for a republic in Ireland and against the Roman Church. In the first place we favor a workers' republic in Ireland as the Workers and Peasants of Russia have. This form of government would enable the producers of Ireland to determine the conditions under which they live and give them the opportunity to build up a state of society where poverty would be eliminated and knowledge, the foe of ignorance and superstition, available to all.

• • • •

The Roman Church is the bitter enemy of the emancipation of the workers in all lands from the robber rule of capitalism. It wants to keep them enslaved so that in their misery they will look to a world beyond the grave for consolation and a reward for the miseries they suffer in this world. While believing this humbug they are easy prey for the clergy of all denominations who in return for a fee, promise them access to the sanctum sanctorum of a deity who exists only in the imagination of the clergy who have commercialized religion and made of it the best paying business in the world today, outstripping even the oil business. It would take too long to tell the story here but if our correspondent will read "Labor, Nationality and Religion," written by James Connolly, he will learn something of the relations of the Catholic Church to Ireland that will remove some of the superstition from his brain. The Roman Church in Ireland and in all other countries has been and is today the enemy of progress and general enlightenment, and for that reason among others we condemn it.

The long expected has happened. The Communists are charged with responsibility for the Teapot Dome expose. The friend who hands us the taffy is none other than the well-known, Mr. Fred R. Marvin, associate editor of the New York Commerical and authority on what is not so in the radical movement of the United States. After thanking Mr. Marvin for the kind compliment which I regret to say we are not entitled to, our readers will be interested to know by what mysterious process of reasoning Mr. Marvin arrives at the remarkable conclusion.

• • • •

First let us give the gentleman's location. He had the opportunity for taking the credit of exposing the republican grafters, from LaFollette and the democrats at a dinner given by the Indianapolis branch of the National Metal Trades Association. Now, let him shoot. First, the Communists "got" Denby because of that worthy's efficiency as navy secretary. The Communists not being in favor or large navies unless they are under Communist discipline, got on the poor Michigander's trail and greased the skids for him. It's quite plausible, but, Denby was getting along very well with his job as far as the Communists were concerned. Given a little more time he would have the entire navy on the rocks and then the Communists would only have to conquer Switzerland, sail into New York harbor and hold up the United States with the Swiss navy. Indeed, had Denby not been so busy testing the amphibian qualities of his ships, he might have given the rest of the country away to his friends. No sir! Denby was a perfectly good Secretary of the Navy.

• • • •

We got Daugherty because he stopped mass action in the railroad strike. We confess to a little pride in our share of the credit for Daugherty's exit but what an excellent Communist propagandist he was? While Victor Berger the socialist representative was trying to smooth over the rough spots in the capitalist system, so that the workers would find it tolerable Mr. Daugherty was giving the American workers and farmers a turn in their stomachs. The Communists said: "Here they are, your capitalist rulers. Denby, Fall, Daugherty, Hamon, Jess Smith and many other crooks dead and alive. How do you like your leaders? What about getting together and booting the whole darn lot of them into oblivion and establishing a workers soviet republic?" After listening to this harangue the workers take another look at Daugherty and Co. and sign an application for membership in the Workers Party. Why should we be in a hurry to kick these fellows out?

• • • •

The rest of Marvin's talk is not interesting. The Communists would be mighty glad however, if they only had as many papers, billions of gold rubles and hundreds of organizations as Marvin says they have with which to capture this Teapot Dome government, oust the parasites and establish a form of government that would serve the interests of the producers who build up the wealth of this country that is gobbled by the plunderbund and wasted in riotous living and in payment for services rendered by political hangerson like Marvin.

BANK ROLLS OF GARMENT BOSSES SLIM

Pay $50,000 For 5-Weeks' Use of Gunmen, Thugs

Weak-kneed banking accounts are forcing the struck garment bosses to cut down on their armies of sluggers and gunmen.

This information has come to the DAILY WORKER, carrying out the prediction already made in the alleged shooting at the home of the garment boss, Nicholas Kovler.

Cause of Kovler Shooting.

The DAILY WORKER charged the shooting was the work of private detective agencies that were having their men laid off by struck garment bosses who are going "broke."

The DAILY WORKER has information, for instance, that Arthur Weiss & Co., 176 W. Adams street, has laid off several sluggers, the excuse being that they were "lounging about upstairs getting drunk." It is stated that Weiss and Co. pays its sluggers as high as $7 and $8 per day.

Weiss Regular Strike Breaker.

Weiss and Co. has been one of the most active bosses in fighting the strikers. Arthur Weiss, himself, has been in personal charge of the thugs around his plant. He has even taken a hand in superintending the anti-strike activities of State's Attorney Crowe's men along So. Market street.

Weiss has also been very officious in directing the four Crowe's men in front of his own plant. He has also been active in ordering the police to make arrests of pickets.

The fact that Weiss is able to build a personal army among the city police and the dicks from the state's attorney's office, will no doubt help him cut down his expenses, so far as private gunmen and sluggers is concerned. But other bosses, who see the balance in their bank books dropping and dropping, are not in so fortunate a position.

This raises the question of just how much the strike is costing the garment bosses, in the hiring of gunmen alone. The DAILY WORKER estimates that the cost has already passed $50,000, or about $10,000 for every week of the struggle so far.

Cost of Strikebreaking Comes High.

Have a look at the figures for service offered by the Edward J. Hargrave Secret Service, which has admitted supplying garment bosses with guards and operators.

Guards alone come at $7 per man per day, if there are over five guards used; or at $8 per man per

PROSPECT OF AN EARLY STRIKE AGREEMENT SLIM

Joint Committee Trying To Make Peace

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 4.—Conferences attempting to obtain a settlement of the strike of 35,000 coal miners in the southwest in progress here were still deadlocked today. Little prospect of an immediate settlement was in sight, according to members of the sub-committee of the joint conference of miners and operators, which is attempting to work out an agreement.

Plundered Bankers Form Queue in Court To Squeal on McCray

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 4.—Governor Warren T. McCray had banking indebtedness of a million and a quarter of dollars on March 1, 1923, according to the testimony of seventy Indiana bankers who had testified up to noon today in the trial of McCray on larceny and embezzlement charges.

Thruout the morning the procession of bankers continued in the criminal court, each banker telling how much the Governor owed his bank on March 1, 1923.

BRITISH I. L. P. TO DISCUSS ABOLITION OF PARLIAMENT

(By The Federated Press)

LONDON, April 4.—Abolition of the British parliament will be debated by the Independent Labor Party annual conference at York April 20 on the motion of the London central branch. The proposal is to substitute for the present houses of lords and commons four separate chambers. One would be elected to deal with criminal law, civil contract, and the like. Another would consist of representatives of vocational interests along lines of the present trade union congress, and would deal with all industrial matters. A third body would consist of representatives of consumers, and the fourth would be a cultural chamber. A supreme council would coordinate the four and conduct foreign affairs.

Premier Ramsay MacDonald and other leading cabinet officials are members of the Independent Labor Party.

GERMAN MONEY KINGS REVEL IN RIOTOUS LUXURY

Millions of Workers Are Starving

BERLIN, April 4.—Germany has taken drastic measures to curb lavish expenditure by her millionaires abroad. Hereafter passports and extensions of the same will cost $125 and other difficulties will be thrown in the way of German "nouveau riche" who want to go to French and Italian resorts to spend their money.

Inland hotels and resorts are gleeful, believing the new regulations will turn a flood of profiteers and "schiebers" who hitherto have splurged on the French and Italian rivieras to home resorts.

German resort prices are now above those elsewhere, while in Berlin they are asking from $6 to $9 for seats at a show in which Fritzi Wassary, Viennese star, is playing.

Paytriotic Dentists Fill Soldiers' Traps With Junk: Not Gold

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Seven New York dentists have been indicted by the federal grand jury here in connection with the probe of U. S. Veterans' bureau corruption. They are charged with collecting money from the government for work they did not perform. Twenty-eight dentists were investigated. Six hundred ex-soldiers opened their mouths while the experts determined the werth of sundry crowns and bridges.

WALSH PROBE IN PROMISE TO GET BUSY NEXT WEEK

Subpoenas Are Issued For More Witnesses

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A half dozen new witnesses dug up by the new national investigating agency of Senator Thomas J. Walsh will be brought before the Teapot Dome committee next week.

Walsh expects them to give testimony concerning a reported deal of oil men to select a "complacent" secretary of the interior, who would lease the government naval oil lands.

Three subpoenas were issued today for:

Call Hamon's Friend.

H. W. Ballard, Los Angeles, Calif., said to be a former friend of the late Jake Hamon.

Jack Smith, Paris, Texas, who is said to have had a conversation with Hamon after the last republican election.

J. F. Baughan, Harlingen, Texas, said to have been a friend of Hamon.

These three witnesses were subpoenaed by Walsh in connection with his announced intention of proving that there was "a conspiracy before the election" to lease the naval reserves.

Democrats Blame Republicans.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Republicans are conducting an unethical political campaign of misrepresentation to "cover up" their own deficiencies, Senator Robinson, democratic leader, charged in the senate today.

Robinson spoke in answer to Senator Pepper, Pennsylvania, and Representative Longworth, Ohio, who charged that the democrats were delaying legislation for the purpose of making "scandal investigations."

"Republicans are merely attempting to discredit the work the investigating committees are doing," Robinson said.

Naval Bookkeeper Who Swiped Boodle May Be Suicide

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 4.—Officers rushed to Venice, Calif., today seeking to identify the body of a suicide found there as Lieut. Ervine R. Brown, naval officer who disappeared while $120,000 short in his accounts.

"Ervine is no criminal," Mrs. Brown said today. "He always has been the finest husband in the world to me all these five years since we first met and were married in England.

"But since the Point Honda disaster when his ship, the destroyer Somers, hit the rocks along with all the other destroyers, he has not been the same."

Moscow Paper Says Spies Were Paid For Work Against Soviets From Hoover's Relief Millions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, April 4.—"Evening Moscow," the official organ of the Moscow Soviet, today announced that evidence was brought forth at the trial of the counter-revolutionaries in Kiev which proves that members of their organization were paid for their espionage services with the funds of the American Relief Administration. This tallies with the testimony of Captain H. Scaife, former government agent, given before the Daugherty probe committee in Washington.

"Laboring Moscow," another paper, challenges Secretary Hughes to state now, in view of these exposures, which country, Russia or the United States, had interfered in the affairs of the other. It says that Hughes has not been able to prove his allegations against Zinoviev, head of the Communist International.

The paper goes on to say that tho the Russian workers could not forget the part played by America during the administration of the mountebank Wilson, in making war on them and aiding the counter-revolutionary bandits who were trying to overthrow their government, they were still grateful for the help received during the famine. They could not forget, however, that the same relief administration played a prominent part in overthrowing the Soviet government of Hungary.

Haskell Admits Probable Guilt.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Commenting on the revelations made in the Moscow paper, Col. William N. Haskell, former director of the American Relief administration, declared today that it is quite possible a few of those employed by the A. R. A. in Russia were spies and provocateurs. "It appears that the prosecution has shown they had such connections", he said.

DAUGHERTY'S PROBES BARE GRAFT TRAIL

Showing Connection With The Department of Justice

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A photostatic copy of a letter purporting to be from Charles Vincenti, of Baltimore, to Elias H. Mortimer setting forth an agreement whereby Mortimer was to get Vincenti's 18 month sentence in a federal prison commuted for $50,000, was introduced in the record of the Senate Daugherty investigating committee today.

Senator Wheeler said he would show later that the matter "was connected with the Department of Justice."

Mortimer was chief government witness before the grand jury that indicted Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau and Representative Langley of Kentucky.

Introduction of the letter came during testimony of J. S. Dyche, of Oklahoma, former warden of Atlanta penitentiary, concerning alleged dope traffic at the prison and the method of pardoning federal prisoners.

Weeks Disgorges Letters.

When the committee convened in open session, Chairman Brookhart announced that Weeks had sent all the records desired by the committee at this time and that Captain Volandt would be examined in executive session later today.

Brookhart also announced that the committee had decided to hold hearings in the near future at Washington Court House, Ohio, to examine the records of the Midland National Bank of which M. S. Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, is president.

The decision to go to Ohio to investigate the estate of the late Jess Smith was made to relieve the bank of the embarrassment of being deprived of its records for any great length of time, Brookhart said. Mal Daugherty refused to bring them to Washington or permit the committee's examiners to inspect them.

Volandt Guards Testimony.

Secretary of War Weeks today transmitted to the senate Daugherty investigating committee all war department records in aircraft cases which the committee demanded yesterday.

Weeks sent them to the committee by Capt. W. F. Volandt, assistant chief of the finance section of the air service and requested that all but one of them be considered by the committee in secrecy.

Want Documents Kept Secret.

Weeks said the records were of great importance to litigation already in the courts or about to be taken to them, that the sum of $42,000,000 was involved and that if

PEP IN DAUGHERTY'S REPLY TO PEPPER MAY START FIRE LATER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Former Attorney General Daugherty will refuse to be "made a goat," he and his friends said emphatically today as Daugherty prepared to issue a statement in reply to Senator George Wharton Pepper's reference to Daugherty in his Portland, Maine, "keynote" speech.

Pepper said appointment of Daugherty was a grave error in judgment.

Instantly Daugherty shot out a statement in which he said:

"I do not propose to be made an issue in the coming campaign except for the benefit of the republican party as a beneficiary of my administration of the public business in the Department of Justice."

This brief retort to Pepper is but an indication of the tenor of a carefully prepared statement which Daugherty intends giving out later, perhaps today, his friends said.

Facts Blast Hoover Denial of Aiding Anti-Soviet War; Show He Aided Yudenitch

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—In answer to Secretary of Commerce Hoover's denials that the American Relief Administration gave aid to Yudenitch in his attempt to capture Petrograd from the Soviet Republic in 1919, Captain James V. Martin of the Shipping Board vessel Lake Fray has shown to The Federated Press four documents that are likely to force Hoover to do a great deal of retracting or high grade explaining.

They seem to prove conclusively that Hoover was behind Yudenitch—that the American government made war on Russia thru the $100,000,000 relief fund, voted just after the armistice, to save the lives of starving women and children in central Europe. Photostatic copies of these documents are in the possession of The Federated Press.

Here Are the Facts.

First there is a bill of lading, dated at Bassens (near Bordeaux), France, Aug. 6, 1919, reciting that the master signing below, Jas. W. Martin, has "received in apparent good order and condition, from American Relief Administration," for shipment on the Lake Fray and bound for Reval, goods or property as described below, to be delivered in like apparent good order and condition at the port of Reval to "Representative Central Supply Committee of the Russian Armies." These were the counter-revolutionary forces.

The list of goods is: "Sixty Q. M. C. Class B (Liberty) trucks, 3-ton cargo; gross pounds 810,000, gross metric tons 367.413. One hundred fifty drums lubricating oil; gallons 7500. Three barrels grease, gallons 150. One thousand drums gasoline; gallons 50,000. Spare parts for Q. M. C. Class B trucks (Liberty)."

Carries Revolutionary General.

Next is a letter on the stationery of the division of operations, U. S. shipping board, emergency fleet corporation, dated "U. S. S. Lake Fray, Saint Nazaire, France, Aug. 15, 1919" which reads:

"We, the undersigned, hereby acknowledge that Capt. James V. Martin of the Lake Fray has fully explained the conditions of our residence aboard ship while en route to Russia. We understand that the Lake Fray has no passenger accommodations and we agree to make the best of conditions aboard ship without complaint.

"(Signed) Gen. Ernest N. Wahl."

Martin testifies that Wahl was the former imperial military governor of Petrograd, who was sent on his ship to join Yudenitch at the request of Hoover.

Third in the series is a certificate dated "Reval, Sept. 4, 1919," and having attached to it a medal of gilt, with four gilt imperial eagles between the red-enameled arms of a Greek cross. The certificate is signed and reads:

"Sir—I have the honor of decorating you herewith by the Ensigns of the Order of St. Stanislaus, 3d Class, as a sign of deep appreciation of the work you have rendered to the Russian North-Western Army.

(seal) N. YUDENITCH,
"General and Commander in Chief of the Russian Forces of the North-Western Front.
"Captain Martin, U. S. A.
"Capt. Jas. V Martin."

This date, Sept. 4, 1919, follows the delivery of the cargo to the Russian Whites at Reval.

Cleared of Hoover Charges.

Fourth comes the letter of April 26, 1920, on the stationery of the division of operations, U. S. shipping board emergency fleet corporation, at Washington, exonerating Martin of false charges by the Hoover organization:

"Dear Sir: Confirming verbal conversation with you recently relative to charges against you while in command of the S. S. Lake Fray, you are hereby advised that all agents of the United States shipping board and sea service bureau have been informed under date of April 21 that these charges are unfounded and you are now subject to re-employment as master of United States shipping board vessels, effective April 21. Yours very truly.

"GEORGE EGGERS,
"Asst. Director, Operating Dept., by Lloyd F. Gaines, Chief Clerk."

Hoover says that Martin's ship carried "food and medicines" to "civilians" at Reval.

BROADCAST CALL FOR THE JUNE 17 F.-L. CONVENTION

Meeting at Auditorium in St. Paul, Minn.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 4.—The National Arrangements Committee charged with the work of organizing the National Farmer-Labor Progressive Convention, June 17th, has begun the work of sending out the fifty thousand invitations to trade unions, co-operatives, farmers' organizations and labor and farmer political groups.

Accompanying the call for the convention, which is printed in pamphlet form is the following letter from the National Arrangements Committee:

To All Progressive Organizations,

GREETINGS: Enclosed you will find the official call for a great Farmer-Labor Progressive Convention, which is to be held in St. Paul, Minnesota, beginning June 17, 1924. The purpose of this convention is to accept a platform and nominate candidates for president and vice-president.

The farmers and workers of Minnesota, and of the other Northwest states, who issue this call, have already united into powerful Farmer-Labor parties. They realize, however, that exploitation by the financial interests can only be stopped when national unity of these groups is attained. The success of the farmers and workers in the northwest states is a guarantee that the June 17th Convention will be the largest gathering of workers and farmers ever held in America.

We invite all progressive groups to elect delegates. We want real national political unity. We will leave the door open to the Conference for Progressive Political Action and all other groups who wish to break away from the two old parties. If they do not see fit to come to our convention, but express a desire to nominate independent candidates, we will co-operate with them. The workers and farmers want action now and the only way to assure that action is by sending delegates to the June 17th convention which is definitely committed to the formation of a new national independent political movement.

Do not hurriedly pass over this communication. Take your share in building this movement. Elect your delegate at once and then lay plans to finance his trip. Do more than that, carry on an agitation among the other organizations in your locality to popularize this great gathering of producers. We have sent out fifty thousand copies of this call. The expense of this undertaking has been a burden on our movement. Much more money must be spent before June 17th. We would therefore urge that your organization contribute what it can afford and send it in at once. Above all get your delegate to the convention.

Fraternally yours,
NATIONAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE,
(Signed)
William Mahoney, Chairman,
C. A. Hathaway, Secretary.

The following compose the committee in charge of the arrangements for June 17: William Mahoney, chairman, 158 East Third Street, Saint Paul, Minn.; Wm. A. Schaper, vice-chairman, Minneapolis, Minn.; Tom Ayers, Mitchell, S. D.; R. H. Walker, Yucca, N. D.; C. A. Hathaway, secretary-treasurer, Labor Temple, Saint Paul, Minn.; John A. H. Hopkins, New York City; H. G. Teigan, Washington, D. C.; R. D. Cramer, Minneapolis, Minn.; Joseph Manley, Chicago, Ill.; W. H. Green, Omaha, Neb.

LEGION THUGS OUST SOCIALIST MAYOR IN N. J.

Was Easy Mark; Had No Organization

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

RAHWAY, N. J., April 4.—Mobs of hundred percenters in this New York suburb threaten violence against their defeated liberal opponents in the town election which threw out the commission form of government, forced the resignation of the socialist mayor, and turned Rahway over to the dictatorship of the American Legion and so-called Loyal Citizens' Association.

The mob, which unsuccessfully attempted to victimize a progressive, Louis F. Budenz, on the night of the election, March 25, is planning another demonstration. Budenz, editor of The Labor Age, published in New York, tho not a socialist, had campaigned for Mayor James B. Furber. When the vote of 2,922 to 981 against the reform administration was announced, a mob of more than a thousand formed behind 60 automobiles, headed by an empty coffin draped with an American flag, and started for the mayor's house. Not finding Furber, they paraded to Pudenz's house.

Didn't Know His Color.

"Kill the red," the inflamed patriots yelled hammering on the doors. Three times the mob came and went, demanding that Budenz come out and take his medicine. Finally they gathered around the coffin on the lawn, and with the automobile light playing on it, held a ceremony to the accompanying bugle playing taps for the dead.

The police arrived each time after the mob had departed. Mrs. Budenz' sick sister Anna Giess, was in the house during the wild orgy on the lawn.

The trouble goes back 20 years when Furber, as a reform republican mayor, fought the political machine. Six years ago he led the citizen's crusade for a commission form of government to supplant the rotten ward system in Rahway. He was one of the first commissioners to be elected after the victory. Two years ago Furber was chosen mayor. Despite the two republican commissioners he has instituted various reforms which gained him the opposition of bankers and business men. Two years ago, he refused to march in an American Legion memorial parade on the grounds that the soldiers had been duped into dying for a mistaken ideal. This, coupled with his activities as a pacifist during the war, made him a marked man by the Legion.

Municipal Reforms Accomplished.

By instituting an efficient paid fire department he incurred the enmity of the volunteer firemen, a social club and political machine of shady reputation, whose members has been getting tax exemption. He fired the chief of police who refused to stop gambling at an American Legion carnival two years ago. He appointed a former policeman, Joseph Gerlach, as chief after a long struggle with the opposing commissioners.

Gerlach is a Roman Catholic, and the mayor's school board appointee, Mrs. Bernard Engleman, is a Jewess. That was too much for the hundred percenters who organized a secret society to defeat Furber. The campaign was conducted with intimidation and the issue stated as Americanism versus Bolshevism. With commission government voted down the mayor was made powerless. While his enemies were organizing a recall campaign he resigned, March 27. The mayor's support came from the Progressive club and the railway unionists. There is no socialist organization in the town, and scarcely 20 socialists.

The mayor's successful reforms which trod upon the toes of local bankers and business men are the municipal camp site and swimming pool, city milk stations and coal stations selling at cost.

Bank Rolls of Bosses Get Slim

day, if under five. When the Hargrave agency contracts to "run the plant efficiently and guarantees to break the strike," the charge is $7 per day per party supplied. This is the "complete service," including "experienced operators" to run the machines and "get out the work."

The number of guards needed varies, "depending on the entrances." For a plant of 15 workers, "two guards should be sufficient." And the great advantage of the Hargrave service is that their guards are all "deputy sheriffs," so that in case there is any trouble, any one gets shot, you know, or if someone brings suit against your firm, there won't be any difficulty.

Co-operation Makes it Cheaper.

Of course with Mayor Dever's police and State's Attorney Crowe's men cooperating so nicely with the private sluggers, the bosses really don't need more than two or three hired guards, deputized or otherwise, at their doors! But few of the bosses have under three guards each, which means $24 a day out of their pockets to the agency, plus whatever the booze and palm-greasing costs. Five guards would cost the boss $35 a day.

Suppose the employer is having "complete service," as many of them are, and that the agency is supplying five scabs and three guards. Then the boss must pay $35 every day for his scabby workers and $15 for their guards, or $50 a day in "service" alone. Now if the boss has had this "complete service" for the full time of the strike, that is five weeks, he has paid only a paltry $1,750 to keep his shop going. If he has had more operators than five, the cost has been that much greater. If he had ten workers and guards in proportion, the charges have mounted up to some $3,675 by now.

Thug Cost is $50,000.

There are at least ten big garment bosses whose costs must have run up to at least the $4,000 mark by now, if not much over it when injunction costs, court service, and official "hand-warming" expenses are added. To say then, that the bosses have spent $50,000 to prevent the Chicago ladies' garment workers from winning their strike, is speaking mildly. We haven't added all the little fellows' charges in!

But just on the surface, as far as we've gone, it looks as tho the strike were hitting the bosses more severely by far than a little consideration in the way of higher wages and improved conditions for their former union employes would have cost.

Some Views About Crowe.

"Some fellers hate to lose their jobs" is right!

A bloated, bleary-eyed Crowe's-man came up to a DAILY WORKER reporter in front of Arthur Weiss' shop on W. Adams street, to argue that his master, State's Attorney Crowe is the best crime-buster the city of Chicago could have.

"There isn't a finer man for the job. There ought to be more like him. Why if the laws of this country weren't so lax, he'd have men like the editors of your paper in jail long ago. Those fellows ought to go back to the country they come from. It isn't right: they're against the government," the Crowe's-man expostulated indignantly.

"Look there at that picket with the fur collar. The other day she walked up and down for an hour with a nigger man," the irate dick continued. "If she done that down in Georgia they would have strung the two of them up there in the middle of the street. Tarred and feathered 'em."

"Sure I'm for Crowe. See the button?" And he swaggered away.

Still on the Battlefield.

"We're still on the battlefield and are ready to continue with as much vigor as before," was President Morris Sigman's forceful answer to the rumors that have been spreading about the weakening of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' strike here.

"It is my sincere belief," Sigman went on, speaking to the assembled strikers at a mass meeting, "that many employers feel very uncomfortable just now. The scab element is always unsatisfactory at best. Sluggers, legal as well as 'illegal,' are expensive. And in spite of what the lawyers say, injunctions do not destroy strikes."

Bad Break in Editorial.

Sigman explained that an unfortunate editorial, in "Justice", official organ of the international union, intended to relate to the Camden, N. J., strike but labelled as referring to the Chicago strike, had misled some of the girls as well as the bosses and public.

"No sane union and no sane leadership would go to the press to discuss tactics and the calling off of a strike," said Sigman. "If we had any intention of calling off the strike we would come directly to the workers, to you here," Sigman concluded.

President Sigman made it clear that the International would continue to support the strike financially, as well as by verbal encouragement, and that the executives did not consider the situation in any way disheartening.

"Keep up the picket lines full strength!" he said.

Release 50 Strikers On Bonds.

Fifty strikers, who have been found guilty of contempt of court by Judge Sullivan for violation of his injunction, were released on bonds yesterday. Their release was secured pending an appeal to the appellate court of all cases of strikers sentenced for contempt.

Nearly the entire day was taken up in arranging the bonds. Orders made out by the defense attorneys were objected to by Dudley Taylor and other lawyers for the bosses. The objections were technical. Peter Sissman, senior counsel for the strikers, had sent to Dudley Taylor a copy of the order he proposed using Thursday evening and Taylor made no objection till the orders were produced in court.

All fifty orders had to be made out again in order to agree with the ideas of Taylor on what a bond order should be. Finally, late in the afternoon the orders were signed and the strikers permitted to go home after signing them.

Eight strikers were found guilty of contempt while the others were waiting for their release. The case against them was purely perfunctory and they were all fined $100 and costs. Their cases will also be appealed.

Wants to Make It Good Beating.

Those found guilty of contempt yesterday and fined were: John Sweikofski, Mathew Rababskas, Albert Dubiel, Ben Stein, Alphonse Graham, Stanley Sklore, Albert Ferguson and Maurice Ulitsky.

Arthur Weiss, leader of the anti-union bosses, told people who talked to him recently that the manufacturers will fight the union and the strikers even if the strike is ended soon. He is reported to have said that the bosses want to see the strikers so thoroly beaten that they will not attempt to organize for a long time.

This decision was reached at a recent meeting of the dress manufacturers association, Weiss said. The bosses are prepared to help Judge Sullivan send more workers to jail as long as there are cases to fight. The association, according to Weiss, is anxious to see that more strikers are convicted for contempt.

Robert Buck, editor of the New Majority spoke at a strike meeting at 180 W. Washington street yesterday afternoon. He told the strikers that it is only a question of time till they win and he knew from experience in other strikes that injunctions cannot break a strike if the workers keep their spirit up.

Party Membership, Attention!

THE PRESENT situation of the Workers Party in the struggle for the formation of a mass, class Farmer-Labor Party will be presented to the membership of the party in a series of membership mass meetings in the principal cities.

The development of the Farmer-Labor movement requires the mobilization of the entire party for an intensive campaign during the coming months. It is essential that every party member not only give the campaign the greatest support possible, but it is equally important that every member of the party know exactly what the party is trying to do. The whole party must understand the role which the united front movement for the Farmer-Labor Party plays in the struggle for the Proletarian Revolution, the Soviets and Proletarian Dictatorship.

In order to present the situation to the membership meetings have been arranged in the district headquarters city of eight districts, which will be attended by the members in these cities and also by comrades invited from the nearby cities. These meetings will be addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Party. His subject will be "The Decisive Stage of our Labor Party Policy".

Actors' Equity and Theatre Managers Come to Terms

NEW YORK, April 4.—Terms of a settlement under which was averted an actors' strike scheduled for June 1 were kept secret today.

Agreement has been reached between the Actors' Equity Association and the Producing Managers' Association, and peace in the theatrical world restored, but it may be several days before the terms are made public.

Five managers represented a group of 27 who recently announced opposition to the "closed shop" sought by the "Equity." They are understood to have agreed upon a compromise whereby a certain percentage of certain casts must be Equity members.

GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS ROTTEN SAYS VANDERLIP

Aged Banker Resigns All Directorships

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Frank A. Vanderlip has cut loose from Wall Street.

With one stroke of his pen he severed all the ties that have bound into the company of the nation's mightiest money men and voicing regret that his former colleagues were blind to conditions, bade them farewell.

Vanderlip announced he had taken a step which he told friends here ten days ago he seriously contemplated. He has resigned from all boards of directors on which he was a member. His cutting adrift from Wall Street, to be freer to go on, unannoyed by the criticisms of business associates, with his "dry cleaning" of the government here, was announced in a letter to E. P. Swenson, president of the Freeport Texas Company, New York. Swenson has asked Vanderlip to retire from that company's board, because of his activities here, and Vanderlip, complying said:

"I am quite willing to comply with your request. My one regret is that men with whom I have long been associated in business now are so blind to the present situation in the government at Washington. . . . I would leave with you and my other business friends one simple thought to ponder:

"If this country were suddenly to be faced by a great crisis in which there was need for wise, vigorous and honest action to protect our national life, would you be satisfied to face the emergency under governmental conditions such as have been the rule for the last three years?"

Vanderlip is the director in concerns, among others: International Mercantile Marine, Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line Railroad, United States Rubber Company, U. S. Realty, Oregon and Washington Railroad, Los Angeles and San Pedro Railroad.

LANDLORDS TO RAISE RENTS ON MAY FIRST

No Reasonable Excuse For Increases

A general and exorbitant increase in rents is reported as going into effect May first of this year. The DAILY WORKER has collected much evidence of this renewed activity of the Chicago rent-hogs, which we are printing below, and we print also the names of the landlords and agents who are boosting the rents, for no reasonable cause:

J. A. Strobhart of 5337 Indiana avenue, who when he moved in was paying $42 per month rent, has had his rent increased to $85 beginning May first. His landlord's name is Camp, a Negro real estate man located on 43rd street, who is profiteering on his race.

Uncalled For Increases.

Mr. C. L Fleming, 1030 E. 41st Place, whose landlady is Mrs. Rose Burnett, will have to pay $20 more a month beginning May first.

Simon J. Williams of 5245 Indiana avenue, and Walter Smith, in the same building, report that their rent is being increased on May first from $70 to $95 an increase of $25 per month. The owners of this house are Ellis and Charles Dean, and the agent is Clarence Corbin, another unscrupulous gang profiteering on the Negro race.

Mrs. Robert Lewis, 3127 Ellis avenue, has had her rent increased from $70 to $90 a month beginning May first. The agent for the property is H. C. Dean, located on 53rd street.

The fifteen flat building at 801-11 Bradley Place, near Grace and Halsted streets, has had its rent doubled in all fifteen flats since May, 1918, when the rent was $28 per month. This spring the rent is being increased from $55 to $70 per month. The landlord of this building is John J. Brewis, and his agent is George Kappes.

Why the Increase?

Eugene Seelenbach, 215 E. Ontario street, HAS HAD HIS RENT INCREASED FROM $90 to $175 per month. His landlord is W. D. Sawyer, 330 N. Water Street.

Constantine Morris, 1221 W. Adams street, reports his rent will be raised on May first from $48.50 to $60. This building is very old and the present tenant has been there for thirteen years. The landlord is Gorge Estabrook and his agent is A. P Rankin and Company, 1256 W. Madison street.

Most of these buildings are old, and have not been repaired by the landlord for many years. Advertise these landlords who are unfairly raising rents without reason.

Freiheit Concert.

The Mandolin Orchestra of the Freiheit Singing Society will play at the concert which is arranged for May 18, at the People's Institute, Taylor and Little streets.

the contents of the records were made known to the defendants of the suits, it would "result in great injury to the public interest."

Weeks also asked that the records at all times be left in custody of Captain Volandt, so that the war department's responsibility for them would not be interrupted. He said Volandt would produce them whenever the committee desired them.

The committee went into executive session immediately after receipt of Weeks' letter to consider his request to keep the documents secret.

Burns Spills His Stuff.

William J. Burns, chief of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, today told the senate Daugherty investigating committee that he was prevented from going after the "higher ups" behind the "dope" traffic at Atlanta penitentiary.

Declaring that he was told by one of his agents that Superintendent of Prisons Votaw, brother-in-law of the late President Harding, had ordered his investigation of the traffic stopped, Burns said he had appealed to his superiors in the department of justice without avail.

He told the committee that if he had been permitted to push the inquiry, he believed he would have caught those behind the traffic and stopped it. He said the traffic is still going on, as part of the activities of a nationwide drug "ring."

Burns was called to the stand at the end of a day of inquiry into conditions at Atlanta in which J. S. Dyche, former warden, was the principal witness.

Dyche's testimony consumed most of the day's session. He told of efforts to stamp out traffic in dope at the prison and said that H. H. Votaw, superintendent of federal prisons and brother-in-law of the late President Harding, had blocked investigation of the traffic because of publicity attendant upon it, after four indictments had been returned.

Worse at Leavenworth.

Dyche said the sale of dope was worse at Leavenworth than at Atlanta.

"How do you know "

"When I reported 650 addicts, the superintendent of Leavenworth reported 1,000 addicts."

Poor Committeemen Are Tired.

No further hearings of the committee will be held until Monday in order to give the members a rest, Chairman Brookhart announced after the session.

Economic Interpretation of History.

At a lecture, the speaker orated fervently: "He drove straight to his goal. He looked neither to the right nor to the left, but pressed forward, moved by a definite purpose. Neither friend nor foe could delay him, nor turn him from his course. All who crossed his path did so at their own peril. What would you call such a man?"

"A truck driver!" shouted a voice from the audience.

Duluth Farmer-Labor.

DULUTH, Minn., April 4.—In response to a call by the Duluth Trades Assembly 166 delegates including about a dozen women representing 61 organizations, met here March 30 to consider Farmer-Labor condidates. The call was issued to labor unions, ladies' auxiliaries, farmers' clubs, cooperative and progressive organizations. Each congressional aspirant was instructed to support the party winner in the general election.

Why Not Try Burns Agency.

Mrs. Arthur Burns, wife of a wealthy building contractor, today examined rogues gallery photographs in an effort to identify the men who last night tied her to a chair in her home and robbed her of $35,000 worth of jewelry, paintings and rugs.

Friends Will Be Friends.

Pat was hard hit and sinking rapidly, so a chaplain was summoned. "Pat," he said gravely, "you are about to go west. While you have time you must renounce the devil."

"Father," replied Pat, "if I'm that bad off, 'tis in no conditon I am to be after making new inimies."

More Crooks Nabbed.

NEW YORK, April 4.—A grand jury today filed with Justice John F. McIntyre thirty indictments against four active heads of the defunct firm of E. W. Wagner and Company, stock exchange house which failed in December, 1921, for more than $10,000,000.

KANSAS OLD LINE POLITICIANS IN 'TEAPOT SCANDAL'

Democratic Boss Got a Large Check

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 4.—Mrs. Marie Harris, a mild mannered little woman who believed her hopes and ambitions for her husband's success were crushed by "machine politics" injected a "Teapot Dome" into Kansas City's municipal election campaign today.

Mrs. Harris walked info a political meeting in an outlying section of the city and asked to be heard.

She said her husband had lost his job because, as engineer for the Kelly-Dennis Contracting Company he would not approve a $2,000,000 sewer contract containing $200,000 in "extras."

Showed Check.

Clinching her statements she exhibited a check for $5,000 drawn by the Kelly-Dennis Company, payable to Tom Pendergast, democratic "boss" and endorsed by him. She said the check had been deposited by the political leader in his personal account.

Before the audience which was scattered thru the tiny neighborhood moving picture theater could realize what had happened Mrs. Harris slipped out a side door and hurried home.

"My husband was employed as chief engineer by the Kelly-Dennis Company in Canada," she said. "Mr. Kelly was convicted of graft in building parliament buildings there. They came here three years ago and brought my husband with them.

Refused Approval.

"Kelly-Dennis obtained the $2,000,000 turkey run sewer contract. My husband was an honest man and when he thought they were trying to put thru $200,000 worth of work in the contract which wasn't needed, he refused to approve the plans.

"They brought all possible pressure to bear on him but when he held steadfast he was discharged. He is now broken mentally and physically and working with a pipe gang."

Pendergast declared the contract was given to him as a "campaign contribution."

MONARCHISM IN GERMANY STAGES BIG COMEBACK

Live Kings Are Risky Investments

BERLIN, April 4.—Monarchism has burst upon Germany in unblushing openness. Republicans and monarchists brawl in the streets and no day passes without some demonstration by those who want a new "all highest."

At a mighty nationalistic demonstration during the funeral of Willy Dreyer, Ruhr Saboteur, who died in a French prison at St. Martin, the flag of Republican Germany was ripped from a staff. Emblems of anti-semitism were raised and three ministers walked bare-headed past them.

The party of former Chancellor Streseman is advocating a democratic monarchy while a nationalist convention at Hamburg voted for the old time monarchy.

A "Bismarck celebration" last night was made the occasion for violent outbursts on the part of monarchist sympathizers, while the end of the Ludendorff trial at Munich was marked by nationalist rejoicing.

Only Chancellor Marx and a couple of other ministers are "out and out" republicans.

Republicans Send Up Balloon.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Coolidge and Pepper is the ticket upon which a certain influential group of Republican conservatives have united.

When Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania today delivers the party's keynote speech before the Republicans of Maine, it will be in the nature of a tryout for him, as well as a party "trial balloon." to see how the winds of popular sentiment are blowing.

BIG LEADERS IN BOTH PARTIES FEAR OIL QUIZ

All Sprinkled With the Same Oil Brush

By LAURENCE TODD
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Altho social and personal pressure of the most insidious kind is being exerted, especially from within the Democratic ranks in congress, to stop the investigation into the affairs of the department of justice, Chairman Brookhart and Senator Wheeler say they are going forward to its main object—the exposure of the throttling of the enforcement of federal law by Daugherty and his staff.

For even with the dismissal of the attorney general, the department makes no change in its policy of indifference to the rights of ordinary people.

If they are to escape the deepest suspicion of betrayal of the millions of voters who now applaud their courage, the members of this committee must take up the non-prosecution of the 50 federal trade commission complaints filed for prosecution within the past three years.

Kirby, Lumber Thief.

There is, for instance, the great lumber selling pool case, in which the notorious J. H. Kirby of Texas, rabid wartime "patriot" and millionaire profiteer, is the central figure. Kirby has quit being a Burleson Democrat, and is now a Coolidge Republican. He recently issued a statement denouncing the muckraking in Washington. Daugherty has failed to prosecute Kirby and his associates.

The name of Fred Upham, treasurer of the Republican national committee, is said to be involved in the stopping of prosecution of another of the big cases which the commission prepared for court action at Daugherty's hands. In still another instance, no less than 40,000 letters, proving a nation-wide fraud, were turned over to the department of justice by the commission after many months of investigation and study of evidence, yet here again there has been paralysis in the law enforcing arm of the government.

Palmer Messed Up.

One of the underground arguments capitalized by the democrats—men who are backing Oscar Un[illegible]wood or Ralston for the presi[illegible]y—to bring Ashurst and Wheel[illegible] the democratic senators on the committee, into line for a stoppage of the inquiry is the fact that former Attorney General Palmer played much the same game.

Palmer defied the laws not merely in arresting the supposed radicals in the labor movement, and in securing lawless injunctions against strikers, and in instructing his special agents that they must ignore violations of the prohibition law, but in handling the alien property custodian's office, in delaying and compromising the fight with the meat packers, and in handing over vast oil deposits to Standard Oil under pretense of compromise of suits by dummy claimants.

Alien property scandals are likely to break forth in this hearing, anyhow. Miller of Delaware, the alien property custodian at present, is a former secretary of the Republican national congressional committee, a member of the DuPont family combination which secured from Palmer's man Garvin the chemical patents. Huge sums have been paid by him to republican politicians of various states, as "attorney fees"—for which the aliens must pay.

Finally, and fundamentally, there is the strikebreaking record and policy of the department of justice to be investigated. Chairman Brookhart is willing to go thoroly into this class prejudice attitude shown by Palmer and Daugherty and Burns. He considers, it the perfect fruit of the system of ownership of the department by and for the big propertied interests centered in Wall Street.

JUDGE TRIED TO STEAL MARCH ON SACCO COUNSEL

Did Not Notify Lawyers Of His Decision

(By The Federated Press)

DEDHAM, Mass., April 4.—If Nicola Sacco, frame-up victim and labor prisoner, finally escapes the electric chair despite the big business interests and legal powers which are determined to get him, he may have his bitter enemy, the capitalist press to thank. Had it not not been for a stray item in the capitalist press aimed further to discredit the defense, Sacco's appeal might have been lost by default and he would now be preparing to go to the electric chair for the pay roll murder he never committed.

Crude Attempt to Get Sacco.

The latest developments in the case adds to the devious methods employed by the state's attorneys and judge. Judge Webster Thayer, of the superior court here, gave a decision March 26 denying the appeal for a new trial, finding that the barrels of the two pistols which had figured as evidence had been interchanged. For some mysterious reason Thayer failed to notify the defense of the decision. Under the state law notice of a bill of exceptions against a decision must be given within three days after the decision is rendered, or the right of appeal is sacrificed. Thus the Sacco case would have been lost had not the defense attorney discovered the judge's decision in a newspaper. The discovery was made on the last day of grace, just in time to permit giving notice of appeal.

Thayer's action is inexplicable especially as Defense Attorney Moore talked with him on the day of the decision and the two days following, tho no mention was made by the judge of his decision.

The decision refusing a new trial upholds the state's contention that the original Sacco gun barrel was transferred to another exhibit. The defense holds that the original, which proves that Sacco could not have fired the shot which killed the South Braintree paymaster and assistant in 1920, has disappeared altogether. Thayer, whose decision excludes the defense contention, refused in the recent hearings to permit Sacco's lawyers to submit evidence proving this point. On this basis the defense will file a bill of exceptions and motion for a new trial.

Prosecution Tampered Evidence.

During the hearings last autumn the disputed guns were examined in court by experts for both sides. Albert H. Hamilton for the defense showed that the fatal bullet could not have been fired from Sacco's gun. Now when he attempts to check up on the exact opposite report of the state experts, he finds not the original but another gun barrel. The new appeal will charge that the exhibits have been tampered with.

On alleged framed-up testimony against him and Bartolcmeo Vanzetti, Sacco was convicted in July, 1921, of murder. The case has roused the workers in many countries to protest. Last year Sacco, waiting appeal, was adjudged temporarily insane and committed to the Bridgewater Institution. But last fall he was sent back to Dedham jail.

Fichman's Story of Cheap Living Sounds, Looks Rather Fishy

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Brass check newspapers in this city are spreading a report on their front pages for Dr. Fichman, in which the gentleman says that a family of five can live easy on $21 a week provided they had no rent to pay.

Getting down to brass tacks, the learned Dr. says a single man can spend $2.50 a week for food, one dollar for clothing, 45 cents a week for fuel and lights, and one dollar for incidentals, such as car fare, to get to work and the like, or a grand total of $5.25 a week, sleeping, of course, on the park benches in the summer and the police station in the winter time, presumably.

This ought to be a signal for a general reduction of wages among the patriotic employers of the south.

BIG CONVENTION IS ENDORSED BY DOWELL MINERS

Say It Is Best Reply to Teapot Dome

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DOWELL, Ill., April 4—Declaring that the only fitting reply to the Teapot Dome scandal is the organization of a powerful Farmer-Labor party to wrest governmental power from the capitalist crooks who now control it and battle for a workers' and farmers' government, Local Union No. 3703 of the United Mine Workers of America at Dowell, Illinois, passed a resolution endorsing the national Farmer-Labor convention to be held in St. Paul on June 17, by the progressive forces in the farmers' and trade union organizations of the United States.

The resolution is signed by Carl Diliberto, president, and Mike Skarupa, recording secretary, and reads as follows:

"The senate investigation of the Teapot Dome oil leases shows that the government of the United States under both republican and democratic administrations serves the capitalists as an instrument for looting the nation. Senators, cabinet officers, have been exposed as the paid men of big capitalist oil interests and even presidents are not immune from their influence. Fall, Denby, McAdoo, Daugherty, Lane, Roosevelt; these are the names which the workers and farmers of this country have been asked to honor but now they are all covered with the slime of corruption and graft.

"The Teapot Dome exposures only prove again on a larger scale what has been proven in this country hundreds of times; that the government of the United States serves the interests of a privileged class and is the enemy of the workers and farmers who produce the wealth of the country. It proves again that not one among the high and mighty of the old parties is immune from the corruption, grafting and looting thru which the capitalists take for themselves the wealth of the nation. It proves again that the existing system of industry and government is part of one system of special privileges and exploitation thru which the workers and farmers are robbed of what they produce.

"There is only one answer to the Teapot Dome and whole system of Teapot Domes, which is capitalism, the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party and the struggle for the workers' and farmers' government. Only a Workers' and Farmers' government will end the looting of the nation by the capitalists. A great mass Farmer-Labor Party must carry on the struggle to establish that workers' and farmers' government.

"Whereas, A convention has been called for June 17th, 1924, at St. Paul, by the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the Farmer-Labor Party of Washington, Montana and South Dakota, and other organizations for the nomination of a Farmer-Labor candidate for president and the adoption of a national platform, and this convention gives the opportunity to create the mass Farmer-Labor Party which will carry on the fight for a Workers' and Farmers' government.

"Therefore, be it resolved. That we, Local Union No. 3703, U. M. W. of A., Dowell, Illinois, endorse the June 17th, 1924, convention; and

"Be it further resolved: That a copy of this resolution be sent to the "Illinois Miner," Federated Press and the DAILY WORKER."

Chinese in Second Big Demonstration To Honor N. Lenin

(By Rosta News Agency.)

CANTON, April 4.—In pursuance of age-long Chinese custom, the Kuomingtang Party again paid honor to Lenin's memory—a month after his death. A huge popular meeting was held there in the town garden, making an indelible impression by its dimensions and organization. There were distributed thousands of specially written pamphlets on Lenin as a friend of the oppressed nations in their struggle for their rights, his portraits with national and revolutionary inscriptions on them, and leaflets explaining Lenin's importance as a leader of all oppressed and toilers.

Various Kuomingtang organizations, trade unions, army units, and students—each and all passed before a platform, decorated with Lenin's portrait and placards bearing appropriate texts, bowing three times as they passed by.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Central Committee of the Kuomingtang and the high command of the various armies stationed at Canton took part in the meeting and the official procession past the platform. The speeches that were made on the occasion were distinguished by the sincere, cordial and enthusiastic feelings imbuing them—testifying to the great and deep influence of Lenin on the national movement of China.

Beer With Kick Is Favored by Gompers Say Brewery Workers

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 4.—The International Brewery Workers have declared for a modification of the Volstead Act, in a letter to all members of the Brewery unions, indorsed by Samuel Gompers. The letter advises friends of organized labor to bring pressure to bear on the Senators in their districts to vote for passage of Senate Bill 1524, which has for its purpose changing the alcoholic content of beverages from the present less than one half of one per cent to 2.75 per cent.

PORTO RICAN WORKERS HAVE NAUGHT TO SAY

Secretary Weeks Fears Workers' Rule

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Porto Rican self-government is henceforth to be conducted on a strictly class basis, the working class being excluded from participation, according to men who have studied the mysterious negotiations centering about Secretary of War Weeks and the Bureau of Insular Affairs since the hearings on the bill providing that the governor of the island shall be elected by the people. The workers, organized in the trade union movement and the Socialist Party, are to be shut out by a coalition of the Unionist and Republican parties in the island.

It appears that when Gov. Towner and the various party leaders concluded their testimony before House and Senate Committees here last month, the hearings were re-opened for the purpose of writing into the bill the definite guaranty that American sovereignty in the island should not be questioned. This was due to the fact that the Unionist party, which represents the ruling reactionary element, had favored the idea of independence at one time. Sen. Barcello, its leader, had been suspected of wanting to make himself dictator of an independent Porto Rico.

Barcelo is reported to have agreed to the American sovereignty pledge, if Weeks and the administration here would give guarantees against radical control later on. Governor Towner suggested an amendment to the bill, providing that an elected governor should be removable at will by the president. This was rejected by the Senate committee, whereupon Weeks and Towner arranged with Sen. Tous Soto, Republican leader, that Barcelo and Tous Soto should get together on a plan for requiring property qualifications for voting on the governorship.

As the question of property qualifications was the fundamental issue upon which the long struggle for Porto Rican territorial self-government was won, under the Wilson administration—the qualifications being rejected and the working class of the island retaining the ballot—this audacious move by the propertied interests had to be planned carefully and approached only after considerable delay. The delegation went home, and it is reported that the two leaders now contemplate a special session of the legislature in order to modify the governorship bill to the extent suggested by Weeks and his advisers.

Assurances were likewise given the sugar, tobacco and other American exploiting companies in the island, that the coalition of the Unionist and Republican forces would safeguard Porto Rican holdings of these companies for a long time to come; the Socialist party would be excluded from any chance of power.

Finally, Weeks told the newspapers that he opposed the grant of an elective governor to Porto Rico because of the danger that a Socialist to that post, since the Socialist strength is steadily increasing. This statement is being used in the island to spur the legislature to appeal to Congress to require special qualifications for voters on the governorship.

Local Farmer-Labor Exchange Marketing Honey and Prunes

The Farmer-Labor Exchange has been successful in marketing to the labor union consumer, farm products from many sections of the country, the DAILY WORKER is informed by C. F. Lowrie, secretary of the organization, which has offices at 166 W. Washington street.

"We have marketed over 12,000 pails of Idaho's honey directly to the Chicago trade unions," Mr. Lowrie said. "We are now marketing Big Idaho prunes at $4.50 for a 25-pound box delivered anywhere in the city. We are also delivering fresh eggs from the organized farmers of Iowa, which we deliver in case lots of 30 dozen each at market prices. We are also selling union label goods to both farmers and organized labor, especially UMACO coffee, the only union labed coffee on the market.

"Every local is asked to select a cooperative committee to extend this work. We are proving that organized labor and organized farmers can co-operate, in spite of the prediction of their common enemy that they could not."

JEWISH TENANTS THREATEN WAR ON LANDLORDS

Organize to Fight the Greedy Rent Hogs

The Jewish tenants, who have been hard hit by the general increase in rents this spring, organized in preparation for an extensive rent strike, at a well attended mass meeting in Division Hall, 2448 Division Street.

The Jewish Mother's League, which has been in existence seven years, is leading the movement of the Jewish tenants, who especially on the Northwest Side, are faced with rent increases ranging as high and higher than $35 per month. Mrs. Blumin, of the League expressed interest in the Negro Tenants League, and told the DAILY WORKER that at the next executive meeting of the Mother's League, steps would be taken to unite all the organizations into one militant body to fight the rent hogs this spring.

Jewish families have had their rents increased outrageously this year, it was stated at the Jewish Charities, 1800 Seldon Street. No one has had their rent reduced, and almost every flat has been increased, generally without apparent cause, it was said.

There was some sentiment expressed at the mass meeting for the building of co-operative apartments, but the majority of speakers contended that immediate relief is needed, and building additional houses would not help matters now. It was stated by Mrs. Blumin that the most effective method of reducing rents, and of preventing an unwarranted raise, is a rent strike such as was successfully carried on in Brownsville district, New York last year.

Mrs. Blumin advised the tenants to refuse to move and to refuse to pay an advance of rent. If the Jewish tenants take concerted action, she said, the landlords will not dare to evict them.

Unions To Own Bakery.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Bakery workers in New South Wales who have been on strike as a protest against the attempt by the employers to reintroduce night baking have practically won the strike. Three or four baking establishments are still on night work, and the unionists are now directing the fight against these.

The union is establishing a large union-owned baking establishment at Sydney, known as the Day Baking Cooperative Co., Ltd. It has a capital of $50,000, all shares being held by employes in the baking trade or other trade unionists.

Pa(y)triotism Supreme

In every country run and ruined by a class of exploiters, the masses are called upon, with regularly recurring frequency, to defend the "honor" of the nation, to die for the "homes and hearths" they do not own, and to preserve the security of the plunderbund's country. All of these widely advertised sacred duties sum themselves up in patriotism, the all-embracing super-virtue of capitalist government and industry.

Patriotism, the much-heralded employing-class ideal, is in reality the last refuge of our imperialist scoundrels. Patriotism, as preached and practiced by our ruling class, is, in the last resort, a blanket employed by the bosses to cover the countless crimes committed by them against their wage and farm slaves.

Captain Scaife's testimony before the Wheeler committee has turned the scorching light on American paytriotism. Those who have yelled most for crushing the German government are now exposed as the tools of the despicable German imperialists. Those who have cried loudest for a powerful aerial armada, second to none in strength and numbers, are shown to be the very ones who despoiled the country of a billion dollars deliberately squandered on useless, faulty airplanes whose victims were the duped American pilots, misled by the fraudulent cries of capitalist patriotism. The people who have worked overtime breeding war-fever against Japan, now turn out to be the skillful manipulators of the Japanese imperialist interests. Those who have yelled loudest for our workers and farmers to rush to Flanders fields and Verdun to die at $30 a month are precisely the very ones who have coined the fabulous profits out of the last imperialist war to save the world for capitalist democracy. Above all, it is instructive to note that it was under the righteous-mouthed democratic administration of so notorious an apostle of capitalist peace as Woodrow Wilson that these damnable crimes were perpetrated against the workingmen and farmers.

There is nothing startling about the above irrefutable truths disclosed by Captain Scaife, a former employe of the Department of Justice, for the third time in the last two years. This is merely more unchallengeable proof of the fact that the laboring masses of the city and country have no interest in and should resist to the bitter end all attempts of their exploiters and government oppressors to draw the country into capitalist imperialist wars, regardless of the sweet words and high-sounding phrases peddled by the prostituted press on such occasions.

Here we have capitalist patriotism with a vengeance. The American workers and farmers have been fooled all too often into fighting the battles of their bosses. The Scaife testimony exposes capitalist patriotism at its highest stage of development. These revelations can only prove a signal to the exploited working masses, to be on guard against ever again being poisoned by this deadly toxin of employing class patriotism and national honor and safety.

Russia To the Fore

An undercurrent of pessimism is making itself felt on the continent of Europe. The hopes aroused by the likelihood of the Dawes commission providing panaceas for Europe's severe economic illness are losing their glamor. In many quarters fear is displacing these hopes—the fear lest the Dawes proposals should strike a snag somewhere in Berlin or Paris. Judging by the preliminary reports concerning the "Hell-an-Maria" recommendations, there is plenty of trouble ahead for the "Good Samaritans" of Yankee imperialism.

In this vast sea of troubles, there is but one isle of safety. And that is the Workers' and Farmers' Republic of Soviet Russia! Slowly but surely the Communist leviathan is rising to its feet, despite countless obstacles and difficulties: Soviet Russia, alone of all the European countries, is on the upward grade today.

Two years ago the Soviet Republic's exports barely tuoched the fifty million dollar mark. Last year this trade rose to $110,000,000. The outlook today is for an export of about one-quarter of a billion dollars worth of produce.

Germany, the land that was saved from the "horrors" of Bolshevism by Kautsky and Noske, is now in agony. Its workers and poor farmers are helpless before the death-dealing juggernaut of the Junker-capitalist alliance. Even the vaunted German capitalist productive system has been rocked to its foundation. The German Mark is a reproach. The revival of German industry is contingent upon the rest of the world, especially the United States, allowing the German manufacturers to dump huge piles of commodities produced by woefully underpaid workers. With Soviet Russia, the black sheep of the imperialist world, the story is exactly the opposite. Soviet currency—the Chervonetz—is one of the very few currencies now standing at a premium over the dollar. The Workers' and Farmers' Republic is steadily raising the pay and living standards of its workers.

It is illuminating as well as interesting to note that every hellish scheme devised against the Communist government has turned out to be a boomerang for the capitalist brigands. The foreign-inspired counter-revolutions, the French and British financed attacks and wars, the economic boycott—all have failed miserably. The allied imperialists thought it was a master stroke of military and financial policy to separate Esthonia, Latvia, and Lithuania from Soviet Russia. Here the imperialist failure is especially appalling. The severance of these war-devastated regions has saved the Soviet Republic innumerable difficulties of reconstruction. These capitalist-financed puppets of French and British imperialism are today compelled by sheer economic necessity to be the agents of Communist Russia's rehabilitation.

Soviet Russia's remarkable advance to the fore is the best vindication of the correctness of Communist policy, of the efficacy of revolutionary tactics and the wretched bankruptcy of the social-patriotic tactics of betrayal exposued by the Second International and its followers—the world over.

The Tribune and Leningrad

The Tribune, peeved because the Soviet Government has changed the name of Petrograd to Leningrad, sheds bitter tears over the neglect shown by the heartless Communists to bloody Peter, its founder and states that the city population has shrunk, under the Soviet government to 400,000.

The inference of course is that Lenin represented sorry failure and that poor shrunken Leningrad is a fitting monument to his failure and fanaticism.

The Tribune, with its usual disregard for facts, when there is any workingclass angle to the subject, gives the population figure at less than one-third of what it actually is. Instead of Leningrad having a population of 400,000 the latest census shows that it is a city of 1,137,600.

In 1920 its population was 740,000; in 1921, 782,000; in 1922, 1,038,001. There has, therefore, been a steady growth since 1920 despite the fact that in 1918 the seat of government was moved from Leningrad to Moscow taking away thousands of government employes.

The information given above is as accessible to the Tribune as it is to us and the misstatements are consequently the more contemptibly culpable.

"Impartial" Government

"Not a chance for a strike to succeed when there is proper police protection."—John M. Glenn of the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

We offer the above as a text for a dissertation upon the impartial role of democratic government as exemplified in this republic to the gentle gentry who expatiate at length upon the evils of a workingclass dictatorship as a means for abolishing capitalism.

We suggest further that they explain in the light of the above frank utterance what the principal role of the armed forces of the state is in maintaining law and order.

Bolshevist ideas are opposed to the temperament of the Russian people declared an exiled Russian pastor recently. While the Russians are not exactly as crazy for pastors as the South Sea island cannibals who used to eat them for breakfast, the very fact that the reverend gentleman was kicked out of the Soviet Republic by the "temperamental Russians" hardly jibes with his testimony to their religious fervor. But then who expects a clergyman to tell the truth?

Marquis James, a writer in Hearst International suggests the drafting of wealth and labor as a means of war prevention. The wealthy could claim exemption and let their wealth do the fighting! Is that it? We suggest that the embalming of nutty gentlemen like Mr. James might console some of the war victims even tho it might not prevent it.

The installation of a radio set in the Chicago jail on the theory that it will make happy and contented prisoners reminds us of a remark made by a friend of ours on seeing the advertisement of a portable graphophone for campers. "What's the use of going camping," he said, "if you can't get away from the graphophone?"

All labor should be for Small bleats John L. Walker former member of the Socialist Party and one time leader of the Farmer-Labor Party movement. It is rather amusing to watch John shed those heavy, beady, glistening tears over his past sins, that is when he was an honest man.

In the suit over the will of the late Lord Northcliffe dividing an estate worth $3,750,000 59 lawyers have been retained. A 10 mark note of the Rhine republic will be given to the reader making the correct guess as to who gets the money.

The newspaper advertising which Roosevelt senior received seems to have lost its efficacy so far as Roosevelt junior is concerned perhaps because the son is both less truthful and toothful.

FARMER-LABOR SECRETARY HITS SMALL BACKERS

McCabe Says Ernest Is Purchased Faker

The entire Chicago and Illinois Federation of Labor machine, backed by the Hearst press, is touring the state electioneering for Len Small, for Governor, in the last lap of the primary campaign, and at the same time Thomas G. McCabe, secretary-treasurer of the Cook County branch of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States reiterates his contempt for the trade unionists who have betrayed independent political action. Downtown politicians stated today that Small has a much better chance for nomination and election, and that if he does not ride in, it will be due to the increased activity of trade union officials in his behalf.

Small Advocate Condemned.

William Schoenberg, International organizer of the machinists, at the last meeting of Local 390, made an impassioned speech in an endeavor to convert the rank and file to vote for Small in the primaries. "If I were in Milwaukee I should vote the Socialist ticket, if I were in Germany or Denmark I should be with the Social-Democrats. But here in Illinois, as there is no independent political organization for labor, it is necessary for the workers to deal with Small."

The machinists' organizer was reminded by Andrew Overgaard, Louis Look, president of the district council, Jake Weydert, Philip Kerr, and several other rank and file machinists that there is a Farmer-Labor Party in Illinois as well as Minnesota, but that trade union officials have been engaged in merrily knifing the labor party in the back in favor of the old parties. They pointed out that Schoenberg seemed to be with the party which he thought had the most prestige, or which he could get the most out of. They declared there was little difference between Small and Essington, that whoever wins, the politicians and the policemen's club will be used against labor, as they are being used in the garment strike at the present time. They declared their faith in a workers' party which is based on class lines and which is against both of the old parties.

Need Leaders With Backbone.

"I don't see how any self-respecting trade unionist can go into the coming primary fight for any candidate put up by the old parties," said Thomas G. McCabe, last night in an exclusive interview with the DAILY WORKER. "The old party primaries are like a pest house. No decent man can enter them without becoming contaminated—I don't care who he is. I made my statement advising all friends of labor, to stay away from the polls because I wanted to set the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party right by declaring against entanglements with old party politicians.

"It is deplorable that more Farmer-Labor Party members did not have the guts to support me in my stand. I was speaking with the backing of the unanimous decision of the executive board of the party and the constitution of the National Farmer-Labor Party. It is the duty of every union man who has any class consciousness or any realization of the position of the workers in society, to stay away from the primaries—both democratic and republican—on April 8.

The Cat's Let Loose.

"It is evident that we need labor leaders with a good deal stiffer backbone and good deal clearer brains if we are going to keep the workers from being sold out to corrupt politicians in the future."

McCabe launched into an attack on the Illinois Farmer-Labor Party, a dual organization headed by Gifford Ernest, not connected with the National Farmer-Labor Party. "The Farmer-Labor Party of Illinois is a scab organization," said McCabe. "Ernest never carried a union card. He is a non-labor man who has lived off of union men and women of Chicago for the last three years. I am glad that this situation has revealed Ernest's organization in its true light. I believe we have discovered that Ernest is just a figure head, backed by Walker and Olander. I believe we have discovered who is paying Ernest's salary and expenses—the very people who are backing Small. I am now convinced that Ernest entered the July 3rd convention at the instance of these men for the very purpose and the definite intention of disrupting the Farmer-Labor Party of Chicago so that Small and the other old party politicians would not lose support."

"Ernest would not dare to declare in favor of staying away from the primaries because he would endanger the funds necessary to maintain his headquarters, which are supplied by Small men. Walker and Olander have in the past received favors from both the old parties. They have a very unsavory records."

Attempt to Swing Federation.

"Influence is being exerted on members of the Farmer-Labor Party to keep them lined up for Small. It is ridiculous that serious Farmer-Labor Party members should repudiate their Party and declare that they do not owe any allegiance to it. We are having an executive board meeting tonight (Friday night) which will probably have an important bearing on the future of the Farmer-Labor Party of Chicago."

It is being generally rumored in the Federation of Labor Building that at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor next Sunday, some of the officials will endeavor to swing the Federation to an indorsement of Small.

German Living Cost One-Third of What It Was Before War

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 4.—The cost of living has gone up about 33 1-3 per cent in Germany as compared with pre-war days. But workers' wages have in most trades been decreased over the prewar period. So that the workers not only find necessaries more expensive than in 1913-14, but he has less money to pay for them.

The following table shows workers' wages per hour this year and ten years ago:

	1913-14 pfennigs	Jan.1924 pfennigs
Masons	68	59.7
Building trades	55	54.2
Metal workers	57	52.9
Cabinet makers	56	53.4
Upholsterers	54	52.6
Printers	60	57.0
Weavers	50	47.1
Tailors	57	52.2

A pfennig is worth about one-fourth of a cent. In the above, the highest hourly rate is 15 cents. In only three trades, painters, leatherworkers and bookbinders, in Germany has there been a wage increase over 1913-14. But this increase is more than offset by the rise in the cost of living.

After March 31 the building industry will be without any collective agreement. As 75 per cent of the building workers are unemployed, the employers' demands would throw the unions back 30 years. These demands include a 60-hour week (48 in winter, 72 in summer), the loss of holidays, the exclusion of apprentices from the agreement, no restriction on piece work.

W. Va. Labor Faker Had Business Angle On Labor Politics

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WHEELING, W. Va., April 4.—The president of the West Virginia Federation of Labor, Mr. Harris, according to G. W. Otto, of this city, made an unsuccessful attempt to swing the labor vote he controlled "Where they would do the most good," in the recent senatorial campaign.

"Harris informed me," said Mr. Otto, "that he was president of the American Federation of Labor in West Virginia, and that 'he had the votes to deliver and would throw them the way they would do him the most good.' Harris declared that 'Records got a man nothing, and that if Senator Cooper did not deal with him, then another man would be candidate for the senate, and that he—Harris—would swing labor's vote to the other man'."

Mr. Otto declares that in spite of the fact that Cooper was the logical candidate for labor's vote, having a good record in working for the 8-hour law and other labor legislation, President Harris declared he would not swing labor's vote to a candidate who gave him nothing in return.

New Zealand Labor Paper Harpoons Our Robber Paytrioteers

(By The Federated Press)

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, April 4.—Commenting on the Teapot Dome oil scandal the New Zealand Worker says: "Gentlemen of the United States cabinet have been caught in a great and grimy oil scandal, but only after they had dipped their tarry fingers deeply into the loot.

"The Daughertys, Bakers, Roosevelts and company in the oil scanday, it must be remembered, were the very creme-de-la-creme of United States patriotism and it was they who organized the drives against socialists and others for their alleged lack of love of country and their corrupting influence in the state.

"A nice bunch, the lot of them! Liars and thieves all, whose knaveries almost make the earth stink to heaven. And it is these, and such as they, monopolizing patriotism as they have done for filthy profit, who have vilified and persecuted pacifists and conscientious objectors for hating their beastly greed and bloodshed."

The Growth of Tenancy In Agriculture

The statistics of acreage prove the contrary what is assumed by the "pauperization theory": Tenant farms are growing not only in numbers but in sizes as well they exceed the growth of owner farms and in considerable parts of the country they are bigger than owner farms:

Let us look what changes have been made in distribution of farm property among the tenure groups:

The total farm property estimated in 1910 in 41 billion dollars and in 1920 in 78 billion dollars was distributed as follows in per cents of the totals of each year:

	1910	1920
In owner farms	65.1	61.1
In manager farms	4.1	4.0
In tenant farms	30.8	34.9

The tenant farms appear here as the only group where the increased farm property was accumulated relatively more at the end of the decade than that was at the beginning. Owner farms and farms operated by managers had smaller part of farm property in 1920 than they had in 1910.

Property Subdivision.

The total property in its subdivisions was distributed among the main groups of farms (in per cents of each year's total amount) as follows:

	In owner farms. 1910.	In owner farms. 1920.	In manager farms. 1910.	In manager farms. 1920.	In tenant farms. 1910.	In tenant farms. 1920.
Value of land	62.5	58.4	4.3	4.0	33.2	37.6
Value of buildings	72.1	68.6	3.3	4.0	24.1	27.4
Machinery and implements	71.1	68.1	3.4	2.9	25.4	29.0
Value of live stock	69.1	66.1	4.1	4.5	26.8	29.3

Owner farms still had in 1920 more "land values" and held more of the values of buildings, machinery and live stock than both the other groups. But comparing the figures for owner farms of 1920 with those of 1910 we have to note that their relative economic force is vanishing: in "value" of land and capital—buildings, machinery and live stock—they had smaller share in 1920 than they had in 1910.

The strength of tenant farms increased. Their share in "value of land" and in capital was considerably bigger at the end of the decade.

Tenant Farms Advance First.

Very small changes we can find in the position of manager farms. They had turned more to live stock raising. It is impossible to find any confirmation of the assertions of pauperization theory in the census statistics. Tenant farms do not appear as pauperized, weak, economically exhausted establishments. In intensification of agriculture tenant farms are advanced before owner farms. Average values per acre of live stock, farm implements and machinery are higher and had increased more in tenant farms than in owner farms.

The 1920 census report does not give any direct information about changes in types of farms by tenure. We cannot trace directly in which groups of farms simple commercial farming is developed more in capitalistic farming with hired labor. But the statistics of farm property indicate that in this respect exactly tenant farms are breaking the way: intensification of agriculture, in which tenant farms are the leaders, demands more labor than extensive farming of owners.

When the backward progressives or liberals denounce tenancy then they always speak not about one but about two things: tenants and hired labor. Thus the "Report of the Commission on Land Colonization and Rural Credits of the State of California," of Nov. 29, 1916, complains:

Great properties, owned by nonresidents are being cultivated by tenants or by nomadic and unsatisfactory hired labor" (page 7, Black mine. O. P.).

This same danger was noted by the "Report of the Public Land's Commission, 1905," which announced:

"There exists and is spreading in the West a tenant of hired labor system (black mine. O. P.), which not only represents a relatively low industrial development, but whose further extension carries with it a THE GROWTH OF TENANCY IN most serious threat. Politically, socially and economically this system is indefensible." Page xxiv.)

Yes, tenants and hired labor come together and can remain together in the "most serious threat."

Difference In Systems.

The characterization of new tenant farms by the above report in substance as capitalistic farms, the definition of the new tenancy as a tenant or hired labor system, it seems, is correct. This feature of the tenant farms is vital and deserves attention.

Tenancy, as established at present in the United States, is created by different forces and in different conditions than tenant systems came into existence in other countries and in this same United States in previous times not so very long ago. Its development does not depend from individually accumulated capital of tenants, as that was the case for a very long time with tenancy in England and in other countries. In considerable extent tenancy is created here directly by the initiative and means of financial capital. Bonded tenants, hired tenants, are here among the different tenant groups.

Financial capital develops in tenancy not only a system but a new mechanism of exploitation.

The historical duty of the new tenants before their creator, financial capital, is to produce more values and more rent and profits than independent farmers were able to do even when their farms were in full order and they were not economically weak and pauperized. Together with this tenants are doing a work on which account the "economics of transition period" will be here simpler.

Financial Capital—Its Influence.

Pauperization of farmers owners do not stay in direct connections with establishment of tenancy. Direct transformation of owners in tenants, it seems, did not contribute much to the increase of number of tenants. In acquisition of farmers' land by financial capital pauperization plays decisive role. For enlarging and concentration of land holdings dispossession of farmers is enforced by "economic means" of financial capital as effectively as that was done by fire, swords and scaffolds in "glorious revolutions" in Europe. In the battles with independency of farmers, financial capital does not look for captives. When a farm is foreclosed or purchased by a land company that does not mean an immediate addition of a new tenant. It means only an increase of territory for tenancy.

Financial capital separates land ownership from its cultivation and dispossession of farmers often is carried thru or supervised by another set of offices or agents from that which takes care about exploitation of acquired lands. These are separate processes and require seperate consideration. If we mix them up then it is impossible to recognize their true features. A cruel attack of financial capital on land holdings of independent farmers in some sections can look then as an expression of crisis in agricultural production; a victory of financial capital we may accept then as a sign of decay of capitalism; confiscation of farmers' savings in imposed forms of bankruptcy can appear then as another sign of crisis in production.

Creation of New Farmers Movement.

Acquiring ownership of land as means to exempt and to appropriate in the form of land rent the values produced in agricultural financial capital produces the basis for tenancy and creates on this basis capitalistic tenancy as the typical form of relations which insure unceasing direct flow of land rent and profits in the vaults of banks.

As by the means in acquisition of land ownership—mortgages, taxes, manipulated freight rates, etc.—so by increased skinning of people in the tenant system financial capital creates a new farmers' movement which can be ended only with the end of the system of exploitation in all its forms. It is impossible for this new farmers' movement to dissolve itself on individually owned farms, as that happened with previous farmers' movements. This new farmers' movement has neither the old traditional economic foundations, nor traditional armies of prospective settlers. It cannot have their traditional end.

"The Story of John Brown"

The Arsenal Is Captured.

EVENTS flashed sharp and terrible and swift as lightning after this sombre opening of the storm. The telegraph wires were cut, the watchman at the bridge captured, guards were placed at the two bridges leading out of the town, and many citizens were taken from the streets and held as prisoners in the Arsenal.

Perhaps the most distinguished prisoner was Colonel Lewis W. Washington, a great-grandnephew of the first President, and like him, a gentleman farmer and slave owner. He lived five miles from the Ferry, and with the instinct of a dramatist, John Brown seized him and freed his slaves as a means of impressing on the American imagination that a new revolution for human rights was being ushered in.

Brown's Heroic Struggle.

The little town was peaceful and unprepared for this sudden attack, as unprepared as it would be today for a similar raid. By morning, however, the alarm had been spread; the church bells rang, military companies from Charlestown and other neighboring towns began pouring in, the saloons were crowded with nervous and hard-drinking men, and there was the clamor and furor of thousands of awe-struck Southerners. No one knew how many men were in the Arsenal. No one knew whether the whole South was not being attacked by Abolitionists, or whether or not all the slaves had armed and risen against their masters, as they had attempted to years before in Nat Turner's and other rebellions.

By noon the Southerners had begun the attack. They killed or drove out all the guards John Brown had stationed at various strategic points in the town; they murdered two of Brown's men they had taken prisoners, and tortured another. They managed to cut off all of Brown's paths of retreat, and by nightfall, he and the few survivors of his men were in a trap.

Robert E. Lee Takes Fort.

His young son, Oliver, only twenty years old, and recently married, died in the night. He had been painfully wounded, and begged, in his agony, that his father shoot him and relieve him from pain. But the old Spartan held his boy's hand and told him to be calm and to die like a man. Another young son, Watson, had been killed earlier in the fighting. John Brown had now given three sons to freedom, and was soon himself to be a sacrifice.

There were left alive and unwounded but five of Brown's men. The Virginia militia, numbering, with the civilians in the town, up to the thousands, seemed afraid to attack this little group of desperate men. In the dawn of the next morning, however, United States marines, under the famous commander, Robert E. Lee then a Colonel in the Federal forces, attacked the arsenal and captured it easily. John Brown refused to surrender to the last; and he stood waiting proudly for the marines when they broke down the door and came raging like tigers at him.

Brown Beaten Mercilessly.

A fierce young Southern officer rah at him with a sword, that bent double as it pierced to the old man's breast bone. The young Southerner then took the bent weapon in his hands and beat Brown's head unmercifully with the hilt, bringing the blood, and knocking senseless the old unselfish and tender champion of poor Negro men and women. Those near him thought John Brown was dead; but he was still alive; he had still his greatest work to do.

Labor Limericks

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH

An earnest young curate, named Flynn,
Said the workers were living in sin.
So he chased and he harried
Both single and married—
Then died from devotion to gin.

A stout pompous person, named Bleeder,—
A prominent union leader,—
Said: "You ask why I dine
With the boss?—I like wine;
And, then, I'm a vigorous feeder."

A learned professor, named Bray,
Said: "I really can't make teaching pay!"
So he lectures on Russia,
And says we must crush 'er.
And guzzles champagne every day.

Opposition Camouflaged As Friendship

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

THE Communist International has become more sensible and therefore more acceptable—is the historical dictum of J. B. S. Hardman in the March issue of the "American Labor Monthly."

Now, there are many ways in which history can be written. But there is only one good way, the correct and scientific way, whose first prerequisite is: searching after facts. First get your facts and then build your theory. Our estimable J. B. S. Hardman has gone about the matter the other way round. He first invented a theory (a philosophy of history, if you please), and then proceeded to fashion the facts to fit his theory. The result is a historical analysis which "proves" a case—his own case against the Communist International and its American section.

But let us take up his history first. J. B. S. finds that within the Communist International, altho dominated by Lenin and guided by the spirit of Marxian philosophy, "traces of former leaders and thinkers are clearly discernible." A very innocent and harmless statement, indeed. Surely the Communist International is not the beginning of all beginnings, neither is Lenin, nor is Marx for that matter. Into the making of the Communist International have gone the tested and proven ideas and experiences of generations of proletarian struggle. History—any kind of history—means first of all continuity of development. But what does this prove?

Well, J. B. S. Hardman has not made the above statement for nothing. It was done for a purpose, which becomes apparent immediately upon learning that "perhaps . . . (the trace) . . . of Blanqui is one of the most conspicuous influences in the Communist world organization, and it may do to enter into an analysis of the Communist International with a glimpse into this particular social philosophy."

So, there you are. The philosophy of Blanqui was one of the most conspicuous influences in the Communist International. Well, that is not new. Read the literature of the social-patriots and betrayers of the working class the world over and you will find there not merely traces of what J. B. S. says now, but the very same thing verbatim. Our good, old friend J. B. S. is here merely repeating Kautsky, Scheidemann, MacDonald and all the rest of the noble knights of the 2nd International. And if we would care to go a little deeper into history, we could remind our friend J. B. S. that Blanquism was the first big charge against the Bolsheviks preferred by the Menshevik Brotherhood as far back as the year 1903-1904. Lenin, according to his menshevik opponents in the old Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party, was the father of the Blanquist Revival in Russia. So that's that.

It is apparent that J. B. S. is not exactly in love with the Communist International. He simply does not like it. He never did. The reason? Well, the Communist International is not precisely what he would like it to be. It does not come up to his conception of taste, yes, "revolutionary" taste, for our imaginative historian of the "American Labor Monthly" is a man of taste and what he terms, culture.

However, this is beside the point. Elaborating further on his charge against the Communist International, J. B. S. Hardman defines Blanquism as a belief in "permanent proletarian insurrection." And after having satisfied himself that this definition offers a suitable weapon of attack, he proceeds to deliver himself of the following "historical truth":

"In the first year or two of its life, the Communist International came very near satisfying the above cited ideal of the Blanquists: it had too much of the tendency to become a permanent organization of proletarian insurrection."

Proletarian insurrection! What a contemptible thing, particularly permanent insurrection. How dare they, anyway? And to think of it, that even the Communist International has been catering to it!

It looks very terrible, indeed, but it is not. What J. B. S. Hardman means to say is merely this: that in the first two years of its life the Communist International was basing its policies and strategy on the immediate approach of a direct proletarian struggle for power.

To a very large extent this is so. But what of it? What's wrong about it? It is here, at this point, that J. B. S. has unwittingly touched the very crux of the problem.

Yes, the policy and strategy of the Communist International, not only in the first two years of its existence, but up till this very moment, are based on a revolutionary orientation. The theory of it is that since the beginning of the last war capitalism has entered into the last phase of its development. It is approaching its end. No one can foretell with absolute certainty how soon the end will come. But it is sufficient to know that the entire world, with the possible exception of America, is passing thru a revolutionary crisis.

This theory is based on facts. And if our imaginative historian of the "American Labor Monthly" has any taste at all for economics, we might take up the details of it at some future date. For the present sufficient to say that the broad lines of strategy of the Communist International today as well as three years ago are based on this theory.

This does not mean that every country in the world is on the verge of a revolution. Some countries are closer to it than others. And then again, it is also a matter of tempo, of rate of development. At one time, particularly during 1919-1920, this tempo of revolutionary development was very quick, so much so that the proletarian seizure of power was the question of the day in Central Europe, the Balkans and Italy. During the years of 1920-23 the rate of revolutionary development slackened down, but at the end of 1923 and beginning of 1924 the world situation has become extremely critical again. These changes of tempo necessitate of course, changes in Communist tactics, but the general strategy remains the same.

The inconsistency of some "centrist" minds is really peculiar. In his historical review of the Communist International J. B. S. quotes a passage from a resolution adopted at the 3rd congress of the Communist International. It reads:

"The distinction (between Communists and Social-Democrats—A. B.) is in the fact that Social-Democrats hinder the actual development of the revolution by rendering all possible assistance in the way of restoring the equilibrium of the bourgeois state while the Communists, on the other hand, are trying to take advantage of all means and methods for the purpose of overthrowing and destroying the capitalist government and establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat."

J. B. S. quotes this passage approvingly, which would seem to indicate that he agrees with it. Then why in the name of logic, is he raving against the first two years of the Communist International? Was not the Communist International doing precisely what the quoted passage calls for, that is, taking advantage of all means and methods for the purpose of overthrowing . . . etc.? And the only thing that can be said in addition is that the efforts of the Social-Democrats to hinder the development of the revolution and to restore the equilibrium of the capitalist state were in some instances more successful than the revolutionary efforts of the Communists. But what has Blanqui got to do with it? Well, he has something to do with it. Just read what's coming:

"There followed in rapid succession prescriptions of war measures. Parliamentary action for political (?) purposes was thrown into discard. . . . The trade union movement . . . was to be scrapped . . . new purist unions were to be built . . . the revolution was to be the task of small minorities? . . revolutionary organizations centralized and secret . . . etc., etc."

Horrible, horrible. It looked like a veritable nightmare. But now—now, thank God, things do look different. The Communist International had finally seen the light (emanating from J. B. S.) and has turned from "Romantic Insurrectionism to Revolutionary Realism," all in capital letters.

It may be useless perhaps to refer a historian of an imaginative turn of mind to facts. What are facts to him and what is he to facts? Nevertheless an attempt must be made to instruct our over-imaginative writer of the "American Labor Monthly" in a few elementary principles.

The doings of the Communist International lie within the age of history, i. e., they are embodied in books, resolutions, theses and statements by responsible and recognized leaders of the Communist International. Why not refer to official documents? Is not that the natural course? Of course, it is, but not for J. B. S. For him and his cause it was so much more convenient to ignore official documents. Why? Because mere reference to them and to the actual history of the Communist International.. would instantaneously explode to shreds all the foolish and ridiculous charges brought forth with so much pomp and ceremony.

"The Communist International discarded praliamentary action." Nonsense. Read the proceedings of its congresses. Study the life-history of the various Communist groups and parties even of the year of 1919-1920' and you will see how ridiculous this assertion is.

Of course, there were anti-parliamentarian groups and tendencies in certain sections of the Communist International. In some sections these tendencies were more pronounced than in others. But here is the important thing to be borne inmind, that the Communist International always and consistently opposed these tendencies, trying to educate and convince the workers of the necessity of parliamentary action for revolutionary purposes.

"The trade union movement was to be scrapped and new purist unions formed over night." Nonsense again. The policy of the Communist International, as embodied in its official decisions and literature, was from the very beginning directed towards one end: to win the trades unions over to the revolutionary class struggle.

To be sure, in the practical application of this policy many difficulties were encountered. In a few sections of the Communist International some serious deviations from this policy occurred at one time or another. But here again it must be remembered that the instructive and guiding assistance of the Communist International was always and immediately at hand to correct these mistakes and deviations.

"The revolution was to be the task of small minorities." Here's where Comrade Blanqui's ghost appears again. But that's nothing. It does not frighten any one. Communists can sit with Blanqui even bodily in one room and not become contaminated. The revolutionary strategy of the Communist International is by now so well established in our minds that this talk about "minorities" sounds to us like pre-ancient history. We simply don't take it seriously.

"Revolutionary organizations centralized and secret." Well, well, this is some charge. To which we reply: Centralized? Sure, always, the degree and form of centralization to be determined by the actual conditions of the class struggle. Anything wrong in that? Nothing that we can see, and this is and has been the position of the Communist International.

Secret? No, not always. As conditions demand. But always remember that legality with the Communist International is not a fetish. Nor is illegality for that matter. It is a form of organizational existence which our enemies succeed at times in imposing upon us. When they do, we take it, and proceed further along the road of revolutionary struggle. This is and has been the position of the Communist International.

In concluding his excursion into the history of the Communist International, J. B. S. attempts to take a fling also at the Workers Party of America. In order to make it more effective, we presume, he makes use of a statement published editorially by "Die New Yorker Volkszeitung" to the effect that Comrade Zinoviev was not justified in expecting "desirable surprises in the American Labor Movement." The "Volkszeitung" does not believe that our movement is advancing fast enough to warrant such expectations.

Well, we are compelled to say that Comrade Zinoviev, altho not residing in America and therefore not in possession of first hand knowledge about American affairs, has in this case better and truer gauged the present situation in the American labor movement than has the "Folkszeutung." The Workers Party seems to be in complete, agreement with the Communist International and with Comrade Zinoviev that we are perfectly justified in expecting such agreeable surprises in the American labor movement. The recent developments in the movement for a mass farmer-labor party is proof sufficient.

J. B. S. is fully entitled to enjoy whatever little comfort he can derive from the fact that the "Volkszeitung" believes in this case as it does. But this is neither here nor there. His case against the Communist International has not been strengthened at all. He will have to look for other means—more effective than this.

We are sorry to say that the Communist International is today just as "bad" as it was three years ago. The same revolutionary philosophy and strategy. The same determination to fight capitalism to a finish, and even the same youthful bouyancy. Only it has grown—considerably grown—in power and influence. For the rest, the same old boy, and for that we love it.

A COMRADE - - - -

By N. BUCHARIN

LENIN is dead. Never more will we see this powerful forehead, this marvelous head radiating revolutionary power; these gleaming, penetrating, attentive eyes; these energetic and vigorous hands; never more will we see this human statue molded out of one block on the frontier of two epochs of human evolution.

The peak of thought, of feeling, of the will of the proletariat has collapsed. His energy flowed up in invisible currents to wherever the heart of workers beat, to where the conscience of a powerful class is formed, to where the weapon of the battle of liberation is being forged. Across the centuries Lenin has been and will remain unique, without equal.

Lenin—The Leader.

Comrade Lenin was above all a leader, a leader whom nature gives to humanity but once in a century. His is of those who give their name to their epoch. He was one of the greatest organizers of the masses; like a giant, he advanced at the head of a human wave, organizing the innumerable human units into an army of disciplined work, crushing the adversary; he dominated the elements in throwing the light of his powerful mind upon the straight roads as well as upon the obscure alleys where resounds the rhythmic step of workers' columns following the red standards of revolt.

What is it that made of Lenin so inspired an expression of millions of beings?

It was above all his extraordinary understanding of the needs of the masses; he possessed a myterious sense which enabled him to perceive in the masses the movements, the thoughts which were mort imperceptible to all others.

No one could listen as be. He listened with patience and attention to an old soldier, a peasant from some far away place, a worker.

It was enough for him to exchange some words with a humble peasant woman to determine the pulse-beats of the life of the country places; one word caught from a worker during a meeting was enough for him to feel the road taken by workers' thought. He disentangled the complexity of social relations, and before the eyes there arose the picture of the life of millions of beings.

Simplicity in Bearing.

Lenin had a singular talent for talking with people; he got so intimately near them that they confided to him all their doubts, their desires, their questions.

For every one Lenin found a simple language. Hating the enemies of the working class with all the force of his mighty soul, breaking with them brutally, definitely, categorically, Lenin knew how to convince; he dissipated all the doubts of those men who did the militant work. It is for this reason that Lenin possessed a marvelous attraction; he charmed people; they came to him (not as to a chief, but as to the best friend and comrade, the most experienced, the wisest; and he bound all these people to himself by means of a cement which no force could have loosened.

Never more will there be found in history a leader so much loved by those near him. Everyone had a special feeling for Lenin. It was not for his vigorous intelligence and for his iron fist that he was loved. No, he was simply loved. He bound people to himself by intimate bonds. He was a comrade in the real sense of the word, this great word to which the future belongs. Such will be in the future the relations between people.

The greatest simplicity was the essential trait of his policy; it was not the simplicity of naive people; it was the simplicity of genius. He found simple words, clear slogans, easy solution of the most complicated problem. Nothing was more foreign to him that sinuosity, pose, sophism; he hated all that. He ridiculed this cursed heritage of the old order.

Enemy of Sterile Verbiage.

He knew the value of action and was the most implacable enemy of all sterile verbiage, and at the same time he guided his Party in a masterly way and he swept along all the workers. He was a dictator in the best sense of the word: Absorbing all the asps of life, he made the experiment with thousands of men in his marvelous spiritual laboratory and directed with his audacious hand as a powerful chief.

He never adapted himself to the backward ones; he never passively noted down events; he knew to march against the current with his whole aroused ardor; so ought a chief to be.

Comrade Lenin has left us; he has gone away forever. Let us dedicate all our forces to his heir, our Party. May this Party be animated by his spirit, his will, his illimitable daring, his devotion to the working class.

Let us all know how to listen to the mass as did Lenin, our common chief, our great master, our immortal comrade.

Vladimir Ilyitch Ulianov--Nicolai Lenin

By MAX BARTHEL (Berlin).

In the workers' quarters of Prague and Berlin,
London, Paris and Copenhagen
A clanging hammer struck crashing:
"Lenin is dead, Comrade Lenin!"

An outcry from the cities of Moscow and Vienna,
Bombay and Cape Town with frantic heart,
A wailing arises from depths of grief:
"Lenin is dead, Comrade Lenin!"

Odessa bends in sorrow to Moscow:
"There lies our father at our feet,
He whom earth's disinherited greet,
Leader of the poor, Comrade Lenin!"

Paris is in tears, Vienna wails,
Rome and Athens are struck down.
The other cities come and ask:
"Comrades, what is it?"—"Lenin died, Lenin!"

Chinese coolies, despised, spat upon,
The yellow stokers of pitching ships,
They shudder and imagine dreadful cracks:
"Lenin is dead, Comrade Lenin!"

And all the slaves of the colonies,
Negroes, Mulattos, and slender Malays,
Arise like lightning and say and cry:
"Lenin is dead, Comrade Lenin!"

Then silent are the cities of Moscow and Berlin,
Rome, Prague and London devoured with bitterness—
Hereupon a voice speaks clearly thru sorrow:
"Lenin is dead? Long live Lenin!"

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

It would be interesting to read the reports in the Moscow papers of the manner in which election campaigns are waged in Cicero, Illinois. They may say, "Well what can you expect in a capitalist country where the only incentive in public life is not service to the community as in our Soviet Republic but the accumulation of wealth, and as the shortest road to wealth is via the graft route, why graft is the rule and not the exception. When graft begins to thin out the grafters begin to shoot." That is about the size of it.

Oswald Mosely, M. P. son-in-law of Lord Curzon has joined the Independent Labor Party of Great Britain. Mosely married Lady Cynthia Curzon, Lord Curzon's daughter in 1920.

His wife is a generous contributor to the Labor Party's campaign funds. There is a wild rush on the part of the nobility for membership in the Independent Labor Party. The society columns of the London papers are filled with stories of dinners and afternoon teas at which the King and Queen rub shoulders with trade union leaders and "intellectual" members of MacDonald's cabinet. This state of affairs is not universally popular.

Thomas Johnston, editor of the Glasgow "Forward" comments with his customary incisiveness on this tendency to kiss the royal foot that is still massaging the neck of the British working class. Tom Griffith is Labor Treasurer of the Royal Household. Says Johnston, "Tommy, it seems had a great time with the King. 'If you had seen us there, chatting informally with the King, you would have thought this sort of thing had gone on for centuries. A more delightful half-hour I have never spent. The King gripped my hand.'"

"Note it wasn't his throat or his ankle that was gripped, just his hand, the hand of an honest son of toil—but more, there was a feeling of constraint. He obviously looked on us as friends." "Not as snobs, but as friends. Chums in fact." "Oh, brothers," moans Johnston, who is an M. P. himself, "give us air and loosen our collars; for we are like to choke! It may be that certain ceremonials have to be undertaken; but surely there is no excuse for those public exhibitions of snobbery!" No doubt Jim Oneal will make a vicious attack on Thomas Johnston for his undignified criticism of His Majesty's Labor Socialist (yellow) Government.

The Italian Elections Under Fascism

By GIOVANNI GIGLIO.

THE ITALIAN electoral campaign is in full swing. But the opposition parties have not been able to hold a single meeting as yet, not only because of the fact that open air meeting are, as a rule, never allowed by the police, but also because the fascist volence makes it impossible for the candidates of the opposition parties to return to their constituencies, from which they have been driven or compelled to escape. Here are two or three examples:

Signor Salvatore di Fausto, ex-M. P. and a prominent member of the Partito Popolare, sends to his Vicovaro constituency, a small town within the Rome province, his private secretary with instructions to do some canvass work. At the small railway station of the constituency the private secretary is soon noticed on his arrival by three fascisti and followed at a close distance on his track. The secretary gets aware that he is being closely followed by the three fascisti and therefore tries to elude their pursuit by entering swiftly into a church. But the three fascisti notice his move and follow him inside the church. Perceiving the impossibility of getting rid of his spies, the secretary very wisely, as you will see, tries to approach them.

So, with the most fascinating smile on his lips, he ventures to ask the three "gentlemen" to be so kind as to tell him what they wanted. "Your d——d skin," answered in a wild chorus the three "gentlemen." The secretary was shocked. Then, one of the fascisti continued: "We know that you are the secretary of Mr. So and So and we also know the purpose of your coming here. Now, the best you can do is to follow us back to the railway station." The secretary attempted to make a timid protest, but he soon repented for having made the attempt.

When he, in company of his three guides, reached the railway station, the fascisti requested him to telephone his candidate in Rome. And he was compelled to warn by phone his candidate not to think any more of his constituency. Three days later the candidates went to his constituency and under the protection of strong police forces was able to hold a meeting. But the day after the meeting the fascisti had their terrible revenge, by murdering three of the candidate's friends in the constituency.

Here Is Another Example.

The province of Bari gave, in the last election (1921), heaps of votes to the socialist ticket. A few days ago, Signor Vella, a socialist M. P. for Bari, tried to get in touch with his constituency and, as the local branch of the fascist party had warned him beforehand "not to show his face in the streets of Bari," before leaving Rome for Bari, he wanted to make sure that the government would protect him. The government let him know that instructions had been given providing for his personal security at Bari. But when Signor Vella reached Bari he was received by such a hostile demonstration from the fascisti that he deemed it prudent to take shelter inside the perfect's house.

The prefect received him very kindly, but seemed helpless. "How," exclaimed the socialist candidate, "I was given the assurance by the government that I would be enabled to make my electoral campaign here, and you do nothing to prevent the fascisti from organizing their attacks upon me." "Sir, answered the prefect, "you are quite right, but you see that I am helpless. These devils • • • you know • • • and I • • • am helpless. Take my friendly advice; go back to Rome, and I'll see that you get safe back to the railway station." And the socialist candidate had to take the prefect's friendly advice and accept also the offer of a strong police escort on his way back to the station.

Fascist Intimidation.

In the face of this kind about one hundred of the late M. P.s have informed their constituencies that they perfer to retire of their own will, and it is expected that the opposition parties may at the eleventh hour abandon completely the arena. They are already wondering what is the use of participating in the election when it is already known beforehand what the result of the election is going to be. The fact is that Mussolini has already ensured for the morrow a meek and obedient parliament. He is already sure that he will have 356 faithful followers in the future "Camera dei Deputati" out of a total of 535 M. P.s.

The result of this election will be to throw the crowds of laborers and farmers outside parliamentary life and deprive them, as a matter of fact, of the universal suffrage. In fact, for them it is almost impossible even the total conquest of the places officially reserved by the electoral law to the minority. If to this is added the preoccupation of the fascist electoral methods, one will get a clear insight of the meaning of this election which is aiming at vanishing with lawfulness and democracy an oligarchical regime resting on a daily and systematic violence. Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

IS COMMUNIST THEORY IMPORTANT?

SOME of the younger comrades think Communist theory unimportant. Lately the idea has grown up that a knowledge of tactics and current events is enough. This is a sad mistake.

Trotzky has said we shall conquer thru our knowledge of Communist theory. Theory is our guide to correct action.

On what is our theory based? First, on the works of Marx, Engels and the host of other proletarian writers who have understood and accepted the materialist conception of history, the class struggle, and the Marxian theory of surplus value; secondly, on the experience of the working class struggles and the recent development of capitalism, mainly as pointed out by Lenin in his works.

Importance of Study.

The past five years have been replete with rapid revolutionary developments. The youth of today have been maturing in an age of strife and struggle with but little time for reflection and less for study. Especially is this true of those in the revolutionary workers movement. The result is that many entirely overlook the need for detailed study of Marx, Engels and Lenin.

Karl Radek had amply pointed out the weaknesses of the European revolutionary youth in the matter of solid theoretical education. Most of the organized youth, he pointed out, were brought up at a time when Europe was in the throes of a bitter world war, followed by repeated revolutions and continuing economic and political crises.

The great theoreticians of the social-democrat and the present Communist parties were developed during the so-called periods of peaceful development of capitalism, as for example, Lenin, Zetkin, Luxembourg, Trotzky, Bucharin, Thalheimer, for the Communists; Bernstein and Kautsky, for the socialist traitors.

The life of every one of the leaders of the Communist International is the life of an avid student of Marxian theory and the development of capitalism, economicaly and politically. The danger in these times of action is for the youth to overlook such study.

Participation Not Sufficient.

It is true that the mass of workers, young and old, will learn thru active participation in the class struggle; but we cannot forget the fact that the backbone and brains of the Russian Communist Party is still the old Bolsheviks whose theoretical education at no time was neglected even during periods of intensive action.

A Communist party and a Young Communist League without a complete leadership versed in the theories of Marxism and Leninism is worse than a ship without a rudder; for the driving force of our enemies, the capitalists is more deadly than the rigors of the sea and of the wind.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

The Adventure of Johnny Smart Or A Lad in the Russian Revolution

Johnny Smart was a carpenter's apprentice. He was a husky young boy, with a sharp prominent nose, and lively blue eyes. He had the reputation of being the greatest mischief maker of all the boys in the factory.

Today Johnny was excited. It seemed as if the fear which hovered over the city, this foreboding of something evil and inevitable, had crept into Johnny's blood.

Since early morning, streams of people were leaving the city; an unexpected advanc of White Guards had forced the Reds to abandon the city. Long trains of wagons, piled up high with furniture, boxes of all sorts, with food and ammunition, passed continuously thru the streets. Anxious drivers, their faces covered with sweat, kept whipping the horses to a faster pace. Here and there could be seen a Red Guard hurrying on some duty. Wounded were already being carried into the city; the sick and crippled dragged themselves painfully after the departing wagons. The street was a confused medley of rattling wheels and groaning wounded. Here and there a driver lost his head and began cursing his horse and his carriage and pitilessly beat his poor animal.

Volunteers For Secret Work.

Johnny had wanted to leave the city together with the other workers of the factory, but their leaders had ordered him to remain.

"Hey, where are you going, you young scamp? Don't you think we've got enough without being bothered with you. You don't have to be scared of the Whites. They won't hurt you. So you remain here."

Johnny saw that neither tears nor prayers would help. So he ran to the headquarters of the Young Communist League. He was a member of one of the Communist Children's Groups.

But there also they were too busy to be able to help him. The committee was standing in the corner, discussing excitedly and in low voices. Three young men were piling all the documents on the table, and burning them as fast as they could in the glowing stove.

"We can't trust the tobacco girls for our secret service work yet," Gregory was saying.

Johnny picked up his ears. Secret service work! He had already heard a great deal about it. It means something terrible and mysterious; one dared not sleep at home, and the White Guards burned the houses and hung the workers.

His older brother was caught in this work, and was now lying in prison—maybe they would let him try his hand at it.

"Comrades, can't I do something, too" Gregory looked at the little figure before him. "What, then," he asked.

"Can't I do secret work?"

The Whites Attack Village.

The young people burst into laughter.

"You! You're much too young. Why, you're still at your mother's apron strings."

Johnny felt hurt. He turned his back upon them sadly, and sat down on the window sill, pressed his face against the pane and fell into suffering silence.

In the street, the tumult had somewhat decreased; the crowd had grown less dense. There were fewer wagons. From the station little groups of Red Guards kept coming all the time, and a mounted officer would now and then rush down the street, with sparks flying from his horse's hoofs.

Beyond the city, the Reds and Whites were fighting. He could distinctly hear the guns and the loud thunder of the cannon. Now the cars passed by, followed by a few soldiers.

Suddenly, the first shell exploded in the street. The troops quickened their pace. Then a second shot. Now, the commands could be heard quite clearly. From many windows faces peeped in the direction from which they expected the Whites to be coming. On the outskirts of the city a bright flame sprang up suddenly.

"A shell must have hit its goal," thought Johnny, and he directed his entire attention to the fire.

After the Hand Grenades.

All the papers have been burned, and now the committee was preparing to leave the room, but Gregory stopped suddenly. He seemed to have remembered something.

"Boys! The hand grenades! We've forgotten to remove the hand grenades."

"Which hand grenades?"

"Those which were in Frederick's house."

"Well, it's too late now," Mark said despondently. "Frederick has left the city; and we can't take the chance of going to his house. Every one knows that he was a Communist and we would surely be recognized. The capitalist soldiers are already searching the streets for our comrades."

What could they do? The hand grenades had to be gotten at any price.

"Comrades, let me go. I am small and no one will think of stopping me. And I will bring you the hand grenades."

Gregory and Mark looked at little Johnny. "Well, all right. They are in Kronstad Street. The number, 27, first floor, to the right, under the bed. You bring them here."

Proletarian Song.

I'm a worker—and you're a worker—
We have our life—'tis without delight,
For ev'ry day the old world about us
Seems nothing but changing black and white.

And thru the monotony of our day
We've work and worry—no more have we.
The weeks come on and are gone away,
We seek for something but naught we see.

The years go by, and youth goes too,
We have suffered want and have naught to show.
I'm a worker and you're a worker—
We are building the Future, 'tis all we know.

OUR BOOK REVIEWS

Y'eave Ho! My lads—For a Sailor's Life.

Reviewing "The Sailor's Union of the Pacific," by Paul S. Taylor, Ph. D. Ronald Press Co., N. Y., $2.50.

To land lubbers, a sailor is a strange being. If we are romantic, the sailor becomes the embodiment of the spirit of adventure, romance and freedom. There is about him the tang of exotic lands, the fulfillment of many unfulfilled desires. If, however, we be prosaic, then the sailor is a drunken, good-for-nothing creature often seen hanging around wharves or lounging in dark hallways with some girl he has been fortunate enough to pick up. Strange, isn't it, how our conceptions of certain legitimate occupations have developed?

Seamanship is an occupation steeped in tradition, and seamen have for years been the sufferers of great economic and social oppression by virtue of that tradition. Dr. Taylor has presented to us in an exceedingly readable form a "dramatic account of the rise of American seamen to freedom and self respect." It is the story of a trade union in what would seem to be a distinctly unorganized industry, and the fight for a code of laws that would guarantee to the sailor, who for years has been bonded to his vessel in the name of ship discipline, the minimum of economic freedom—guaranteed to every worker—the right to leave his job.

"At best the old-time sailor's lot was a hard one. Sleeping and eating in a little black, ill-ventilated, poorly lighted, unfurnished hole called a forecastle, with a hard board bunk and a bit of straw or a cheap mattress, if he provided it himself, he lived a life of great physical discomfort." This sort of physical life at sea coupled with an unsavory life ashore at the mercy of "crimps" and scavenger boarding houses, and ending in being shanghaied back to the vessels—to start the vicious circle all over again—has been only one phase of the life of the sailor. The lack of economic freedom, the lack of protective legislation for the hazards of the industry, and the social stigma attached to the job—were all forces which finally made for organization on the part of the seamen of the Pacific Coast.

The recitation of the repeated attempts to organize, the destruction of these organizations by ship owners, crimps and even other unions in the course of jurisdictional disputes, reveal the natural process out of which trade consciousness develops.

The Sailor's Union of the Pacific came into being, however, and began its fight for the seamen of the Coast.

The culmination of the struggle for legal rights came only in March, 1915, with the passage of the Seamen's Act, which abolishes arrest and imprisonment as a penalty for desertion, created provisions for decent living conditions on the boat, and provided for some definite safety measures.—T. W.

Objective Conditions and Shop Nuclei

By HARRY GANNES

EXPERIENCE and history proves that the strength of a Communist organization lies in the predominance of the proletarian members within its ranks. There is abundant proof of this. Has not the Communist International time and again rebuked the weakness of the Italian and Bulgarian Communist Parties because of the preponderance of peasant elements? Zinoviev has more than once indicated the advantage that the German Communist party has in the vast number of proletarians within its ranks, even tho that party has been criticized for not developing its shop nuclei activities more rapidly.

The Grave Digger of Capitalism.

But this is no argument against the most intensive campaigns and activities among the peasant masses—in the United States the oppressed tenant and dirt farmers. Comrade John Pepper and others have shown the necessity of the work of the American party in the agrarian sections of the country. In a country that is half industrial and half agrarian in its population, facing realities, there is no doubt where the activities of the Communists must be directed. Yet the work among the industrial workers must predominate.

The grave diggers of capitalist society will be the proletariat, the unskilled workers created by the capitalist mode of production. Marx did not quibble about that. It is true that the peasantry and the aristocracy of labor (the skilled workers) might act as the pall bearers and the undertaker, but the most important function belongs to the lowest stratum of exploited workers, the proletariat, those who in the United States work in the basic industries.

This is nothing new for the Communist movement in the United States. For more than once has the slogan been issued, to the masses of workers! But the party has been laboring under handicaps imposed by an antiquated organizational structure that has prevented it from reaching the very section of the working class that must be relied upon as the motive force of revolution. Why? Because of the inherent development of capitalist society, the massing of large numbers of workers in industry and the disfranchisement of a vast number of these workers. Then, too, these unorganized workers have been forbidden the right and the means to organize in defensive economic organizations, trade and industrial unions.

Shop Nuclei Necessary.

John Edwards, in his article on "Shop Nuclei—The Only Road to a Mass Communist Organization," shows how the present structure of the party is incapable of enlisting the great number of unorganized workers and why the major part of our work reaches those organized into trade unions, for the most part the better skilled workers.

It would be well to direct our attentions to objective conditions in the United States so far as shop nuclei or organization is concerned. Heretofore, discussion has been on the conditions within the party; a necessary discussion.

The problem of shop nuclei deals mainly with the basic industries and the factories. There are according to the latest census some 12,000,000 factory workers (men and women engaged in manufacture). There is a total of 290,105 manufacturing establishments, divided as follows, outside of 179,676, which employ very few or no workers:

No. of Workers	No. of Factories
6 to 20 workers	56,208
21 to 50 workers	25,379
51 to 100 workers	12,405
101 to 250 workers	10,068
251 to 500 workers	3,599
501 to 1,000 workers	1,749
1,000 to 50,000 workers or more workers	1,021

The number of factories employing over 1,000 workers has nearly double since 1914. Except Germany, there is not a capitalist country in the world that has so propitious a background in industry for the formation of shop nuclei as the United States. It is conceded that there are difficulties in the matter of foreign born workers. But that will be taken up later.

The industrial development of the United States shows that the basic industries have been the magnets for the concentration of workers within particular sections of the country. However, politically, the workers have been divorced from their natural industrial concentration, and as a result some have lost sight of the shop as the basis for agitation.

Party Must Be Mobile Force.

A Communist Party must be a mobile force. It must be quick to act in emergencies; and its campaigns, based on the immediate as well as the ultimate needs of the working class, must be pushed with the speed that is commensurate with the change and crises of the daily struggles. History has developed that type of organization as a result of:

1. The industrial development of the capitalist system and the tendency to employ more and more workers under one roof or in one group, and,

2. The political formations assumed by working class power, typified by the shop councils (soviets).

It is impossible to conceive of the ultimate success of the Communist program, or even of lasting continued favor with the masses of the workers in the matters of every day campaigns, without some form of mass political organization with its basic units in the shop.

A Communist party based on the shop nuclei principle particularly has the advantage, among other things, of the facility with which decisions from the central executive committee are passed down to the basic organizational units which are in constant touch with the masses of workers—limited only by the size of our organization. Decisions and instructions, in this way, are transmitted with effect.

Within the American party we face a big question when discussing shop nuclei—our language federations. But when the shop nuclei question is understood in relation to the subjective conditions of the party and the objective facts of our industrial and political situation, we find that the formation of shop nuclei is the greatest help for the attainment of the ends sought by our federations in harmony with the central executive committee of the party.

Foreign Workers Predominate.

Let us see how the facts bear out the above statements. Fifty-eight per cent of the total number of workers are employed in American industries. Of the workers employed in the basic industries such as mining, iron and steel, meat packing and clothing, 60 to 70 per cent are foreign born. It can be said unequivocably that the protection of the foreign born workers in the United States is a problem of more than immediate importance for the Communist movement. How can our party best meet this duty?

In its shop nuclei resolution, just adopted, the Communist International rightly states:

"Under the reformist policy of the social-democratic parties, which endeavored to exert an influence upon the bourgeois government by means of the ballot box, it was natural that attention should be chiefly directed to the organization of voters. The organization, therefore, was based upon electoral divisions and residential areas."

So far as organization structure is concerned our present party is a whole-cloth inheritance of the socialist party. Our only difference is district organizations based on geographical territorial divisions, which is a weak concession to the needed complete reorganization and organization on the shop nuclei basis.

What does our present form or organization mean to the foreign born comrades within our ranks and those who are not in our organization but who are miserably exploited on the job?

The foreign born section of our population cast 11 per cent of the total vote in the last national election, which means 89 per cent of them are disfranchised. Any organization based, as the Communist International says, on the "organization of the voters" is prevented from carrying on real Communist activities. And the foreign born workers suffer mostly thru the ineffectiveness of our present organization structure. Our foreign born comrades, therefore, should be in the front rank in the demand for a sensible, yet rapid, organization and reorganization of the party on the basis outlined by the Communist International—the shop nuclei.

Unimpaired Language Groups.

Would the shop nuclei impair the necessary work among the language groups of workers within the industries? An examination of facts prompts an emphatic "No!" In the needle trades, for example, we find a preponderance of Jewish and Italian workers. The change would in no way interfere with better and more effective Communist language work within the needle industries. We find Poles and Negroes almost exclusively employed in the Chicago stock yards. How will this interfere with the aims of our present federations? Will it not be rather the best means of advancing these Communist aims? The steel industries and the mining camps are but a few other examples that carry out this idea.

The best interests of the foreign born workers can be protected on the job where they are bitterly exploited and where they completely lack direction and organization. It is for the Communists to give these real proletarians leadership; and that can best be done in a Communist manner by transforming our basic organization unit to the shop.

Summing up: We find that objective conditions in the United States offer monumental arguments for the shop nucleization of our party. How shall that be done? What shall be our first step? That requires a special article. First of all we must recognize our problem, accept and understand the principle. The working out of the details is not such a hard matter. If our comrades persist in offering objections to the shop nuclei organization no plan will work, for that plan will be directed to comrades who are not yet convinced of the feasibility and the superiority of the type of organization that made the Russian revolution successful and will be more than instrumental in assuring the permanency of the coming German revolution.

Hunger-Revolt

By OSKAR KANEHL

You risk to eat
when we are hungry?
Panes are clinking on the pavement,
Rashly pushed in by hunger-fists.
Cases are breaking. Boxes are flying.
Barrels are rolling. Bottles are flowing.
Bags are sheding.
Hunger-hands are raking in abundance.
Unfeeling fingers are grasping for things, which else are only cautiously served
by silver-utensils.
Are throwing valuables pell-mell.
Are giving away. Are wasting Are flinging away, what doesn't go into the hunger-mouths.
Are eating with eyes, hands and feet.
Only once without fear and without resistance.
Only for this once nothing to lack.
Only once to taste, once to bite.
Only once to take away,
what isn't allowed to belong for us.
And why not?
And why not? We are hungry.
Only once to ourselves fill!
In the burgher-throat the rich morsel sticks fast.
Before his window the revolt is breaking.
In the police—presidency assembles
the guardian of republic.
From street away! (Away from street!)
Who hungers—will be shot!

The Growth of Tenancy In Agriculture

By OSCAR PREEDIN

UP to the present agricultural crisis tenancy in the United States was considerd as a merely temporary condition of individuals on their way to ownership of farms which they toiled. Growth of tenancy was represented as growth of agriculture on account of new farmers who did not possess sufficient means for immediate purchase of land and therefore were compelled to "work up" thru tenancy.

This explanation of tenancy was generally accepted. It found recognition by leading members of the old socialist party and was one of the corner stones of socialist party "farmers' program." A. M. Simons, chairman for many years of the socialist party special "Commission of Farmers' Question," wrote in accord with all bourgeois economists:

Decline of Owners Relative.

"The increase in tenants is accounted for by the new persons who are going into agriculture, and there is no possible way in which the statistics can be interpreted to show that there is any general movement in the direction of a transformation of farm owners into tenants." ("The American Farmer," edition of 1908, page 114.)

This theory recognized the high prices of land as one of the main obstacles which did not permit people with small savings to become owners of farms as easy as that was possible some decades ago. But the prices of land appeared for adherents of this theory only as some hill on the way of tourists—new farmers. They declared the way to ownership as passable, especially with the help of mortgages.

"The mortgage is an advanced step from tenancy. . . . The bridge between tenancy and ownership is the farm mortgage," says Ivan Wright in his book, "Farm Mortgage Financing."

Such was the representation of the question of tenancy by the pleasing sweet "theory of expansion."

The summaries in statistics of agriculture of United States since 1880, when the first census of tenure was here taken, up to 1910 continued to record increasing numbers of owner farms among still more increased numbers of tenants. Decline of owners up to 1910 was only relative.

This was used by the "theory of expansion" to represent itself as founded on facts. It seemed possible that tenants were "working up" to the positions of owners, that to the increase of owners contributed previous tenants and that increase in tenants was possible to account for "by the new persons who are going into agriculture."

Census 1910-1920.

The last census decade 1910-1920 was very favorable for agriculture in United States. Thru all this decade prices of farm products were on high level. Therefore, according to the current explanation of tenancy, increased number of owners, should be produced on account of tenants.

But exactly the contrary was found by the agricultural census of 1920. The following changes in number of farms by tenure were recorded:

	1910 Number in 1,000	1910 P. C. of total	1920 Number in 1,000	1920 P. C. of total	Increase (+) or decrease (—) in numbers, 1910-1920 in 1,000
Owners	3,949	62.1	3,925	60.8	— 24
Managers	58	0.9	68	1.1	+ 10
Tenants	2,355	37.0	2,455	38.1	+100
TOTAL	6,362	100.0	6,448	100.0	+ 86

How the appearance of 100,000 new tenants can explain a temporary condition on their way to ownership if at this same time 24,000 owners disappeared?

"Theory of Pauperization."

These facts proved very convincingly that "theory of expansion in explanation of tenancy was only a romantic invention. Some other "scientific treatment" of the question was requested. Therefore for the explanation of growth of tenancy in the atmosphere of present agricultural calamity very wide circulation is given to assumptions that tenants are produced in pauperization of owner farmers.

This "theory of pauperization" contains all the metaphysical elements of "expansion theory." It considers tenancy as just this same condition of actual farmers somewhere below the standard of farmers owners. . . . The "theory of pauperization" is in reality only reversed "theory of expansion": Instead of representing tenancy as a condition of group of people who come from undefined places with unsufficient means and are on a temporary stage to the positions of owners the theory of pauperization represents tenancy as a station of "degraded" owners who are touring in contrary direction. Theory of expansion was built on pleasing conceptions of agricultural prosperity but theory of pauperization is constructed exclusively on conceptions of depression. They are two songs of one petty creed: the first looks like a wedding march for demonstrative procession to husbandry of a new farmer, the second has to serve for funeral purposes.

As every funeral song so the theory of pauperization expresses some hopes about the "life after death." It does not admit that tenancy will stay here permanently. It sticks fast to the belief that the system of independent owners is the American system of agriculture. It finds only one thing wrong: the prices, not the prices of land, but the prices of farm products. The ridiculous talks and demands for higher prices are very convenient for all bourgeois "scientists" because they carry away the attention of people from existing class relations in agriculture. It helps them to hide all the constructed system of exploitation in agriculture behind the big piles of agricultural products. From the mass of products on market nobody can tell under what conditions and in what relations they were produced. A bushel of wheat cannot tell how much rent or mortgage dues, taxes were paid for the land on which the wheat was raised. But the prices of agricultural products can inform landholders how much rent their tenants must pay the next year.

Enormous Profits For Landholders.

Agriculture of United States is a nest where enormous profits are hatched for the class of capitalists and landholders. The growth of tenancy is here an expression of progress in separation of land ownership from actual farmers for the sake to separate and to appropriate part of produced values on the land for title holders.

The theory of pauperization wants us to believe that tenancy is here limited only to weak and poor farmers, that it establishes itself in that part of agriculture which is sinking down in an economic mire.

Is this true? Are the collections of land rent limited only by the masses of pauperized farmers? Is it true that tenancy grows only in economically destroyed farms?

If tenancy is an expression of economic weakness, poverty and destruction, then its fate is sealed and final victory and survival of owner farms is assured.

If to find the true position of tenancy and if to give full account of the spreading of tenant relations in the agriculture of United States we have to consider carefully that statistical material which is supplied by the census of 1920.

This census allows us to follow the development of farms by their tenure only in respect to the number of farms, acreage of all land, acreage of improved land and farm property.

Gain By All Tenure Groups.

Considering the acreage of farms—total farm land and improved farm land—we can see that increases of land were gained by all tenure groups of farms. They were in thousands of acres:

	All land in farms. Increase 1910-1920. Amount in 1,000 acres	All land in farms. Increase 1910-1920. Percent of of 1910	Improved land in farms. Increase 1910-1920. Amount in 1,000 acres	Improved land in farms. Increase 1910-1920. Percent of of 1910
In all farms	77,085	8.8	24,621	5.1
In owner farms	38,220	6.4	4,257	1.4
In manager farms	398	0.7	897	7.3
In tenant farms	38.467	17.0	19,467	12.5

The shares of farm tenure groups in expansion of agriculture were here unequal. From the increase of all land in farms tenants had very little more than owners, but from the increase of improved land in tenant farms came about four-fifths. Land holdings of owners increased nearly as much as in tenant farms but in expansion of cultivation of farm lands owners succeeded to do less than one-fourth of that what was done by tenants.

Average Acreage.

(This does not give any justification to the "theory of expansion." Why? To explain this to A. M. Simons and to other bourgeois economists and historians is as hard a job as an Irishman in the city of New York had with statistical misconceptions of his devoted wife who expected her third child and was greatly excited just because "the statistics prove that in the city of New York every third child is a Jew.")

The average acreage of all land per farm was changed during 1910-1920 in the folowing way:

	Acres per farm 1910.	Acres per farm 1920.	Increase or decrease in acres per farm
Owners	151.6	162.2	+ 10.6
Managers	924.7	790.8	—133.9
Tenants	96.2	107.9	+ 11.7

Of these were improved in average per farm:

Owners	78.5	80.0	+ 1.5
Managers	211.9	193.0	— 18.9
Tenants	66.4	71.6	+ 5.2

Only farms operated by managers were poorer in land in 1920 than they were in 1910.

Farms operated by owners and tenants increased in size. They both were richer in land in 1920 than they were in 1910 and with this expressed concentration of agriculture. To this tenant farms contributed more than owner farms. In these averages tenant farms still appear smaller than farms operated by owners. This difference is decreased: in total acreage it was 55.4 acres in 1910, but 54.3 in 1920; in improved land, 12.1 acres in 1910, but only 8.4 acres in 1920. This shows that in land holdings owner farms still keep advanced position but in cultivation of land they are nearly on this same level as tenant farms.

Tenant Farms Increasing in Size.

Tenant farms appear small in averages of U. S. mainly on account of cropper and share tenant parcels in the South. In New England, Middle Atlantic and East North Central divisions tenant farms even in averages of the divisions are larger than owner farms. The sizes of farms were here: in 1920:

	Owners.	Tenants.
New England	104.9	107.9
Middle Atlantic	88.7	109.2
E. N. Central	99.8	126.0

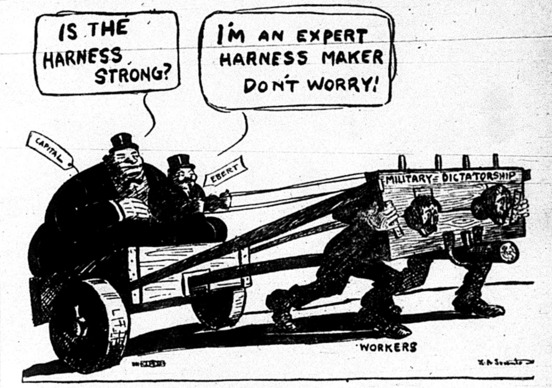
GERMAN SOCIALISTS SAVING FATHERLAND



CONDITIONS OF HEROISM

By STANLEY BOONE

THE bourgeois portions of France and the United States,—which create teachers, judges and journalists as well as a god in their own image, and which squeeze even out of the Twenty-third Psalm a little propaganda for their own perpetuity,—are strangely afraid of their heroes.

Today after 132 years bourgeois France dares not look Danton in the face.

It is 132 years since August 10, 1792, when the sections of Paris rose to put Louis XVI and his family in the tower of the Temple. And it is from that day that the present bourgeoisie of France date their fortunes, whether millionaires or petty shopkeepers who hope to be millionaires. Yet recently there have appeared three new books by French bourgeois pseudo-historians or biographers which repudiate Danton and the other Eighteenth Century creators of French private property.

These books, only a part of the annual crop, repudiate not merely the methods of the Jacobins but the public and private morals and purposes of the revolutionary creators of the French bourgeois state. To form a parallel in this country it would be necessary to denounce George Washington as an adventurer, the members of the Boston Tea Party as criminals "having no regard for law and order" and the "Sansculottes" of Valley Forge as hoodlums. And in the United States men have been shot for less.

Bourgeois History.

One of these three volumes is "The Dauphin", by George Lenotre, translated by Frederic Lees. Mr. Lees, according the "Who's Who, 1921", is an English journalist residing in Paris and Italy who has been made an "officier de l'instruction publique" by the French goverment, in recognition of his efforts in furtherance of the Franco-British entente cordiale.

The two other volumes are "Danton", by Louis Madelin, and "Mazon Roland", by Mrs. Blashfield.

"To hold in their possession and molest at leisure the King descended from so many kings and the beautiful Queen of the Trianon, what a voluptuous and depraved godsend to men naturally hateful of all beauty and nobility," says Mr. Lenotre in "The Dauphin", referring to the French revolutionists and especially to the Paris members of the Left or Mountain Party.

Of course this volume is converned primarily with the mystery of the disappearance of the executed king, while he was a prisoner in the Temple tower, but the story is exploited to the disadvantage of those who deprived him of the privileges of tyranny. Mr. Lenotre is the author of six other volumes dealing with similar details of history.

Royal Heroines and Heroes.

Referring to Marie Antoinette, in the chapter entitled "The Temple," Mr. Lenotre continues. "The repeated blows of relentless misfortune were necessary in order that dignity, resignation, greatness of soul should compose for the prisoner of the Temple an imperishable diadem more imposing than the crown she had just lost."

And perhaps the crowning example of Mr. Lenotre's point of view is in the following passage, referring to the captivity of the Dauphin himself: ". . . we shall recognize perhaps that it was not a simple episode of the great revolutionary drama but that it formed the basis and texture of it, unknown even to those to whom the parts were distributed."

It is unessential to quote from Madame Roland's memoirs. The memoirs and the letters are everywhere. She grew; had her home with her futile husband, who rose and fell early as an inconsequential minister pro tem; had her lover, Buzot; had her jealous quarrels with the great revolutionists, for whom her husband should have been chief clerk; and died, a counter-revolutionist. She was a counter-revolutionist not so much against what was accomplished as against only the men in France by whom accomplishment was possible. Of course Madame had a right to objections, which were especially directed at Danton, whom she is reported to have found, ". . . ferocious in face and probably in heart."

We may regret, in view of her intentions to be of use to her country, without sharing Carlyle's surprisingly naive enthusiasm for her, that she had to die on the guillotine. But the judgments which she delivered against her contemporaries are not, therefore, sound or vitally interesting, especially since her favorite aversion, Jacques Danton, came nearer than anyone else to being personally as magnificent as the revolution itself. It is because such men live as product of social farces, even today, that revolutions are both probable and worth while. It is also because of the stubborn rancor of persons like Madame Roland that such men have sometimes to die. And it was so useless in her case, fos Madame, since she died before Danton, and gained, therefore, only martyrdom when she would have preferred revenge.

The Eve of Action.

Danton spoke at the club of the Cordeliers the evening of August 9. When he finished speaking and went out into the night the great bell of that former Franciscan prayer hall began to toll. The sound was taken up by other bells. It was the tocsin of insurrection, the midnight summons to the insurrectionary commune, an organization which in an inspiration that was largely Danton's, had been forming all that day in the forty-eight sections of Paris.

The City Hall was entered and occupied, the existing administration of Paris walking out with little resistance. The mayor alone was retained by the illegal representatives then in power.

Doubtful of Danton.

Supporting this movement were armed troops, conspicuous among them being the contingent from Marseilles, which had marched to Paris on its mission unmolested. Non-committally the Marseillaise declined an invitation to accept quarters with the conservative national guard and went instead to the Club of the Cordeliers.

On the tenth, the insurrectionary commune demanded and obtained from the astonished and vacillating Assembly the imprisonment of the king and queen. France, for a while at least, was a Republic, and thereafter the capitalists were free to exploit the proletariat which put them in power.

M. Madelin's study of Danton tells this story and the story of Danton's entire career in great length and in good style. M. Madelin is nearer an appreciation of his subject than either of the other two. He has written a book worth having, for both reference and inspiration. But even M. Madelin is inclined to doubt. He shrinks from wholly embracing this Danton whom he nevertheless admires. There is noticeable in his narrative the commonplace bourgeois fear that a contemporary proletariat and peasantry may assume from the past that for Danton, as for Washington in the United States, the path to his position of historic importance was the path of unmitigated revolution.

The French bourgeoisie thus do their best to make the heroes of their great revolution venal, insincere, brutal, or merely insignificant. If they do not make specific charges, the bourgeois authors resort to innuendo. Being certain they were not respectable men, the nearest approach, in works of this kind, to an acclamation of the forerunners of the present bourgeois society in France is a confession of an inability to decide whether the Jacobins were even honest men. That is the nearest these cowardly or sly moderns will permit themselves to approach to Danton, Robespierre, Marat, St. Just, Cornot, Desmouslins, several women revolutionists and the rest . . . the result of these cowardly and malicious tactics being in that case the maledictions elsewhere freely borrowed from the vindictive memoirs and embalmed gossip of Madame Roland, that parlor revolutionary of the Gironde, go as uncontested in popular circles as if nothing at all in addition to them had ever been written.

France and America.

There is a curious contrast between these characterizations of the Jacobins and the distortions practised on the reputations of the heroes of the American Revolution. In this country the memories of Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and others have been socially useful insofar as they could be exploited by parents and teachers to assist in the discipline of children. In this country children have been growing up in the belief that George Washington became president chiefly because he would not tell a lie to his father. The implication of this myth, which has only recently begun to decline in favor, is that if George Washington had deceived his father in the matter of the cherry tree he would never have gotten very far in life. The myth of the cherry tree, in which little George confessed, "Yes, father, I cut it down with my little hatchet," was fortified by the stories of the crossing of the Delaware and the hardships of Valley Forge. Children must not be allowed to assume that Washington was a molly-coddle even if he did tell his father the truth!

Rebels of Their Day.

And yet the men of the American Revolution, no less than the French revolutionaries, were grimly militant rebels who overthrew their king, insofar as King George III had anything to do with their own lives. The Americans had no feudal aristocracy to disperse but they flew instead in the face of an empire tradition. It may be assumed that the American revolutionaries were potentially regicides. Even in revolutionary France the execution of the royal family was not originally a part of the Republican program. The French Republican program was not clarified until three years after the Bastile fell. Altogether the French Revolution was the younger European cousin of our own. On the site of the Bastile the French have dedicated a tablet to Thomas Paine.

Sorrow is not exactly what a man feels in contemplating the cowardice, the hypocrisy, the conceit, the senility and the intellectual torpor which gave rise to the making and perfecting of the myths and accessory falsifications, myths either emasculated or vicious, in the shadow and venom of which the rising generations have to grow.

Useful Tradition.

It has taken less than 150 years in the United States for the increasingly parasitical bourgeoisie to appropriate their ancestral past to their own ends. But in all that time there has been no structural economic or political change in this country to influence the growth of these propaganda myths which we now have. The Civil War was a national upheaval but it was a bourgeois war, anachronistic in its abolition of slavery. And the contrast between the American and French propagandic biographies and historical studies is undoubtedly largely due to the changes which, on the contrary, have taken place in France since the work of the Jacobin revolutionists was done.

After the French Revolution came the Thermidorian reaction, followed by the Directory and the first Empire. And after the first Empire state came the two later Empire states, one under Napoleon I and one under Napoleon III, in addition to the three intervening restorations of the monarchy, under Louis XVIII, Charles X and Louis-Phillipe. Each of these periods left its influence on the transmitted accounts of the revolution.

Falsifying the Record.

To escape political imprisonment at the hand of one or another of the succeeding emperors or monarchs, perjuries were committed by men and women who had reliable accounts to give, while the official reactionary spokesmen, either in obedience to or in support of a government censorship, poured forth their speeches and their books in defamation of their great predecessors.

Napoleon I saved a part of the fruits of the revolution by organizing France against any permanent return of the Bourbons. Nevertheless, he seemed to find it to his advantage, as the imperial savior, to smother and bury away from the public gaze whatever was glorious in the events out of which, as a brilliant artilleryman, he grew. To the same end there was muckraking into the lives of the men and women of the Jacobin Club, many of whom as a consequence have had to stand or fall, in the estimation of posterity, in proportion to their reputed respective abilities to hold a cup of tea in a refined Girondian or royalist salon.

Betsy Ross, of the United States, is idealized. Whatever her character was in fact, her reputation today has been so manufactured that children may safely be allowed to love her. But Theroigne de Mericourt, a young Parisian Mother Jones of 1789, is held now to have been less patriotic, in the sense of that day, than "immoral." Thus in France the heroes are not preposterously made angels or saints, and claimed by the bourgeoisie as something far less than they really were. They are even more preposterously burned in adjectival effigy, by those who are afraid even of their ghosts, and are not claimed at all.

To Potash and Perlmutter

By MICHAEL GOLD.

Aha, Potash and Perlmutter, so we see you again,
This time in real life, you cute comical partners in the cloak and suit trade!
No more pinochle playing, no more funny Yiddle talk, no more quaint business methods,
No more busting up the partnership and making up again ten times a day,
No more pathos, love, magazine plotting,
Potash and Perlmutter, SHOLEM ALEICHEM, so you are here again!

* * * *

OY, WEH IS MIR!
Can this be little fat soft-hearted Mawruss Perlmutter,
And is this the bluff, crude, good-hearted Abe Potash?
And is it a wintry Chicago street, and are the partners angry?
Are their quaint Hebrew faces mad with rage as they slug a little Jewish girl with blackjacks,
And help the Irish cop step on her face, and twist her arms, and knock her senseless?
Is it Abe who curses her as she is taken off in the patrol wagon?
Is it Mawruss, the tender husband and father, who pats the Irish policemen's shoulder and rewards him with a cigar?

* * * *

Yes, it is you, Potash and Perlmutter.
Yes, you are here again, you have stepped from the stage, washed off your clown's masks, and revealed the wolfish fangs and murderous faces.
Yes, it is you speaking the lines of real life, confessing all that your author would not tell us.
Yes, we know you now, Potash and Perlmutter, and exactly how you run your quaint business.

* * * *

Listen, Potash and Perlmutter, Dealers in Cloaks and Suits, and Sluggers of Girl Workers,
We will remember what we have seen, gentlemen.
We will yet redeem the proud race that brought forth Jeremiah, the people's prophet,
Moses, the leader of slaves, Jesus, the rebel, and Marx, Trotzky, Liebknecht and Heinrich Heine.
We will go back two thousand years and find the smooth pebble and sling of David,
The sword of Judas Maccabbee, and Bar Cochba's martial wisdom,
We will remember you on that day, we other Jews,
We will remember all our dear blood brothers, Messrs. Potash and Perlmutter!

Education in Soviet Russia

By JULIET STUART POYNTZ

NOWHERE does the transforming effect of the proletarian revolution show itself more clearly in Soviet Russia than in the field of education. The concentration of political power and economic control in the hands of the working class has brought about a complete change in the aims and methods and content of education.

Russian education has advanced with one bound from a pre-feudal condition to the very forefront of modern civilization. The new society of workers and peasants has developed a system and theory of education which uses the latest results of scientific research in every field and applies them without the trammels of commercialism and individualism which have held back bourgeois society. The spiritual revolution in Russia is no less remarkable than the economic and political revolution.

The first task of the young Soviet government when it came to power in October, 1917, was to remodel elementary education according to Socialist ideals and to attack the universal illiteracy which had been left as a legacy by the obscurantist Czarist regime. New schools were founded thruout the country and numberless "first-aid stations," libraries and reading rooms in the villages with teachers for adults, while in the towns cultural and educational clubs and classes for adult workers sprang up everywhere and flourished. This gigantic work of propaganda and enlightenment was undertaken by the Soviet government working in conjunction with the Communist Party, and its fruits are shown in the raising of the cultural level of the whole Russian nation in the short space of seven years and in the face of the enormous difficulties created by the famine and the civil war.

Illiteracy on the Wane.

The progress of the struggle against illiteracy is shown by the figures published in a report on Education in Russia issued by the government in 1922 on the basis of the results of the census of 1920. An interesting comparison is made between the conditions in that year and in 1897, which may be taken as a typical year of the old regime when the educational efforts were practically stationary. The number of men who could read and write increased during this period from 318 per thousand to 409, of women from 131 to 244, and for every thousand of the whole population the number of literates rose from 223 to 319. In 1920 338 of every thousand of the population in the country below the age of 18 were able to read, in the cities, 603. In the next age class up to forty years, 425 per thousand of the country population and 791 of the city population were able to read. Between 40 and 45 the relative figures were 215 and 550 and over 45, 326 and 661. This is a remarkable record of enlightenment for the short period of existence of the Soviet government, but Lenin, who was never willing to let communism rest on its laurels or even pause to congratulate itself in the struggle upward, pointed out the enormous work that still remains to be done in a statement during the 1922 All-Russian Congress of Soviets. "We find as a consequence, as was to be expected that we are still very far from the time when illiteracy will have entirely disappeared in Russia. We see too what a gigantic work we must still carry out in order to build a real structure of culture on the basis of our proletarian conquests."

Care of Children.

While the Socialist program has always included an enlarged responsibility of the state for the children, the consequences of the war and famine in Russia involved the Soviet state more deeply in this problem than would ever have been the case under more normal conditions. In addition to the orphans who were made helpless by the terrific losses of Russia during the great war were added those whose parents perished in the civil struggle and the war against capitalist intervention. Then came the famine, and Soviet Russia had thrown upon her hands millions more of helpless and starving children whose parents had perished of starvation. It was a gigantic undertaking to provide not only education, but mere sustenance for these millions of hungry mouths. There was an enormous strain on the educational machinery of the Soviet Republic, and often the needs of education had to be sacrificed to those of life. Vast numbers of new institutions had to be brought into existence to care for the children of the state. These had to be provided first, with the necessities of life, food, clothing and shelter, and then with education.

Children's Initiative Developed.

The extraordinary results of these efforts form one of the greatest evidences of the power and desire of a proletarian government to meet a great social vision and a great social crisis. The thousands of children's homes and colonies that have sprung up all over Russia in spite of their poverty and lack of all means for educational work yet show a spirit and tendency in their life and in their loving care of the nation's children which is totally foreign to the capitalist states with all their means. In visiting those homes one feels that man does not live by bread alone nor does education flourish by money alone, but by the great social vision and passion for human brotherhood that animates all the educational activities of the Soviet government. The children of Soviet Russia are different creatures from the poor warped products of capitalist civilization that are turned out by our schools. Discipline in the American sense of the word is unknown in the Russian children's homes and schools. When a foreign visitor enters the room the children cry out spontaneously and enthusiastically, "Sdrastvutye, Tovarish!" and run forward to meet and converse with the stranger who will have something to tell them about the comrades of other countries. 'I remember a beautiful scene in a home for small children in Ekaterinburg where the children were preparing a play to celebrate the birthday of the children's poet, Nekrasof. I came in with the local official of the Narkompros or Department of Education. The children ran forward with cries of joy and seized our hands and kissed them without the slightest trace of bashfulness or self-consciousness. These were comrades from somewhere in the world to them and that was enough to make them take us to their hearts. Many thoughts ran thru one's mind at this and countless similar experiences. In the spirit of the new collective homes for children in Russia a new race is being bred, a new type of human being who is adapted to the new social system, who owes his existence and his loyalty to society and not to the family. "You can't change human nature," said the conservatives. But human nature has been changed, and changed fundamentally in Soviet Russia.

Aims of Education—Social.

The elementary schools of Soviet Russia have created a revolution in the field of pedagogical theory which will undoubtedly transform the entire method and content of education in other countries, once the barriers of capitalist control have broken down. The aim of education in Russia is social and not individual. Education is given not to enable some individual to climb above his fellows or to enjoy class privileges and perquisites but to enable him to contribute to the community. Much old academic rubbish that clutters the curriculum of capitalist countries is brushed aside, and education returns to the vital facts and needs of life. These are first of all economic, and the whole life of the Russian school centers around the problem of creating a new and more intelligent and social-minded society of workers and peasants in the next generation. The children are trained in the shop side by side with their comrade workman who imparts his technical knowledge to them and on the farm with the brother peasant who works with them on the land. Some children's colonies on the land support themselves entirely from the product of their own toil, and are robust, self-reliant, members of society at an age when the children of capitalist countries are still groping and dependent. These children's colonies will in many cases grow into adult co-operative peasant communties without the children being aware of the transition from childhood to maturity, for they are self-governing responsible groups from their earliest age.

Curriculum of Russian School.

The system of self-government is universal in the children's homes and schools and colonies in Russia. The councils of the children have great responsibilities and rights which cover the whole field of their life and activities from the problem of securing food and support to the working out of their own curriculum and the choosing and dismissal of their teachers. A child in the Russian notion of education is a smaller and younger member of the human species, but a complete human being with his own personality and rights.

The curriculum of the Russian school is vastly interesting. Such subjects as economics, sociology and anthropology, instead of being reserved for the university are taught to the youngest children. In many a school you will find beautiful models of the life of man in all its stages from the most primitive down thru the feudal society until today. These models are beautifully and artistically made of clay, wood, sand, moss, rags, feathers—anything, and the making of them must be of enormous value in developing the artistic abilities of the students as well as developing their historical and social imagination. Little tots of four and five in the kindergarten scrawl little pictures of life in the hunting and fishing stages of culture, and from that age on their economic education becomes more and more intensive and thoro, and is always related to their own problems of life.

Less Talking, More Doing—Motto.

The ideas of the greatest pedagogical thinkers, Spencer, Dewey, etc., have contributed to the educational theory of the Russian schools as well as Marxist theory and the practical needs of the peasants and workers' society. Arithmetic is not taught as the science of reckoning commercial profit and loss as in our capitalist civilization, but as social statistics. Children of seven and eight work out beautiful colored stastical diagrams illustrating their own life, their age, sex, parentage, social condition, the provisioning and economic problems of their own school, then of their town or community, and then of the Soviet society.

Less talking and more doing might be the motto of the Russian school. From their earliest infancy the children express their reactions to what they see or learn or experience not only thru discussion and writing but thru drawing, painting, modelling, dancing and music. The effort is always to develop the creative instincts of the child. And the results are often astonishing. Painting and drawing from young children that would do honor to an adult art school in western Europe. The children paint their own scenery for their school plays—when paints are to be had. They write their own plays and act them. They compose their own songs and dances and recitations. They make their own clothes. They make their own carvings, toys and decorations for their Christmas trees. They paint the pictures that adorn the walls of their childrens' homes, they ornament the furniture and embroider the linen and beautify everything around them until they make a poverty-stricken home look like a little bower.

Compulsory Decrease in Expenditures.

The new economic policy and the effort to balance the budget of Soviet Russia has caused entrenchment in all state expenditures, and the educational budget has been a heavy sufferer. It has as little as possible to work out the ideals of pure communism in the field of education then elsewhere. The number of elementary schools that increased from 63,743 in 1918, to 94,205 in 1920, has been reduced again under the pressure of economic necessity, and the support of schools and children's homes thrown to a great extent upon local authorities and voluntary organizations, the trade unions, the peasants' unions, the Red Army, etc. But the Soviet government and the Communist Party have their clear end in view and regard the present retrenchment as only transitory. With Russia's economic reconstruction and the improvement of industry and agriculture will come a cultural revival and a development of education that will mark a new spiritual era in human development.

Hymn (St. Catherine) The Faith That Is to Be

By G. W. HALE

Midst changing systems, fading creeds,
That fail us in our deepest needs
Our struggling souls refuse to rest
And call our present good the best;
Our eyes in rapture seem to see
A mightier faith that is to be.

Our fathers' faith we do not slight,
'Twas Truth's grey dawn across the night,
Yet on this world we trust will shine
Some larger beams of light divine;
As one by one the shadows flee,
We seek the faith that is to be.

A faith where truth shall not be feared,
But to it temples shall be reared.
Where beauty unashamed shall dwell
With goodness, and its secrets tell;
Where love shall reign supreme, and we Shall live the faith that is to be.

The Poor Fish Says—Communists are always howling that there is no longer an opportunity to make money in America. Nonsense? Why, Harry Thaw is crazy and yet he's earning thousands daily in a bug house.

DINNER PAIL EPICS

By BILL LLOYD

I see that while we guys is toiling, the politicians' pot is boiling. For now we have the open season when folks is sed to use their reason in voting to pick candidates to make up the November slates.

With his old party on the rack, our Cal is out for a comeback. He thinks the people otto see the worth of mediocrity. And Hiram Johnson, he is fighting to set his rod to ketch the lightning. Then son-in-law, Bill McAdoo, has got his lightning rod out, too, and having quit Doheny's pay he hopes to win election day. Al Smith, who sez that he is wet, won't get bootleggers' votes, you bet, but his campaign will likely hear from those who like light wine and beer.

When oil is sed, one thing is sure. We needn't look for any cure from either Rep. or Democrat; the recent scandal's spilt the fat. It's sure Big Biz is out to rule, tho they don't teach such things in school. When they can't win by waving flags, they pack some money in their bags, and then same candidate is sought who can be leased for four years or bought.

WE WANT A CLASS CANDIDATE.

In the coming presidential elections we want a candidate of a clean Farmer-Labor Party. Hence, Boost the Convention of June 17th!

HARDING KIN DOPE TRAFFIC AID

CAN'T BREAK STRIKE WITH INJUNCTIONS

Chicago Labor Delegates Told It Won't Be Allowed

"The injunction against picketing cannot under any circumstances be permitted to destroy the garment workers' strike, and it will be carried thru to a finish in the face of continued police brutality," Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, told the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday.

Who's the Goat?

Mayor William E. Dever has informed the "Committee of Fifteen" that if they can produce eye witnesses to the police brutality he will have any officer thus exposed dismissed from the force, but meanwhile the injunction is costing the unions thousands of dollars and the "Committee of Fifteen" reports it does not know what further action it will take.

"We will show Dudley Taylor and Judge "Dennie" Sullivan that the garment strike cannot be broken by injunctions," said Perlstein. "In all my long strike experience I never saw such police brutality in any city as I have in Chicago in this strike. This is not an ordinary strike; it is a very bitter struggle—a war."

Fight Thru Season.

Before the week is out over $100,000 will have been put up on appeal cases alone, according to Perlstein. "The season ends in a few weeks and a slack period of six weeks begins," he said, "but we have decided to carry the strike thru the slack season if we have to. We cannot permit, under any circumstances, the injunction to destroy the strike."

The mayor has been presented with many instances of specific police brutality, the "Committee of 15" reports. He has been confronted with the names of strikers badly beaten up, the names of the offending officers, the location and time of the manhandling, and the committee has many eye-witnesses to these inhuman scenes. But the mayor, according to the report, submitted to the Chicago Federation of Labor by Chairman Anton Johannsen, of the "Committee of 15," has asked that these eye-witnesses be produced and then he will dismiss the officers involved.

Cut Out the Sabotage!

It is not known what or who is back of the fact that these eye witnesses, who are very willing to testify to police cruelty, have not been produced. The fact remains that the names of the eye-witnesses demanded by the mayor are in the hands of the "Committee of 15," by their own admission. It is also a known fact that the police are daily breaking the law at the instance of the garment bosses.

"We told the mayor that we had the eye-witnesses," Johannsen reported for the "Committee of 15," "when the proper time comes that that kind of witnesses are wanted we can produce them. I don't know what action will be taken."

Mayor Dever admitted to the "Committee of 15" that he had very little control over his force, and it seems that the demand for the production of eye-witnesses to police brutality is just an excuse by the mayor to stall the strikers off until the strike is over. It seems that the "Committee of 15" has fallen, willingly or unwillingly, into the trap.

"You know it is not easy to enforce police discipline," Mayor Dever is reported by Johannsen to have said. "The average cop has a peculiar idea that my administration or any other administration is sympathetic to the employers."

"And you can appreciate if you have ever been thru a strike," Johannsen added to the mayor's admission, "where the mayor got this idea of partiality to the employers."

Plenty of Evidence.

"Go down on Market street," Johannsen said, "if you want to see the police breaking the law. They do it every day about 4:30, when the pickets are herded into a waiting patrol wagon so that the scabs can come

Workers! Farmers! Boycott the Primary Election of the Capitalist Parties

WAGE earners and farmers of the state of Illinois should refuse to participate in the selection of candidates for the capitalist tickets at the primary elections, Tuesday, April 8. These candidates, be they so-called "good" men or "bad" men, are nothing but the servile tools of the bosses. They are members of the gang which looted the resources of the nation, exposed thru the Teapot Dome oil scandal, the aircraft scandal and the veterans' bureau graft scandal. They are the upholders of the present corrupt system of government, running on a program to maintain that system. They have no program for the industrial workers and mortgaged farmers.

Workers and farmers of Illinois, these candidates are the chosen representatives of your enemy class, whether they be under the special protection of the Chicago Tribune or the Hearst papers. To pledge your support to any of those is to help maintain reaction, to help maintain the vicious system of anti-labor injunctions and to drive the farmers from the land.

Inconsistency of Labor Fakers.

The inconsistency of some of the labor leaders who today support Small for governor defies description. Four years ago when he was elected governor he was on the unfair list by action of the Central Labor Council of his own home town, Kankakee. John H. Walker, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, at the time stumped the state in an effort to show that Len Small was an anti-labor candidate. That he used all the tricks known to him to loot the state treasury, is a well known fact—here we only need to mention that but 2 per cent of the allotted 10 per cent of the packing house bonds went into the state treasury. The difference between Len Small and those exposed thru the Teapot Dome oil scandal is only a difference of degree. Certainly the Illinois workers and farmers can have no preference for this candidate as to any other capitalist candidate. The treacherous labor leaders may have their own personal interests at stake.

Nothing can be gained by the workers and farmers of the state of Illinois in tomorrow's capitalist primaries. They should stay away from the polls and as a next step unite their forces for political action independent of the old bosses' parties. The existing Farmer-Labor Parties should be compelled to unite with the other forces of labor to put up a united labor ticket for the state elections Nov., 1924, and for the establishment of a real class Farmer-Labor Party which will unite with the forces of workers and farmers meeting in a national convention in St. Paul, Minn., June 17th.

Labor Must Rule.

Labor must thru its own instrument place its own representatives in power and control the actions of such representative. Labor must stop currying favors from capitalist politicians—their common enemies.

The Workers Party of America is firmly committed to such program of unity of action and will work ceaselessly for its realization!

Stay away from tomorrow's capitalist primaries!

Help unite the forces of industrial workers and farmers thru a representative class Farmer-Labor Party.

This is the only consistent and effective protest to the present governmental corruption, to the injunction laws and to the proposed "Cossack" State Police—District Executive Committee, District No. 8, Workers Party of America, Arne Swabeck, District Organizer.

Homestead, Pa., Steel Mill Worker, Wages Too Small, Forced to Give His Three Children Away

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HOMESTEAD, Pa., April 6.—Andrew Kartez offered to give his three small children away because his meager part time wage as a laborer in a mill is not enough to keep them in comfort.

Kartez attempted to place an advertisement in a paper here reading: "Three fine children to be had for the asking by any person who will promise to provide for them."

Since the death of Kartez's wife, the father has been caring for Jennie, 11, Andrew, 7, and Mary, 4.

Wheeler, Weeks, Ryan and Standard Oil

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE army aircraft scandal in which Secretary of War Weeks was involved when he was discovered attempting to conceal documents representing five years of investigation and containing damning evidence of theft running into hundreds of millions of dollars in the aircraft department, is the most dangerous exposure for the American plunderbund of those made to date.

John D. Ryan, head of the Anaconda Mining Company, chairman of the board of directors of the Montana Power Company, director of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company—all subsidiaries of the Standard Oil Company—was head of the Aircraft Corporation during the war.

A billion dollars was spent and of the 247 airplanes built and sent to the western front not one was serviceable. Edward Rickenbacker, well-known American aviator, now head of the Rickenbacker Motor Company in a series of syndicated articles written shortly after the armistice, characterized these airplanes as "flaming coffins."

But—the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company got for a song 38 miles of standard roadbed, built with government money, by the labor of army engineers, officers and enlisted men, running thru the heart of the richest belt of spruce timber in the state of Washington. The road was built ostensibly as an emergency outlet for spruce timber but not a foot of timber was hauled over it during the war.

Ryan's Mussolini.

John D. Ryan appointed Colonel Disque, a former warden of a Michigan penitentiary, as labor director—a miniature Mussolini.

By his orders war was waged on labor unions in the lumber industry and it was under his direction that the timber-baron owned Loyal Legion of Loggers was organized. Colonel Disque played no favorites. He fought the remnants of the Timberworkers Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and the Industrial Workers of the World impartially but as the latter organization was by far the strongest and most militant their membership suffered the most.

A reign of terror, organized with the military forces as a basis, was instituted. The military, directed by Disque, cooperated with the gunmen of the timber-barons and more than one organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World disappeared mysteriously in the wilderness of the Pacific Northwest, to say nothing of the dozens that were beaten and jailed.

The timber-barons were jubilant. Ryan and Disque warred on wages but not on profits. Spruce timber that was being laid down in San Francisco for $14 per thousand before the aircraft corporation was formed, jumped to $114 per thousand and kept going up. The wildest orgy of profit-making that the Pacific Coast had ever seen—not even barring the period of the Klondike rush—was the result.

Paying His Tools.

The looting was openly conducted and a matter of public knowledge. John D. Ryan was the target of the criticism from a dozen sources despite the censorship and President Wilson was forced to write a letter commending him to quell the storm.

Richard Kilroy, now editor of the Anaconda Standard—a peculiarly appropriate name for a copper-trust oil-trust sheet—was the publicity man for Ryan during the spruce orgy. To keep his mouth shut he was then given his present position at a salary of $1,200 per month with a five year contract. A short time ago he was fired by some minor officials of the Anaconda Mining Company. He got Ryan in New York by long distance telegraph and in twenty minutes was back on the job.

It now develops before the committee of which Senator Wheeler of Montana is chairman that Secretary of War Weeks was a member of the law firm of Hornblower and Weeks that sold $2,000,000 worth of government securities for the Bosch Magneto Company. Most of the documents that Secretary Weeks had purloined by an army officer related to frauds in the production of aircraft. The value of the loot is estimated by Lane, the investigator from whom the records were stolen, at $200,000,000.

Standard Oil Lackey.

John D. Ryan was in complete charge of aircraft production during the war and it is logical to suppose that the trail of corruption leads straight to the head office of the Anaconda Mining Company, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company and the parent company, Standard Oil.

It was the Anaconda Mining Company that was the head and forefront of the persecution of labor and radical organizations in the Rocky Mountain states during the war; that hounded Wheeler himself and tried to kill him politically and physically. Wheeler knows that Standard Oil owns the copper, coal, oil and timber of Montana.

It was John D. Ryan and his chief gunman, Colonel Disque, acting for the lumber barons, who led the war on labor in the Pacific Northwest and who sent to prison from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana members of the I. W. W. for bringing, thru organization, mighty improvements in the inhuman conditions under which the timber barons had forced the lumberjacks to labor. The Centralia raid, the torture and murder of Wesley Everest, the railroading of seven lumber workers to a living death in Walla Walla penitentiary, the smothering to death of 164 miners in the Speculator mine, the hanging of Frank Little in Butte, the deportation of 1,400 metal miners from

Bryan and Other Imbeciles Told Majority Vote Can't Kill Truth

ANN HARBOR, Mich., April 6.—William Jennings Bryan, arch foe of the evolution theory was assailed as "prehistoric" by Professor Stuart P. Sherman, of the University of Illinois, in an address at the student convocation here.

"Mr. Bryan wants to put religion on its feet," Professor Sherman said. "How does he propose to do it? By calling for legislative suppression of the most fruitful scientific theory of modern times. And the answer to that call takes the shape of mass meetings of 60,000 benighted bible students passing resolutions against the doctrine of evolution.

"A church or a university which attempts to suppress truth by a majority vote is not moulding characters but nursing hypocrites and imbeciles."

RESUME STRIKE CONFERENCE IN KANSAS TODAY

No Agreement in Sight Over the Week End

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 6.—Conferences attempting settlement of the strike of 35,000 coal miners in the southwest will be resumed Monday. No agreement was in sight when representatives of the union miners and employers recessed for the week end.

Liquidate Last Remnants of the Mexican Fascisti

MEXICO CITY, April 6.—The final remnants of the Fascisti uprising will be crushed within a short time, Minister of War Serrano said today on return from an inspection of the military front in the southeast.

The government now is preparing to send troops to occupy Frontera, Progresso and Chipas, Tabasco, Campecht and Yucatan, Serrano said.

No resistance is anticipated.

"All the petroleum regions are free of counter-revolutionists," Serrano said.

"Many supporters of General Cavazos, who has been leading guerrillas operating along the border of Hidalgo and Queretaro, are surrendering."

Cal Coolidge Still "Proposing" Aid to The Wheat Farmers

WASHINGTON, April 6.—President Coolidge has proposed to the recently created $10,000,000 agricultural credit corporation in the north west that it make loans thru the war finance corporation to aid northwestern wheat farmers to diversify their crops.

In a letter to C. T. Jaffray, Minneapolis, chairman of the credit corporation, he advocated such procedure as an "effective service to agricultural interests of the central northwest" and asked for an expression of the corporation's views on the subject.

Radio Fans Will Have To Pay More for Sets; Solons Decree

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Radio fans and Mah Jong addicts will have to pay something for the privilege.

Senate tax makers have cut taxes on automobiles and candy, but put 10 per cent levies on radio and mah jong sets. All radio sets costing $15 or more—which means most of those that are sold—will bear the 10 per cent tax under the provision inserted by the senate finance committee. All mah jong sets worth $5 or more must pay 10 per cent. It will just be added to the price, because the manufacturer or importer is to pay it.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Votaw, Brother-in-Law of the Late President, May Be Called in Prison Drug Probe

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Heber H. Votaw, superintendent of federal prisons and brother-in-law of the late President Harding, may be subpoenaed by the senate Daugherty investigating committee, in connection with testimony of William J. Burns and J. S. Dyche, former warden of Atlanta penitentiary, that he blocked an investigation into the drug traffic at the prison, it was said at chairman Brookhart's office today.

Votaw probably will not be subpoenaed until after the committee cleans up some of the "leads" on which it is now working but committee members said they expect eventually to summon him to explain why he stopped the drug investigation in the face of pleas by both Burns and Dyche that it be permitted to continue.

About 650 convicted violators of the narcotic laws were in Atlanta penitentiary at the time Heber Votaw, superintendent of prisons and brother-in-law of the late President Harding, had the warden, J. E. Dyche removed, according to Dyche's testimony to the Senate investigating committee. Mr. Dyche had repeatedly urged Votaw to send inspectors to work under cover and stop the "dope" traffic in the federal prisons.

Was His Palm Greased?

William J. Burns finally sent three detectives to work at Atlanta and their work resulted in the indictment of four guards for selling dope. Two other guards resigned before they were called on the carpet. Attorney-General Daugherty dismissed the cases of two of the indicted guards and the other two cases ended in jury disagreements.

Votaw came to Atlanta at the time, as Dyche's testimony shows:

Senator Wheeler—Now, about the time that these indictments were found, did you see Mr. Votaw?

Mr. Dyche—He came down there.

Senator Wheeler—And what, if anything, did he say to you with reference to the investigation?

Mr. Dyche—Well, unfortunately, senator, as I thought at the time, the matter kept getting into the papers and Mr. Votaw's objection seemed to be the publicity. He gave as a further reason that it disorganized things in the institution, of course. But there was nothing to that.

Passing the Buck.

William J. Burns also testified that Votaw had blocked the "dope" investigations in the federal prisons because the "higher ups" were about to be exposed. Burns testified that he had conferred with Daugherty at the time, but had not mentioned Votaw as the man who was responsible for stopping the inquiry. Burns explained that he could not produce the files of the narcotic investigation before the Senate committee because of "confidential" statements contained in them. He testified as follows:

Senator Wheeler—I understand you think it is the paramount duty of the government to clean up the dope situation and the trafficking in narcotics in these federal penitentiaries?

Mr. Burns—I certainly do.

Senator Wheeler—And the investigation in Atlanta into the narcotic situation was suspended over your protest?

Mr. Burns—Yes.

Senator Wheeler—Who stopped you in the investigation?

Mr. Burns—Well, my agents stated that Mr. Votaw stopped them.

Senator Wheeler—Now, did you take the matter up with the attorney general when he stopped you? (There was a long pause.)

Mr. Burns—There was some conference with the attorney general. I think the attorney general sent for me and asked me about the situation.

Senator Wheeler—Yes, and did you tell him what a bad situation it was?

Mr. Burns—I told him what our agents had accomplished.

What's that, "Billy"?

Senator Wheeler—And you told him that investigation had been stopped by Heber Votaw, the superintendent of prisons?

Mr. Burns—No; I don't know that I said that. I supposed he knew that. Mr. Votaw saw the attorney general.

The deputy warden of Atlanta had sided with Votaw in opposing the "dope" investigations, but the United States attorney, Clint Hager, wanted to continue, Dyche stated during his examination. Votaw's orders won and the Burns' men left the penitentiary. Later Dyche was called to the capitol by the attorney-general and criticised severely about the "publicity" attending the "dope" inquiry.

Dope Traffic Still On.

Dyche said that he got the impression that the Washington "higher ups" wanted to "cover up." He stated that 8 or 10 should have been indicted. Leavenworth prison has 1,000 addicts, according to Dyche, and nothing has been done to stop the traffic.

Morgan's Big Bribe Fund Gives Poincare New Lease of Life

PARIS, April 6.—The chamber of deputies gave Premier Poincare's new government another vote of confidence, 327 to 201 this afternoon, this time on the subject of the proposed pensions bill.

It was an adverse vote on this measure by the chamber that defeated the last government and caused Poincare's resignation.

Today's vote was the chamber's second expression of confidence in the new government within 24 hours.

MacDonald's Police Shoot Down Hindus In Strike in India

CALCUTTA, India, April 6.—Four mill hands were killed and 34 wounded in a serious riot today at Cawnpore. The workers were endeavoring to enforce their demands for an increase in wages when the police fired a volley into the mob.

JESS SMITH BECAME NERVOUS WRECK WHEN HARRY MADE HIM GOAT

WASHINGTON, April 6—Roxie Stinson, ex-wife and paramour of the late suicide, Jess Smith, partner in crime of Harry M. Daugherty, in an interview with Julian Street, declared that her ex-husband was all shot to pieces when he realized that the ex-attorney intended to unload the booze scandal on him.

Speaking of Jess Smith, Miss Stinson said:

"When he came back from the convention at Chicago, he told me and my companion how Harry Daugherty got the nomination for Harding, going at two in the morning to a room where a secret conference was being held and strong-arming it thru.

"In April Jess came home to Washington Court House and I saw he was in a highly nervous condition. Once, apparently under great stress, he exclaimed 'they've passed it up to me.'

"I knew what he meant. Some six months before there had been started quiet inquiries, instigated by politics, intended to involve the attorney-general and Jess in liquor frauds.

"Jess was terribly concerned about it, but Harry, with his usual coolness in big emergencies, let it slide off his back. Subsequent pressure and realization of what Harry Daugherty's attitude towards him would be, was the real cause of Jess Smith's suicide.

Daugherty-Pepper War Splits the Republicans

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Danger of real split in the party faced Republican leaders today as a result of the increasingly bitter quarrel between former Attorney General Daugherty and Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania.

Daugherty has issued a statement lashing Pepper in vigorous, fighting words for his Maine speech and warning G. O. P. leaders that he does not intend to be the butt of criticism for Republicans or Democrats.

Hears Knell of Death.

Daugherty declared that a "few more keynote" speeches like Pepper's would "sound the death knell of Republican success in the coming elections."

Daugherty traced Pepper's animosity towards him to his refusal to recommend the senator for solicitor general. He said that Pepper was unable to secure the endorsement of either the late senators Penrose or Knox of Pennsylvania for the office.

Pepper Sticks to Speech.

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—"Everything I said in my Portland, Maine, speech was said after careful thought and consideration. I have seen no developments since to cause me to think it necessary to add anything to it. I stand by everything I said."

This was the statement of Senator George Wharton Pepper here today, regarding former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty's attack on him last night in Washington, because of the Senator's speech before the Republican convention in the Maine City.

As to Daugherty, Senator Pepper declared he had nothing to say.

Regarding the rumor circulated in Washington that Daugherty and his political allies are preparing to desert the Coolidge standard, Senator Pepper declared that the former attorney-general is possibly in a position to know what certain men might do, but indicated that he had no knowledge that important political leaders are allied with Mr. Daugherty in such a move.

MAGNUS MIXES WITH OILY PARTY MACHINE OUTFIT

Fights F.-L. P. Position In Illinois

Magnus Johnson, who is supposed to represent the workers and farmers of Minnesota in the United States senate, has thrown himself into the Illinois political situation in the republican primaries.

The party that Magnus Johnson attacked in Minnesota as the party of the landlords, grain gamblers, bankers and food speculators, becomes in Illinois the stamping ground of this same "Magnus", one of whose achievements in Washington, D. C., is losing out in a milking contest.

U. S. Senator Johnson is in the republican primaries, in spite of the fact that the Cook County (Chicago) Farmer-Labor Party has officially called upon the workers and farmers to stay out of the old party primaries, and while the Illinois Farmer-Labor Party has labelled the republican and democratic outfits as "decayed to the core, and that the only solution is for labor and the farmers to have a party of their own".

Dodges Questions.

Senator Johnson tried to justify his action in lining up with the Jenkins-Small-Lundin political gangsters, who are said to have a deal on with the Ex-Governor Deneen forces, by giving his views to the DAILY WORKER in an exclusive interview.

When asked whether he would stay away from the corrupt politicians, or whether he would betray the farmers and workers who elected him to office, Johnson told the DAILY WORKER, "I am campaigning for the election of Newton Jenkins, a candidate for senatorial nomination on the republican ticket. True, both the republican and democratic parties are smeared with oil, but I believe in supporting a farmer-labor party only when there is a good chance for election."

Senator Johnson seemed more anxious to talk about himself than about what he has done to justify the support of the farmers and workers of Minnesota. Instead of talking about farm and labor legislation, Johnson was more interested in his milking contest with the Secretary of Agriculture, which seems to be Johnson's only bid for fame. Former supporters of the Minnesota senator are pointing out that he lost even that.

For Small Business Man.

Senator Johnson placed more emphasis on the small business men in talking to the DAILY WORKER, than he did on the farmers and workers who elected him. When a direct question was asked him about a party which really represented the workers and farmers, or if the Teapot Dome scandal showed that America is "class ruled" by the capitalists, he sidestepped by talking about "good-fellowship" and "philosophy". Whenever Johnson approached unsafe ground, he pulled himself back with the statement "The public is tired of standpatism and Coolidgeism, and I am a progressive".

"The business men are dependent on the farmers and workers for their trade and their existence", said Johnson, "and in my campaign in Minnesota, I had the support of the small bankers and small business men. Even the big business interests are not strongly opposed to the La Follette movement. They see the handwriting on the wall, and they know what is coming. Our enemies often call us radicals and some of them have even called me a Communist, but of course that is ridiculous."

The Cat Slips Out.

Senator Johnson in his zeal for the middle-class business men, belittled the idea of an independent labor party in this city which the militant workers are advocating, on the grounds that "It didn't amount to much and that all the labor leaders have indorsed the old party candidates anyway." Newton Jenkins, who was with the Senator, agreed with this statement. "Fitzpatrick, all the railroad unions, and practically every union official in the state have indorsed me for republican senator", said Jenkins.

Johnson admitted that La Follette seemed more interested in becoming a Presidential candidate on no matter what ticket, rather than lead a militant class conscious farmer's and worker's labor party. "La Follette will make a bid for the regular republican nomination", Johnson admitted. "However I believe Coolidge is sure of the republican nomination and in that case La Follette will have to run as a third party progressive candidate."

Our Reporter Goes Campaigning With Magnus Johnson In Spite of Walker, Foe of the Labor Party

Senator Magnus Johnson, the man of the people, the rip-roaring, tobacco-chewing Scandinavian "Theodore Roosevelt," has been in our midst. When interviewed by the DAILY WORKER he had just finished telling a crowd at the Western Electric Company's gates, at 48th Street and Cicero Avenue, that he was for a big soldier's bonus—he was no pacifist, you bet you—he was a patriot thru and thru.

It was a motley crew that the DAILY WORKER reporter, in the course of his duties, was forced to associate with in the ride back to town on the "L." There was Newton Jenkins, the intellectual, superior, cultured, English-welsh lawyer—suave and looking bored to death. He no doubt subscribes to Professor McDougall's theory that humans are divided into four distinct grades of intellects—and Jenkins is in the front rank of the highest caste.

Some "People" Dislike Us.

Then there was an ex-wobbly ex-hobo-hotel-keeper now connected with the Hiram Johnson campaign, shining in the reflected glory of a real, live Senator. Last but by no means last was Frank Walker, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, "from Stone's office", a stern, sour individual, with a crabbed wrinkled face, who took an immediate, unchanging and violent dislike to the DAILY WORKER reporter.

It was evident that Johnson was giving Jenkins a lesson in how to be an honest-to-god, handshaking, shoulder-slapping politician, and it was equally evident that Jenkins took no joy in the job. "Ah, Mr. Jenkins, said the Senator, "there's a soldier, see his soldier's button. Meet Mr. Jenkins, he's for a soldier bonus, you want to vote for him in Tuesday's primary". "How are you," said Jenkins phlegmatically, and he said no more, altho himself an "overseas" man.

Magnus looked at the republican senatorial candidate with obvious disaproval, and to show Jenkins how it is done launched into an impassioned plea for the reward of the faithful vets. Johnson's pose was somewhat shaken when a man in the surrounding crowd yelled out "All you farmers are no damn good, I wouldn't vote for you on a bet." Then ensued a rather undignified squabble during which Johnson said the heckler had no sense and was no good, to which the ruffled interrupter answered, "You're common, damn common, I don't want to talk to you, I'm a psychologist", and walked off in a huff.

Budding "Teddy" Good Actor.

The party escaped into a restaurant for some "coffee and", after "labor leader" Walker made an unsuccessful attempt to get rid of the DAILY WORKER reporter. It seems the chauffeur who brought the Johnson-Jenkins party to the industrial plant, had been as bored as Jenkins by the affair, for he slipped away before Johnson had finished his speech, and we were left to the tender mercies of the "Elevated" railroad.

The DAILY WORKER reporter thought he would remind Magnus, upon whom the mantle of Theodore Roosevelt had considerably descended that in this enlightened day women were also voters. "You are waiting on a very famous personage," he said to the waitress. "Meet Senator Magnus Johnson of Minnesota, the man who got licked in a milking contest with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace".

"But remember," said Magnus, affably, "He only won a newspaper decision. And besides he was born on a farm, and I never saw a cow until I was 23 years old." It was ever thus. Another idol shattered. The man whose reputation was built upon rural atmosphere. The man whose daily companions, were reported in the press to be cows—the man who rode into the senate on a cow's back, you might say, never saw a cow until he was twenty-three years old.

We were safely on the "L" at last, after Senator Johnson had repeated his formula, "I'm Senator Johnson of Minnesota, I'm campaigning for Jenkins in the republican primaries, Vote for him, he's a good man," to an Italian grade crossing watchman, and to half a dozen street corner loafers.

Ain't It Tough, "Frankie?"

Walker had made another unsuccessful attempt to shake the DAILY WORKER reporter as we bought our tickets, and tried to induce Jenkins not to pay the DAILY WORKER reporter's fare—"He won't give us any publicity, he's for a labor party," the "labor" man kept repeating.

The DAILY WORKER reporter talked to Magnus and "Newt" while Walker nursed his grudge against a labor party on the other side of the car, with the ex-hobo-hotel-keeper for company. The historic interview, given in another column, was on.

LABOR SKATE TRIED TO PROTECT MAGNUS FROM DAILY WORKER

Frank Walker, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, made an ineffectual attempt to save Senator Magnus Johnson, of the Farmer-Labor Party, who came here from Washington to advance the senatorial campaign of a republican, from the contaminating clutches of a DAILY WORKER reporter.

"Come over here with me, Senator", said Walker, breaking in on the DAILY WORKER interview.

"But I'm talking to a newspaper man".

"But he's not for us, Senator. He is from the DAILY WORKER. They haven't given us any publicity. They're for an independent labor party."

In spite of the fact that railroad "labor" leader winked and made significant faces at Senator Johnson, the Minnesotan refused to budge. Senator Johnson thought he had enough political experience to "get by," even with an advocate of independent political action without making a statement that would offend his republican associates.

Some mix-up. A Senator elected on a worker's and farmer's platform campaigning to have a republican nominated for the Senate, rebuked by a "labor leader" for associating with a man who believed in a militant labor party.

No wonder the DAILY WORKER is advocating a militant farmer's and worker's labor party that refuses to bargain with the corrupt politicians, or to elect leaders who "sell out" to corrupt politicians.

TAX BILL WILL BRING DEFICIT OF $47,000,000

Write Law on Senate Floor This Week

WASHINGTON, April 6.—A new tax bill—the one that finally will become a law—will be written this week on the floor of the senate. The senate finance committee has planned to finish its three weeks work on the measure, passed by the house.

The new bill, as finally passed, probably will provide for a 40 per cent maximum surtax instead of the 44 per cent of the house bill.

Central Block Organized.

A tentative agreement for this revision has been reached between progressives and democrats, who can control the senate.

The committee bill embodies the Mellon rates but even the most optimistic republican members of the committee have no hope that these will survive the senate in any essential detail.

Democrats could strike out the Mellon rates in committee and rewrite the bill before night if they wished.

Let Matters Rest.

With the aid of McCormick and use of a proxy for LaFollette, the Mellon rates could be killed, but this would raise a question of what rates should be substituted, resulting in a long fight, so the democrats have decided to let matters rest until the bill is reported out Monday.

The bill as it stands now is $47,000,000 short of raising the necessary revenue, according to Chairman Smoot.

DAUGHERTY PROBE TO EXTEND OVER 2 MORE MONTHS

Score of Witnesses Yet To Be Heard

WASHINGTON, April 6.—New strands in the tangled web of accusation being woven about former Attorney General Daugherty were being unravelled today by Senator Wheeler as the senate investigating committee rested from four weeks' labor.

In checking up on the witnesses and evidence yet to be heard, Wheeler estimated that at least two months more of open hearings were in prospect.

Go to Bottom of Mess.

"While we have had abundance of evidence ready for presentation for weeks, every day brings up new angles that we cannot afford to overlook," said Wheeler. "Now that we have started we must go to the bottom of what appears to be a rotten mess in the department of justice."

Each new evidence being gathered by Wheeler and a corps of assistants "ties in" with testimony already heard, and Wheeler predicted that more startling disclosures are yet to be made when open hearings are resumed on Monday.

Hear Score of Witnesses.

More than a score of witnesses subpoenaed at the outset of the hearings are to be heard. These include Secretary Mellon and Secretary Weeks—the former in connection with alleged liquor deals and the latter in connection with war fraud cases.

Howard Mannington, intimate of Daugherty, and Jess Smith, who lived in the "little green house on K street," is expectd back from Paris early next week. Another important witness yet to appear is Jap Muma, alleged "master mind" in the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films deal, which Gaston B. Means charged netted Jess Smith and his associates $180,000.

Wheeler, Weeks, Ryan And Standard Oil

Bisbee, Arizona, the innumerable crimes against the workers of the Northwest, can be laid directly upon the shoulders of John D. Ryan and the Standard Oil Company. Richard Kilroy, editor of the Anaconda Standard, who blackmails Ryan for a $1,200 per month job, has condoned these crimes a thousand times and boasts of Ryan's hatred of labor organizations.

Wheeler Knows Ryan.

Senator Wheeler knows that these charges are true. He knows that John D. Ryan is a crook and a murderer by proxy and he must know that it is now within his power to show to the masses of the American people the connection between the Standard Oil lackey, John D. Ryan, Secretary of War Weeks, the crimes of the war period, and the American government.

He has the greatest opportunity presented to him that was ever afforded a man in public life.

Will he hesitate to take advantage of it because John D. Ryan is a member of the democrat party, to which he belongs, and because John D. Ryan was appointed by President Wilson to the head of the aircraft corporation which spent over a billion dollars for 247 "flaming coffins" and made war, not on the kaiser, but on workers?

The real test of the senatorial investigations is now at hand. The investigators have broken thru the first line of defense of the big capitalists of the United States and the next step takes them into the offices of Standard Oil.

It is the irony of fate that two senators from Montana—the Treasure State whose inexhaustible natural resources, oil, copper, waterpower and timber have been seized by Standard Oil—should be in charge of the committees which, if they make public all the facts concerning the ownership of American government by oil and finance may do more to crystallize forces making for a mass political revolt than any other agency.

Tables Are Turned.

In 1917, 1918 and 1919 the Standard Oil and its subsidiaries put a price on Wheeler's head. Today he can deal them a blow that will shake to the foundations their political control and upon the decision he makes much depends. The mass movement of the workers and farmers is arising and will become stronger from year to year no matter what happens in Washington, but Wheeler himself must now choose between an opportunity for great service and the democrat party of Ryans and Rockefellers.

Fasting Cure Is Fatal to Man But Woman May Recover

DAYTON, Ohio, April 6.—Daniel Johnson, 61, who fasted 47 days in an attempt to cure himself of a serious stomach trouble, is dead after efforts to administer liquid nourishment failed.

His wife, who fasted 43 days in sympathy with him, is slowly recovering.

The aged couple were said to have followed rules for fasting in a magazine.

Johnson weighed 206 pounds when he started fasting. At his death he weighed 125 pounds.

Single Women, Getting Cheapest Wages, So Badly Housed That They Take to the "Easiest Way"

There are 300,000 women working in industries in Chicago, most of whom live in the rooming house district, or in clubs and society rooms. There are only 3,090 available places to house the single women.

In a speech before the Union League Club recently, Miss Marie Merrill, for eight years in social welfare work, pointed out the seriousness of the shortage of available homes for Chicago women who are in industry.

"Life is a dreary prospect for a woman who has no comfortable home," said Miss Merrill. "Women need a real home more than men. I have seen women come to the department of public welfare, down and out, without hope in life, and when we supply them with a home-like place, it is wonderful to see how they brighten up. One night in a comfortable home raises the hope of these women and gives them courage to go on. There are also many married women in industry, and for that reason it is absolutely necessary for the city to consider increasing its inadequate day nursery facilities."

Not Enough Rooms.

The rooming house facilities of Chicago are decidedly inadequate, especially the accommodations for women, was the conclusion of an investigation of the housing of non-family women in Chicago conducted three months ago by the Chicago Community Trust Company. The three principal rooming districts for women were investigated; those nearest the loop in residence neighborhoods on the North, South and West Sides.

The North Side rooming district west of State street was found to be "filled to overflowing with non-family men and women. Householders here don't have to advertise rooms in the papers. A card in the window brings several applicants within an hour." The Juvenile Protective Association in another survey, found five thousand women and ten thousand men huddled together in rooming houses in this ward.

No Place to Go.

The Community Trust survey says of the West Side rooming section, the 18th ward: "This is old Chicago. Old families who began to make the city great have gone, leaving the decaying mansions to be rented as cheap lodging houses." The Y. W. C. A. Industrial Service Center says of the southern part of this ward: "There were 50,000 industrial girls working within a radius of ten blocks. Last year the West Side residence of the Y. W. C. A. turned away 1,500 applicants, and many single women who applied at the other homes could not be admitted."

The Community Trust investigator says: "Furnished rooms in the 18th ward, in comparison with other rooming districts, have poorer bathing facilities, poorer furnishings, more rooms at grade C (the lowest grade listed) and furnish fewer laundry privileges."

Wages Low But Not Rents.

Only eighteen, or 6 per cent of the 300 rooms visited by the Community Trust investigators rented at less than five dollars a week. Rooms renting from 5 to 8 dollars comprised 26 per cent of those visited in the North, 71 per cent of those in the West, and 56 per cent of those on the South.

"Only a few single rooms were found to cost less than seven dollars per week, over 25 per cent cost ten dollars per week, and over 40 per cent were ten dollars per week or over."

In spite of these high rents, which were exorbitant considering that the single women renting them receive even lower wages than white-collar men clerks, the accommodations were found to be unusually bad. "Over 26 per cent of the houses inhabited by non-family women on the South Side contained bathrooms used by more than six persons, of both sexes. The same condition prevailed in 41 per cent of the rooming houses on the North Side, and 52 per cent of the rooming houses on the West Side."

City Neglects Workers Comfort.

The lack of method and of municipal supervision of the rooming houses of the city, makes life miserable for the single women. The low wages paid to women factory hands, clerks, stenographers and saleswomen, combined with the high rents and uncomfortable homes to make it difficult for Chicago's young women to keep off the "easist path." The city's neglect of the housing of its single women has been one of the main factors in the increase of prostitution, the Community Trust Company found.

The general living conditions were found to be wretched. Only 61 out of the 300 rooms examined were found to be cozy and fairly comfortable. The rest were shabby and poorly furnished. Eighty-five out of the 300 were found to be "the sort of a place we are forced to accept because of the great range of needs we are asked to meet," which means that the women are forced to get as cheap a room as possible, in a section which is near to their work.

All Rooms Uncomfortable.

None of the rooms were graded as Class "A", that is, those filling all requirements. Of the 300 rooms 215 were found to lack some vital and important factor necessary for the bare health and comfort of the roomers. Usually the housekeeping privilege meant a gas plate or an electric grill set up in a ten dollar a week bed-room. One-third, or over one hundred of the rooms, had no means whatever by which the young women could entertain men friends. They were not allowed to have men call at the house, and there was no reception room or parlor where guests could be entertained.

"With few exceptions," says the survey, "the residences turn away many applicants every month. Most of them turn away many more times the number of applicants than they have rooms. Thus the survey," is the general conclusion, "has indicated very inadequate provision for transients and for single men and women, in the city."

Housing Lack Increases Prostitution

The conditions described by O. Henry in his famous story "Brick Dust Row," which show how many girls are continually sinking into the mire of the city's cheap night life simply because no one takes an interest in them or tries to fill their simplest needs, are prevalent in Chicago today, with all their evil influences and degenerating results.

State Rests Case Against Indiana Governor-Forger

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 6.—The state has rested its case against Governor McCray, charged with embezzlement and larceny of $155,000 of the funds of the state board of agriculture, shortly before noon today.

The prosecution closed with the testimony of two handwriting experts, both of whom expressed the opinion that various signatures on notes given to the board of agriculture as collateral were written by McCray.

The two experts were introduced by the state in an effort to prove the contention of the prosecuting attorneys that McCray had forged the notes he gave the board of agriculture.

Japanese Scientists See Nature Breathing Just Like Humans

TOKIO, April 6.—Japanese scientists have been startled by the discovery that the Lake of Reeds, located in the heart of the Hakone mountains, is rising and falling with the regularity of a person breathing.

The rise and fall amounted to several inches. The activity is attributed to some volcano disturbances which caused recent earthquakes in the Japanese isles.

Professor Nakamura, leading seismologist, has rushed to the Hakone mountains to make a study of the phenomenon.

Trotzky Returns On April 15th.

MOSCOW, April 6.—When Leon Trotzky returns to his post as War Minister on April 15, he will find a number of changes in his department. The council of commissars has decreed that General Frunze, assistant war minister, be made chief of the general staff in place of General Lebediev. General Sergius Kamenev, who has been Commander-in-chief of the Red army, is now army inspector, and M. Unschlicht, former acting chairman of the political police, is now chief of army supplies.

Fly to North Pole.

MOSCOW, April 6.—Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the famous Norwegian explorer, has consented to undertake a flight to the North Pole with the Russian airman, Rossinsky, according to a special report from Moscow. Altho Nansen is 63 years old, he is still active in relief work, under the League of Nations. He has not been in exploration work for years but is confident that the polar flight is feasible with a specially designed airplane.

Extend Housing Law.

NEW YORK, April 6.—New York state's housing tax exemption law which expired March 31, has been extended for another year. The purpose is to encourage building and relieve the serious housing situation. Recent investigations by the state revealed widespread disease and crime due to overcrowding and unsanitary conditions, coupled with rent gouging by landlords.

STRIKE AGAINST CREGIER SCHOOL STARTS TODAY

Parents Determined To Oust Principal

By NAT KAPLAN.

The last meeting of the Cergier School parents voted almost unanimously to declare a school strike at an immediate date. The issue at hand, namely, the brutality of Miss Mary E. Toben, principal of the school, had reached such a point that the parents would tolerate no further delay. The position of the Young Workers League participants in the fray was as follows: (1) Being a small minority of the parents, an immediate strike would result in failure. We must therefore organize and agitate for the removal of Miss Tobin without resorting to the strike, and (2) If the majority of the parents' body decides for a strike we must participate in it, guide it, organize it, and help to make it as successful as possible.

Young Workers League Wins Confidence.

The fact that the Young Workers League members reiterated their intention of standing shoulder to shoulder with the parents and children in this fight, altho doubtful of its outcome, won for them the confidence of the rebelling parents. Minnie Lurye, John Harvey and the writer were elected on the executive committee of the Parents Body and helped to formulate most of the decisions.

Executive Committee Plans Details.

The details of the strike were left in the hands of the executive committee. Yesterday the committee met and decided to call the strike for Monday, April 7th. The women on the executive committee are making arrangements to have the children of the neighborhood go from house to house and leave printed leaflets and letters announcing the day of the strike. Besides that the most active women in the fight will be engaging in a house to house canvass today and tomorrow in order to get as many of the Cregier School parents as possible down to the Parents Mass Meeting to be held Sunday evening, April 6th at 1103 S. Loomis which will be the last rally before the strike.

At this meeting all the parents will be instructed on the details of the strike. Children with banners and slogans ~~will~~ be marching up and down in front of the school in order to attract the children who attend. Some of the ringleaders among the children will secure a drum and stage a regular parade. The Young Workers League members took special care to point out that the parents involved in this affair could be arrested for breaking at least four state laws. Yet it was absolutely necessary that since the strike was decided that we go thru with these demonstrations. The parents by this time were beginning to feel that "justice" could not be found within the bounds of the capitalist laws and so determined to go thru with all details at any cost. The first day of the strike will end up with a children's mass meeting at 1103 S. Loomis street at 4 o'clock. Members of the Junior Section of the Young Workers League will arrange a program and young strikers will tell of their experiences under the corporal punishment system in the Cregier School.

The Prospects for Success.

The prospects for the waging of a successful strike in this case are very slight. The issue itself is more of a personal one, i. e., parents who have suffered at the hands of Miss Tobin are against Miss Tobin who has caused the suffering. All attempts on the part of the Y. W. L. members to point out that this fight was a bigger issue—a fight against not only Miss Tobin and the Cregier School, but against the board of education and the entire municipal administration, was not recognized by the parents. The attempt to link up this fight with a fight against the Nationalist and religious propaganda in the public schools also proved futile. The assistance of the Y. W. L. members in a direct fight for the ousting of Miss Tobin was welcomed and so we are in this thing and will try to make it as successful as possible. The biggest victory won so far for our program was the decision of the parents to form a regular dues paying Cregier School parents organization.

Ford Gets Ford In Trouble.

NEW YORK, April 6.—"Henry Ford," a negro chauffeur, was fined $25 for speeding in a "namesake" machine.

Chicago Working Women Find Wages Low; Not so With Rents

THE CITY of Chicago is negligent of the comfort of her people as a whole, but there is no class in the city which is as neglected and miserable as are the 300,000 women who work at low wages in Chicago's industries. This is especially true of the non-family women of Chicago, who must get rooms in restricted sections, so as to be reasonably near their work. These women, paying eight and ten dollars a week for an uncomfortable and inconvenient room, sometimes give out as high as 40 per cent of their low wages for rent. It is from the rooming women of Chicago that the growing horde of prostitutes is recruited. Finding that she cannot exist on the low wages, combined with the high rent, and that nobody cares, Chicago's non-family woman, not even allowed to entertain men friends in her "home", often takes the "Easiest way out".

GARMENT STRIKE CAN'T BE BROKEN BY INJUNCTIONS

Labor Delegates Hear Story of Struggle.

out unmolested. We have found, also, that some of the women scabs are related to union men. We are preparing a list of the names of union men whose mothers, wives and sisters are acting as scabs, and we are going to urge the unions to expose these people and get their relatives out of the shops."

The Citizens' Committee appointed at the suggestion of Mayor Dever, resigned because the employers refused to act with them in any way to settle the strike, Johannsen reported. "The union officials agreed to confer with the bosses," said Johannsen, "but out of 138 letters sent to the bosses asking them to confer, conciliate, arbitrate, or in some way to co-operate to settle the strike, all but five ignored the Citizens' Committee, and the five who answered unqualifiedly refused to confer."

Speaking of the personnel of the Citizens' committee, Johannsen brought a laugh from the delegates by saying "There were a couple of labor delegates on the committee who were more or less unimportant."

No effort has been made by the "Committee of 15" to get the strike situation or the police brutality on the floor of the city council, altho it was pointed out that this could easily be done thru Oscar Nelson.

Mother Jones again called on the strikers to defy the injunction. "You don't need a lawyer," she said. "Refuse to pay the bonds and go to jail. Fill up their jails, and they'll have to let you out. I never call a judge 'His Honor.' Most of the judges haven't got any honor."

Nelson Finally Blushes.

"The great trouble in these struggles is the officials of labor themselves do not take advantage of the psychological time and then strike the blow. Don't pay for a lawyer. I never paid for a lawyer; I prefer to defend myself. I wouldn't pay a lawyer to save his neck."

This brought a roar of laughter, as the delegates looked pointedly at the reddening Oscar Nelson.

Railroad An Adjournment.

Friends of Len Small railroaded a motion to adjourn thru the Chicago Federation of Labor meeting yesterday while the delegates were still reporting in order to choke off criticism against John Fitzpatrick, E. N. Nockels and Harry Scheck. The sentiment of the delegates seemed to be largely against the action of these Farmer-Labor Party members in throwing over independent political action in favor of participation in old party politics.

Fitzpatrick, in the chair, decided that the motion to adjourn—made a little after 4 o'clock—had been carried. A roar of protest went up at his decision and he declared himself in doubt. On a standing vote, tho it looked to many present as tho the motion had been decisively defeated, Fitzpatrick declared the meeting adjourned.

Fitzpatrick was in an embarrassing position due to his violation of the Farmer-Labor Party platform by entering the Tuesday primary fight. His friends have been denying all week that these three Farmer-Labor Party members had lined up for the corrupt Len Small. At the Federation meeting today, however, the March 29th Illinois State Federation of Labor weekly news letter was passed around and on the front page was a statement signed by Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Scheck and others definitely advising trade unionists to vote for Small. He was forced to railroad the motion to adjourn thru the meeting rather than face the adverse criticism of his betrayal of independent political action of labor.

"Mother" Jones in Battle Appeal To Chicago Women as She Urges "On to the City Hall!" Slogan

"Why don't the women of Chicago storm the city hall and court-house as 'Mother' Mary Jones challenged them to and tell Mayor Dever and the judges that they must stop insulting our womanhood," cried one of the woman delegates as she left the Chicago Federation of Labor meeting yesterday.

"Women are not women if they won't protest when their fellow workers, the girl garment strikers, are struck with an injunction and beaten by offices of the law," cried "Mother" Jones to the Federation meeting.

She recounted stories from her own experiences with injunctions and demanded that the girl pickets stand up before Judge Sullivan and his court, before Dudley Taylor, Le Boskey, and their gang of sluggers and defy their illegal injunction against the workers.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Federation, seconded "Mother" Jones cry with a strong appeal:

"When one labor organization is involved in a fight, make it the common cause of all and settle it then and there!"

Girls Doing the Fighting.

"This fight is not alone that of the few girls that are struck over here," Fitzpatrick continued. "They're making a fight for the whole trade union movement of Chicago. They're not afraid of the situation. They're doing the fighting!"

True enough, Brother Fitzpatrick, and what is the Chicago Federation of Labor doing to back the girls up in this fight, the Federation's own fight?

"The Committee of Fifteen" has picked a few feathers of the Crowe in the state's attorney's office and made a few remarks to Mayor Dever, three weeks ago, on the matter of police brutalities. The uniformed and plainclothes sluggers continue their rough dealing with girl pickets.

Mayor Dever promised the "Committee of Fifteen" that if witnesses of brutalities were produced, as promised, that the officers would be brought up on charges and dismissed from the police force. So far NOTHING HAS BEEN DONE. The "Committee of Fifteen" has made no further report to the Mayor.

The Citizens' Committee also reported to Mayor Dever and then disbanded. Their proposed investigation of the strike situation collapsed, unsupported.

Send Them Engraved Invitation.

Do the women of Chicago, the Women's Trade Union League, need an engraved invitation to help their sisters in the garment strike?

Do the women of Chicago need a special request to demonstrate their active sympathy Is that why they, too, have failed to join the picket lines of the striking ladies' garment workers?

President Fitzpatrick himself has said that the garment workers are fighting for the whole labor movement of Chicago. It is evident that Dudley Taylor and his cohorts in the Employers' Association are backing the Dress Manufacturers' Association in another battle of the war of Chicago big business against unionism, against LABOR.

Why doesn't the Federation of Labor send its auxiliaries into the fight they have acclaimed their own?

"Mother" Jones Never Afraid.

Women of Chicago, women of the Trade Union League, will you stand by and see the garment bosses crush the girl workers, your sisters, with an INJUNCTION? Are you afraid to go to jail? "Mother" Jone has never been afraid. These garment strikers are not afraid.

Women of the Trade Union League, if you let the opportunity slip, you will be confronted with injunctions whenever you are called out to fight for better life.

Women of the Trade Union League, will you accept the issue? Will you recognize your fight? Will you demonstrate your sharing the cause of the striking garment workers?

Strike Will Go On.

You have heard the international vice-president, Perlstein, say that the strike will continue. If it cannot be settled soon, it will have to drag on for months thru the slack season. Are you women of the Trade Union League willing to let such a situation remain?

"Settle that fight then and there," cries John Fitzpatrick.

Women of the Trade Union League, show the Federation what you can do for your striking sisters.

Stirring Mobilization Call at Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., April 6.—A stirring mobilization call to Cleveland Workers Party members was given here today at Cleveland Labor Temple by C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Party, in the first of his series of meetings in which he discusses "The Decisive Stage of Our Labor Party Policy".

The problems of the day in the formation of a mass, class Farmer-Labor Party were presented to the membership by Ruthenberg. The need for mobilizing the whole party in an intensive campaign during the next few months was stressed by the speaker. Understanding, on the part of every Party member, as well as the fullest possible support, was shown to be most necessary.

Meetings in each district headquarters city of the east have been arranged so that the whole party may learn the role which the united front movement for the Farmer-Labor Party plays in the struggle for the workers' revolution, the Soviets and Workers' and Farmers' Dictatorship. Party members from nearby cities are expected to attend these assemblies.

Monday night Comrade Ruthenberg speaks in the Pittsburgh Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Pittsburgh, at 8 p. m. The rest of his program of meetings is as follows:

Philadelphia, Tuesday, April 8, 8 p. m., Amalgamated Centre, 431 Pine Street.

New York City, Wednesday, April 9, 8 p. m., Stuyyesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.

Boston, Thursday, April 10, 8 p. m., Credit Union Hall, 62 Chambers St.

Buffalo, Saturday, April 12, Finnish Hall, 150 Grider St.

Detroit, Sunday, April 13, 2:30 p. m., Finnish Hall, 5963 14th St.

Chicago, Tuesday, April 22.

Every party member in the cities mentioned should attend these meetings. Every party member within reach of these cities should come to the meetings.

The Party must know and understand the policies of the Central Executive Committee. The Party must mobilize all its strength for the campaign which the Party is now entering.

Ku Klux Klan Kills Four, Wounds Many, in Western Pennsylvania

LILLY, Pa., April 6.—Departing Ku Klux Klansmen killed four townsfolk and injured thirteen others when young men of the town turned a fire-hose stream on the Klansmen boarding their special train for Johnston. The Klansmen managed to get their wounded on the train. Three injured Ku Kluxers were taken to the hospital upon their arrival at Johnston. Twenty-five members of the Klan were arrested by Sheriff Logan N. Kellar.

The dead inhabitants of Lilly are: Prillip Conrad, 25; Frank Maesko, 22, and Floyd Paul, 28, and an unidentified man. Several of those wounded are not expected to survive.

Klansmen had held a hooded ceremony in a field near the station. The members had come down on the special train from Johnston and raised their fiery cross in Lilly. When they returned to the railroad, a crowd of 1,000 townsfolk had assembled. After the hose was turned on the Klan shots were fired and a volley of bricks and stones.

State troops were rushed to Lilly in response to the request of the district attorney of Cambria county.

Johnston police claim that the Klan's visit Lilly was occasioned by the firing of shots into the home of a Methodist minister there two weeks ago.

FAKE FASCISTI ELECTION IS HELD THRUOUT ITALY

Mussolini's Democratic Dictatorship at Work!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, April 6.—The Italian general election that was held today for a new chamber of deputies may look like a great joke to the average American, but not so to Premier Mussolini and his fascist followers.

First of all, the new Italian electoral law was devised to allow the fascists to remain in power whether the country wanted it or not and in order to achieve this extraordinary result, the law provides that any party polling 25 per cent, or one-fourth of the votes actually cast, will elect two-thirds of the deputies composing the Italian chamber of deputies, or 356, out of a total of 535.

In practice the law works this way: The country is divided into fifteen electoral districts, and the tickets are divided into two main categories, namely, national, or majority, tickets, and districtual, or minority, tickets. The former are the tickets which on polling 25 per cent of the votes will elect a majority of 356 deputies; the second are only after the whole or part of the 179 remaining seats, and which the law allots to the minority, which may or may not be opposition.

Sewing It Up.

A national or majority ticket must be presented in all the fifteen constituencies or electoral districts; the minority tickets must be presented in at least two districts. In each district the majority tickets will carry a number of candidates equal to two-thirds of the deputies the district elects, owing to its population. The minority or districtual tickets must have no more than one-third of the candidates. For example: Suppose a district elects 30 deputies. Then the majority tickets will carry 20 names and the minority tickets 10. Furthermore, while the votes of majority tickets are counted "nationally," the votes of the minority tickets are counted only in relation to the districts in order to allow each district to have one-third of its deputies in the chamber. To exemplify: A majority ticket may or may not get 25 per cent of the votes in one, two, three or more districts; but if the total of the votes polled by the same ticket in all the districts is equal to 25 per cent or more of the votes cast, it elects two-thirds of deputies in "all" the districts. A minority ticket will elect its one-third of deputies, regardless of the number of votes it receives.

Each Has Emblem.

Naturally, there can be more than one majority ticket and many minority tickets. But only the majority ticket polling the largest number of votes above the 25 per cent required by the law, elects 356 candidates, while the rest of the majority and minority tickets will divide among themselves the seats allotted to the minority in proportion to the votes which each ticket receives.

The majority tickets are each distinguished by a party emblem and so are the minority tickets. The emblem is the same for all the districts in which the ticket is presented.

Should no majority ticket secure the required 25 per cent of the votes cast, then the electoral proportional system, formerly in use, comes into play and each ticket, whether majority or minority, elects the number of deputies to which it is entitled in proportion to the votes polled.

All the controversies arising out of the new electoral law will be settled by the court of appeal of Rome, which will also make the final count.

The Russo-Oriental Chamber of Commerce Has Envoys in Turkey

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, April 6.—The Russo-Oriental Chamber of Commerce has completed the organization of a trade delegation to Turkey, which is made up of representatives of Soviet economic organs specially interested in the resumption of trade relations with Turkey—namely, the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, the Sugar Trust, the metal and wood industries and the Russo-Oriental Chamber of Commerce itself. Seeing that rubber products found a good market in Turkey previous to the war, the Rubber Trust also wishes to be represented upon the delegation.

An application to the same effect has also been received on the part of Russian South Eastern Committee of International Trade, in whose area are situated the portland cement and building materials works which had previously enjoyed a brisk trade with Turkey. At Constantinople, the delegation will further be joined by the representatives of the "Khlebo-export" (bread stuff export) and the oil syndicate, which are already busily engaged in Turkish commerce.

UNION SMASHED AS VANCOUVER STRIKE FAILS

Bosses Want City To Pay Finks

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 6.—The Vancouver Shipping federation admits it spent $100,000 to break the recent longshoremen's strike in this port and now is asking the city council of Vancouver to reimburse it for maintaining a patrol boat at $35 a day during the strike.

The federation in refusing to accede to the union's demand for the restoration of the bonus of handling lumber cargoes, stated it was unable to do so because of the poor returns from shipping generally. The union's spokesmen pointed out by comparative figures the growth of shipping in the port and the rise in freight rates. One phase of the increased port movements from Vancouver is shown in the announcement that the grain handling capacities of both dock and elevators, estimated at 8,500,000 bushels a month will be overtaxed by the middle of April.

Accidents Increasing.

Since the breaking of the strike, waterfront workers have been speeded up to the maximum without regard to life or limb. Numerous accidents have occurred and the newspapers have ceased reporting the minor ones. The shipping bosses maintain a blacklist of some 400 active union workers. All longshoremen are now hired thru the company's "Fink" hall. The shipping bosses have informed the government employment bureau that they will not not hire men thru the bureau unless they subsequently pass thru the company's own bureau for identification.

The old organization of the longshoremen here, known as the International Longshoremen's Association, has disbanded and in its place are two other organizations that the attempting to form the nucleus of another union.

Detroit Armenian Communist Groups Have Buried Hatchet

The unification of the branches of the two groups of the Armenian Section of the Workers Party is now under way in those cities where the rival groups are represented. The Boston branches were united a week ago. The Detroit branches were united at a meeting held Sunday, March 30th.

In carrying thru the unification program, the Detroit branches adopted a resolution calling upon all other branches of the Armenian branches to follow their example. The resolution reads as follows:

Resolution.

The representatives of the two Armenian groups of the Workers Party of Detroit, meeting with representatives of the District Executive Committee and the City Central Committee, recognizing the demoralizing effect upon the membership of the party and the confusion in the ranks of the outside workers created by the factional strife, which, if not terminated at once, will completely discredit the Armenian section of the party; recognizing also that the present period offers the greatest possibilities for the building of a revolutionary mass movement which requires unity in the ranks of the revolutionists; convinced that there is no difference in principle which separates the two groups, but merely animosities created by the long strife;

Resolves, That the first requirement for unity is the will to unite; that unity can be achieved on the basis of the acceptance of the principles and policies of the Communist International and of the Workers Party of America, and the recognition of the Communist Party of Armenia as the Armenian Section of the Communist International, and upon the resolution of both groups hereafter to discuss, not the actions of the past, but the present and future problems of the Party.

Be it further resolved, That we call upon all other groups of the Armenian section and the bureau to unite on the same basis.

POWDER KINGS' PAID LOBBYISTS BLOCK REAL QUIZ

Nixon Disaster Report Shocks Public

(By The Federated Press)

TRENTON, N. J., April 6.—There is a sequel to the tardy revelations contained in the state department of labor that "gross negligence and violation of the law" by the company caused the March 8th explosion at the Nixon plant of the Ammonite Co, when 78 workers were killed and 200 injured.

In preparing new protective legislation demanded by State Labor Commissioner McBride's report, it has discovered that the explosive manufacturers not only maintain an active lobby to prevent reform but actually write most of the present ineffective law regulating themselves.

"Reasonable Regulations."

The manufacturers' committee in 1909 drew up "reasonable" regulations which were later written into the law. Distances of safety between buildings were fixed much below the regulations in England and other countries. The definition of "explosive" was left elastic and full of loopholes for the manufacturers. Risk to life and limb were not considered as serious unless some integral portion of a building was damaged.

Only one inspection a year is required by the law written by the manufacturers, and the maximum license fee is $25 annually. In New Jersey 100,000 pounds of explosives may be kept within 1,835 feet of inhabited buildings, while in England the required distance is 5,200 feet, almost a mile.

Public sentiment, after accepting the company's alibi for the Nixon explosion, has been roused by these revelations and the belated grand jury has been called to fix responsibility. The owners' lobby is apparently strong enough to prevent the calling of a special session of the state legislature to enact a new law.

German Editors May Be Severely Punished If Caught Thinking

By LOUIS LOCHNER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 6.—An editor has no business to have opinions running counter to those of the newspaper owner, in the opinion of the Newspaper Publishers' Association of Germany. Alarmed at the rumor that the National Press federation was contemplating the introduction of a bill in the reichstag by which some independence of thought was to be guaranteed editors and writers, the publishers made clear their standpoint in the Zeitungsverlag, official organ of their association.

The editorial is arrogant in the extreme, as will be seen from the following quotations from it: "It cannot be admitted under any circumstances that the editor be considered anything but the legally appointed representative of the publisher. The editor has no connection with the paper by virtue of any rights of his own; all rights are derived from the publisher. The editor is under no obligations on his own account to safeguard the public interest; his only duty is that of editing the paper or the section of the paper assigned to him according to orders from his publisher."

Detroit Labor in Protest Over Ford's Muscle Shoals Lease

(By The Federated Press)

DETROIT, April 6.—Charging that "the Muscle Shoals lease is looked upon by those who know, as a bigger grab than Teapot Dome," the Detroit Federation of Labor has sent a resolution to the two Michigan senators calling on them to "do all in their power to prevent the consummation of this deal to transfer government property to a private corporation." The huge government power and nitrate plant in Alabama is referred to.

According to the Detroit Labor News, under the provisions of the contract Henry Ford will receive for $1,500,000 property which would bring about $16,000,000 at a forced sale.

GERMAN PLUTES INSIST UNIONS BE WIPED OUT

Industrialists in Ultimatum to Reich

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, April 6.—The last week has witnessed the frankest expression of the rule of Germany by the big industrialists that has yet been given. The German workers will pay the reparations or no payments will be made is their ultimatum.

Most of the week was given over here to a meeting of representatives of finance and industry. The policies of the two big organizations of German employers and financiers were discussed publicly at numerous meetings but the real business was done in private and closely guarded committee sessions.

Sorge, frequently interrupted by applause from his fellow-industrialists, said:

"The premise for the German fulfillment policy are seven:

"1. The political power of the unions must be entirely destroyed.

"2. The government must cease to negotiate directly with the trade unions.

"3. The eight-hour day law must be repealed.

"4. A single front of trade unions in industrial decisions must be prohibited.

"5. Obligatory governmental arbitration in labor disputes over wages must be restricted.

"6. The return of all economic machinery, beginning with the state railroads, to private hands must be undertaken.

"7. As the necessity of reparations payments will compel transformations of German production, the internal markets must be prevented from falling into the hands of foreign competitors by the creation of new and the raising of existing customs duties.

"German industry is willing to make sacrifices for the welfare of the reich, but only on the basis of these conditions. Only when the rubbish is swept away from internal politics can German industry turn its attention to foreign problems.

Little Improvement.

"The German situation has not been improved since the cessation of passive resistance. Nevertheless, passive resistance had to be discontinued because of the primary necessity of bringing about delaxation of the internal political tension and of dealing with internal politics.

"Even a renewal of the so-called fulfillment policy cannot immediately regain for Germany her powerful political position. Nothing would be worse than raising false hopes of assistance from abroad. The negotiations of Herr Hermes and Wilhelm Cuno in the United States have shown that even in that country there is still a strong feeling against Germany.

No Aid From Britain.

"The British labor party is carrying out a realistic policy and will not engage in any struggle for Germany's sake. Italy considers that a weakened Germany is the best possible security for the retention of the southern Tyrol. Illusions regarding Russian help are equally dangerous. Even should Russia fight Poland, Germany could recover Upper Silesia only by force of arms.

"A Russo-German war against France would be fought on German soil and would destroy German industry and agriculture. Last, but not least, such a Russo-German entente would involve internal political reactions dangerous to Germany.

Reich Must Yield.

"The reparations negotiations are likely to result in an almost unbearable situation for Germany. The only adequate moral and material resources for the solution of the reparations problem are German agriculture and industry. Ex-Chancellor Wirth's fulfillment policy was right in principle but failed because he pursued the wrong internal policy. German industry and agriculture can support the fulfillment policy only on the basis of certain premises.

"Here I would like to say that we do not wish to eliminate the German government. The negotiations with France must indeed be carried on by the two governments, but the German government must work in the closest touch with expert committees of industrial organizations."

The Communists have already issued a leaflet on the meeting of the industrialists in which they point out that not only is a reduction of wages, destruction of legal safeguards of the workers and a lengthening of hours demand but that the industrialists also insist upon a new tariff that will allow them to set their own prices upon domestic commodities.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE CROOKED SAYS NEARING

Punishes Reds; Rich Crooks Go Free

By SCOTT NEARING.
(Federated Press Staff Writer)

The department of justice is that part of the state which spies on citizens and prosecutes those who are caught breaking the law.

It necessarily follows that the enemies of the modern state are the enemies of the department of justice, and are to be hunted down and punished accordingly.

This is the explanation of the treatment meted out to Debs and to Morse by Attorney General Daugherty, who did his best (to all appearances) to keep Debs in prison and to get Morse out of prison.

Debs was a humanitarian, a protester against war, and advocate of a new and kindlier social order. He committed no act. He was merely agitating against that form of society which made possible the war and the department of justice.

Morse, to put the matter mildly, was a profiteer, who had resorted to methods that gave him illegal access to the funds of the United States government. Apparently Morse had not only obstructed the government, but he had robbed it.

The Red Raids.

The same contrast exists between the ferocious red raids, initiated by the department of justice against people who were, for the most part, foreigners, and unable to defend themselves with the same facility as Americans, and the failure to prosecute the war profiteers and grafters, the violators of the anti-trust laws, and the other measures intended to curb the rapacity of big business. The department of justice has no necessary connection with "moral right" or "just conduct." It is an agency for administering the law.

In League With Crooks.

But that is not all.

The department of justice is an agency for administering some of the law, some of the time. The laws against the opponents of the established order are enforced with savage barbarity. The laws against those who plunder the people and the government may be enforced, or they may not.

There are cases in which the department of justice goes even further, and thru its highest officials suggests ways in which the laws may be broken, and then protects the lawbreakers.

If the testimony given before the senate committee means anything, it is that the department of justice is a jobbing house, distributing favors, immunities, privileges and occasionally serving as the bulwark behind which powerful men hide when they commit crime.

The department, like any agency of the vested interests, must be seen realistically, as a part of the machinery of the established order. A banker collects interest as a matter of course. A landlord racks rent from even the most poverty stricken. The department of justice, without any reference to morality, equity or rectitude, projects and serves the existing order with zealous solicitude.

The Discussion In the Russian Communist Party

Today we publish the resolution submitted by Comrade Ossinsky, of the Russian Communist Party, to a meeting of the Party nuclei bureaus and of the active party workers of the Moscow organization. Comrade Ossinsky spoke on the "Immediate Tasks of the Economic Policy." He was in opposition to the majority of the Russian Communist Party led by Zinoviev, Stalin, Bucharin and others. Following Comrade Ossinsky's speech we will publish the resolution of the Thirteenth Party Conference on the entire discussion.

OSSINSKY SAYS:

IN VIEW of the fact that the resolution of the Political Bureau of the Central Comittee on the "Immediate Tasks of the Economic Policy" represents mainly an exposition of the resolutions adopted by the Twelfth Congress of the Russian Communist Party with the addition, however, of some new proposals of doubtful worth and the omission of some questions which have become ripe, the meeting considers it necessary to amend the resolution of the Political Bureau in the following fundamental respects:

The Amendments.

1. It is necessary, not only to bring forward the questions regarding the fundamental and decisive significance of knitting together the nationalized industries and the peasant economy, but also to explain the reasons for which this knitting together has not been realized during the past period and the reasons why the connecting of the villages with private home industry and with private commercial capital have developed more successfully. The fundamental reasons for all this are: The lack of a plan uniting the work of all the branches of state economy, the casualness and the unsystematized work of the leading organs, and in connection with this, the disharmony and crudeness prevalent in the work of the whole economic peripheries.

The reproaching "a number of economic organs" for having incorrectly applied the directives of the Twelfth Congress; and for having raised the prices higher than was justified, the resolution loses sight of the fact that such a reproach implies also the lack of leading on the part of the highest organs in the commercial activity of the economic organs. The reproach in the first place must, therefore, be directed against the highest organs.

2. Setting aside the question as to whether, under the conditions of the new economic policy, crises are unavoidable, or whether it is only so-called "depressions" which are unavoidable, it is necessary to state that the present crisis has nothing to do with such unavoidable economic disturbances. It is not the result either of a sudden reduction in the demand from the peasants, resulting from a bad harvest (which might be a possible cause of a depression and could not be overcome), or of a change in the movement of world prices. It is also impossible to explain it by pointing out the disparity between industrial and agricultural production, a disparity which, it is alleged, results from objective factors. If the development of the state industry is proceeding in an elementary way, and is not balanced by the development of agriculture, this is due to the lack of a plan of management.

Improper Credit.

The principal causes of the present crisis are (a) the chaotic nature of our industrial construction; (b) the casual and improper credit policy; owing to the latter, in the period of spring and summer 1923, the financial means of the state bank were totally engaged in operations of industry and wholesale trade on unsound bases and without retaining a reserve for the autumn period of grain crop.

The resolution must be modified, in order to state the real causes of the crisis and in order to make clear the concrete faults committed; to screen these faults means to prevent their being corrected.

3. In the resolution of the Political Bureau, there is no mention of the question of the administration of industry, which has a tremendous importance among the actual tasks of economic policy. It is necessary to put forward and work out concretely the question of establishing a close connection between the trusts, which at present in fact are autonomous, on the one hand, and the Supreme National Economic Council on the other, as well as the task of creating a firm and well-connected system of state economy on the basis of an economic plan and of a correct leadership of the state enterprises. This will strengthen to the highest degree the position of our State Economy in its struggle against private capital and also in regard to a real knitting together of the State Industry with the villages.

4. The resolution of the Political Bureau, in one of its points, lays down a totally incorrect task, namely, to include in the calculation of the price of products merely "the necessary minimum profit." Such a task implies a revocation of the resolution of the Twelfth Congress, a transition to the position of a common bourgeois "fiscal economy," it excludes the possibility of basing the state budget on incomes deriving from industry. The corresponding task can only be formulated as follows: "Obtaining the greatest profit with a given average price and with the obligation to strive to reduce the price by means of enlarging and perfecting the working capacity."

Help Co-operatives.

5. The resolution of the Political Bureau does not give a correct estimation of the successes of private capital in general and, in particular, of private commercial capital which has already come into possession of 14 per cent of the wholesale trade, 15 per cent of the wholesale-retail and 80 per cent of the small trade, and has also accumulated large sums in goods and stable values. It is necessary to dedicate far greater attention than hitherto to the work in the sphere of commerce. In connection with this it is necessary (see Comrade Lenin's article on Co-operation), in the fight against private commercial capital, to bring to the forefront the co-operative organizations, elaborating a plan of increased credits to them, both by supplying them with goods from the state industry and also with financial means.

6. The demand for an active trade balance put forward in the resolution occupies a very extended, but completely unjustified position. This demand, in its essense, means: To export as much as possible, to import as little as possible and furthermore only to import means of production. To accumulate the difference in the form of a gold fund.

Regard, however, must be had to the following:

(a) Soviet Russia cannot allow herself the luxury of spending means for the transition from bank notes to metal currency, but must spend these means for productive purposes.

(b) The import of the necessary industrial raw materials (cotton) is to be developed as much as possible.

(c) The private importation of articles for mass consumption in which we are lacking could be the principal and most profitable weapon for the state in its fight against speculation in goods.

(d) The importation of articles for peasants' consumption is a very important means for developing our export. From this point of view it is necessary not to strive at the greatest preponderance of exports over imports, but at maintaining a solid equilibrium between the first and second.

Foreign Credit Necessary.

On the other hand, to the extent to which Soviet Russia obtains foreign loans and will be able to commence a large scale importation of means of production, and partially also of articles of consumption in which she is lacking, her commercial balance can become a negative one without any detriment to the development of the productive forces, because her financial balance will be a positive one.

It is necessary, not to proclaim the abstract slogan of an active trade balance, but to proceed towards elaborating a rational plan and to make a large use of goods intervention (i. e., partial importation from abroad of goods which we lack and of those which the price has particularly increased).

7. The lack of a well thought out credit policy, the practical autonomy of the state bank (for instance, the abolition of credits to industry which took place in autumn without the consent of the State Planning Commission and the Supreme National Economic Council), the attempt, instead of aiming at a general economic plan, to regulate economy from the financial centre, the failure of these methods of a unique "planning"—all this demands decisive steps towards including the plan of the distribution of credits into the general economic plan, and also a corresponding modification of the mutual relations between the State Bank and the State Planning Commission.

8. The central question of the proletarian economic policy in the sphere of industry is the work for systematically improving the position of the working class. Successes in this direction are the most important guarantee for industrial successes. Measures for raising the standard of living of the workers and also for strengthening, reviving and freeing our trade unions from the stultifying influence of the "Party absolute tranquility" must be elaborated on a large scale and more carefully.

Raise Standard of Living.

It is necessary also to bring forward and to elaborate the question of measures for the fight against unemployment, a question which has been totally omitted from the resolution of the Political Bureau. It is also necessary to remark that the establishment of plannedness in our economic construction, introducing it into the system of our State Industry, will, by facilitating the acumulation of productive resources on the part of the state, become a powerful factor, reducing unemployment and raising the standard of life of the proletariat.

9. The fact that the resolution of the Political Bureau recognizes the necessity practically to carry out the resolutions of the Twelfth Congress regarding the State Planning Commission, and in general regarding the establishment of a planned administration of economy, can only be welcomed. But to the natural question, why was this not done after the Twelfth Congress, the resolution gives an evasive answer which is not to the point, and which provokes grave reflections regarding the future. This resolution connects the possibility of a planned administration with the introduction of a stable valuta, and thereby seeks to explain the dilatoriness in executing the resolutions of the Twelfth Congress, by the necessity of first of all carrying out the currency reform. Such a presentation of the question is incorrect and dangerous because, without the general and uninterrupted equilibrating of the finances with the other elements of the state and national economy, there can be no talk of securing a real stable currency. It is incorrect to assume that the prerequisites for the planned administration of economy can be prepared piecemeal. It is precisely this way of handling the matter which, from time to time, causes a sharp disparity in the fundamental factors of economy and which appears to be one of the main causes of the present crisis, which, to a considerable extent, seems to be a crisis of disparity and of lack of prevision.

Necessity of Public Reports.

10. The tremendous importance and the complicated nature of the questions which the resolution of the Political Bureau places before the Party for discussion, necessitate a detailed handling of all their points in the press, the publishing of the most important figures and material regarding all the most important questions of economy, the edition of special manuals and the like—all of which has not been done up to the present. The discussion on the economic construction was introduced in such a way, that it cannot be correctly developed and utilized by the outlying sections of the Party, and by the mass of the rank and file nuclei. If we wish to have a really general Party discussion, these foults and omissions must be immediately remedied.

New DAILY WORKER Power Forces Extension In Power Column

10,000 New Sub Campaign Huge Success So Far

WHILE Detroit was casting defies to Chicago and Chicago was tossing the gauntlet to the whole country and Toledo was making claims of being the best sub-getting city for THE DAILY WORKER in the United States, the great 10,000 new sub campaign is making mince meat of previous records and reputations and is forcing the erstwhile champion individual boosters to look after their honors. So great have the returns been thus far in the drive, that the prophecy that the 10,000 new subscribers would be secured long before June 15 seems to be coming true.

Dope Upset.

MANY surprises are resulting and the pre-campaign "dope" on the final standing of the various cities has already been upset. Miles City, Montana, a city which most DAILY WORKER readers didn't know was on the map, has furnished a startling example of what can be done by those who really put spirit and energy behind their work for "their daily". Fifteen new subscribers have already been added in this city out of the quota of 25, or 60% of the total number set before June 15 and a lead in number of subs over such big cities as Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Seattle, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Buffalo. Superior, Wis. and Warren, O. are also showing a clean pair of heels to the metropolitan centers.

Brooklyn Put New York City to Shame

A GREATER upset still is the showing made by Brooklyn with a total of 66 new subs or 33% of its total of 200, while New York City with its millions of workers and thousands of Workers Party members has so far secured only 48 out its low quota of 500 or less than 10%. Ely, Minn., has secured more new readers than either Minneapolis or St. Paul! Turtle Creek, Pa. has turned in 10 against a measly 6 from St. Louis! Come on you big cities, home of the industrial workers, centers of the revolutionary movement in America; the country towns are sticking it all over you! 24% of the period of the drive is over and those who want to keep their records clean must get into action now.

Great Majority of Workers' Children Are Undernourished

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 6.—One child in every three in working class families is undernourished, a survey of the Mulberry district in New York City discloses. Four thousand children under the care of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor were examined by experts of the association and of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Accepted methods determining undernourishment are condemned by the report as producing falsely optimistic statistics. The method generally used by schools and clinics is to confine the test to average weight for age and height, declaring all children 7 or 10 per cent below the average to be undernourished. Other factors must be considered, this survey shows General physical condition, muscular development, luster of the eyes, color of the skin and other tests are as important as the weight test.

This study reveals that 77.2 per cent of the boys and 67.1 per cent of the girls who were undernourished would have been missed altogether by the so-called 7 per cent weight tables.

The usual recommendation that every child receive a thoro medical examination at least once a year is made.

BIG OHIO DEFENSE COUNCIL TO FIGHT STEEL TYRANTS

Labor of Two Countries In Organization

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, April 6.—The Western Ohio Free Speech and Labor Defense Council was organized at an initial meeting for the purpose of rendering assistance to workers falling into the clutches of the vicious sedition and criminal syndicalist laws used by the steel and coal barons to suppress workers' organizations and to gag militant workers in the labor movement.

Delegates from the Mahoning and Trumbull county central labor movement, as well as delegates from the various fraternal organizations, took part and pledged their support to the Farrell workers now facing trial charged with violating the sedition law of Pennsylvania.

The council also pledged its support to organized labor and will back up to the limit the work of organizing the steel workers as now being conducted under the American Federation of Labor. Every effort will be made by the newly organized council to bring about a United Front of all organizations to wipe out the sedition and criminal syndicalist laws, the barrier erected by the coal and steel barons to prevent the organization of the steel workers and to imprison those who advocate organization.

F. Timlin, of the Molders' Union, was elected president; Richard Caddick, of the Trumbull County Labor Congress vice-president; John Landers, of the Carpenters' Union, recording secretary; Wm. J. White, of the Girard Lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, treasurer; Wallace Metcalfe, of the Civil Liberties Union, corresponding secretary. An executive committee of seven was elected, including the officers, with Emory Moré, of the United Garment Workers' Union and F. Witt, of the Electrical Workers' Union, as additional members.

Central Bodies Behind Council.

The combined strength of the Mahoning county and Trumbull country central labor bodies will back up the council in its work of providing moral and financial support to those falling into the clutches of Ohio and Pennsylvania labor gag laws.

The address of the council is P.O. Box 883, Youngstown, Ohio.

Negro Writer Applies Castigating Rod to Lying Tribune's Hide

The DAILY WORKER:—I sent the following letter to the Chicago Tribune.—Gordon Owens.

To the Chicago Tribune:—A few days ago, I informed an audience that the Chicago Tribune would publish a fake "Red" Negro propaganda article in a few days. By reading the Tribune, Wednesday, April 2, 1924, I learn that my prophecy has come true. Your dirty, filthy, lying, lecherous, yellow capitalist sheet contains on page 12, Wednesday, April 2, 1924, a news article, "Soviet Spreads 'Red' Doctrines Among Negroes," suppoced to emanate from Washington, D. C., which in my opinion was concocted in the distorted and rattle snake brain of one of the kept pimps, intellectual prostitutes, or master lying reporters in the employ of the Tribune.

The ropes and fagots of the Southern mobists and lynchers are the real factors in the Negro emigration North. The hook worm, clay-eating, uncivilized white trash of the cracker-ridden South, who at the behest of the lying Southern newspapers of the ilk of the Chicago Tribune, from mobs and lynch and burn Negroes are the real "Red" agents emptying the South of its Negro population.

Those Negro "Reds" in this expose article are actively engaged in organizing Negro workers to fight the Negro and white real estate hogs, sharks and robber landlords. They are also advising Negroes to join white labor unions wherever possible and to form Negro unions to fight for higher wages and shorter hours, and to link up their forces with the white enlightened, class conscious and radical workers who are also fighting the common enemy of both Negro and white workers, the capitalist exploiting class.

Respectfully,
GORDON W. OWENS

Anxious for Farm Machinery.

MOSCOW, Apr. 6.—(Rosta)—The Siberian farmers literally beseiged the local agricultural stores as a result of the decision of the Council for Labor and Defense of the Union of the S. S. R., anent the sale of agricultural machines and tools and dead stock to the rural population at pre-war prices and on a long term credit basis.

At the present time all the stock in trade of harvesting machines in Siberia has been sold out. The demand on the part of the peasants is mainly for heavier and more productive land machinery.

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHNNY SMART, OR A LAD IN THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.

Johnny grabbed his hat and ran down the street. Kronstad Street lay in the direction of the railway, whence Whites were approaching. Thru several side streets, over a silent deserted market place, Johnny approached the railway. No Red Guards were there, and the Whites had not yet come. There wasn't a soul on the street. Here and there a terrified citizen peeped thru his barricaded window. Johnny began to feel afraid. "What if I should be caught," he thought. He began to run quickly. Finally he arrived on Kronstad Street. Here was 27. Johnny approached the door. It was closed. He pressed against it with all his might. But the door was solid, and did not give way. "What shall I do, what shall I do?" he thought. "They'll think I was afraid and ran away." And he felt so ashamed.

The Grenades Are Found.

A lump rose in his throat, and he wanted to cry. "I can't go back this way, it will soon be dark, and then I can climb up over the wall and get the hand grenades. Johnny carefully walked round the house and crept thru a crack between the wooden wash house and the wall. Everything was dark and damp. The rats were scratching and squeaking under the floor. The cannon were thundering somewhere near. Tired and excited, Johnny sat down on the floor, which was all bestrewn with dirt and cigarette stubs, and waited.

Somewhere in the neighborhood a shell exploded. Johnny was convinced that the end of the world had come, and that he was soon to die. He cast a glance at the sky. It had become quite dark. Carefully, he crept from his hiding place over the wall, and sneaked along in the direction in which he believed Frederick lived.

A window was open. With a leap he was in the room. It was empty. The floor was littered with paper the furniture was in disorder. . . . There was the bed. Johnny crawled under the bedstead and felt something hard with his hands—it was lying in a sack. With care, he pulled out the sack from under the bed.

"The hand grenades. 1, 2, 3, 4. 5 . . ." Johnny fastened the sack and bound it fast to his shoulders, and stealthily left the house by the same route he had used in entering.

"I can't go back to the League headquarters. The Whites must be there already . . . I will have to go directly to Mark's house . . ."

Here's the market already . . . .

Johnny Escapes

"Halt, who goes there?" A voice from the darkness called sharply.

Johnny turned sideways and started running with all his might, between the market stalls

Behind him he heard a shot, and thru the darkness he could see spluttering flame. . . But Johnny was far away already . . . Twenty minutes later, he burst into Mark's house, breathless, exhausted and frightened. Mark was sitting in a small room behind barred windows. A kerosene lamp lit up his face with a dull light.

"Have you really come?" called out Mark, astonished, "we thought you must have been afraid or fallen asleep."

"Here," said Johnny proudly, "are the hand grenades," and he handed over the heavy sack.

Mark took the sack, his heart bursting with gratitude and grasping the little lad's hands, said, "Now you are worthy to become a member of the League, and a soldier of the Workers' World Revolution."

And he shook Johnny's hand fervently.

THE END.

GRINDING MORE PROFITS OUT OF COAL DIGGERS

New Way of Speeding Up Production

By J. A. HAMILTON.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 6.—Under the new three-year agreement, the coal industry is supposed to be "stabilized." What "stabilization" means to the miner is indicated by the experience of the men at the Barrackville mine near here, owned by the Bethlehem Steel Company, and operated under union contract.

Before the expiration of the last agreement, the Company began to "stabilize" the labor force by taking the men in as "partners" in the business, thru selling them 7 per cent preferred stock at $94 per share. Altho the preferred stockholders have no voice in the management of the company, yet they share in the profits of the business at the rate of $7.00 per year per share, which is a good percentage on an investment of $94.00. So far, so good, provided out of your part time work you can get hold of the $94.00.

Doping The Workers.

But the company having obligated itself to pay out this $7.00 per year, next proceeds to "stabilize" its income in order that this and other obligations might be certainly met. It has just posted notices to the effect that house rent is raised $1.00 per month, house coal is at a higher price, and that hand drilling will be introduced in place of the customary machine drilling.

Unless a miner owns two shares or more of the stock, he will therefore pay in increased rent more than he gets back from the company in interest, and the company has his $94 besides; in addition, in order not to imperil his investment, the miner must abstain from strikes or any other action detrimental to the profits of the company.

Human Power Vs. Mechanical Power.

To get the coal blasted down, six-foot holes are drilled into the solid rock, so that the explosive can be inserted far back. This has been done at Barrackville by compressed-air machines operated by special drilling crews. It must now be done by the coal loader with a hand drill. The drills and accessory tools and the continual sharpening of the drill points, put additional expense on the miner, and the drilling work is said to be especially hard in the Barrackville mine. For the hand drilling the miner gets an extra two cents per ton which the men claim will far from compensate them for the extra labor and expense.

It is estimated that it costs the company several times the two cents to drill the holes by machine, so that by substituting human power for mechanical power, Charley Schwab will save quite a tidy sum during the ensuing three years, to pay preferred dividends to his various "partners."

It is true that hand drilling is most generally in vogue in the Northern West Virginia mines, but this is all the more reason why the union instead of allowing labor-saving machinery to be abandoned where it has once been introduced, should require its extension into other mines, especially when the miner is the victim of the abandonment of the machine.

Employers Skinning Employes.

Of the many varieties of howls emitted by the union-busters, one of the favorites is, "Unionism opposes the introduction of machinery." But when this metal machinery is found to be more costly than human flesh and blood, then the howl is of another kind; if the Union then demands the retention of the machine it is "a cultivator of indolence," and if it demands that the human machine receive at least the same amount demanded by the metal machine or if the union stands for maintenance or increase of income of skilled workers whose skill is replaced by a machine, then the union is an "enemy of business enterprise and of efficiency."

If three days can produce so much "stablization" at one mine, what a great amount of "stablization," in the form of profits for the coal companies and other exploiters, can be looked for in three years. Truly the three-year agreement is a great achievement—for the capitalist class.

Farmers To Join Labor Legal Aid.

EVERETT, Wash., April 6.—Legal aid under labor control, which has proved a success in Seattle, is being organized in Everett with a new feature. Over 2,000 farmers, organized as the Western Progressive Farmers, are seeking affiliation and the protection afforded by the bureau. Most of the Everett unions are affiliated or have their applications in.

Jane Addams' Peace League Ousted From Chicago Headquarters

Inspired by the newspapers and American legion campaign of terrorism against pacifists the landlords of the Fine Arts building have ordered the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom to vacate the premises which the pacifist women have occupied for the last three years. Jane Addams is an active member of the league.

Fear of lawless raids on the women's meetings with attendant damage to property and to the reputation of the Michigan boulevard building were assigned by the Chapin interests which own it as contributing to the ouster notice.

"The landlords plainly intimated that they were afraid of raids," declares Secretary Ella Boynton of the women's peace league. "We have met regularly for three years without disorder from the legion or anyone else, but I think the false stories about pacifists carried by the Chicago Tribune, Daily News and other papers have roused groundless fears in the owners of the building.

"They also said that they wanted to raise the rent and that they had other plans for the rooms but I think the hue and cry against pacifists was the principal factor."

Altho the lease expires May 1, the landlords decided to take a chance for one additional month because the league's summer school had been advertised to meet in the Fine Arts building from May 1 to 31 and the sudden notice to terminate occupation of the premises had caught the women unawares.

Senator Love For Killing.

OSSINING, N. Y., April 6.—Shall capital punishment be abolished? Yes, is the answer of the majority of radio fans who voted in the recent radio debate on that subject. The speaker who upheld the reform was the warden of Sing Sing prison here, Lewis E. Lawes. State Senator William Love of Brooklyn talked thru the broadcaster against abolition of the electric chair.

Fake Advertising.

NEW ORLEANS, April 6.—Advestisements in New Orleans papers warn carpenters to stay away from Houston, Texas, owing to the lockout of union carpenters there. It is said that over 300 men are unable to obtain employment, despite the fact that the open shoppers in Houston are advertising for men.

Gompers' Socialist Henchmen Expel Communist Member From Bookkeepers' Union Without Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—Almost two years ago the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union, No. 12646, of the American Federation of Labor was in the hands of the progressive elements.

From time to time resolutions and decisions were passed which did not bear the approval of Mr. Gompers, therefore, he decided to smash this organization. He immediately instructed his henchman, Mr. Hugh Frayne, organizer in New York, to "reorganize" this local.

The play was performed immediately and the result was that from a membership of four to five hundred, only thirty or fifty were left in the reorganized union. Neither Mr. Gompers, nor his faithful tool, Mr. Frayne, nor his followers in the union worried very much what happened with these hundreds of office workers. And why should they worry about them? They don't need the members, they are not interested in the least about the fate of the workers. What they want is the "union," a "safe and sane" machine. There is no doubt that they have succeeded perfectly well in their destructive and cowardly mission.

Watchful Toms Busy.

At any rate, now the reorganized local with only a handful of office workers and socialist leaders, Mr. Bright and Mr. Bohm, president and secretary respectively, is "safe" forever. The rebel Communists are "smashed" and they will never even dare to come near this organization, so thought Mr. Gompers, Mr. Frayne and their brothers-in-arms in the union.

Time went on. The intolerable condition of the office workers in New York forced them to hunt up the organization. They found the B. S and A. U. No. 12646 and one by one they began to come and join it. Now, the great problem before the appointed union officials was to watch that the "undesirable" elements might not come (or sneak, as they say) into the organization. And they worked, very diligently spared no time or energy to search the minds and thoughts of every office worker that came to ask for admission into the union. Thanks to the "hard" and "energetic" work of our appointed officials, the membership of our union has passed the couple hundred mark.

Inevitable Happens.

And the inevitable happened. At the end of last year we had elections of our officials. Comrade Anton Bimba was elected as a delegate to the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York. The president of the union, Mr. Bright, and the secretary, Mr. Bohm, immediately smelled "danger" because they already knew that Bimba was not one of their "safe" and (in) sane machine. They talked the thing over and came to the conclusion that it wouldn't pay to raise this question at the union meeting and force new elections upon the membership. They were not sure whether they would succeed and win their case against Comrade Bimba. So finally, they decided to behave "honorably" and tie the hands of Comrade Bimba in the Central Trades and Labor Council by passing a decision in the union that our delegates must vote unanimously on all questions in the Council. In view of the fact that we, the "respectable" socialists have two delegates in the Council against one Communist our position will be secure and the Communist will be unable to make a "bloody revolution" there and set up the "soviets" in Greater New York. From now on "peace and good will" prevailed in our organization. We listened to the reports of our officials, applauded them, talked a lot and planned how to organize the office workers of New York. We, the members, began to see some hope of building up our organization and bringing into it at least a great portion of the white-collar slaves of the metropolis.

Gompers Issues Ukase.

Such was our illusion. But the president and secretary of our union did not see things in the same light as we did. They became uneasy and worried about the Communist in our union. If they cannot expel him, they must at least "save" the organization and not allow him to set up the "soviets" inside of it, for it may endanger their jobs and especially when brother Bright was contemplating a $50 job for himself. Therefore, regardless of the fact that the constitution of our union (Article IV, Section 1) says that the delegates to the Central Trades and Labor Council are included in the executive committee, they would not call Comrade Bimba to the meetings of the committee.

Then the convention of the Workers Party of America came and Mr. Gompers saw in the Communist papers that Comrade Bimba was a delegate to that convention. He also already knew that Comrade Bimba was a delegate to the Central Trades and Labor Council from the office workers' union, which he had cleaned up so completely and made "safe" forever. He immediately wrote to the officials of our union thru Mr. Frayne instructing them to investigate Comrade Bimba and take necessary steps for getting rid of the Communists again even at the expense of destroying the union. But our officials did not tell the membership about the receipt of such a letter from Mr. Gompers or Mr. Frayne. You see, they themselves wanted to be heroes in the fight against the Communists. Immediately Mr. Bohm prepared charges against Comrade Bimba, stating that the latter belongs to the Trade Union Educational League which is a "dual organization" and stands for the "revolution" and the "soviets" in this country. Worse than that, the league might take away the job of Mr. Bohm, Mr. Bright and Mr. Gompers! Therefore, "Brother Bimba is not eligible to membership in this union."

Sam's Orders Carried Out.

To make a long story short this is what followed: The trial committee reported to the membership meeting that the charges were not proven and, therefore, Brother Bimba should be exonerated, but should be withdrawn as a delegate from the Central Trades Council. Mr. Bright and Mr. Bohm voted for the report of the committee because they thought that if the charges are not proven then it is entirely illogical to expel a member merely for his political views or affiliations. They thought it would be better if this dirty job is left to the "pope" of the Federation himself. Soon after the meeting President Bright wrote to Mr. Gompers telling him they only recalled Mr. Bimba from the Central Trades Council. The membership would not stand any other step. What does Your Highness think?"

Mr. Gompers was astonished that his boys did not carry out his instructions completely. He immediately wrote to Mr. Bright that the "T. U. E. L. and the Workers Party are the same thing; in no sense is the Workers Party a political party and therefore, Brother Bimba must be immediately expelled from the union." And Mr. Gompers must be notified immediately when his instructions will be carried out. Mr. Bright, scared to death, brings the letter to the meeting of the executive committee and forces the decision to suspend Comrade Bimba. Then he wrote to Mr. Gompers that his instructions are carried out and received an answer thanking him for his obedience. All this happened before the meeting of the union. This is in violation of the constitution which says that a member may be suspended or expelled only after a fair trial and not by the officials or executive committee, but by the union membership meeting.

Expelled Refused Floor.

At the last meeting of the union (March 17) the case came up as a fait accompli. The instructions from Mr. Gompers were received and carried out and Comrade Bimba is no longer a member of our union and, therefore, he cannot even get the floor to state his case. Mr. Bohm cried at the top of his voice that if we grant the floor to Comrade Bimba, tomorrow our local will be reorganized. Mr. Bright told the meeting that it would mean only one thing if the meeting rejected the orders of Mr. Gompers and that is, the receiver would be sent immediately and the local would be reorganized tonight. He told the members that this was the opinion of Mr Frayne, the New York organizer of the A. F. of L.

The members were absolutely disgusted with the cowardly action of Mr. Gompers and his henchmen. Even some of the more honest socialists were opposed and protested against the instructions of Mr. Gompers. One of them said: "As long as I am a man and not a coward I will protest against such dirty and dishonest work on the part of Mr. Gompers or anybody else. Here we go out and call upon the workers to join the union and on the other hand we expel them. How will we dare to come to the office workers and ask them to come into our ranks after this meeting? Do you know that anywhere you go you will meet the communists? What will you do with them? Will you refuse to accept them into our union and still expect to get the other workers to join us?"

Socialists Lick Gomper's Fist.

The other socialists like Volk and Steinberger, of course, bowed their heads and licked the feet of Mr. Gompers. The final decision of the union was not to decide anything. That is, we do not take the responsibility for the expulsion of Comrade Bimba. We only notified him that he is expelled by our dictator and coward, Mr. Gompers.

ARGENTINA NOW LEADS WORLD IN EXPORT OF CORN

Russian Corn Becoming Factor on Market

Exports of corn from Argentina have averaged 132,000,000 annually in the three-year period 1920-22, as compared with 116,000,000 bushels from the United States, according to statistics compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. Argentine exports have averaged 71 per cent of its crop. Since the war, Argentina has been the most important competitor of the United States in world corn markets, the department says.

The world production of corn in 1923 is estimated at 4,202,000,000 bushels by the department, as compared with 3,972,000,000 bushels in 1922, and 3,904,000,000 bushels the 1909-13 pre-war average. Production in the United states is more than three times as large as the production in the rest of the world, the size of the American crop being the most important factor in determining the world market price, the department points out.

Only a small quantity of corn was exported from the United States in 1923 due to strong domestic demand. From 1896 to 1912 the United States exported large but decreasing quantities of corn, and in 1913 imported more than was exported. Exports in the fiscal year 1921-22 jumped nearly 180,000,000 bushels.

Plasterers Ban Overtime Work.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 6.—Plasterers have decided to refuse to work overtime unless the work is necessary. What is necessary work will be settled by the union. This step is taken by the union because the persistent use of overtime by the employers is breaking down the 44-hour week.

To Erect Pulp Mills.

NEW ORLEANS, April 6.—The Great Southern Lumber Company, of Bogalousa, will erect a two million dollar paper and pulp plant on the line of the Arkansas and Louisiana Missouri railroad between Monroe, La., and Crossett, Ark. James and William Buchanan will also erect a paper plant at Minden, La., costing in the neighborhood of two million dollars. Labor is cheap in these sections.

Above His Price

It is an old rule of capitalist politics that every man has his price. One can safely say that, as a rule, the big interests can buy the services of any man in governmental affairs or public life, provided they set a price commensurate with the abilities and standing of the man desired.

John W. Davis, who is now being boosted for the democratic presidential nomination, has been asked by some friends to cut loose from his big financial connections in order to be more presentable to the masses in November. Mr. Davis was for years a resident at the Court of St. James, sometimes known as American ambassador to Great Britain and more often as agent plenipotentiary for J. P. Morgan & Co. in Europe. Today, Mr. Davis is attorney for many big corporations among which is the House of J. P. Morgan.

In view of the dearth of democratic presidential timber of passable quality and in view of the hostility aroused amongst the masses towards outright corporate ownership of government officials, these friends would like to see Davis come forward as the Democratic white hope and free himself from the disadvantage of being open to attack because of his financial connections. But, John W. Davis is an old timer at the game of playing politics in the interests of the big bankers and manufacturers. He is a practical politician of the first water. Replying to the request of his friends, Mr. Davis declared that this is a price "entirely too high" to be paid for the presidential nomination of the democratic party, even in a year having such favorable outlook for success at the polls. The Morgan agent punctuates his refusal to comply with the advice of his solicitous friends by saying that to sever connections with his clients would be against his philosophy.

Is this lofty idealism or plain business sense dominating practical capitalist politics? Mr. Davis will fool no one. The only reason he refuses to break his legal and illegal connection with J. P. Morgan & Co. at this juncture is that he knows it is somewhat too late to be of service to him in a presidential campaign. Such a change at this late hour would be looked upon by everybody as mere political maneuver and would not serve its purpose. If Mr. Davis knew that he could get away with clean skirts in such a dropping of clients, he would hasten to accept the advice. The price asked of Mr. Davis is, therefore, too high only because of the severance of relations with J. P. Morgan just now would not be of aid in bluffing the workers and farmers into voting for him. All this talk of "philosophy and idealism" on the part of Mr. Davis is just that much bunk. It is merely strengthened assurance offered by Mr. Davis to his Wall Street masters that he is with them to the limit and that they need have no fear of his ever cringing and crouching before popular sentiment, like the fake progressive McAdoo did after he was uncovered as the attorney of Mr. Doheny, in order to get political office.

The Price Poincare Paid

The stabilization of the franc, its rise to the level of last December, the victory of President Poincare in the Chamber of Deputies, the passage of the emergency measures which he demanded, are not only fleeting triumphs for French imperialism, but they have been secured at a price that is beyond the capacity of even this gang of unscrupulous buccaneers to pay.

The emergency measures conferring on Poincare dictatorial powers in regard to taxation and reduction of expenditures were, as admitted by Poincare in the debate in the chamber, introduced at the demand of the House of Morgan and were the part of the conditions under which the recent loan secured by the French gold reserve was granted.

Poincare must now raise taxes 20 per cent, discontinue all reconstruction work—less than two-thirds completed—cut off the payroll a small army of government employes, dispose of government monopolies such as tobacco, quash all plans for increases of wages demanded by government workers and carry out the pledge already made that no more loans will be issued and government expenditure kept within the limits of revenue.

The Poincare government has kept power by a system of wholesale debauchery of the populace that is without precedent in modern Europe; it has catered to the military caste and allowed the most extravagant use of the public treasury for the purpose of satisfying this parasitic group. Its hegemony over Poland, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia has been secured by huge loans for military expenditures; the Ruhr project has been possible only by not counting the cost.

By far the largest part of French income now goes to satisfy the holders of government bonds and other securities and the populace, while restive, tolerated this condition as long as expenditures were made in other lines which prevented the enslavement of the workers and peasants to the bondholders becoming too obvious.

Today, the demands of the financiers who temporarily halted the downward plunge of the franc have removed the political basis of the Poincare power. The increase of taxation, the reduction of the government employes, the cut in the wages of those who remain, the discontinuance of reconstruction work, the scaling down of military appropriations, is bound to enrage all sections of the French middle-class and peasantry; the workingclass is already hostile and with elections coming in May the best informed political observers in Europe give Poincare three months of power at the most.

The franc will continue its toboggan slide despite drastic economies because there is no possible way of making the French budget balance except by demobilizing the army, cutting out all military appropriations, abandoning the occupation of the Ruhr and increasing taxes in a manner that will bring revolt from the thrifty peasants who have been told that Germany and Russia will pay the French war debts.

Everything points to actual bankruptcy of the capitalist economy of France in the near future and it will not be surprising if, before the end of the year, an open dictatorship will have wiped out all democratic camouflage in which the imperialists have been indulging and a French Mussolini will try the hopeless task of saving French capitalism with which the fortunes of the House of Morgan are now intertwined to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars wrung from the hides of American workers.

Imperialist Thunder

In his first public address since his appointment to the cabinet, Mr. Curtis D. Wilbur, new secretary of the navy, has shown his teeth as an imperialist par excellence.

Addressing the annual banquet of the Young Men's Christian Association at the sumptuous Willard Hotel, in Washington, Mr. Wilbur declared his naval policy to be for a fleet second to none in strength. He assured his listeners that "the navy would be prepared to calm any spirit of hostility that may assert itself" and that "the army and navy have been the greatest agencies we have had."

In this address Mr. Wilbur was not mouthing any empty phrases. He was sounding a challenge and a warning to the American working and farming classes. It smacks of historical irony and sad truth that a man who has been chosen to fill the cabinet post of one who was, in a large measure, driven out by hostility to the government, should, only a few days after his appointment, threaten to use the force of government against a recurrence of such hostility. But beyond this historical irony and sad truth there is lurking a most serious danger to the toiling masses of the country.

In the last decade the American navy has increased in value more than 259 per cent. This increase in wealth towers above the rapid strides made by all other items in the possession of the country or any individual. It is the best evidence of the determined policy of our imperialist capitalist class to dominate the world markets and achieve unchallengable supremacy in the various spheres of influence and investment. The rapid growth of the military and naval forces in the last decade have gone hand in glove with the steady increase of financial and industrial power of our capitalists in the world market.

Mr. Wilbur is an old timer at the game of rendering services to the capitalist masters. Mr. Wilbur hails from the golden state of California. Mr. Wilbur was a member of the California State Supreme Court which bears a large degree of the responsibility for the innocent Mooney and Billings still languishing behind prison bars today. Consequently when Mr. Wilbur speaks he means business, profitable business for the imperialist class of this country. His boast is a warning to the masses that they had better keep in mind what they are up against in showing hostility to the strikebreaking government of the United States.

Mr. Wilbur's plan to have a navy second to none is a challenge to the imperialist cliques of the other capitalist countries to watch their step and not tread on the toes of the pugnacious capitalist giant.

Mr. Wilbur's threat is a note of arrogant defiance to the oppressed peoples of the Philippines, Hawaii, San Domingo, Haiti, Honduras and other sections of the Orient and Latin America to stop nurturing aspirations for freedom from Wall Street's imperialist domination.

We hope and we know that the imperialist thunder of our new secretary of the navy will not fall on deaf ears, insofar as the working and farming class of the country are concerned. Too long and too often have the workers and farmers paid the price in blood and dollars to preserve the security and the profits of their exploiters, the capitalist class.

Morris Hillquit has discovered that Senator La Follette was always one in thought and action with the Socialist Party. Victor Berger was the navel string that connected both.

Poplarism--A Fight For the Unemployed

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Here is the first of a series of articles that will run in the DAILY WORKER during the week, by J. T. Murphy, the prominent British Communist and trade unionist. He tells of the brilliant fight of the workers of Poplar, the big working class district in London, that has always carried on a tremendous fight against labor's biggest problems, among them that of unemployment. Murphy writes as follows:

• • • •

By J. T. MURPHY.

When the Poplar Board of Guardians, headed by their Communist leader, Edgar Lansbury, and his father, George Lansbury, waited on the new Minister of Health, John Wheatley, and secured from him the rescinding of the Mond Order of 1922, they levelled a challenge which has roused Liberals and Tories alike, in the defense of class interests. Not so much because Wheatley had cancelled an order which none of his predecessors dared put into operation, but because it registered the triumph of a new principle in dealing with the problem of unemployment which, if allowed to develop thruout the country, would shake the foundations upon which capitalist economy had been operating for a century. Poplar declared that if the workers appealed to them for relief because of their inability to find the means of subsistence then they must give relief according to the needs of the applicants without regard to wages paid in the neighborhood. If wages were lower than the relief which was granted then that did not prove that the relief was too high but that the working conditions of the workers were a scandal to civilization.

Tax Rich, Help Workers.

So consistently had they applied their principles in one of the worst areas in the kingdom so far as unemployment and living conditions are concerned, that it passed beyond the power of the Poplar Guardians to find the money and money had to be secured from other authorities. This broke down the independence of the guardians in relation to relief, and forced the inequalities of the districts, both in numbers of unemployed and relief payments, right to the front. The higher authorities prosecuted the Poplar Guardians and forced them into prison for six weeks. But the Guardians won. By their victory they were able to transfer 250,000 Pounds per annum onto the other boroughs of the Metropolis so that the rich boroughs have now to pay where previously they escaped. It is this extraction of money from the pockets of the rich and the attack upon the low wage standards along lines which annoy the supply and demand politicians and employers, that is upsetting the equanimity of the ruling class. Poplarism is a class war attack along the hunger line.

The counter attack by Asquith, leader of the Manchester School of Liberals, only served to carry the fight a stage further. George Lansbury's reply damned the whole institution of poor law administration. Poor law relief in England has been a safety valve against revolution for a hundred years and more. But it has not stood alone. There is in-door relief when the applicant goes into what is called the workhouse. There is out-door relief. There is state insurance and countless charitable organizations operating on this problem. Asquith demands the revision of the poor law because Poplarism is in danger of making it into a weapon for the extraction of money from the rich and damaging the bargaining power for low wages in the labor market. Lansbury calls for new methods of dealing with relief because the incident of its operation is demoralizing and hateful to the workers.

History of Poor Law.

The history of the poor law in England is one of the most terrible to recount. It stretches far back to the beginning of the seventeenth century, and its trail along the intervening centuries is wet with the blood and tears of the aged, the infirm, the broken, the demoralized and battered by the soul destroying machine of a developing capitalism. It is a story of horrors only paralleled by the stories of the slave trade. By the act of Elizabeth in 1601 the state for the first time "acknowledged its responsibility to the poor and destitute." Previously this had been the function of the church. The parish (a village or group of villages) constituted the unit and the applicants for relief had to apply to the overseer or a magistrate for relief. A century later application was first to the overseer and if refused then to the magistrate. The form of relief was either: (1) out-door relief, or a weekly pension of a shilling or two at home; (2) in-door relief in a workhouse, or house of industry. The eighteenth century saw an impetus given to the workhouse form of relief, for the overseers were empowered to farm out the poor and any applicant for relief was refused without they expressed a willingness to go into the workhouse. Workhouses accordingly grew apace. But they were dreaded and hated by the poor for their dirt, diseases and devastating fevers that swept thru them. Thru all the period of the enclosure acts when the landlords drove the laborers from the land and stole the common land from the people, and the whole period of what is known as the industrial revolution it is one long horror. When the French Revolution drove the ruling class of Britain into nervous alarm and savage repression of the workers the development of the poor law by what is known as the Speenhamland act drove matters to the very limits of endurance. By this act every wage laborer in the country was reduced to the pauper level. "The magistrates resolved that a certain definite sum was 'absolutely necessary for the support of the poor, industrious laborer and that when the utmost industry of a family cannot produce the undermentioned sums, it must be made up by the overseer exclusive of rent'."

Pauperization of Workers.

This allowance system spread like wildfire. Why bother about paying wages except at the very lowest level? If they were not getting enough let them go to the guardians. The workers were driven to the guardians and farmed out by them. Universal pauperism prevailed. It has been left for the twentieth century to repeat the eighteenth. Thousands of miners in Wales, Lancashire and Scotland are repeating today the experiences of the first battalions of the proletariat of industrial England.

The revolts of those years, the persecutions, the hangings, the banishments, the imprisonments, the beatings, seem to belong to an inferno of the imagination. But they broke down the old laws and in 1883 the law which is still the foundation of the poor law activities was secured. By this act the Boards of Guardian are separate from the borough city and county councils, able to levy their own rates and make their own payments. So long as there is no crisis, no over straining of resources, no great inequalities in payments and resources they jog along tho continually the subject of investigation, complaint and condemnation. Local parsons, smug shop keepers, the busybodies anxious for the "dear poor" were always busy with them. While the workers hated them, treated them with contempt, and would not go to them until thoroly down and out. It was not until the wholesale breakdown of state insurance and every other means of relief drove the workers en masse onto the Guardians, that the Guardians have been again thrown into the limelight and the previous regulations have broken down. When thousands of workers marched from one board to another, surrounded, threatened them, locked them in their board meetings, it was no longer possible to keep up the Pecksniff virtues of prying into every nook and cranny of the domestic life of the workers before coming to their aid. Every commission of inquiry that has been held has condemned the Guardians mostly for different reasons. But now they have got to go because the workers have broken them as a means of suppressing their activities and turned them to account as weapons of attack.

Communist Program.

The Liberal Party is accordingly proposing the abolition of the Boards of Guardians and the merging of the County and Borough Councils. The Webbs and the Poor Law commissions are much in accord and there is every probability of the Labor Party and the Labor Government moving along these lines.

The Communist Party has put forward another alternative. We demand not only the abolition of the Poor Law institutions but State responsibility for payment of relief to unemployed and the administration of the relief to be made by the workers themselves thru the trades unions. The Party challenges the principle of that democracy which compels the workers to go cap in hand to the local grocer or parson or creature of the petty bourgeoisie. The workers are capable of administering state insurance thru the unions, why not unemployment relief too? This the party argues also would help to keep the unemployed and employed workers together and force upon the union leaders the task of facing up to the problem of unemployment in its sharpest form. The Party has had some success in its campaign. The first demand in the unemployed Charter issued by the General Council of the Trades Union Congress and the Unemployed Workers Committee contains the Communist Party proposal. Once on a time the employers granted relief as a means to reduce wages and to crush the workers with their administrative machinery. Today the workers are forcing them to grant relief and taking the administration from their hands. That's the meaning of Poplarism!

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

• • • •

John Brown's Men.

I HAVE WRITTEN almost entirely of John Brown, and because of necessities of space I have given little attention to the brave youths who fought under him at Harper's Ferry. Yet here I must stop and with only the facts, paint some portrait of the men who followed John Brown. It will be seen that they were no ordinary ruffians, no bandits, adventurers or madmen, as the South called them at the time. They were young crusaders, thoughtful, sensitive and brave. They had a philosophy of life; and they were filled with passion for social justice. One may disagree with such men, but one must not fail to respect them.

There were twenty-one men with John Brown at Harper's Ferry, sixteen of whom were white and five colored. Only one was of foreign birth; nearly all were of old American pioneer stock.

Students Not Fanatics.

John Henry Kagi was the best educated of the raiders, largely self-taught, a fine debater and speaker, and an able correspondent for the New York Tribune and the New York Evening Post. He had been a school teacher in Virginia, and had come to know and hate slavery there, protesting so vigorously that he was finally run out of the State. He practised law in Nebraska, but left this to join John Brown in the Kansas fighting. He was killed at Harper's Ferry.

Aaron Dwight Stevens was in many ways the most attractive and interesting of the personalities about John Brown. He ran away from his home in Massachusetts at the age of sixteen, and joined the United States army, serving in Mexico during the Mexican War. Later he was sentenced to death for leading a soldiers' mutiny against an offensive pro-slavery Major at Taos, New Mexico. President Pierce commuted the sentence to three years at hard labor in Fort Leavenworth. Stevens escaped from his prison, and joined the Free State forces in Kansas, for he had always been a firm abolitionist. Stevens came of old Puritan stock, his great-grandfather having been a captain in the Revolutionary War. He was a man of superb bravery and of wonderful physique; well over six feet, handsome, with black penetrating eyes and a fine brow. He had a charming sense of humor, and a beautiful baritone voice, with which he sang in camp and in prison. He was hung soon after John Brown for the Harper's Ferry raid.

John E. Cook was a young law student of Brooklyn, New York, a reckless, impulsive and rather indiscreet youth, to whom much was forgiven because of his genial smile and generous nature.

Charles Plummer Tidd escaped after the raid, and died a First Sergeant in one of the battles of the Civil War. He had not much education but good common sense, and was always reading and studying in an attempt to repair his lack of training. Quick-tempered, but kind-hearted, a fine singer and with strong family affections.

Courageous Fighters.

Jeremiah Goldsmith Anderson, killed at Harper's Ferry in his 27th year, was also of Revolutionary American stock. A sworn abolitionist, he wrote in a letter three months before his death: "Millions of fellow beings require it of us; their cries for help go out to the universe daily and hourly. Whose duty is it to help them? Is it yours? Is it mine? It is every man's, but how few there are to help. But there are a few to answer this call and dare to answer it in a manner that shall make this land of liberty and equality shake to the center."

Albert Hazlett, executed after Brown, was a Pennsylvania farm worker, "a good-sized, fine-looking fellow, overflowing with good nature and social feelings."

Edwin Cappoc, also one of those captured and hung, was well liked even by the Southerners who saw him in jail, and some of them hoped to get him pardoned. He came of Quaker farmer stock.

Barclay Coppoc, his brother, was not yet twenty-one when he fought at the Arsenal. He escaped after the raid but was killed in the Civil War. After the raid he returned to Kansas and nearly lost his life in an attempt to free some slaves in Missouri.

William Thompson, a neighbor of the Browns at North Elba, in New York, was killed at Harper's Ferry, in his 26th year. He was full of fun and good nature and bore himself unflinchlingly when face to face with death.

Dauphin Osgood Thompson, his brother, was only twenty years old when he met the same fate for the cause of freedom. Dauphin was a handsome, inexperienced country boy, "more like a shy young girl than a warrior, quiet and good," said one of the Brown women later.

Brown's Son Sacrifices Life.

Oliver Brown, John Brown's youngest son, was also twenty years old when he died at Harper's Ferry. His girl-wife and her baby died early the next year. "Oliver developed rather slowly," says Miss Sarah Brown. "In his earlier teens he was always preoccupied, absent-minded — always reading, and then it was impossible to catch his attention. But in his last few years he came out very fast. His awkwardness left him. He read every solid book that he could find, and was especially fond of Theodore Parker's writings, as was his father. Had Oliver lived, and not killed himself with over-study, he would have made his mark. By his exertions the sale of liquor was stopped at North Elba."

John Anthony Copeland, a free colored man, 25 years old, was educated at Oberlin College. He was dignified and manly, and in jail there were prominent Southerners who were forced to admit his fine qualities. He was hung for the raid.

Mostly Young Men.

Stewart Taylor, the only one of the raiders not of American birth, was a young Canadian wagon maker, 23 years old. He was fond of history and debating, and heart and soul in the abolition cause. Killed in the Arsenal.

William H. Leeman, the youngest of the raiders, killed in his 19th year. He had gone to work in a shoe factory at Haverhill, Mass., when only 14 years old, and tho with little education, "had a good intellect and great ingenuity." He was the "wildest" of Brown's men, for he smoked and drank occasionally, but, the Old Puritan captain liked him, nevertheless, for he was boyish, handsome and brave.

Osborn Perry Anderson was also a Negro. He escaped after the raid and fought thru the Civil War.

Francis Jackson Meriam was a wealthy, young abolitionist who put all his fortune into the cause, and came from New England to join John Brown in the raid. He escaped also, and died in 1865, after having been the captain of a Negro company in the Civil War.

Lewis Sheridan Leary, colored, left a wife and a six-months old baby at Oberlin, Ohio, to go to Harper's Ferry. He was a harness maker by trade, and descended from an Irishman, Jeremiah O'Leary, who fought in the Revolution. Leary was 25 years old when he died of his terrible wounds in the Arsenal fighting.

Owen Brown, another of John Brown's sons, was stalwart and reliable, and is reported original in expression and thought, like all the Browns. He is also said to have been quite humorous. He survived the raid, and died in Pasadena, Calif., in 1891.

Watson Brown, another son, 24 years old when killed at the Ferry, was tall and rather fair, very strong, and a man of marked ability and sterling character.

All Loved John Brown.

Dangerfield Newby was born a slave in Virginia, but his father, a Scotchman, freed him with other mulatto children. Newby had a wife and seven children still in slavery, and he was trying to raise money to buy them, for they were to be sold further south. He failed at this; and joined John Brown in desperation. He was killed at the Ferry, and so failed to free his poor family, as he had dreamed.

Shields Green, colored, was also born a slave, but escaped, leaving a little son in slavery. He met Brown thru Frederick Douglass, the great Negro orator, and joined the raid, tho many warned him it would mean his death. He was uneducated, but deeply emotional, and deeply attached to the "ole man," as he called John Brown. He was hung after the raid; his age, 23.

They were all young men; the average age of the band was 25 years and five months. They were all strong, intelligent, in love with life and eager for the future; but they chose to attempt this mad, dangerous deed rather than consent any longer to the lie and to the power of black slavery.

John Brown they followed and loved as one would a strong and kindly father. There was always something patriarchal about John Brown and his soldiers, many observers said. It made his deed seem like some story out of the Bible, the swift and terrible justice of the Lord of Hosts.

United Hebrew Trades Leaders Oppose Plan For May Celebration

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 6.—The United Front May Day conference representing 100,000 organized workers of this city in an effort to oppose the solid capitalist front with the united forces of the workers has again sent delegates to the May Day conference called by the United Hebrew Trades in conjunction with the Jewish Verband, and again joint action was forstalled by the leaders of the United Hebrew trades railroading a motion to table the communication extending an invitation to jointly celebrate the coming May Day.

A motion to grant the committee of the United Front May Day conference the floor was amidst great uproar declared defeated.

On a motion to hold a parade the coming May Day a debate ensued with the rank and file in favor and the stagnant leadership bitterly opposed. Some were open in their opposition while others like S. P. Kramer of the Socialist Party feared that the American Legion and the Ku Klu Klan would interfere. The truth, however, was brought out when the officials of the United Hebrew Trades voiced their opinion that it was doomed to be a failure, well knowing that they have not the masses behind them, and also that they may ential the wrath of the masters by awakening the revolutionary fervor of the workers.

REPUBLICAN PARTY CRACKING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—No longer denying the existence of a third party movement, Coolidge political leaders are concentrating their efforts on minimizing the split. They want to rob the independent movement as much as they can of its power for harm to the Coolidge candidacy. The whole question now is how big the independent vote will be and which party it will hurt most. On the face of things, the republicans stand to suffer more than the democrats, since the new movement of protest centers in states which normally would be republican territory. Tho they are not spending much time now hunting for the reason for the break, the Coolidge leaders are trying to claim it did not come as a result of the oil and other scandals, but because of the failure of Congress to back up the President. Keenest disappointment is expressed over the refusal of Congress to pass farm relief legislation. Action on this, it is excitedly claimed, would have saved the situation. It is now too late to expect any effective legislation and the Coolidge leaders are no longer depending on it. They have, in effect, dismissed Congress from consideration as an asset and except for the hoped for passage of the tax bill, they look for no aid from the legislators.

Howat Urges Support of the Garment Strikers

KANSAS MINE LEADER URGES LABOR UNITY

Asks Support For The Class Farmer-Labor Party

If the organized labor movement of Chicago had leaders who were behind the garment strikers as they should be, the strike would already have been won, Alexander Howat, nationally known leader of the Kansas coal miners, told a mass-meeting of four hundred strikers yesterday afternoon at 180 West Washington Street.

The fighting Kansas miner, after telling how the organized workers of Kansas crushed Governor Allen's industrial court law, declared:

"Now is the time when we see the value of independent political action of labor. If we had a strong independent Class Farmer-Labor Party in Chicago we could bring political as well as industrial pressure to bear and have the unlawful injunction against picketing nullified."

Labor Faces Splendid Opportunity.

"The workers of Chicago have a splendid opportunity here to set an example to the rest of the country by once and for all settling the right of the workers to unchain themselves from the bosses.

"Let us hope the trade unionists of Chicago take advantage of the coming convention of the Farmer-Labor Party in St. Paul on June 17 to form a united party of labor. Then the judges will not dare to use an unlawful injunction. They will be forced to respect you.

"As long as the workers submit to the injunction just so long will the injunction be used against them by the bosses. I call on the leaders of organized labor in Chicago to awaken from their slumbers. Let them arouse themselves, and setting the example, get down on the picket line. If the organized labor movement lets Chicago and the whole country know that they are behind the Ladies' Garment Workers to the last ditch, then the judges will not dare to put any more strikers in jail.

Must Get Together.

"The time has come when the 85 per cent of the people—the workers—who produce the world's wealth should realize the necessity for getting together in a great Farmer-Labor Party, so that the producers of the wealth shall be able to run the nation. The politicians have been keeping the workers divided, as have many of the officers of the international trades unions.

"We must do as they are doing in Great Britain. There is no reason why we shouldn't have a working class government in America. Let us get behind the June 17th convention and form a militant Farmer-Labor Party."

Alexander Howat called on the labor officials of Chicago to call out

Workers! Farmers! Stay Away from the Capitalist Parties' Primaries, Today!

WAGE WORKERS and Working Farmers of Illinois! Stay away from the Primaries of both the Capitalist Political Parties today.

Remember that during the term of office of the politicians of both the republican and democratic parties, the woman's eight-hour law was killed.

Remember that during the reign of the Lundin-Thompson-Small machine, the Dailey Commission was actively engaged in persecuting and attempting to smash the trade unions, while police and gunmen were protecting professional strikebreakers on Chicago construction jobs, and browbeating and intimidating the striking stockyards workers.

The Essington-McCormick-Brundage Machine put Injunction Judge Wilkerson on the bench, and were the active proponents of the "Cossack" State Police Bill and the proposed new state constitution.

It is the police of the democratic mayor, Dever, and the detectives of the republican state's attorney, Crowe, who join in fighting the strike of the ladies' garment workers.

They are, all of them, crooked politicians of both old party machines, Birds of a Feather, the champions of the privileged class.

* * * *

Some labor leaders have attempted to fool the rank and file workers, and serve their own personal interests by endorsing one candidate as against the other.

Even John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and other representative members and officials of the Farmer-Labor Party, have cowardly turned tail to their own program of independent political action by the workers. They have become the tools of reaction—the supporters of the candidates on the capitalist tickets. The rank and file workers must and will settle accounts with such leaders.

* * * *

At the regular meeting, Sunday, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, these turncoats would not allow the question of the discussion of today's elections to come before the delegates. They feared what action the delegates might take.

They feared that the delegates might join in demanding that the workers and farmers of Illinois stay away from the old party primaries today.

They feared that the delegates might join in demanding real unity of the forces of the industrial workers and farmers thruout the state, in a functioning, representative class Farmer-Labor Party.

They feared that the delegates might show their sympathy for the great national gathering of city workers and working farmers to be held in St. Paul, Minn., June 17th. Therefore, they gagged the meeting by railroading an early adjournment. Of such stuff are the politicians of the old parties made.

Workers and Farmers of Illinois!

Today is your opportunity!

Stay away from the Primaries of the Capitalist Politicians!

Agitate for the Class Farmer-Labor Party!

Work for the success of the June 17th Convention!

Cossacks Rule Where Kluxers Murdered Two at Lilly, Pa.

LILLY, Pa., April 7.—State cossacks today were in power in Lilly, following a revolver battle Saturday night between members of the Ku Klux Klan and town folk in which two men were killed and a score injured.

The riot started when a group of young men turned a fire hose on more than five hundred klansmen who were marching to the railroad station after holding a ceremony on Piper Hill.

Klansmen Start Shooting.

When the water struck the marchers, it is alleged, members of the klan drew revolvers and fired into the town folk.

Many of the townsmen who were armed, returned the fire. The men on opposing sides who were unarmed used bricks and stones for weapons.

At the first volley Phillip Conrad, 25, and Floyd Paul, 25, town folk, were shot thru the breast and killed.

Four men of Lilly, believed to have been the ring leaders in the riot, are under arrest today and are being held for questioning. State troopers made the arrests after an investigation.

Fifteen of the townsmen injured in the battle are in hospitals.

LABOR RULE IN ENGLAND HITS SNAG

Suffers Defeat In House of Commons, 251 to 212

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 7.—The Ramsay MacDonald labor government was defeated in the House of Commons this afternoon 251 to 212, in a vote on its proposed evictions bill.

The defeat was a serious blow to the government and was its first defeat in Commons.

Altho cries of "resign" followed announcement of the voting, it was understood the government would retain office.

The Bill was one that provided protection to persons out of work against eviction for non-payment of rent. It contained provisions that the rent in such cases should be raised from taxpayers of the community.

It was a radical measure, proposed, not entirely with the cabinet's approval, by more extreme members of the labor party.

After the defeat MacDonald announced that the government would reconsider the measure and meanwhile would not resign.

The actual phraseology of the measure was:

"No eviction order shall be issued until the tenant has a reasonable opportunity to apply to local relief authorities and the authorities have been given an opportunity to investigation."

Ex-premier Baldwin urged that the entire clause be abolished.

Ex-premier Asquith declared the amendment "meaningless, impracticable and worthless."

LaFollette Could Defeat Coolidge Now, Says Barrett

If the presidential elections were held now Senator La Follette's third party movement would carry enough states to defeat the regular republican organization and permit the democrats to win, or throw the election into congress, John Barrett, former ambassador to Argentina declared here today on his return from an investigation of conditions in Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

La Follette would be sure to carry the Dakotas, Wisconsin, Minnesota and possibly two other states, Barrett said.

Pepper for World Peace, But What About Pennsylvania?

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A resolution requesting that the president call a world conference for limitation of naval, land and air armaments and for furthering world peace, was introduced in the senate today by Senator Pepper, Pa.

The resolution stated that the conference should consider plans for a world court "either thru development of the present permanent court of arbitration at the Hague or thru the disassociation of the present permanent court of international justice at the Hague from the league of nations."

MRS. JAKE HAMON IS CALLED TO TESTIFY IN HARDING DEAL PROBE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—Senator Walsh announced that Mrs. Jake Hamon would be subpoenaed today and ordered to bring with her all bank books and records of expenditures made by her late husband and all loans made during the 1920 campaign and six months before.

In this way he hopes to establish the truth or falsity of the "deal" story.

Frank Ketch, former administrator of the Hamon estate and William Miller also are to be called.

Miller, in charge of the Harding campaign in Oklahoma, is called in order to determine whether or not Hamon paid the "hotel expenses" of the Harding headquarters in Chicago. He was ordered to bring any records he may have that relate to pre-convention expenses or expense at the convention.

The committee will not meet until Wednesday, the Tuesday session having been postponed in order that the committee members may attend other important meetings.

BLOODY FIST WINS ELECTION FOR MUSSOLINI

Voters Told Duty to Vote Fascist

ROME, April 7.—Premier Benito Mussolini, the fascist dictator of Italy, thru the application of his iron fist and bloody rule, has been able to keep himself in power. During the elections which took place Sunday the fascisti terrorized the populace and in many districts there was only one candidate, that of the fascisti.

This election was merely an attempt on the part of Mussolini to wrap the cloak of constitutionalism around his fascist dictatorship. The elections were so arranged that he is positive of at least the solid parliamentary majority of 356 delegates. The opposition parties could at the most, elect only 179 delegates out of the 535 delegates in the Italian Parliament. Under this arrangement he cannot be overthrown by the opposition parties.

The entire fascisti organization was mobilized yesterday to get out the vote and supervise the election. Whenever the result was in doubt, Fascist pressure was brought to bear upon the electors. Personal letters, warning the recipient that it was his duty to vote, were sent to everyone.

In some of the outlying districts, the polling was conducted in the open, so that every voter might be encouraged to vote "right."

Saw Bars and Win Freedom at Military Prison in California

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 7.—Search for nine convicts who sawed the bars in the military prison at the presidio of San Francisco last night and escaped was being prosecuted today by military police and San Francisco officers.

Sixty-five prisoners in the guard house could have followed their companions to freedom but did not.

U. S. ATTORNEY, POLITICAL HEADS, AIDED BOOTLEGGING IN CHICAGO, SAYS WITNESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A sensational story of his unsuccessful three years' fight against an alleged bootleg ring in Chicago was told before the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee today by Brice Armstrong, a general prohibition agent.

Armstrong told how he had been threatened, his house blown up by a bomb and of alleged offers of a bribe of $5 a barrel on beer from seven Chicago breweries. He connected many men high in Illinois politics with the alleged ring.

Accuses Brundage, Galpin.

Armstrong brought the name of Attorney General Brundage of Illinois and Homer Galpin, chairman of the Cook County Republican committee into his testimony.

Armstrong charged that C. W. Middlekauf, a special assistant United States attorney general in Chicago, in charge of injunction cases against prohibition violators, had permitted many injunctions to "lay dormant."

He also charged Middlekauf with complicity in a plot to permit the Puro Products company, accused of prohibition violations, to sell its property while an injunction against it was temporarily lifted.

Names Illinois Brokerage Co.

Armstrong named the Illinois Beverage company, among others that had been enjoined and the injunctions never pressed. This company, he said, was owned by "Terry" Druggan and Frank Lake.

"It is the same 'gun crew' that owns the Standard brewery and others," said Armstrong.

"Who were the attorneys for this 'gun crew?'" asked Senator Wheeler.

"Lowell B. Mason, state senator from the Oak Park district, was the man who came to Washington to get permits for the breweries after they had violated the law," said the witness.

"Who was the man this bootleg ring went to to find out what to do?"

Caught Red Handed.

"Homer Galpin, chairman of the county committee."

Officials of Brundage's office came to him and endeavored to have him dismiss a case against a bootlegger he had "caught red handed selling poison stuff," Armstrong said.

Armstrong said "Terry" Druggan personally had threatened him, telling him he would "settle with him if he didn't lay off."

He said the offer of $5 on a barrel of beer had been made "if he would just stay out of the vicinity." The offer was made, he said, thru another prohibition agent who would not disclose who was behind the offer, unless Armstrong agreed to accept it.

Smuts Goverment Quits at Capetown, Prince Stays Home

LONDON, April 7.—A central news dispatch from Capetown, says that the government headed by Premier Jan Smuts has resigned.

There is much speculation as to whether the political crisis or the Prince's health is responsible for the reported cancellation.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Unless Senator Norris, chairman, is overruled by Ford backers, the Senate agricultural committee will postpone hearings on the Muscle Shoals bill until next week.

DETROIT LABOR ACTS ON F.-L. P. CONFERENCES

Elect Delegates St. Paul and Cleveland

By CYRIL LAMBKIN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., April 7.—Invitations to both the June 17th Convention in St. Paul and the July 4th conference in Cleveland were accepted by the Detroit Federation of Labor at its meeting last week. Two delegates spoke in opposition to the St. Paul meet, but when the vote was taken theirs were the only votes cast against it. The consensus of opinion was that the Detroit Federation should participate in all efforts leading to working class political action.

Other matters of a political nature that were acted upon by the Federation at this meeting were the passage of a ringing resolution condemning Coolidge as an enemy of labor; the shelving of a communication soliciting the endorsement of Major Berry, the strike-breaking president of the Pressmen's Union for vice-president on the Democratic ticket; the endorsement for mayor of Highland Park, a great suburb of Detroit, in which is located the Ford factory, of I. Paul Taylor, an ex-minister and ex-socialist, running on a non-partisan ticket.

At the same meeting the newly elected officers were installed. Frank X. Martel was re-elected business representative, and in addition was elected president. This innovation was made for the purpose of having the executive of the Detroit Federation its spokesman as well. John F. Simmons of the Typographical Union was elected secretary, J. A. McDonald of the Motion Picture Operators, vice-president, and John T. Taylor, the ex-president, Dennis Batt, the editor of the Detroit Labor News, John Upton, William Mollenhauer, and Herman Richter members of the board of directors.

The Detroit Federation of Labor hereafter will meet the first and third Wednesdays of the month instead of every Wednesday.

Two Die When Chicago Landlords Have Their Way

Edward Schneider, a machinist, and his two year old son, Eddie, Jr., are dead today because "landlords wouldn't have the kid."

The two died of asphyxiation last night when the elder Schneider turned on the gas and took the boy in his arms to "rock him to sleep."

Schneider's suicide and the murder of Eddie, Jr., followed the father's fruitless search for an apartment yesterday. He found that all landlords, like the one who ordered him to move May 1, didn't want children in the house. His wife was continuing the search when Schneider killed himself and the boy.

FALL HALTED THE FIGHT ON LAND FRAUDS

Letter To Daugherty Is Made Public In Probe

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Former Secretary of Interior Fall called a halt on prosecution of the Miller brothers in Oklahoma Indian land fraud cases in which they were involved, according to a letter introduced in the record of the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee today.

Edwin S. Booth, solicitor of the Interior Department, gave the committee a letter from Fall to Att'y-General Daugherty, dated April 10, 1921, in which Fall asked postponement of action against the Miller brothers until a later term of the Oklahoma court.

Fall wrote Daugherty that "the public interest would not be jeopardized by withholding the cases" until a later term and said that Indian Commissioner Burke wanted to go over them.

Two days later, according to testimony of H. M. Peck, then U. S. district attorney in Oklahoma, was ordered by the department of justice to postpone the cases.

Tried to Prevent Scandal.

Senator Harreld, Oklahoma, today told the senate Daugherty investigating committee that he took a hand in the Miller Brothers Oklahoma Indian land fraud to prevent a "scandal."

When Harry Daugherty, then attorney general, served notice in August, 1921, that he intended to remove H. M. Peck as United States district attorney in Oklahoma before the case came to trial, Harreld said that he went to Daugherty and told him "a scandal would surely result."

The case revolved around alleged procurement by the Miller Brothers of 10,000 acres of Indian land valued at $500,000 thru fraudulent means.

McCray Lawyers Try to Take Big Case from the Jury

INDIANAPOLIS, April 7.—Presentation of evidence by the defense began today in the trial of Governor Warren T. McCray on a charge of embezzling $155,000 of the funds of the Indiana state board of agriculture.

The testimony of I. Newt Brown, former secretary-treasurer of the board, that he gave the money to McCray for deposit in the governor's bank at Kentland, Ind., was the center of attack.

Several other members of the fair board who had knowledge of the McCray transactions were ready to take the stand as defense witnesses. From them McCray's attorneys expected to get the declaration that Brown loaned the money to McCray personally.

A motion to take the case of Governor McCray from the jury and instruct a verdict of not guilty for the defendant was made on behalf of McCray by George Barnard, one of his attorneys, when the defense opened its case today in the trial of McCray on charges of larceny and embezzlement.

Howat Urges Strike Support

every trade unionist in town and march down to the picket line in a body. "Let the trade union officials of this city mass their forces," he said. "The injunction is being used to break your strike and keep the workers in subjection. If twenty-five thousand organized workers would march down to the picket line, they wouldn't have room enough in the jails to put them all.

Injunction Not New Weapon.

"The use of the injunction in this strike is no new thing. The struggle of the workers for the right to their self respect and manhood is a long hard fight. The government always uses its cops and soldiers in the interest of the employers against the workers. It is the same story in Chicago. The bosses have asked the cops to beat up the strikers. That's been the history of this country for many years."

Howat told the strikers the story of the industrial court law of Kansas. "If we had submitted to Allen's pet method of chaining the workers to the employers," Howat declared, "the industrial court would have been a success and there would have been no more strikes in Kansas. The injunction here in Chicago as well as in Kansas was created to chain the workers to their jobs like a pack of slaves.

"After the miners strike, and after some of us had served sixteen months in jail the industrial court law was declared unconstitutional. I would be glad to serve another sixteen months rather than surrender to the bosses. We showed them in Kansas that the injunction could not stop strikes, and you have to do the same thing here in Chicago."

"Kill the Injunction."

"Kill the injunction," Howat concluded. "The day is past and gone when the workers can be tied to the bosses. Get into the Farmer-Labor Party on June 17 and make the labor leaders wake up, and in the next strike the bosses won't try to put an unlawful injunction over on you."

Howat told the strikers that he came at the suggestion of the Workers Party and that all the Workers Party members were solidly behind the strikers in their fight.

Politics Halts Attack On Strikers.

Politics is the most engaging subject of all political hangers-on just now. Even the city police and state's attorney Crowe's men are so busy over politics that they have neglected to make their usual number of arrests in the Market and Jackson strike zone.

Yesterday morning only one girl was picked up for picketing, altho the usual number of pickets appeared in front of the shops.

The injunction cases have been put over till Wednesday, when 60 or 70 will come up. The union expects to deposit more than $100,000 bonds for appealing cases this week. About $40,000 was put up last week.

Today's electioneering will probably hold the attention of the police and the courts until final results are established. Picketing has to go on, politics or not, and no one expects politics to interfere long with police activities. The bosses won't give the strikers respite.

One of the faithful pickets was pointed out by a boss whom she had never seen and was hailed into "Dennie" Sullivan's injunction court for contempt. The girl is Clara Croughan. She claims that this is the first time she has been run in during this strike.

Busy at Northwestern.

Hull House settlement workers who were interested in the strike may not be involved in politics but they have turned to quieter activities than picketing and taking officers' numbers. Northwestern University's little flare against the pacificists has diverted the settlement worker's eyes from the garment strike for the time being.

Miss Helen Tippy, one of the Hull House residents who first picketed the struck Evanston dress shops with the garment workers, reports that "everything is quiet" in the suburb at present. She was seen at strike headquarters, 180 W. Washington street, yesterday, getting the latest developments of the fight here.

Walsh Seeks Witnesses to Back Story Presidency Bought For Harding for $1,000,000 In 1920

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 7. —Senate oil investigators are marking time while Senator Thomas J. Walsh prepared to spring new sensations when the committee reopens hearings Tuesday.

Walsh, thru his new national investigating agency, has been checking up witnesses thruout the country whom he will bring on here next week to testify concerning alleged "deals" at the 1920 republican national convention.

Since Al Jennings told the committee that the late Jake Hamon had told him he spent over $1,000,000 to get the late President Harding nominated, with the expectation of becoming his secretary of the interior, Walsh has been busy ferreting out witnesses who will shed more light on the story.

Walsh has located a number of persons who are willing to come on to Washington to corroborate Jennings' story.

Walsh told the committee he will prove that a conspiracy existed among oil interests before the last republican convention to obtain the appointment of a "complacent" secretary of the interior who would lease the naval oil reserves.

Walsh will also push his investigations into contributions to the republican campaign fund both before and after the election and Senator Spencer, Missouri, will endeavor to bare full details of contributions to democratic party funds.

Trachtenberg Speaks Here Friday, Apr. 18, at North Side Hall

Alexander Trachtenberg, whose recent tours thru Soviet Russia and Europe qualify him to speak with authority, is to lecture in Chicago on "The International Situation" on the night of Friday, April 18, at the North Side Turner Hall, 820 North Clark street.

Comrade Trachtenberg has just completed a triumphal tour thru New York State, where he met with large crowds and much enthusiasm. Comrade Trachtenberg will analyze, in his Chicago talk, the effect of the recent wholesale recognitions of Soviet Russia on the International situation, and will relate some of the leading events leading up to the establishment of the Soviet government as the most stable government of Europe.

MOVIE 'STARS' GOT PLAYED FOR SUCKERS

'Twas Good Scheme For Producers

More "movie" fame hopes were blighted in Judge Charles A. Williams' court when the Popular Motion Picture Production Company's officials pleaded guilty to playing the confidence game.

The court might have been "location," for all an onlooker could see. The whole cast was in attendance upon his honor: "queen", ingenue," numerous "heroes" and the "villian," who conducted the prosecution. All of them had told the same tale.

Vice-president William Bauer, of the Popular concern, had found each one of the "perfect type" and had contracted their services for $100, paid down by the aspiring stars. In addition, most of the misguided hopefuls had paid $35 for a course in "make-up", or "how to sling the paint".

Salaries were to be paid the members of the cast when the production was released. Some of the "leading lights" had been promised as much as $75 a week, plus their share of the profits. There was nothing wrong with the scheme; only Bauer pocketed the dough and failed to produce the picture.

The case had first come before a jury, but was later taken from them by the change of plea. Judge Williams will pass sentence within two weeks.

HAMON SPENT $400,000 FOR G. O. P. WIN

Didn't Expect To Get Into The Cabinet

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The late Jake Hamon spent $400,000 "for a republican victory" in the election of President Harding, J. B. French of Oklahoma City, Okla., friend of Hamon, told the Senate Oil Committee today.

"When Jake came back from the 1920 convention I asked him if he was going to get in the cabinet," French said.

"He told me that he would not, but he said, however, that he had spent too much money—about $400,000, for a republican victory."

Marsh Forgets.

French said he knew nothing of reports that Hamon swung money and votes to the late Mr. Harding at the convention in return for a promise of the secretaryship of Interior.

Wilbur W. March, treasurer of the democratic national committee, was the first witness called when the session opened. Marsh resigned January 15 this year. Marsh said he could not remember the amounts contributed by E. L. Doheny to the party fund but he said the records are accessible at national headquarters here.

W. L. Kistler, president of the producers and refiners corporation of Tulsa, Okla., was the second witness. His testimony failed to develop any facts concerning the reported attempt of oil men to put over a "complacent" secretary of the interior at the last republican national convention, about which he was questioned.

Walsh then put French on the stand and asked if Hamon had ever told him how much money he had spent at the Chicago convention.

French said that Hamon told him that he had given $25,000 "so that Mr. Harding's hotel bill could be paid."

Pays Harding's Bills.

"Who did he pay that money to?" Walsh asked.

"Bill Miller, former attorney general of Ohio and campaign manager for Harding in Oklahoma."

"How did he come to pay Mr. Harding's hotel bills?"

"I don't know."

"'I told the boys I would take care of Oklahoma,' Hamon told me," he continued.

Senator Spencer then began cross questioning the witness.

"When you say that Hamon paid Mr. Harding's hotel bills, you mean—"

"I mean the bills of his committee—his headquarters—not his personal bills."

Senator Stanfield, Oregon republican, then asked how the $400,000 Hamon contribution was disbursed.

"By bank check, I think."

"Then there probably would be a record of his expenditures in Oklahoma banks?"

"I imagine so."

French was then dismissed.

Robert F. Wolfe, of Columbus, Ohio, was next called.

Asked about the Ohio pre-convention campaign Wolfe said:

"I supported General Wood in the campaign. We elected 11 delegates out of a total of 38. I went to the convention—but not as a delegate."

"Do you know anything about the offer made to Wood by the late Jake Hamon at the convention?"

"Senator, I know nothing about that except what I've read in the papers."

"What part did you have in attempting to get Wood nominated?"

"My friends and I decided that Mr. Harding being a newspaper publisher—we would take no vigorous action against him. That was the course we followed. I was never in the Harding headquarters and I was in the Wood headquarters only once in Chicago. I stayed in my hotel room most of the time."

Heard About Harding Nomination.

"Did you hear the day before Mr. Harding was nominated that he would be nominated?"

"Oh! I read something in the papers about it. George Harvey said something about it, but I just read it in the papers.

"Sometime before I took the train home Saturday, I heard that an arrangement had been made by which Senator Harding would be nominated," Wolfe said. "I received a wire while enroute home that he had won. That's all I know about it."

Walsh Has His Dope.

Walsh told Wolfe that "information has come to me from a number of sources that the night before Mr. Harding was nominated you stated that it would be impossible to nominate Mr. Wood and that a deal had been made to nominate Mr. Harding."

"I don't think I made that statement," Wolfe said. "I told the delegation just before I left to stand by Wood."

"The information that has come to me is exactly opposite to that," Walsh said.

"I couldn't have made any such statement," Wolfe declared.

Wolfe was then excused.

BURNS MUST GO!

Indecent Housing Of Packing House Slaves Reflects Sordid Domination Of Slaughter Houses

In almost any section of Chicago, when the wind is blowing from the South, the all prevailing odor which spreads like a darkening nimbus cloud over the city serves as a none too gentle reminder that Chicago is nick-named Packingtown.

There is no place in Chicago more famous than the "Back of the yard" section where the packing-house slaves live. There have been many investigations of this section at intervals in the past. Let us see what the conditions of the homes of these stockyards workers were found to be by the latest investigator.

One investigator, after looking over the homes of the stockyards workers, refused to go on with the investigation because, "The appearance of the district showed it to be so neglected and conditions were, in general, supposed to be so extraordinary that it was regarded as unsuitable for purposes of intensive investigation. The unpaved streets, lack of sidewalks, indescribable accumulations of filth and rubbish, together with the absence of sewerage, made the outside sanitary conditions as bad as any in the world."

Dominated by Slaughter-Houses.

"The district remains an extraordinary one," says the report of the latest investigation. "No other neighborhood in this, or perhaps, any other city, is dominated by a single industry of so offensive a character. Large numbers of live animals, assembled from all sections of the country, processes of slaughtering and packing, the disposition of offensive animal waste, constitute an almost unparalleled nuisance. South Chicago lies under the smoke shadows of the steel mills, and in those mills are dangers to life and limb, blinding glare from the furnaces, meretricious exposure and terrible peril; but the influence upon the neighborhood is rather terrifying than degrading."

Death and Disintegration.

"In the stockyards, on the other hand, are mingled the cries of the animals awaiting slaughter, the presence of uncared for waste, the sight of blood, the carcasses naked of flesh and skin, the suggestion of death and disintegration—all of which must react in a demoralizing way not only upon the character of the people, but the conditions under which they live."

When an attempt was made in 1906 to apply modern sanitary standards to the yards, provisions for maintaining cleanliness and decency were found to be so shockingly inadequate that employment there was believed to have a demoralizing influence on the men and women employed.

Slimy Malodorous Streets.

The Niell-Reynolds Report, a little later, called attention to the "unsanitary conditions prevailing at the yards, the use of paving material which would not be properly cleansed, and were slimy and malodorous when wet, yielding clouds of ill-smelling dust when dry."

"The pens are neglected," the report states," as are the viaducts over which the animals pass. The rooms in which the slaughtering is done are dark, unclean, ill-ventilated. There are vaults in which the air is rarely changed, windows clouded by dirt, walls and ceilings so dark and dingy that natural light pentrates only twenty feet, and a lack of sanitary arrangements, with the consequent odors and fumes. There are no provisions for ordinary decencies in the way of toilet accomodations for the workers."

Surroundings Blight Workers.

We learn from the most recent investigator that "This territory back of the yards is unfortunate in its blighted surroundings." The records of the United Charities show that a large proportion of the applicants for relief come from this territory, and the very poor are usually found living in the most unsanitary houses.

More Death and Disease.

There is more tuberculosis here than any other part of the city. A map published by the commissioner of health shows that large numbers of babies die here every year, and tuberculosis, high infant mortality, poverty, and bad housing and unsanitary conditions are generally found together. In addition, as we learn from the report of Miss Breckenbridge and Miss Abbott, of the University of Chicago. The Lithuanian and Polish families in this neighborhood take large numbers of lodgers, which almost invariably leads to a violation of the law against overcrowding.

"The homes of this district have always been workmen's homes," says the above mentioned report. "And they are dominated by the packing industry."

Just Have to Do It.

One hundred nurses of the Evanston Hospital will present a petition this week to the board of hospital trustees asking for permission to bob their hair.

Back-of-the-Yards

THE BACK-OF-THE-YARDS living quarter of the city reflects the sordid, ill-smelling conditions which surround the workers in the slaughter houses. This district is dominated by the packing house industry. The workers live in indecent, insanitary hovels, investigators have found, with the pavements constantly blowing the smell of death and disintegration into the nostrils of the helpless and hopeless packing house slaves. The most primitive toilet arrangements are the rule, light and cleanliness are rare, both in the homes of the workers and their place of employment. From the slaughter houses to the hovels of the workers and back again, life is as dreary and foul as the animal odors from which the workers are never parted.

400 Coal Miners' Delegates Meeting In West Virginia

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 7.—About four hundred delegates are assembling here for the miners' convention which opens tomorrow. There is considerable discontent concerning the agreement and also dissatisfaction with officials.

An enthusiastic DAILY WORKER reader has volunteered to take a bundle order for distribution among the delegates. The comrade will try to boost the subscriptions among the miners' representatives.

Coolidge Gets One In Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, April 7.—Only one Wisconsin delegate to the republican national convention will be pledged to President Coolidge it was indicated today by the almost complete count from Wisconsin's primary election. All the other delegates, pledged to Senator Robert M. La Follette, won by two to one over the Coolidge slate.

Delegates at large pledged to Governor Al Smith at the democratic convention in New York had a big lead over McAdoo delegates and every indication points to this lead being increased as additional returns from outlying sections of the state come in.

A Belated Discovery.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 7.—If you train young men to be savages and fight as soldiers in war they carry over their barbarism into peace time, is the belated discovery of Maj.-Gen. John F. O'Ryan. "There came a complete change in the psychology of the young soldier," the former divisional commander lamented in his speech here to the Westchester chamber of commerce. He urged a campaign of education to rid the ex-soldier's mind of this irresponsible attitude. A safety week campaign is planned for the purpose.

Catholic Paper Objects.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 7.—Too much noise is being made about the two American Roman Catholic archbishops who have been made cardinals by the pope at Rome, declares the Catholic Citizen, a church organ of Milwaukee. "Let us not talk of 'princes of the church' in this free land of democratic institutions," the Citizen editor writes, "and let us curb the secular reporter in his man-milliner chatter about the cardinal's robes."

Cards To Help Children.

MOSCOW, April 7.—If you want to play cards in Russia you will have to pay for this luxury in the form of a contribution to the mothers and children's welfare fund. That is the import of legislation declaring the manufacture and sale of playing cards a state monopoly. Playing cards are to be manufactured only in state owned or state controlled factories. The profits will be added to the mothers and children's welfare fund.

Princess After Gest's Coin.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Princess Maria Matchabelli of Rome, Italy, today filed suit for $510,000 damages in supreme court here against Morris Gest, theatrical producer, alleging breach of contract and damage to her personal standing as an actress. The suit grew out of alleged contracts entered into between the actress and the producer whereby Princess Matchabelli was to appear in Gest's production of "The Miracle."

Man Refuses to Stay "Dead."

CLEVELAND, O., April 7.—Adelbert D. M. Pratt, prominent Norwalk, O., stock buyer, for whom impressive funeral services were held Friday in Norwalk, has been found alive and well in Cleveland.

Pratt was "buried" after the body of a man found floating in Lake Erie near Toledo, had been "identified" by Pratt's wife and daughter as that of Pratt.

Against Capital Punishment.

DALLAS, Tex., April 7.—An aggressive campaign for prison reform and the abolition of capital punishment is being mapped out under the leadership of Rep. T. K. Irwin of this city, the author of the present electrocution law. Irwin has changed his views on capital punishment.

HUNT RELATIVES OF UNION MEN WHO ARE SCABS

Miss Agnes Nestor Tells About Strike Plans

"The Women's Trade Union League is co-operating with the Federation 'Committee of 15' and we will do all we can to find out the scabbing women related to trades union men," asserted Miss Agnes Nestor, President of the league, to the DAILY WORKER in reference to the women's activities for the garment workers strike.

"From the beginning we have been interesting citizens in the strike situation and we participated with them on the Citizens' Committee," said Miss Nestor. "With that committee we held numerous conferences and attempted to get employers to consider conciliation or arbitration. We conducted investigations and with the committee made a final report to Mayor Dever, with recommendations concerning strike police."

Miss Nestor stated that the Bulletin of the Women's Trade Union League had given the facts of the garment workers' strike to their nation-wide public.

"We have sent our women down to see conditions for themselves on the picket lines," Miss Nestor stated, "and we have supplied the strike meetings with speakers when requested. Thruout the strike we have attempted to help wherever the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union desired."

No particular demonstration of cooperation with the strikers has been planned by the Women's Trade Union League, according to the president. No action of any kind is contemplated.

Children Go On Strike at Cregier School; Two Arrests

The heralded "strike" of pupils at the Cregier school, Selden and Woods streets, broke yesterday with over a hundred children joining the protest against the cruelties charged to Miss Mary Tobin, principal of the school.

Bernard Weil, leader of the parents of striking children, and Mrs. Rose Spiesman were arrested and charged with "disorderly conduct" when they mingled with assembled students before school hours and attempted to keep the youngsters from going in to their classes when the bell rang. Both Weil and Mrs. Spiesman were later released from the Marquette police station on bonds.

Two boys, Harry Tattlbame and Gilbert Fuerst, were taken in charge by the truant officers for their part in the strike. Police guarded the entrance of the school all morning.

Several children carried banners bearing inscriptions demanding the removal of Miss Tobin, calling for "Fair Play," "No More Rough Treatment," "We want Kindness." It was planned to parade these children with their signs thru the district last night.

A protest meeting of parents met at 4 p. m. to discuss the situation. The police broke up the earlier meeting which had gathered about Mrs. Rose Ruer when she attempted to address the "strikers" of her neighborhood.

Miss Tobin denied that any more than the usual number of students were absent from classes today. Superintendent McAndrew of the Board of Education, was not even informed of the "strike" situation. He has refused to remove Miss Tobin or take any action against her.

Coolidge Commutes Sentence of Rumely, Pro-Kaiser Editor

WASHINGTON, April 7.—President Coolidge today commuted to one month the sentence of one year being served by Edward A. Rumely, former editor of the New York Evening Mail, and two other defendants in the case convicted under war-time laws in connection with the purchase of the newspaper.

The other defendants serving with Rumely were: S. Walter Kaufman and Norvin R. Lindheim, Rumely's attorneys. The three recently began serving their sentences in the West Chester, N. Y., jail.

Jap Sop To Labor.

KOBE, Japan, April 7.—The decision of the new Japanese cabinet to show a more tolerant attitude toward labor organizations is taken as an indication that the militarists are somewhat alarmed at the growing power of the workers and the endeavoring to buy them off with small concessions.

Another Small Pardon.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 7.—Governor Len Small today commuted the sentence of William Brinas convicted of conspiracy in Cook County and sentenced to seven months' imprisonment. The commutation is effective immediately.

Ford Has Skids Greased.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—An unofficial poll of the senate agriculture committee on the subject of the McKenzie bill providing for acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, indicates that the bill will be reported favorably by a vote of 9 to 8.

WEST VA. COAL BARONS SIGN NEW WAGE PACT

Miners Will Meet To Discuss Agreement

By J. A. HAMILTON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 7.—Most of the coal operators of northern West Virginia have now signed the three-year agreement, and complete ratificacion waits on the action of the miners' convention of Sub-Districts 3 and 4 of District 17, covering northern West Virginia, which meets here April 9.

West Virginia does not come under the Central Competitive Field, altho the union men in this state insist strongly upon being so included. Their wage scale is based upon that in the central field, but is lower than any scale there, the operators claiming both that their freight rate to the North and West is higher and that the comparative cleanness of the coal and thickness of the vein (the Pittsburgh vein, producing most of the tonnage, being seven or eight feet thick usually) enable the men to stand a lower rate.

Will Fight Cuts.

It is said that the new agreement provides for the sacrifices of certain working conditions by the men, and it is rumored that this means for certain classes of miners, a direct cut in tonnage rate, but the exact changes in the contract have not been made public. However, there will likely be opposition in the convention to accepting any loss in conditions whatever.

The union in this field is faced with peculiar difficulties. It is new, the section from Morgantown to Clarksburg being organized in 1918, altho towards Grafton some mines had been organized several years earlier. The union also constitutes an oasis in a great desert of non-union men. To the north is the non-union field of Greene and Fayette counties of Pennsylvania; to the east the open shop mines of Maryland; to the south the almost solidly unorganized southern West Virginia field, with only a few thousand in the union, mostly in Kanawha county.

25 Per Cent Organized.

There are also non-union mines, large and small, scattered thru the organized northern field. Only some 25 or 35 per cent of the 106,000 miners in West Virginia are organized, and of these some four-fifths are in the northern field. West Virginia produced nearly one-fifth of the coal mined in the United States in 1923. This small group of twenty-five thousand miners are, therefore, more important than their numbers would indicate and the action of the convention and the progress of events in this field should be watched by miners everywhere.

May Try Open Shop.

It is reported that at least one big company in the Fairmont field and several in the Clarksburg section, besides a number of small ones will refuse to sign the agreement but will operate, or attempt to do so, open shop. It is reported that in Upshur county, several companies have gone back to the 1917 scale, which is quite a bit lower than the existing rate. In the present depressed state of the coal business this can be expected in this section and it remains to be seen what proportions the open shop movement will attain. Reports are current that the union will start an organization campaign but this has not yet materialized.

Amorous Mormons Hit in Speech by Reformist Leader

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 7.—Echoes of Wilford Woodruff's manifesto of 1906 banning polygamous marriages from Mormonism were heard here today when the spring conference of the Mormon church convened.

Three times recently President Heber J. Grant has issued statements denying responsibility for plural marriages in the church and branding those guilty as "defiant violators of church and civil laws."

Some members of the sect, church officials declared, foster polygamy and refuse to acknowledge the church's disavowal of plural marriage laws. Heated discussion was expected to develop.

The conference ends Sunday. Mormons from thruout the United States and several foreign countries are here.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

• • • •

The "Nigger-Thief."

WHEN the South heard of John Brown's raid, there was a wave of immediate fury. Men poured by the thousands into the little Virginia town, and the bars were filled with savage, half-drunk men, who talked of lynching the "old nigger-thief." Governor Wise had come down from the capital, and he and others prevented any such disgraceful procedure. He himself was mystified by the raid. It seemed such an incredible performance, for these Southerners could not understand the moral passion that animated the Abolitionists. To the South Negroes were property—private property. And an attempt to free slaves was to them insane, illegal and criminal. When men came with arms for this purpose and Southerners were killed in defending slavery, the crime became doubly damnable.

Fearless of Death.

John Brown, after his capture, was taken with Aaron Stevens to a room nearby. Lying on a cot, his head bandaged, his hair clotted and tangled, hands and clothing powder-stained and blood-smeared, the old lion was questioned by Governor Wise and a party of officials, who included Robert E. Lee, Colonel J. E. B. Stuart, Senator Mason, Congressman Vallandigham of Ohio, and other pro-slaveryites.

Their questions were a summary of the attitude of the South to such as he. And John Brown, that he was wounded and a prisoner, tho everywhere enemies surrounded him and the gallows stared him full in the face, answered their questions calmly and courteouly, without the slightest show of fear.

"Who sent you here?" one official asked. They were trying to worm out the names of Northerners who had given Brown money for the raid, so as to prosecute them for conspiracy in murder.

"No man sent me here," John Brown answered calmly. "It was my own prompting, and that of my Maker, or that of the devil, whichever you please. I acknowledge no man in human form."

"What was your object in coming?"

"Wild, Mad, 'Nigger-Thief.'"

"I came to free the slaves."

"And you think you were acting righteously?"

"Yes. I think, my friends, you are guilty of a great wrong against God and humanity. I think it right to interfere with you to free those you hold in bondage. I hold that the Golden Rule applies to the slaves, too."

And do you mean to say you believe in the Bible?" some one said, incredulously. They could not understand this man; they only saw a wild, mad "nigger-thief" in him.

"Certainly I do," John Brown said with dignity.

"Don't you know you are a seditionist, a traitor, and that you have taken up arms against the United States government?"

"I was trying to free the slaves. I have tried moral suasion for this purpose, but I don't think the people in the slave states will ever be convinced they are wrong."

His Challenge to South.

"You are mad and fanatical."

"And I think you people of the South are mad and fanatical. Is it sane to keep five million men in slavery? Is it sane to think such a system can last? Is it sane to suppress all who would speak against this system, and to murder all who would interfere with it? Is it sane to talk of war rather than give it up?"

Thus John Brown uttered his challenge to the South; but they failed to understand.

(To Be Continued Wednesday.)

ORGANIZE-SLOGAN OF AMALGAMATED IN PHILADELPHIA

Big Plans for Convention on May 12th

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 7.—Conventions of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers are as a rule not held in cities where the trade is not organized. In order that this rule may not be deviated from a great organization campaign has been launched here to strengthen the organization.

Convention Nearing.

The convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will open on Monday, May 12, and will last for a week. All sessions will be held at the Witherspoon Hall. The headquarters will be located at the Sylvanian Hotel, which will accommodate all the delegates to the convention.

An arrangement committee consisting of delegates of all locals are already on the job, working out plans for souvenirs and entertainments.

The first gun in the organization campaign was fired at a mass meeting held March 18, immediately after work at the Arch Street Théatre, 6th and Arch streets. The meeting was addressed by Sydney Hillman, president; Joseph Schlossberg, secretary-treasurer and Frank Bellanca, editor of "Lavoro."

Between that date and May 12 the workers in the clothing industry will have an opportunity to redeem themselves.

The general office has called to town Hyman Schneid, to organize the campaign. Shop and district meetings have been held and individual members are being canvassed with great success. The old guard of the 1922 strike is back on the job.

Wages Being Lowered.

Conditions in the industry are deplorable. Cutting of wages has become an established institution. The hiring and firing of workers by manufacturers big or small is accepted as a matter of course. Workers are being hired at the Fourth and Market street "Busy Bee" and the job invariably goes to the lowest bidder. That condition must be eliminated. Ten thousand workers are engaged in the industry and at least 30,000 depend upon them for their daily bread.

The aim of the present campaign is to once and for all abolish this condition and establish some responsibility to the workers who have been and are enriching the industry. The local organization backed by the national office will spare neither money nor energy to wipe out these miserable conditions.

All interested members, or non-union workers for that matter, are requested to bring all information that may be of value to the main headquarters, 431 Pine street.

Street Car Men in Rochester and Vicinity May Strike May Day

(By The Federated Press)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 7.—Three thousand street car men in Rochester, Syracuse and Utica, will strike on May 1 unless their common employer, The New York State Railways, grants a wage raise and a six-day week. Negotiations for the men will be conducted by their union, the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes.

The present scale is 51 cents an hour for the first three months, 53 cents for the next nine months, and after a year 55 cents and hour. The union demands a corresponding rate of 66, 68 and 70 cents an hour. For men operating one-man cars the union asks 80 cents.

Australian Bosses Launching Vigorous Onslaught on Unions

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Thruout Australia the employers are launching a combined attack against the workers. They plan to enforce lower wages and a reduced standard of living. Thousands of workers have enjoyed conditions second to none in any other part of the world. Wages from a purchasing power point of view were relatively higher than elsewhere, working conditions of the best and the trade union movement was exerting power in the land.

To break down the unions it was first proposed to flood Australia with the unemployed from Britain who were to be dumped as immigrants. But there was such hostility to immigration that the various governments in Australia were forced to call off or slacken down on the scheme.

The employers have now resorted to the old policy of closing factories and throwing the workers out of their jobs. Behind this lies the hope that after starvation does its work the workers will submit to a decrease of the present wage level.

Victory For Bobbed Hair.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 7.—Myron McCormick was sentenced to a year in jail because he beat his wife when she had her hair bobbed.

"I'm going to let you beat rocks for 365 days and then maybe your wife's bobbed hair will look better to you," Judge Fonda said in passing sentence.

Another Preacher Gone Bad.

HAMILTON, Ont., April 7.—Rev. J. H. Dobbin, 62, pastor of the Lutheran church at Ravenna, Ohio, for the past four years, was arrested here today on a "serious charge."

DEBATE STARTS IN CONGRESS ON JOHNSON BILL

Proposed Immigration Law Faces Fight

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Faced by a fight more bitter than any since the tax bill, the house has opened debate on the Johnson immigration bill which would limit quotas to 2 per cent based on the census of 1890.

Vigorous opposition to the bill has been expressed not only by various elements in this country, but thru representations to the state department by foreign countries.

Secretary of State Hughes strongly urged the immigration committee which drafted the bill to lighten many of its restrictive provisions but in a sharply worded report the committee laid the bill before the house without material changes in the provisions against which Hughes had protested.

Strikes at Japan.

The Johnson measure abrogates the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan and expressly excludes all Japanese immigrants. The change to a quota based on 1890 almost cuts off immigration from southern and southeastern Europe. Italy, for example, is reduced from a quota of 42,057 to one of 8,224. Both countries have laid strenuous protests before the state department.

On the other hand, the 1890 quota basis greatly increases the proportion of immigrants allowed to enter from Germany, Great Britain, Ireland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. The committee supported this provision of racial elements in this country.

Quotas Are Reduced.

Briefly the new bill:

1. Preserves the basic immigration law of 1917 with the principle of numerical "quota" limitation inaugurated in the act of 1921.
2. Changes the quota base from 1910 to 1890 and reduces the percentage from 3 to 2 per cent.
3. Provides for preliminary examination overseas to avoid the notorious "steamboat race" manner of seeking entrance.
4. Carries numerous administrative features to lessen hardships on individual immigrants.
5. Excludes all persons ineligible to become citizens.

Oppose Suggestions To Face Bosses With Split Forces

(By The Federated Press)

TACOMA, Wash., April 7.—Overtures from Mobridge, S. D., machinists of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad to other points in System Federation No. 76 for excluding the railway carmen from negotiations with the company met a severe frost at Tacoma. The South Dakota shopmen proposed that the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers and electrical workers deal with the company as a unit and let the carmen fight their own battle alone. The joint negotiations have worked out after 15 years' experience to the sole benefit of the carmen, the circular asserted.

In answer the Tacoma Federated Shop Crafts circulated a reply that went to all members of the system federation of the six crafts. The Tacoma position is that the South Dakota proposal means "the disintegration of our already weak forces and if adopted may eventually lead to the complete annihilation of every shop craft in our system federation. We are not in favor of isolating any craft in order to gain an increase at their expense, only to have it taken away from the fortunate ones just as soon as the less fortunate ones have been destroyed by the enemy."

FILIPINO LABOR CARRIES ON BIG GENERAL STRIKE

Quit Sugar Plantations In Hawaii

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A general strike of all Filipino laborers on the sugar plantations in Hawaii is now in full swing. Jacinto G. Monahan, president of the National Confederation of Tenants and Farm Laborers in the Philippines has been called for help by Manlapit, Filipino strike leader in Hawaii. All the workers and farm tenants in the Philippines are rallying to the support of their Hawaiian brothers.

There are today about 40,000 Filipino workers in Hawaii. Most of these are employed on the sugar plantations and are joining in the wholesale walkout.

According to a manifesto just issued by the workers' leaders, the following are the demands of the strikers:

1. Minimum wage of $2 for each laborer per day.
2. Eight hours a day work.
3. One and a half pay for all overtime; double time wage for all work on Sundays and legal holidays.
4. Equal compensation for men and women engaged in the same kind of work.
5. Proportionate increase in wages of skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers.
6. Abolition of all forms of bonus.
7. Recognition of principle of collective bargaining and the right to organize for mutual benefit and protection.

U. S. Governor A Sugar Baron.

W. R. Farrington, United States Governor of the territory, who has been sojourning in Washington, is one of the most powerful sugar barons here. The workers are ruthlessly exploited, tho Farrington, having in mind merely his class interests has just reported Hawaii to be highly prosperous. The workers are compelled to live in hovels and are particularly strong in their opposition to the fake turn out bonus of 10 per cent for laboring 25 days a month and a profit sharing bonus dependent upon the fluctuations of raw sugar on the New York Exchange.

Bonus System Denounced.

Geo. W. Wright, president of the United Workers of Hawaii, has thus roundly denounced this fake bonus system in a letter to the head of the Hawaiian sugar planters' association:

"Your bonus system is all bunk, and you know it. You are forcing them (the workers) to gamble with thier unpaid quota of wages on the fluctuations in the price of sugar. They give their day's labor and you pay them for half a day and let the rest of their wages with yourself that the price of sugar stays down. If it does, you win, and keep their money; if it goes up, you lose the bet and pay them back a part of the other dollar they have loaned! But even that does not come out of your pocket; the consumer pays it many times over in the increased price of sugar! It is safe to gamble for you, like loaded dice, or marked cards. Your bonus system is a crooked, dirty game to rob your laborers!"

The Filipino workers are in a hard struggle. They are counting on the fullest possible moral and financial support from their brothers in the Philippine Islands and in the United States, where the sugar barons have their headquarters.

American Oil Thieves Transfer Operations To Australasia

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

BRISBANE, Queensland, April 7.—Big oil interests in America are trying to wreck the operations now proceeding in Queensland for the discovery of oil. This is because the Queensland labor government enacted special legislation preventing oil swidlers from starting blue-sky companies and fleecing the people.

Oil has been struck by a company working under the supervision of the government at Oralla in the western portion of the state. Oil and gas are coming up in big quantities. No swindling companies have any say in the matter, hence their wrath.

While the drilling was proceeding, opposition and treachery from rival American oil companies made their appearance. Machinery for the wells was sabotaged or damaged. When certain essential machinery for the rotary drilling plant was required, an open order for the machinery was placed in America while a secret duplicate order was placed thru another country. This was done to forestall the conspirators.

This forethought was rewarded. The plant ordered openly was tipped overboard in transit to Australia, but the secret order arrived intact, unknown to anyone. The oil rig is now picketed and policed by the government and nobody except those engaged in the work of drilling is allowed near the operations.

Teachers Pay Small.

DALLAS, Tex., April 7.—School teachers in Dallas receive a higher schedule of pay than those of any other city in Texas according to a statement of the local council of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations. Yet high school teachers receive from $1,400 to not more than $2,400 yearly. Principals' salaries are from $2,000 to $3,000. There is no teachers' union.

Stars Expeditiously Killed in San Carlo Opera; Critic Pleased

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

"Tosca," by Puccini, was presented by the San Carlo opera company at the Auditorium, Alice Gentle taking the name part. The story of "Tosca" is one of those pleasant little murder tales that so frequently are taken as the subjects of Italian opera, Briefly, it is this: a young painter, having aided the escape of a political prisoner, incurs the enmity of Baron Scarpia, chief of the Roman police. Scarpia and the artist, Mario Cavaradossi by name, are both in love with the singer, Floria Tosca, and Tosca has been taken into Mario's confidence in the matter of the escaped prisoner.

The singer and her lover are both arrested, brought to Scarpia's apartment, and Mario is put into the chief's private goldfish room. Hearing the sounds of the torture, Tosca gives in, and tells the baron where his prisoner is hidden, whereupon the artist is carried out of the torture room, and ordered shot. Tosca offers to sacrifice herself for her lover, and Scarpia agrees to give him safe conduct.

Stars [illegible] Out.

But, says the wily and lustful baron, there must be a fake execution. He writes the safe conduct order, and, when he turns around, is stabbed with his own stiletto. Then Mario is stood up before the firing squad, and falls with the report of the guns. Tosca goes to him, expecting him to rise up, and finds, due to the crooked double cross of Scarpia, that he has been actually killed. Then she throws herself over the parapet of the fortress. All the stars being dead, the curtain falls.

Puccini's score is brilliant with dramatic melody. The arias fit naturally in the course of the dramatic action; no one's death is put off to the end of a florid cavatina. Great surges of passionate tone well up from orchestra and voices. In one place only the opera falls down. That is at the very end, where Tosca discovers that Mario is dead. Instead of the supremely grand climax one expects occurs only a sort of confused scrubbing of tone.

Alice Gentle Impressive.

The singers of the San Carlo are as fine as can be found in the Chicago opera, or any other company. The most impressive performance was that of Alice Gentle. We are used to hearing her in mezzo-soprano. Her acting, and the rich warmth of her voice are superb. The baritone of Mario Valle as Scarpia, and the tenor of Gaetano Tommasini as Cavaradossi were adequate and beautiful.

Not the least pleasing parts of the performance were the excellence of the stagecraft and the orchestra. Costumes, settings and lighting were, ideally and artistically handled. The orchestra, tho small, produces the tone quality and power of a first class symphonic organization.

Following the opera the Pavley and Oukrainsky ballet company, which will be the ballet of the Chicago opera next year, put on a number of short dances, with the brilliance and elegance characteristic of them. Oukrainsky did an Algerian dance to the accompaniment of a mechanical piano playing Greig's familiar dance of the trolls in the first Peer Gynt suite. But with a first class orchestra available, a reproducing piano is not the most effective means of playing music.

Every new DAILY WORKER reader means a new recruit in the ranks of militant labor.

SOUTH SLAVIC SECTION, W. P., IN CONFERENCE

Ranks Are Consolidated For Communism

By L. FISHER.

Fifty-five delegates from all parts of the country gathered at the Second National Conference of the South Slavic Section of the Workers Party here to review the work of the past year and to lay plans for future activities.

The delegates realized the tremendous tasks before them and went to work in all seriousness. The problems before the convention were: How to consolidate and strengthen the ranks of the South Slavic Federation; to determine the attitude towards those that left the party during the struggle within the the federation against opportunism and petit bourgeois ideology; increase the trade union work and carry out the party policy all along the line.

Membership Increasing.

The report of the secretary showed an increase in membership. Over 200 new members were brought in since the last conference, and 24 new branches were organized. The membership is active in every line of party activity, especially for the Labor Defense Council and the DAILY WORKER. Great achievements were made in the campaign for the protection of the foreign-born workers.

About 50 per cent of the members are in the labor unions, mostly in the U. M. W. of A., but that was not quite satisfactory to the convention and efforts will be made to get every member who is eligible for membership into a union.

Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, who represented the Central Executive Committee of the Party at the conference, gave a report on the party activity and explained the party policy that was adopted at the last party convention and at the enlarged meeting of the Executive Committee of our party. In the course of his speech he made it plain that every party member must engage in some party activity, otherwise he is not a good Communist. He traced the development of the Labor Party and our attitude towards it, showing that our Party had a correct policy, which was nothing else than the American application of the United Front Policy, adopted by the leader of the World Revolution—the Communist International. He said that the members must not only carry the party policy into practice, but they must also understand it. In regard to the struggle within the Federation, he said that the bureau fought for Communism, while the former editors, Cvetkov and Company, represented an opportunist tendency. His speech was heartily greeted by the whole convention.

True Communist Duties.

Comrade Fisher showed in his report on the economic and political situation, that the aggression of American imperialism and the agricultural crisis in the United States gave the Communists an extraordinary opportunity, to work for an alliance between the workers, farmers and oppressed nationalities in the struggle against exploitation, reaction and oppression. In this struggle, the industrial proletariat must take the lead. This the Communists must not forget.

The delegates took a lively part in the discussion on every point on the agenda, especial interest being shown in the questions of the Labor Party, the Federated and the third bourgeois party.

A telegram expressing grief over the death of our great leader, Comrade Lenin, was sent to Moscow.

A delegation from the "opposition" came to the conference and submitted certain conditions for their return to the ranks of the party. The convention elected a committee which, in conformity with the representative of the Central Executive Committee of the party drew up a reply to the effect that every expelled member, as well as those who voluntarily left the party, if they were sincere, should go to the respective branches and make an application for re-admission. To every such application special consideration will be given by the branch and by the Central Executive Committee of the party.

The policy of the bureau in its fight against the former editors was unanimously approved by the convention.

Unity Prevails.

Never in the history of the South Slavic Federation was there such a unity of ideology and unanimity of decisions. Last year's convention was very stormy, there being three factions pitted against each other, but traces of that bitter fight could not be found at this convention. The petit-bourgeois ideology of Cvetkov and Kutuzovich has been uprooted and there are no signs that it will ever be revived again. The delegates left the convention with a firm determination to increase the work in the branches a hundred fold, to liquidate the remnants of the old quarrels in the branches, and to put the South Slavic section of the Workers Party on firm Communist foundations and draw the members into the active political work of the party.

Zinoviev Reviews the Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we begin the publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallizing the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. Today's installment is as follows:

* * * *

Report by GREGORY ZINOVIEV. To the Session of the Executive of the Communist International, held on January 6, 1924.

COMRADES!

I shall try to make clear the main points of difference. I believe the following questions to be most important.

1. The dispute with regard to the essential character of the Bolshevik Party, and, in connection therewith, the permissibility of the formation of fractions within our Party.
2. Party Apparatus and Party Bureaucracy.
3. The Young and the Old in our Party.
4. The "degeneration" of the Old Guard, especially of the core of the Old Guard.
5. Economic Questions.
6. Special Differences of Opinion with Comrade Trotzky.
7. The Proportion of Forces in the Party.

I shall now deal with these seven points.

I.

Essential Character of the Bolshevist Party.

This question forms the real central point of our discussion.

Our Party as a party which has already held power for over six years, possesses a number of peculiar features which we find in no other Communist Party. During the course of the discussion, one of our oppositional students observed that the whole misfortune of the Russian Communist Party consisted of the fact that it was in possession of power. In a certain sense this is right. But only in a certain sense; for on the other hand the whole fortune of our Party lies in the fact that it is in possession of power. If we are to express ourselves with perfect correctness we must, therefore say: The whole difficulty of the problem consists precisely of the fact that we have become a state party.

The history of our Party is very singular; to a certain extent it is unique in the history of the International. We can look back upon a history extending over 25 years, or at least—if we take as a starting point the year 1903, the year of the first split with of the Party into Bolsheviki and Mensheviki—over 20 years. Our history thus goes very far back, a whole quarter of a century. But the living inventory of the Party, the majority of the members, have only belonged to the Party for a short time, two or three years. This is a very remarkable state of affairs. Other parties have developed organically, successively. But we have developed along entirely different lines. First, we passed thru a period of 20 to 25 years of preparatory work, of illegality, and then suddenly an immense influx of quite young comrades streamed into the Party who now form its bony framework.

I shall now attempt to give you a schematic survey of the peculiar position of our Party.

The Various Factors.

This peculiarity is characterized by the following factors:

First factor: Territory of unheard of extent. The union of our republics comprises no more and no less than the sixth part of the total surface of the globe, with one united party for the whole of this territory.

Second factor: The national factor. Within our territory we have at least 100 nations, but at the same time one united party. The national factor is not allowed to play any role in our Party. We thus possess a united international organization, involving, however, great complications.

Third factor: Russia's ecoomic many sidedness. Lenin pointed out, in one of his works* that we in Russia possess various systems of economics; firstly, a purely industrial economic system, which may fairly deserve the designation of Communism and then a large number of economic systems which are actually very backward, reminding us of conditions ruling in the middle ages. Thus the economic many sidedness of Russia forms a factor greatly complicating the work of the Party.

Party Membership.

Fourth factor: The large number of Party members who have only belonged to the Party for a short time. This I can illustrate with the aid of a small table.

At the present time we have 390,000 members. Of these 2,500 comrades belonged to the Party before 1905, that is, before the first revolution; 7,900 are comrades who joined the Party up to the year 1917, making a round total of 10,000 comrades who were already members of the Party before the year 1917. In 1917 35,000 new members joined. Thus we have about 50,000 comrades who were members by 1918. The year 1918 brought us 63,000 new members; 1919: 107,000; 1920: 120,000; 1921: 400,000; in the year 1922 we resolved to admit no new members.

As you will see, three-quarters of our members joined us in the year 1920 and 1921. Altho we can look back up a history extending over 25 years, our membership is composed to the extent of three-quarters of comrades who have only belonged to the Party, for two or three years. This is a most important fact, and one which must be accorded due consideration, if our Party is to be understood.

To this, the fluctuations, in the Party must be added. Naturally, every party is subject to fluctuation; members join, others leave. But in our case the matter is very different; up to the year 1918 we had about 50,000 members, as stated above, and then we had a tremendous influx of nearly a million members. At one time we exceeded the number of 700,000 members. But after this the necessary purging of the Party obliged us to exclude about a quarter of a million members again, whilst a number of others left of their own accord. Thus about 400,000 comrades were left in the end. It need not be said that such an extraordinary fluctuation has never been observed in any other country. And it has been the cause of great difficulties to us.

To this must further be added the division of work in the Party. We must rule the country, the state apparatus is in our hands. It is thus incumbent on us as a Party to find: the Red diplomatist, the Red factory manager, the co-operative, the economist, the editor, etc. The Party has to provide all these from amongst its members.

Our Make-Up.

Consider the most important strata of the Party—here I select the most important ones only—and you will find:

1. A stratum, the best, consisting of the 56,000 to 60,000 comrades working directly in shops and factories, that is, plain workmen.
2. A stratum, the second best, composed of peasants; about 60,000 peasants with small farms, that is, small holders.
3. A third stratum, composed of members of the Red Army, numbering at the present time 40,000 in the whole army; the majority of these are no longer serving actively, but belong to the reserves, the army administration, commissariat, etc.
4. A fourth stratum, consisting of students, mostly workers, numbering about 40,000 comrades.

The remainder is distributed among various small groups, as trade unionists, economists, etc.; there are about ten such groups, subdivided again into smaller groups.

If we analyze the structure of the Party with regard to the social origin of the members, we find that proletarians form the great majority, and that workers still working today in the factory as plain workmen are in the minority, numbering about 56,000 to 60,000.

And this factor must not be overlooked, comrades, this far-reaching division of labor in the Party, for it is absolutely unavoidable. Without this division of labor, it is impossible to rule the state, and it is thus indispensable, tho its strong positive aspects are opposed by strong negative ones.

Dictatorship: A Necessity.

Thus the state of affairs. And at the same time you must recollect that we have in the Party a considerable group of members who once belonged to other parties—anarchists, social revolutionists, Mensheviki, and the like. These comrades number about 25,000 to 26,000, and many of them played active leading parts in the parties to which they formerly belonged. This again creates a most peculiar situation. To be sure it is a positive phenomenon, showing that we have beaten all other parties from the field, and showing, too, we hope, that we have won the best elements of these parties for our Party. But it is none the less a fact that there are still elements amongst us to whom some slight shade of the past still clings, and who have not yet completely merged themselves in our Party. This is a factor which must also receive due attention.

The final factor to be considered consists of our monopoly of legality. Consider for a moment the conditions in any other country, in Germany for instance, and you will find three workers' parties; in other countries there are two, in others again four. Here the parties struggle with one another, that is, every individual finds his place in that party for which he really feels the greatest sympathy.

In our case the matter is entirely different. The dictatorship of the proletariat cannot be realized without the simultaneous annihilation of all other parties, that is, the monopoly of legality must be secured. This monopoly thus represents a visible symptom of the dictatorship of the proletariat. And it is impossible for it to be otherwise. But it has not only its bright side, it has its shady side as well.

Unity In Third International.

A new generation is springing up, among the Red Army soldiers, in part also among the workers, among the active petty bourgeois elements, and the Youth. These are all seeking for an outlet for their fighting powers, for a possibility for exercising their impulse towards activity, and find no other field open than in our Party. Thus many support our Party, and even join it, simply because there is no other party, and not because they have really become Communists.

If there were two other parties, for instance, many of these elements would perhaps join these, or take up a position between one party and another. In our present situation it is important to realize clearly that certain elements whom we have in our midst are only there because we possess a monopoly of legality.

This, comrades, is the approximate structure of our Party.

It is upon this structure that our attitude towards the formation of fractions is based. You are aware that during the whole epoch of the Second International, practically every party had its fractions. Rosa Luxembourg, Lenin and Clara Zetkin; what were they but a fraction of the Second International? They represented the left wing of the Second International.

Every party had its Left and its Right; everywhere there was strife. This is to be different in the Third International. Fractions can only be tolerated in exceptional cases. Otherwise the Third International cannot fulfill its historical task. We all regard the Third International as an organization which must be cast in one piece.

Danger of Fractionism.

Its historical mission is entirely different to that of the Second International. It must not represent a conglomeration of tendencies, shades of opinions, etc. This would be entirely unallowable for a Party such as ours, ruling the state apparatus as it does, and possessing the internal structure which I have just briefly sketched.

This explains our attitude with reference to fractions. Try to realize the actual position. Consider, for instance, the younger members of the Party. Here we have five to six Party generations: One generation until 1905, one until 1917, one belonging to 1917, one belonging to 1918, one belonging to 1919 and 1920; about 5 generations. If you then add the division according to occupation, involving at least ten groups; workers, small holders, economists, Red Army soldiers, etc., you will find that you have already arrived at 50 possible combinations in the Party. And all this has to be held together by one single knot, the knot of Party discipline.

If you allow these 50 combinations the liberty of forming fractions, you will certainly give rise to five further possibilities of combination within each of these 50 divisions, that is, you increase the danger five fold and a general dissolution would be the inevitable result.

Thus the formation of fractions within our Party is a thousand times more dangerous for us than fractionism in any other party.

And again, try to realize what the formation of fractions would mean in the Red Army, for instance. Two fractions in the Red Army signify that there is no Red Army whatever, two fractions in the G. P. U. (Political Administrative Headquarters) signify that there is no G. P. U. And yet even this has been attempted! It need not be said that the attempt was unsuccessful!

Can It Be Permitted?

In the course of our present discussion I was, for instance, obliged to spend two nights with the comrades of the G. P. U at meetings where 2,000 comrades were gathered together. And what was the question in dispute? The question, comrades, was whether we were to pass a vote of confidence in the Central Committee or not. The same thing occurred among the military students in the Kremlin, the same in the army staff academy of the Red Army. These are facts. The minority fought for a vote of non-confidence. We were victorious! But just imagine the fact of contests in these three institutions!

If you really want to understand what our Party is, comrades, I must beg you to keep before your mind's eye the scheme of the Party structure which I have here drawn up. To be sure it is easy enough to declare, like the Mensheviki: "Just look at this party! What a number of groups and sub-groups it has, and how few workers from the shops and factories! This is no Communist Party!" This is, of course, silly chatter.

We are of the opinion that for a party in possession of power, and faced by extraordinary difficulties and placed in an extremely complicated situation, the Bolshevist core of the Party—those workers who were maturing during the 25 years of preparatory work, and were potential members attaining actual membership in 1917-1918—forms the element representing a cement holding the Party together, and without which all the above named strata would fall to pieces within a very brief period.

Our Problems.

With such a constitution of the Party, the demand is now raised within the Party for the workers' democracy. Workers' democracy is a relatively simple problem as far as other parties are concerned.

In Germany, for instance, it is a question of our legality. If we are legal or semi-legal, then we have to adapt ourselves to circumstances and limit democracy somewhat.

We in Russia, on the other hand, are faced by positive obstacles of quite another nature. It is true that we need not fear the police, but we are confronted by a number of objective social difficulties, resultant on the fact that we are working in a country in which the peasantry is in the majority, and we have besides to contend with all those other difficulties which have already been briefly described to you.

From the very beginning, Bolshevism fought against Menshevism in the question of the workers' democracy. We, the Bolsheviki, were anti-democrats before 1905. Lenin was expressly anti-democrat. At that time, Bolshevism defended the theses: We cannot develop a workers' democracy in a country in which absolutism rules, we cannot elect our committees. In very bad times we had, for instance, a tradition that not even the whole of the Central Committee was to be elected. Three comrades were elected at the Party conference, but only one was named, in order to have an address. Not even the Party conference was to know who had been elected. The elected comrades were then given the right to co-opt further comrades. The same applied to the local committees.

The Mensheviki, already at that time inclined to glorify democracy in its petty bourgeois sense, railed at Lenin as a "despot," "bureaucrat," etc. Indeed, even such a fighter as Rosa Luxembourg once adopted this tone with reference to this matter, and scoffed at Lenin. Even she put the question: Where is democracy? She had not grasped the situation. The whole of international Menshevism, even such participators in the International as Rosa Luxembourg, did not understand the matter at that time.

Legality and Illegality.

When the revolution of 1905 broke out, we began to reorganize the Party at once. But the period of legality was of but brief duration.

A general differentiation into the following periods may be made in the history of the Bolsheviki:

1st period until 1905. Expressly anti-democratic.

2nd period, 1905 until 1907. Comparative freedom, commencement of the introduction of a certain democracy into the Party.

3rd period, 1908 until 1910. Counter-revolution, no trace of democracy.

4th period, 1911 until 1914. Revival of labor movement, publication of the "Pravda" in Petrograd, peculiar combination of legality and illegality.

5th period, complete illegality from August, 1914, until 1917. During the whole of this time the Central Committee consisted of two comrades only, Lenin and Zinoviev, who both lived in Switzerland. No trace of democracy.

6th period, 1917 until 1921. Civil war, general mobilization utmost exertion of powers. During this period a really military discipline existed in the Party.

From the year 1921 onwards, the workers' democracy is spoken of.

Formation of Fractions.

At the Tenth Party conference in 1921 three groups of questions were discussed, all of extraordinary importance:

1. The introduction of the New Economic Policy. This question arose during the Kronstadt insurrection, tho this broke down. Lenin gave the address. The Party conference resolved unanimously on the transition to the New Economic Policy.

2. The introduction of the workers' democracy into the Party. The address was delivered by Bukharin, who spoke on behalf of the whole Central Committee. It was almost unanimously resolved to go over to democracy in the Party.

3. The question of the formation of fractions. Lenin again delivered the address. A resolution was passed against the permissability of the formation of fractions. The Party conference resolved to expel from the Party all those who formed fractions.

After the resolution on the introduction of the workers' democracy had been passed, Lenin delivered a speech which acted like a cold douche on all who had been too enthusiastic for democracy. Lenin, in the course of his speech, declared that:

"It is not true that we do not call upon the masses to take part in the work. On the contrary, any barely noticeable talent, any quality, be it only the slightest degree above the working masses, has met with our sincerest support. There is only one thing in which we are still lacking: a slight amelioration of our position.

"We now need one or two years in which to recuperate from the famine, and a shorter time will not suffice. Viewed from the historical standpoint, the term is exceedingly short, but for our conditions it is a considerable period. One or two years of recuperation from famine, one or two years of properly regulated fuel supplies, in order that the factories may be set running again, and we shall receive a hundred fold more support from the working class, we shall see greater numbers of talented individuals arise from its ranks. Nobody can doubt this."

Comrades, this is our position with regard to the questions of the workers' democracy. You will perceive that many of the semi-bourgeois elements which have found their way into our Party naturally regard the idea of democracy from the petty bourgeois standpoint. Fiat democratia, pereat mundus—that is their watchword. Let there be democracy, even tho the heavens fall. We on the other hand hold to the viewpoint formulated as follows in the year 1903 by the late George Plekhanov, at the time when he was still a revolutionary Marxist—and it is a fact that for a short time he was a Bolshevist:

Curbing Democracy.

"Every given democratic principle is not to be taken abstractedly by itself, but in its relations to that principle which may be designated as the fundamental principle of democracy, that is, the principle expressed in the words: salus populi, suprema lex. Translated into the language of the revolutionist, this means that this supreme law is the success of the revolution. And should the success of the revolution require the temporary limitation of the application of this or that democratic principle, then it would be a crime to hesitate to carry out this limitation.

"It is my personal opinion that even the principle of universal suffrage is to be condemned from the viewpoint of the above mentioned fundamental principle of democracy. It is possible to imagine a hypothetical case in which we social democrats would be opposed to universal suffrage.

"At one time the bourgeoisie of the Italian republics deprived representatives of the nobility of political rights. It is possible that the revolutionary proletariat could limit the political rights of the upper classes in the same manner. The fitness of such a measure could be judged solely from the standpoint of salus revolutionis suprema lex.

"We should have to be guided by the same viewpoint in the question of the maintenance of parliament. Should the people elect a very good parliament—a description of chambre introuvable—as the result of the commencement of revolutionary enthusiasm, we should have to make it our endeavor to keep this parliament in office as long as possible. But should the result of the election prove unfavorable, we should then have to make it our endeavor to drive out the parliament again within two weeks if possible—and not wait for two years."

Thus Plekhanov in 1903. And we are still holding fast to this viewpoint. But there are many semi-petty bourgeois elements, not yet fully freed from Menshevism, and still cherishing the idea of democracy as such. This can only be comprehended if we regard things from the class standpoint. The fact must be realized, that we are living in an agricultural country with considerable strata of petty bourgeoisie.

Why Fractionism Is Contested.

I believe, comrades, that after hearing the above remarks you will no longer wonder that the question of the formation of fractions is so hotly contested amongst us.

We declare: Two fractions in the Party is synonumous with the germs of two governments; two fractions in the Red Army is synonomous with the germs of two armies. The same applies to the G. P. U., and to the whole state apparatus. As you all know, the state apparatus is, of course, formally completely in our hands. The leading positions everywhere are held by Communists. But as a matter of fact the leadership is still partially in the hands of the elements of the old regime exaggeratedly designated our state apparatus as an old "Czarist" apparatus.

But in actual fact it is still in part a Czarist apparatus. And this apparatus is now listening to our discussion with the intensest interest. All the specialists, the engineers, etc., the pricking up their ears and waiting impatiently for what is coming. It goes without saying that a fraction struggle in our Party, possessing as it does state power, signifies the beginning of the formation of two governments.
